God is the only way such a good man as King Hezekiah is to be accounted for. He may be called one of the boy kings of the world, for he was only twenty-five years old when he began to reign. One of his first acts was to have the temple cleansed by ordering the trash of idolatry to be carried out, and dumped into the valley of the Kidron. That included the so-called "gods" and all of the paraphernalia connected with their "worship." The brazen serpent which Moses had set up in the wilderness (Num. 21: 9) was taken along with the rest, and from this we must infer that people had made a god out of it, something after the manner in which relics are considered "sacred" to-day, such as nails from the true cross exhibited in St. Peter's in Rome once a year; also the handkerchief of St. Veronica, which is said to bear the image of Christ, because she wiped the Lord's face with it when he was bearing the cross on the way to be crucified. Hezekiah called the brazen serpent "Nehushtan," meaning only a piece of brass (II. Kings 18: 4). In just sixteen days the accumulated idol filth of sixteen years was removed. And when the temple was swept and garnished, the lamps relighted, sacrifices to the Lord placed again upon the altars, then King Hezekiah sent messengers into every part of the land for the people to come to the temple to worship. Even the Israelites who had been led to worship the golden calves set up by Jeroboam were invited to come back to the worship of the true God. And many of them did come. Oh, that was a grand day, that first Passover in the time of King Hezekiah! It was a day worthy to be compared with the dedication of the temple by King Solomon. Not only did King Hezekiah have the idol filth removed from the temple, but from the city of Jerusalem, in which the temple was built, and in every part of his land, so that throughout his kingdom there was a revival of religion. His deeds have caused his name to be associated with King David and King Solomon as three of the greatest kings the world has ever known.

Well-Earned Prosperity

"Prosperity" is not altogether modern, for it was had in the days of Hezekiah. The king's palace became a storehouse for gold, silver and jewels. Storehouses were built for the large increase of corn and wine and oil as the people cultivated their fields, their vineyards and their orchards; sheepfolds and housings were built for the flocks and herds, and among all of the people there was great increase of comfort and well being. "Happy is the people whose God is the Lord." So great was their prosperity that ambassadors were sent by the princes of Babylon to inquire into the wonder that was done in the land (II. Chron. 32: 31).

We shall hardly be content without reading the whole story of Hezekiah's good and prosperous reign, which extended over twenty-nine years, which was really prolonged fifteen years in answer to the king's prayer. Read Isaiah, chapters 36, 37, 38 and 39.

Religion and Patriotism

It is told in Denmark that their flag is five hundred years old, and that it was dropped down out of heaven. We have no doubt at all that our own flag is a heaven-inspired banner. That starry corner looks very much like a bit of the starry heavens. Its red stripes are the language of valor and sacrifice. Its white stripes symbolize truth and hope. The blue signifies sincerity and justice.

> Who doth that flag defy,
> We challenge as our foe;
> Who will not for it die,
> Out from us he must go!
>
> DR. BETHUNE.

The story is told of a little five-year-old boy living in Washington who had heard a good deal of flag talk in his life, and who had gained a somewhat exaggerated idea of its protecting qualities. A new baby came into the home, and the boy was put into a room by himself to sleep. "It's mighty lonesome in here," he called out to his mother. "Just remember the angels are near you, and are caring for you," the mother replied. There was silence for some time, and then a small white-gowned figure appeared at the door, and a tiny voice asked, "May I have grandpa's flag?" "Why, what for?" "Just let me stick the flag up at the head of my bed, and I will go right to sleep; for you know grandpa said the other night that under the flag the weakest are safe." He got the flag, and when his mother looked in upon him an hour later, he was fast asleep, with a little fat fist under his fat cheek, and in the other hand he held the flag raised over his head.

There are sometimes four flags to be seen flying on the capitol of the United States. They are large flags, sixteen feet long. Two of the flags, one at each end of the capitol, fly only when Congress is in session; the other two are like perpetual fire on the altar of patriotism, for they fly every day in the year. A human heart may be an altar of patriotism, but the love of country is truest and best when that heart is stayed in God. King Hezekiah labored to lift his nation from their degradation, because he was a true friend and follower of God. Love of God was his strongest passion, and love of country was second to it; and when the two were united a mighty force was exerted, and a great nation was lifted out of sin into godliness. It is said to be the hope of every American boy some day to be President of the United States. Taking all the years together, very few boys can reach that goal, because there can be only one President at a time. After all, is that the highest ambition a boy can have? Is it not a personal ambition for fame? But there is room for every boy in this land to be a good citizen. The more good citizens, the better, and those who love their country will determine to help in making this "God's country."

Let them give a thought sometimes to King Hezekiah, and while they may not be able to command as he did that "filth" shall be removed, there will be opportunity for each and every one to lend a hand in making things purer and better wherever they live.

One day in wartime a ship was

Continued on next page

* The International Sunday School Lesson for June 11, 1911. Hezekiah's Great Passover. II. Chron. 30:13-17. GOLDEN TEXT: "Man looketh on the outward appearance, but the Lord looketh on the heart." I. Sam. 16:7.

WANTED—RIDER AGENTS IN EACH TOWN and district to exhibit a sample 1911 Model "Ranger" bicycle furnished by us. Our agents everywhere are making money fast. Write at once for full particulars and special offer.

NO MONEY REQUIRED until you receive and approve of your bicycle. We ship to anyone, anywhere in the U. S. without a cent deposit in advance, prepay freight, and allow TEN DAYS' FREE TRIAL during which time you may ride the bicycle and put it to any test you wish. If you are then not perfectly satisfied or do not wish to keep the bicycle you may ship it back to us at our expense and you will not be out one cent.

LOW FACTORY PRICES We furnish the highest grade bicycles it is possible to make at one small profit above actual factory cost. You save $10 to $25 middlemen's profits by buying direct of us and have the manufacturer's guarantee behind your bicycle. DO NOT BUY a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone at any price until you receive our catalogues and learn our unheard of factory prices and remarkable special offer.

YOU WILL BE ASTONISHED when you receive our beautiful catalogue and study our superb models at the wonderful low prices we can make you. We sell the highest grade bicycles at lower prices than any other factory. We are satisfied with $1.00 profit above factory cost. BICYCLE DEALERS, you can sell our bicycles under your own name plate at double our prices. Orders filled the day received. SECOND HAND BICYCLES—a limited number taken in trade by our Chicago retail stores will be closed out at once, at $3 to $8 each. Descriptive bargain list mailed free.

TIRES, COASTER BRAKE rear wheels, inner tubes, lamps, cyclometers, parts, repairs and everything in the bicycle line at half usual prices.

DO NOT WAIT—but write today for our Large Catalogue beautifully illustrated and containing a great fund of interesting matter and useful information. It only costs a postal to get everything. Write it now.

MEAD CYCLE CO. Dept. K-71, CHICAGO, ILL.

$10.00 PROFIT IN 2 HOURS

One Agent's Record

Sells on sight the year round, in any community—mechanic, farmer, store, office, shop, home. Finest Auto Tool in the world!

"Koeth Kombination Kit"—15 Tools in One

Over 30 combinations. Of fine tool steel. Positive guarantee with each kit. Small—weighs 3 lbs. Blue handles, box $3.50. In chest $4. Nickel 50c. extra.

Attractive proposition to high grade representatives. Free samples furnished.

Currier-Koeth Mfg. Co., 205 West St., Coudersport, Pa.

Direct from Factory, Freight Prepaid and Guaranteed by the Manufacturer

You can buy a Gold Coin Stove from us $5 to $20 less than dealer's prices. We pay freight; safe delivery insured, polished and all ready to set up.

"Satisfaction or your money back any time within 1 year" is our written guaranty.

Free Catalog—Illustrates all our Stoves. Gives Price List and tells our Plan and Offer. Send for it.

Gold Coin Stove Co.
11 Oak St. Troy, N. Y.

BUY DIRECT, INGERSOLL'S BEST

MIXED PAINTS

At WHOLESALE PRICES, Delivered FREE, for Houses, Barns, Roofs, all colors, and SAVE Dealers' profits. In use 66 years. Officially Endorsed by the Grange. Low prices will surprise you. Write for Samples.

O. W. INGERSOLL, 253 Plymouth St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

POST CARDS

10 Birthday	10 cts	10 General Subjects	10 cts
10 Best Wishes & Greetings	10 cts	10 Floral	10 cts
10 Decoration Day	10 cts	10 Fourth of July	10 cts

2 Birthday Letters Envelopes to match, 10 cents. Printed on Superior Paper with Any three 10 cent Packages Mailed for 25 cents.

MADISON ART COMPANY, MADISON, CONN.

Wonderful Story of King Khama

IFTY-ONE years ago, a German missionary named Schulenberg s preaching the Gospel among the tive Bechuanas in the old native pital of the Bamangwato at Sho-ng in South Africa. At one of the vices, a tall young native who had en a most attentive listener stood up be initiated into the Christian faith baptism. He gave his name as ama, and his age as twenty-five. s father was the great chief Sek-me. His conversion was a pleasing ident among several others of the me kind and did not attract special tention.

A year later, Khama came to his own the king and ruler of his people, the mangwato. Almost the first act of e young monarch was to spread the owledge of the Christian faith ong his sixty thousand subjects. He tered at once on a career of active ristianity which has scarcely a rival the whole history of missions. Not ly was he assisted by the old German issionary, but other workers gave m aid and counsel, notably the Lon-n Missionary Society. Khama's in-ence and example had remarkable sults, and soon he had the joy of see-g the Christian faith spread among s people. Year by year, thousands ere added to the number of those that cepted the Gospel, until at last the hole country over which he ruled me under its beneficent sway.

Khama, now an aged man but still e happy ruler of his Christian sub-cts, lately celebrated the fiftieth an-versary of his conversion. It was own far and wide throughout the untry as "Khama's Christian Jubi-e." Serowe, his capital, was in fes-val dress for a whole week, in honor the great event, and his people om every part of his little kingdom attended in multitudes. There were thanksgiving services and a wonderful series of meetings attended by many white missionary guests from different parts of Africa, and by distinguished official visitors, magistrates and others who know and respect the Christian king. There was also a great military parade of the king's troops. Khama came forth from his palace to meet his guests with an escort of five native regiments of Bechuana warriors and five hundred horsemen, in all about eight thousand men, as a royal retinue. The king's army, however, is one of peace, for he believes in conciliation. Sunrise meetings were held in which four thousand Bechuanas took part. At one Sunday morning service, 103 new converts were baptized. The visiting missionaries spoke at times to audiences of 12,000, who made an imposing sight with their spears, shields and native head-gear.

King Khama of the Bamangwato, in Bechuanaland, South Africa

Greetings to Khama on the occasion of his jubilee came from many different countries, for the story of his conversion has long been known throughout the Christian world. Over 300 post-cards were received from children in other lands, who sent their love to Khama and expressed their gladness of his long Christian reign. They had heard of and read about him in their far-off Sunday Schools. Among the speakers at this remarkable jubilee were some of the natives who had worked side by side with their king for the spiritual redemption of their country. They were deacons and elders in the native Christian churches. Khama's younger brother spoke for the whole nation, and told of the great transformation that had taken place in their tribal life and customs under Khama's rule, the disappearance of idolatry and superstition, the exclusion of drink from the land, the spread of education and the many blessings that had come from their general acceptance of the Christian faith.

Khama himself made a short characteristic address. He rejoiced in the work of God in his land and among his people; he expressed his deep gratitude to the missionaries and declared that "if we continue in the service of God, we shall continue to be a nation." He warned his people against drink as "the great enemy of their happiness and progress." He cordially thanked the white people for their friendship. He had also a special word for those who had not yet openly embraced the Christian faith. "You are seeking destruction in going backward instead of forward," said the old king. "If we honor God as we honor the things that belong to this world, we shall be a truly great nation."

Sunday School Lesson

Continued from preceding page

oing into action and the captain was etermined to win the victory; he was esolved not to give up. But he feared hat when the sailors should get into he thickest of the fight, and should eel the shot and the shell, some of hem might be frightened into hauling own the flag in token of surrender. o he sent a man to nail the colors flag) to the mast. Dr. Barnardo, re-marking upon this incident, said: "We ust all follow his example in our life attle, for all who love the Lord Jesus, oung or old, have a battle to fight, nd a fierce enemy to overcome. Satan oes not like to see any one come to he Saviour, and the moment we do ome, he begins to fight. What then? re we to be afraid? No, we must ight him in return, and conquer him, oo. Sometimes he says: "Do not let ny one know you have come to Jesus; hey will laugh at you, and think you trange." That is like saying, "Pull our flag down." Shall you do as the nemy bids? No, never! Nail the olors to the mast, so that every one nay see them, and no one be able to ull them down."

King Hezekiah, when he was about o inaugurate his plan for cleansing he temple, and the holy city, and the ation, called the priests and Levites officers) together and said to them: Now it is in mine heart to make a ovenant with the Lord God of Israel," tc. He knew that he must take a tand with God and for God if he would e a good king and a help to his na-ion.

Teaching this Lesson to Children

A teacher might begin by striking a natch, and saying: "It does not give much light, does it? Why not? Because the room is light. But when we strike a match in a dark room, it gives much light. Sometimes when a city or a land is full of wickedness, we say it is "dark," and we speak of darkest Africa, etc.

Our lesson to-day is about darkest Judah, where the people worshiped idols instead of the true God; where they used God's beautiful golden house, the temple, not for the worship of God, but for idols. [It may be necessary to show pictures of idols.] The lesson story to-day is about one man who made that darkest Judah a good and happy place to live in. You thought it was wonderful that one little match could make so much light, but I will tell you now what one man did to make a great city and a great country good. I will write his name on the blackboard, for it is a long name, and a hard one for you to remember." A few moments' drill will enable all to speak the name "Hezekiah," and then let them be told that it is a name with a beautiful meaning: "The strength of God" (Jehovah). Let the teacher now tell the lesson story, using the main facts and the several stories which have gone before these hints.

THE GARLANDS

By AMOS R. WELLS

WHAT are the garlands we lay on the graves?
Heapings of blossoms that loveliest are?
Beauty supreme for the bravest of braves?
Yes, and an offering holier far.

Here are the garlands of memories clear,
Thoughts of the partings, the desperate frays,
Marches and prisons and hospitals drear,
Triumphs and woes of those terrible days.

Garlands of gratitude fadeless and fair
Lie on the graves of our glorious dead,—
Grateful for freedom that breathes in the air,
Grateful for union that floats overhead

Garlands of love from the children and wives,
Garlands of hope for the nation to-day,
Garlands of offered and consecrate lives—
These on the graves of our heroes we lay

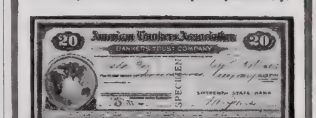
Roses and lilies and violets blue,
Daffodils, tulips, and all of the rest—
Ah, dear departed, brave patriots true,
We know what garlands will please you the best!

Among the Workers

—THE CENTENARY of the formation of the Spring Street Presbyterian Church in New York City was celebrated not long since. It was founded May 5, 1811, by John Morris and John Mills on the present site, then in the country, surrounded by pasture. It is the only Presbyterian church in the city 100 years old which has remained on its original site.

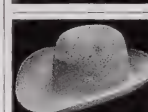
—EVANGELISTS LOWRY AND MOODY, of Cedar Falls, Ia., lately spent five weeks in religious work at Missoula, four weeks at Kalispell, and five weeks at Butte, Mont. A tabernacle was constructed at each place. The number of converts is claimed to have reached 3,250. The local expenses of these campaigns amounted to $7,500, and the offering for the evangelists amounted to $5,500. Kalispell and Butte also contributed $560 to the Chinese famine sufferers. The evangelists are now holding meetings at Stevensville, Mont. The pastors at the points named are greatly encouraged.

AMERICAN BANKERS ASSOCIATION TRAVELERS' CHEQUES



Pay Your Hotel Bills

with "A. B. A." Cheques when you travel in Europe, America, or any part of the world.



In tendering "A. B. A." Cheques you ask no favors, because they are known to be unquestionably good for face value, and they identify you to persons called upon to accept them.

These cheques solve most of the money problems of travelers; they have fixed values in the moneys of the leading countries, and are current at New York or London exchange rates in other countries; they are much safer and handier to carry than money. A wallet well filled with $100, $50, $20 and $10 cheques will add greatly to the pleasure of your journey.

Write to Bankers' Trust Company, 7 Wall Street, New York, for information as to where you can obtain the cheques in your vicinity, and an interesting booklet, "THE SAFEST CHEQUE" and information as to where you can obtain the cheques in your vicinity.

BUY THEM FROM YOUR OWN BANKER OR IF HE CANNOT SUPPLY THEM APPLY TO BANKERS TRUST COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY.

GENUINE Hand Woven PANAMA Rare Bargain

Panama Hats more popular than ever this Summer

By importing large quantities we can sell direct to user for this surprisingly low price. These hats are warranted genuine all hand-woven; unblocked, can be worn in that condition by men, women and children. Easily blocked in any shape or style. Just as serviceable as the $10.00 kind; only not as fine a weave. All sizes. Small, medium and large brims. Light weight. Sent prepaid, on receipt of $1.00. Order today. Satisfaction guaranteed.

PANAMA HAT CO., Dept. C, 830 Broadway, New York City

I Was Deaf 25 Years NOW I HEAR PLAINLY

with this artificial EAR DRUM in my ears. I never feel them—they are comfortable, and no one sees them. I will tell you the true story, how I got deaf, and how I made myself hear.

Medicated Ear Drum Pat. July 15, 1908

ARTIFICIAL EAR DRUM COMPANY
2 ADELAIDE STREET DETROIT, MICH.

PATENT YOUR IDEAS

$8,500 for one invention. Book, "How to Obtain a Patent" and "What to Invent" sent free. Send rough sketch for free report as to patentability. Patents advertised for sale at our expense in fourteen Manufacturers' Journals.

Patent Obtained or Fee Returned

CHANDLEE & CHANDLEE, Patent Att'ys
Established 16 Years
916 F. Street, Washington, D. C.

CUT FUEL BILL IN HALF

KOOKERBAKER

The KOOKERBAKER bakes potatoes in 2- minutes and everything else in less time than required by any oven and NO BURN ON BOTTOM—cooks vegetables at same time on any kind of stove or coal blaze or griddle. Unequaled for heating irons. Keeps food clean. By express $1 Prepaid $2.00 Agents Wanted.

THRIFTY APPLIANCE CO., 13 West 31st Street, New York

AGENTS We mfr. over 500 newest patent house-hold and office specialties; also cutlery, shears, etc. SAMPLES best sellers and catalogue FREE. GEO. N. EDGREN CO., Milwaukee, Wis.

MENTAL ACCURACY

Greatly Improved by Leaving Off Coffee

The manager of an extensive creamery in Wis. states that while a regular coffee drinker, he found it injurious to his health and a hinderance to the performance of his business duties.

"It impaired my digestion, gave me a distressing sense of fullness in the region of the stomach, causing a most painful and disquieting palpitation of the heart, and what is worse, it muddled my mental faculties so as to seriously injure my business efficiency.

"I finally concluded that something would have to be done. I quit the use of coffee, short off, and began to drink Postum. The cook didn't make it right at first—she didn't boil it long enough, and I did not find it palatable and quit using it and went back to coffee and to the stomach trouble again.

"Then my wife took the matter in hand, and by following the directions on the box, faithfully, she had me drinking Postum for several days before I knew it.

"When I happened to remark that I was feeling much better than I had for a long time, she told me that I had been drinking Postum, and that accounted for it. Now we have no coffee on our table.

"My digestion has been restored, and with this improvement has come relief from the oppressive sense of fullness and palpitation of the heart that used to bother me so, I note such a gain in mental strength and acuteness that I can attend to my office work with ease and pleasure and without making the mistakes that were so annoying to me while I was using coffee.

"Postum is the greatest table drink of the times, in my humble estimation." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

Children Love Mapleine Puddings

If your little folks do not take readily to the wholesome milk puddings, such as sago, rice, tapioca, blanc mange, corn starch, etc. Just use as a flavoring and they'll not only eat the first helping with relish, but come back for more.

MAPLEINE

(The Flavor De Luxe)

For boiled rice simply dissolve white sugar in water and add Mapleine, then pour this delicious home-made syrup over the boiled rice when ready to serve. You will find this a great favorite and a good nourishing dish, especially for school children.

Mapleine is an original flavor exceptably delicious which can be used the same as lemon and vanilla to flavor cakes, candies, puddings, ices, frostings, etc., and for making a snacking good home-made syrup, better than Maple.

MAPLEINE DAINTIES" a cook book sent free on request.

Grocers sell Mapleine, if not send us 35c for 2 oz. bottle. Write Dept F

CRESCENT MFG. CO.,

Seattle, - - Wash.

MAKE IT AT HOME

One package of

Hires HOUSEHOLD EXTRACT

makes five gallons of old-fashioned, home-made beverage, the most wholesome and gratifying, the finest of temperance drinks. It is Nature's tonic drink, made from roots, barks, berries and flowers. Sold everywhere or mailed on receipt of 25 cents.

THE CHARLES E. HIRES COMPANY

202 N. Broad St.

Phila., Pa.

Young People's Societies

Love to Christ*

JESUS CHRIST embodies the highest ideal ever given to mankind of the virtues which ennoble humanity. Not only did he enjoin it upon his followers that their conduct should conform to the moral law of Moses, but that they should drive out from their inmost hearts every evil suggestion—that to willingly harbor bad thoughts was just as bad as to do bad deeds. This was a wonderful and novel doctrine, and was enough in itself to captivate every aspiring mind.

When to this was added his sacrifice upon the cross, every inducement of which the intellect can conceive was given to win men's souls unto himself. It would seem that only the most hardened could resist the plea of such a character to "Follow me." And yet, because "there was no beauty that men should desire him"; and because he told the people that they were blessed when men should revile and persecute them and say all manner of evil against them falsely; we see the world turning against him. It is the privilege of all of us who are his children to tell of his great love, exemplifying it before men, and showing them that, through his grace, his yoke is easy and his burden is light.

Mr. Moody, in one of his great sermons upon this topic, dwells with emphasis upon the importance of bestowing, everywhere we go, a loving word and a loving deed whenever an opportunity occurs; and he tells of one little kindness which influenced his whole life.

It was when at ten years of age he started with an older brother to take up his first paid work. They had a dreary journey of thirteen miles in order to reach the place. The month was November. The world looked bare, cold, cheerless. The little boy was sick at heart, and the brother had hard work to keep up the courage of both.

Suddenly the brother pointed out an approaching figure and said, "There's a man who will give you a cent. He gives one to every new boy that comes to town."

"I was so afraid that he would pass me by," said Mr. Moody, "that I planted myself directly in his path. He was an old, feeble, white-haired man. As he came up to us, my brother spoke to him, and he stopped and looked at me.

"'Why, I have never seen you before. You must be a new boy,' he said. He asked me about my home, and then he told me that though I had no earthly father, my heavenly Father loved me. Then he gave me a bright new cent. I do not remember what became of the cent, but that old man's blessing has followed me for over fifty years, and to my dying day I shall feel the kindly pressure of that hand upon my head. A loving deed costs little, but, done in the name of Christ, it will be eternal."

Most of us fail to grasp the more or less fantastic doctrines of Emanuel Swedenborg; but his great hold upon his followers is chiefly due to his constant praise of love. Among the many beautiful sentiments which he uttered upon this subject is this: "Those who acknowledge God and his divine providence are like the angels of heaven, who dislike to be led of themselves and love to be led of the Lord; and a sign of their being led of the Lord is that they love their neighbor."

A man may well doubt the genuineness of his Christianity, who is often in quarrels with his neighbors; who begrudges little services to them; who refrains from speaking kind words to them. Jesus meant us to take his instructions literally when he said, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."

* Christian Endeavor Topic for Sunday, June 11. TEXT: 1. Peter 1: 3-25.

Training and Leadership*

NOW and then we hear of a great man, who, failing in youth to obtain the education that he coveted, managed to educate himself in later life by using all his spare time for reading and study, and by seeking often the society of cultivated men.

Thus Abraham Lincoln, stretched on the floor before the blazing fire, or by the light of a pine knot, acquired, mostly during the evenings of days spent in hard manual labor, a mastery of English style and a fund of learning which enabled him to cope successfully on the forum and in the courts with some of the greatest intellects of his time.

Another of our presidents did not learn to read until he had passed his majority. John Wanamaker, who has built up one of the greatest business enterprises of modern times, was put to work at twelve years of age in Philadelphia, and had little chance later to acquire learning; but he made the most of every opportunity. William McAdoo, the distinguished tunnel-builder and financier, was a poor newsboy; so was Thomas A. Edison, the greatest scientist, on the whole, perhaps, of our own or any age.

But in spite of the success of these and many other "self-made" men who might be mentioned, it remains true that every young person should obtain all the education that he possibly can.

Education is a tool. It is, if rightly used, the most efficient aid in the world to natural ability. An educated man feels a confidence in himself which only education can give; and self-confidence (a very different thing from conceit) is a potent aid to success.

More than that, education not only stores the mind with information but quickens and sharpens it; and in the course of acquiring it, friends are made, who lend joy and breadth to life. The progress of civilization has ever rested chiefly upon the educated classes.

In Browning's great poem, "Paracelsus" (in which he much idealizes the historic Paracelsus), the ardent student goes forth into the world, assuring his friends that he does so as

My ready answer to the will of God,
Who summons me to be his organ.

His friend Festus asks him if he is sure that his wild quest is indeed prompted from above. Paracelsus responds that he is sure, because his desire to know is so strong and his energy so exhaustless. He has thought upon the great sages, and has seen that

They know, and therefore rule.

He is determined to delve into the furthest depths of knowledge to know, not for knowing's sake,

But to become a star to men forever.

This would seem to be a noble ambition; but he cut himself off from all human love, lived only for himself, and failed in his great aims. He found that knowledge alone was useless. He had despised the past, which had seemed to him "only a scene of degradation, ugliness and tears." He came at last to see that there was "a touch of nobleness" even in the worst men and the worst age, and that this nobleness could be developed only by love and sympathy. As he dies, he cries:

I press God's lamp
Close to my breast. Its splendor, soon or late,
Will pierce the gloom. I shall emerge one day.

Thus he teaches us the lesson that education and learning alone cannot do God's great work in the world. They must be guided by a deep Christ-love, or else they are dangerous weapons.

† Topic of the Epworth League for Sunday, June 11. TEXTS: Acts 22: 3; 7: 22.

Curl the Children's Hair with West Horn Hair Curlers

Beautiful Curls in a few minutes time and wit any fuss or bother. Made of pliable horn—can't injur active child or harm the hair in any way. So easy t that a child can curl her own hair.

Ask for them at your favorite store or sent prepaid to

Card of 5 Curlers, 25c. Card of 2 Curlers, 1

WEST ELECTRIC HAIR CURLER CO

55 S. Front Street, Philadelphia

CREME EOGIEN

The fragrant, disappearing cre free from oil or metal. Softens lin face and imparts a transparent c The best powder foundation. Sen card for Free Sample and the Boo

How to Look YOUR Be an instructive treatise on the best m to that end, by Wm. M. Chase, an au ity on toilet preparations and their Franco-American Toilet Requisite sold only by specially appointed wo there may be an opportunity in locality—if interested write for te

FRANCO-AMERICAN HYGIENIC C

210 Franco-American Bldg., Chic

Famous Pipe Orga For Sale

The Hilbourne L. Roosevelt Organ in the B Presbyterian Church, 42nd St., N. Y., must be s at once prior to dismantling church edifi Splendid instrument in excellent condition; Manuals, 28 speaking stops. $2500. as it stan —bargain to quick buyer.

For information apply to Pipe Organ Dept.

THE AEOLIAN COMPANY

362 Fifth Avenue, New York

STAMMERIN

Habit Permanently Corrected

Natural speech taught. No beating time, drawling other tricks. Reed Method being introduced in public schools. Department for training teachers. struction educational, scientific, systematic, progress thorough. Endorsed by highest authorities. Spec summer classes for children. Trial Week Fr

REED SCHOOL 367 Hubbard Av DETROIT, MIC

Ideal Folding BATHTU

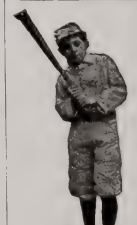
Pat. Pending

For houses without tubs, campe sportsmen, cold water flats in any room, light, lasts yea Write for Low introductory off

N. O. Y. BATH MFG. C

103 Chambers St., N.

HALLOWED HYMN NEW and Ol



$25. per 100, not prepaid. 35c. per copy by ma

Returnable samples mailed to prospective purchase

THE BIGLOW & MAIN CO., New York or Chica

HANDSOME SILKS FOR PATCH WOR

Enough pieces for beautiful log-cabin slumber robe f one dollar. Sample Package mailed; enough for cus ion, 12 Cents. JONES, Room 401, 500 Fifth Ave., N.

BOYS

A Complete Baseball Outfit

You may have one with out SPENDING A CENT

This is the season o the year when every boy longs to own a complet baseball outfit — suit ball, hat, catching mit and all the other thing which help a fellow t play good ball.

We are going to give every boy, n matter where he lives, an opportunity t secure one of these complete baseball out fits, or any part of one,

Without Paying One Cent For It!

If you belong to a "nine" you can show your friends how they can all have suits of their own and you can have the best dressed nine in the neighborhood, or if you want to form a new nine, here is your opportunity. Just drop us a postal card, and say:

"Please send me full particulars of how I can obtain a Baseball Outfit without paying ONE CENT FOR IT!"

Address, JUNIOR DEPARTMENT,

Christian Herald, Bible House, New York

Two Marvelous Mechanisms

HERE is a picture of a great mechanism that pulls a famous 18-hour train between Chicago and New York.

Here also is a picture of "The Studebaker"—the great "South Bend" railroad watch mechanism—a watch that's carried by engineer Floyd of the "Twentieth Century Limited" and by several other engineers on well-known limited trains.

These two mechanisms are two of man's most wonderful creations.

One, ponderous and powerful, weighing many tons—roaring like a cyclone—pulls tons and tons behind it at the wind-like speed of sixty, seventy, and eighty miles an hour.

The other, tiny in comparison—weighing ounces only, but strongly made, is almost frictionless—as quiet as the faintest zephyr; yet it practically controls the cyclonic train that carries it.

For it is on this watch that the engineer depends entirely to make his schedule—his meeting points with other trains—on time.

"On time" is the vital phrase in the language of railroad men.

And right here is the marvel of this railroad watch.

It is carried in the cab of this great jolting, pounding, shivering, lurching locomotive, every giant "cough" of which shakes the monster mass of steel in every fibre, and is subjected thus to the hardest tests a watch is ever asked to stand.

A locomotive of this heavy type makes but one trip of 100 or 200 miles and is then laid off for inspection, oiling, readjustment, etc., before it is allowed to make another.

But the "Studebaker"—the South Bend railroad watch, this other mechanism of delicate arrangement and adjustment—which passes through almost the same hard punishment within the monster's cab must, willy nilly, withstand all these shocks, keeping "to-a-second accurate" time the while. That is required by railroad rules and regulations.

Every railroad watch is tested every fifteen days by regular inspectors.

"The Studebaker" has astounded railroad watch inspectors lately with continued "perfect scores"—time and time again without adjustment. It has fairly leaped to fame in this respect within the year.

It is the masterpiece of railroad watches. Where minutes count in miles, "The Studebaker" counts them right.

Six months are spent just in the making and assembling of "The Studebaker's" parts—just the metal and the jewels.

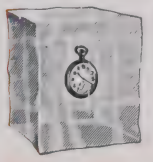
Then it is ready for its regulation, which often means six months more. A "Studebaker" frequently remains a full year in the factory, before we deem it ready for its racking journeys in these engine cabs.



The "South Bend" Watch

During this construction each "Studebaker" gets four hundred and eleven close inspections.

But when it's finished, it's a perfect watch.

Read to you right what perfect watches mean to engineers—what minutes mean to them.

Then write for our free book, "How Good Watches Are Made." It tells all about watches and gives further facts about "The Studebaker." Address

SOUTH BEND WATCH CO.,
Dept. 114,
SOUTH BEND, IND.

"The Master Timepiece"

A Word To Jewelers

15,083 expert jewelers now sell South Bend Watches. Last year, and this year up to now, they have sold all we could make.

We have been forced through this demand, to add to our facilities and are ready now to give the sale of South Bend Watches and assign inspectorships to a few more expert retail jewelers in certain territories.

We sell direct and sell to jewelers only—and to expert jewelers only.

No South Bend Watch is ever sold by mail, by anybody—nor ever will be sold that way.

Watch authorities now admit that "adjustment of a watch to the person ality," which we were first to advocate, is essential to accuracy in service.

If you are prepared to so adjust our watches, we want you to sell them.

Write us for the plan (in detail) that pleases more than fifteen thousand expert jewelers now.

Ask about the "South Bend Dealers' Service Book," a book that shows a hundred ways to increase sales and make more profits by reducing selling costs.

Where Minutes Mean Miles

It is necessary that engineers shall carry such a watch, for minutes' to these men, are miles, you know.

A minute fast or a minute slow means a mile behind—or a mile too far along the track!

Minutes perhaps are not so important to you but you want the satisfaction of carrying a truth-telling watch, do you not?

Then isn't a Studebaker at least as desirable to you as it is necessary to engineers? This excellent watch is handsome in appearance and light in weight.

See a "Studebaker" at your jewelers.

It is the watch that outlasts locomotives, while practically undergoing the same jolting, bumping punishment—a watch of marvelous durability—and one that is almost infallible as a timekeeper.

Why not a "Studebaker" as a graduation present to that deserving son? Nothing is more "personal," nothing is so lasting, so pleasing and so satisfactory. Learn more about it. Get our book.

"Now you've got the right idea"

Old Dutch Cleanser

does all kinds of cleaning and does every bit of it easier

Christian Herald

SUBSCRIPTION, $1.50 PER ANNUM
PUBLISHED 52 TIMES A YEAR

COPYRIGHT, 1911, BY THE CHRISTIAN HERALD

NEW YORK, JUNE 7, 1911

VOL. 34—NO. 23. PRICE 5 CENTS
OFFICES: BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK

Prince William II. From Van Dyck's Famous Painting

See article in this issue

THIS AMERICAN FLAG—FREE!

WOULDN'T you like to own a large American Flag like the one shown in the illustration on this page of The Christian Herald—if you could get it without paying one cent?

Not a little hand flag, understand, but a man-size "Old Glory," 6 feet long by 4 feet wide—bigger than the top of your dining-room table.

Not a pitiful wisp of color, mind you, but real red, white and blue, right from the factory of the Government flag-maker. A stanch bit of fabric that will not run or shrink in wet weather.

Here is an opportunity to keep faith with your patriotism, for you will have use for a flag, not only on every holiday for many years to come, but you can also use it constantly for decorative purposes in public and private sociables, in the schoolhouse, in the church and in the home. Imagine being able to celebrate Fourth of July with a flag as big as this! Wouldn't it be better than firecrackers for the children? You may have it without paying one cent.

How?

At this time of the year The Christian Herald usually puts forth an extraordinary effort to increase the number of members of the great Christian Herald Family. We can only do this with the help of the present members. You are one of these and we know you will help us. But we have no right to accept your good offices for nothing, so we make the following proposition:

Compare Size of Flag With Height of Children

THIS OFFER IS LIMITED

We have on hand but a limited number of these flags. They are going fast and we would advise you to Act At Once—Before it is Too Late.

The regular annual subscription price of The Christian Herald, as you know, is $1.50. Isn't there some one among your relatives, friends or acquaintances who you know would be benefited by reading The Christian Herald? You can probably think of several in a few minutes, and it would be comparatively easy for you to get them to subscribe for a short trial period, say eight months.

Get one of your friends to subscribe for The Christian Herald for eight months; send us $1.00 for this subscription, and The Christian Herald will be mailed to any address in the United States or Canada, and in return for your trouble we will send, absolutely without cost to you, this beautiful American Flag.

And in addition to this we will also send you a life-size fac-simile of the Declaration of Independence, 26x31 inches, an exact duplicate in every way of the priceless document which hangs framed on the walls of the old State House in Philadelphia. This document should be in every patriotic home, and it may be in yours, free of charge, if you take advantage of our offer.

Don't Miss This Offer!

Simply get a friend to take The Christian Herald for eight months, send us $1.00, and we will mail to you, postpaid, the large American Flag (4x6 feet) and the Declaration of Independence, without cost to you. Address

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD
615 Bible House, New York City

GET ONE NOW FOR THE FOURTH OF JULY

OUR MAIL-BAG

Questions and Answers

B. R., Utica, N. Y. How far is Mont-Lawn, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD Children's Home, from New York? What is the acreage and how many buildings are there? How many children have been there since the Home began?

Mont-Lawn is thirty-two miles from New York City. There are a little over thirty acres on the place. There are five large and two smaller dormitories, capable of comfortably housing three hundred children, an abundant water supply, a spacious open-air dining pavilion called "Fort Plenty," a bathing-pool, and a beautiful "Children's Temple," the only one in the world as far as known. The Home, which has been called "the Children's Paradise," opens June 28. It is an incorporated charity. It is the model institution of its kind. None but the children of the very poor are taken—those who cannot get an outing otherwise. Three dollars covers the cost of a ten days' outing for a child, transportation included.

Mrs. G. B., Denison, Texas. Where and by whom was the modern Sunday School organized and by what denomination?

By Robert Raikes, at Gloucester, England, in 1780. He was of the Church of England, and was called "Evangelical." There were several attempts to organize Sunday Schools in the United States in 1786 and 1790. The First Day, a Sunday School Society, was formed by the Quakers in Philadelphia. In 1711 a Sunday School was started in Boston; in 1793 in New York City; in 1797 in Rhode Island. In 1809 a systematic Sunday School movement was organized in Pittsburg. The American Sunday School Union was organized in 1824.

C. E. H., Franklin, Pa. The makers of stringed instruments determine the position of the frets on the finger board by a scale, the correctness of which has been proved by careful experiments. The number of vibrations per second, and consequently the tone produced by any stretched wire or string, depend upon its size and length. The frets are so placed that they will mark the lengths at which a vibrating string of the proper size will produce tones of the diatonic scale.

S., Sumner, Wash. Does the Bible say that the earth is a globe and moving?

The Bible nowhere says so. Moreover, it is not to be taken as a text-book of science. Look at Isa. 40: 22, and see what the anc. nts thought of the rotundity of the globe. It is true, however, that many people long ago imagined the earth to be flat. In Columbus' time, there were people who tried to dissuade him from his voyage, lest he should go over the "edge of the world."

W. C. N., Asotin, Wash. Explain (1) Rom. 6: 23; (2) Matt. 10: 28; (3) Ezek. 18: 4; (4) Luke 16: 23. (5) Do you believe the story of the rich man and Lazarus is literally true, or was Jesus illustrating the fact that one who would not believe Moses and the prophets would not be persuaded "though one rose from the dead"?

1. This passage points out that death is due to sin, and that this debt was paid once for all when the Redeemer died for sinners who, in accepting him, gain eternal life, but as a gift and not as the wages due to righteousness. 2. The passage in Matthew is a warning of future punishment for persistent and unrepentant sinners, and that there is a state in which retributive justice extends to the soul as well as to the body. There has been much discussion of this passage, but the statement stands clear and unmistakable. 3. The verse in Ezekiel reinforces the passage just quoted, as to the fate of the soul that has been at enmity with God. 4, 5. In the story of Dives and Lazarus Christ was illustrating in his familiar way by parable the fate of the selfish and ungodly rich, contrasted with humble piety, and to show that God looked into the hearts of men and not to their mere outward surroundings. The reference to "Moses and the prophets" was a strong rebuke to the unbelief of the Jews of that time. Miracles could have no effect on those who were determined not to believe.

B. F., Chillicothe, O. I am not at all clear as to the distinction between "restraint of trade" and "restraint of competition." Wherein lies the difference?

There is a marked distinction. "Restraint of competition" may up to a certain point be legitimate and even helpful to trade, as when two or more competitive forces in the same field unite on a proper basis and without interference with the volume of trade. Carried further, however, it may assume monopolistic form and interfere, by coercion or other unfair methods, with the legal rights of other competitors, to the detriment of trade and the public. "Restraint of trade" is always illegal. It implies a deliberate plan to control trade by hampering it, diminishing it, or forcing it into certain channels for a selfish purpose and making the public pay arbitrary and extortionate prices.

S. S., St. Vincent, Calif. The belief in the immortality of the soul is as ancient as the human race. It is too large a subject to be discussed in a paragraph in THE MAIL-BAG. Apart from the evidence of inspiration and revelation found in the Scriptures, there are many helpful books on the subject, which you can procure from almost any good church library.

J. N. G., Worcester, Mass. 1. To love God is to trust him as our heavenly Father, to seek to know and obey his will and to honor his laws; to seek from him solace in our troubles, strength in our weakness, help in our need, and counsel and guidance in our whole lives. Jesus tells us that if we seek first the kingdom of God, all other blessings will be added. If we honor God by our sincere, loving service, he will withhold no good thing from us. 2. Mere belief is not enough. "The devils believe and tremble." We must have faith and show our faith by our works. To know God's will and yet avoid obedience to it is worse than not to know it at all. Further, if we really believe, having once asked forgiveness and acceptance through Christ, we would not ask it again and again, which would be disbelief. What would an earthly father say of a child who asked twenty or even a hundred times to be forgiven of the same offense?

F. P. F., Waverly, Ia. The losses sustained by capital in the Boer and Russo-Japanese wars were widely distributed. They included (1) property absolutely destroyed; (2) cancellation of contracts, etc.; (3) agricultural losses in untilled and unharvested or neglected crops; (4) losses in general trade in all the cities, towns and business centres; (5) losses in imports and customs; (6) depreciation of values of securities and the rise in the necessaries of life. There were also heavy secondary losses to insurance underwriters, manufacturers, shippers, brokers and others in the reduction of the volume of trade.

Miscellaneous

If J. M., New York City, will send his full address, his questions will be answered by mail.

H. C. M., Rockland County, N. Y. Your exposition seems a reasonable one. We have never considered the two passages in connection.

Any reader of this paper knowing the address of Philip Todd McCluny, is urgently requested to send the same to his mother, Mrs. W. W. McCluny, Hughart, W. Va. When last heard from he was in Amarillo, Texas.

E. R. D., Xenia, O. Delivering the milk may be and probably is as necessary as any other "work of necessity." The commercial part of the transaction referred more particularly to the business end, the payment, etc.

Mrs. W. J. B., Bellevue, Pa. The mottoes, translated, read: 1. He forbids nothing to flourish, i. e., allows everything. 2. United arms an honor (along the line of "In union there is strength"). 3. It grows immensely.

E. W. K., Egypt, Pa. These questions belong to the domain of casuistry and speculation and could be discussed a whole year without result. See Isa. 45: 7 and Jas. 1: 13. God does not create moral evil. He sends trials to make us better, not worse.

C. S. P., Adrian, Wash. The general rule is immediate acknowledgment of a gift of any kind; but when Christmas gifts are numerous, there must often be delay. A brief appreciative card should at least be sent at once, with word that a suitable letter will come as soon as time permits.

Mrs. J. L., Quincy, Ore. We are not sitting in judgment upon other people. For aught we know, the men you mention may be doing much good in the world. We personally know of many genuine Christians who take a delight in doing good secretly, believing that a good act loses much of its merit by being trumpeted to the world.

W. A. S., Fairfax. 1. As all the expenses of all peace meetings, congresses, etc., and their delegates would have to be included in an exact statement of the amount of money that has been expended in the promotion of international peace, it is quite impossible to gather the statistics. One hundred million dollars would not be too great an estimate. 2. For the year 1910: Exports, $1,744,984,720; imports, $1,557,811 988.

NEW YORK, JUNE 7, 1911

THE · CHRISTIAN · HERALD

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED NEWSPAPER FOR THE HOME

THE BRITISH EMPIRE IN MINIATURE RISING IN THE CRYSTAL PALACE GROUNDS

BRITAIN'S FESTIVAL OF EMPIRE

THIS year all the British world is gay, and London, as the hub around which that vast Empire's activities revolve, is gayest of all. There, before this month has ended, with all the traditional pomp and ancient ceremony so dear to the British heart, they will place their Imperial Crown upon the head of an already dearly loved sovereign. So it is fitting that this summer should be chosen for the greatest fair that London has ever had. Europe is replete with special shows this year. Rome, Turin, Dresden and Edinburgh are all in fête dress; but the greatest of all, both in magnitude and interest, is the Festival of Empire at the Crystal Palace in London. Just sixty years ago that wonderful edifice was built for the great exhibition at Hyde Park. Now, as the celebration of its Diamond Jubilee, it has become the centre of a colossal enterprise that fills the entire two hundred and fifty acre park at Sydenham, to which it was afterward removed. On May 12, King George, accompanied by Queen Mary, Princess Mary, Prince Edward and a small retinue, drove the eight miles from Buckingham to the Crystal Palace through streets lined by forty thousand school children and Boy Scouts. It was a perfect English spring day—"Queen's weather"—and the new monarch was greeted with an ovation by the throngs along the route and at the Crystal Palace itself. After the opening ceremonies an imperial concert was given. A special chorus of four thousand five hundred voices, the Queen's Hall Orchestra, the Festival of Empire Military Band, the London Symphony Orchestra and the famous contralto, Madame Clara Butt, provided the programme. The Crystal Palace has been entirely repainted and redecorated and now, under a great awning lined with eight thousand square yards of royal crimson and decorated with banners embroidered with the arms of the various dominions of the Empire, is shown for the first time a complete and comprehensive display of the arts and crafts and industries of that wonderfully diversified territory. This exhibition ranges from Empire pictures lent by the Duke of Marlborough from the galleries of Blenheim Palace, to machinery in motion; from a $10,000,000 collection of diamonds to tropical turtles in a pond; and from processes of manufacture to the native arts of the farthest overseas colony.

Outside even a more wondrous change has been brought about. Here a splendid picture of the Empire in miniature rises before one's view. Dotted about on either side of the main avenue, are the government buildings of the various colonies. These are two-thirds replicas of the Parliament Buildings of the different countries, while that of Canada is an exact three-quarter reproduction of the Houses of Parliament at Ottawa. South Africa, India, Australia, New Zealand, Newfoundland and dozens of crown colonies are also represented. It is in these buildings that their commercial, industrial and productive wealth is shown. Here will Canada show her wheat, Australia her wool, South Africa her diamonds, and in the Indian section, 40,000 square feet have been transformed into a tea plantation which will demonstrate all the processes of preparing tea for the market. Ten acres of the grounds have been devoted to the rural life of the different countries. Farming in all its aspects, from the grain of the long, bright days of northern Canada, to the sugar plantation of Barbadoes, and the sheep ranges of New Zealand, may be seen. Interest is added to all these exhibits by the electric railway which connects them. This is called the "all red" route—"the line that links the empire," and on it one may tour the world for sixpence; for along its route he will pass the magic city of Delhi, an Australian woodman's cottage, a Maori village, tropical plantations, Canadian lumber camps, and villages in Africa and the Malay Islands.

Far from least among the attractions is the Pageant of London and Empire. The story which this great show unfolds takes a week to tell, yet the performance of each day is of itself complete. Fifteen thousand voluntary performers take part in its thirty-two scenes which depict two thousand years of the history of the Empire. Historic scenes from the days of the Druids to the meeting of Stanley and Livingstone in Africa and the events of the present year are enacted with remarkable realism. All profits from this great enterprise are to de devoted to the King Edward Hospital Fund.

Continued on page 590

King George, Queen Mary, Princess Mary and Prince Edward Driving About the Crystal Palace Grounds After the Opening Ceremony

The Compassion of Jesus

An Unpublished Sermon by DWIGHT L. MOODY, America's Greatest Evangelist*

TEXT: "When he saw the multitudes, he was moved with compassion."—Matt. 9:33

I AM sure, if I could speak of my Master to-day as I ought to, that every one of you would love him. If you knew the heart of Jesus Christ, you could not help loving him. Why do I love Jesus Christ? He had a great heart, full of tenderness and love and compassion. And to-day I want to speak about Christ as a Man of compassion!

Some years ago, I took my Bible and read carefully right through the four Gospels, and found how the heart of Jesus moved. And as I marked the Bible I fell in love with him. As I think of the woe, the wretchedness, the misery, that you and I can't see but that he sees, I think I can understand what that passage means, when it is said, "Seeing the multitude, he was moved with compassion." His heart went out towards them; he had compassion on the multitude. Herod had John beheaded; Herodias got John's head; and when John's disciples heard that John had been beheaded they took up that lifeless body and buried it, and then went and told Jesus. They could not have done a better thing—they told out their sorrow to him. And Christ knew that he alone had seen what was to come to himself; he knew that Golgotha was before him, and Gethsemane was in the way. And he went off alone into a desert place; he wanted to be alone for a little while. But the multitudes found out where he had gone, and they followed him. And when he saw the multitude, it was on that occasion that his heart was moved with compassion.

Dwight L. Moody

Let me read you a few verses: At the fourteenth chapter of Matthew, the tenth verse: "And he sent, and beheaded John in the prison. . . . And his disciples came, and took up the body, and buried it, and went and told Jesus. When Jesus heard of it, he departed thence by ship into a desert place apart: and when the people heard thereof, they followed him on foot out of the cities. And Jesus went forth and saw a great multitude, and was moved with compassion toward them, and he healed their sick."

Jesus, the Burden-Bearer

Each heart has its own bitterness. Each one here to-day has his own trouble and sorrow. But it isn't the will of God that you should stumble over your troubles or over your sins into the grave. Jesus has come to bear away earth's sorrow—to bear away earth's troubles and wretchedness and sins. He is here to heal the broken-hearted; that's what he came into the world to do. And there's not a broken-hearted person who cannot find sympathy in Christ, if he will.

Somebody may be asking, "Well, I wish you would tell me how I can get rid of my burden—how I can get rid of my care, and my sorrow, and my misery." I was speaking here some days ago from the text, "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest," and I tried to show that Christ is not only the sin-bearer but the burden-bearer. There's not a burden that cannot be taken away by Jesus Christ, if you will come to him.

I want to tell you how they did when he was on earth; and bear in mind he is the same, yesterday, to-day and forever; he is the unchangeable Christ, and he knows how to cure distress to-day as ever; if we will only come to him with our burdens and troubles, he will hear our cry.

Listen! The first chapter of Mark, the 40th verse: "And there came a leper to him, beseeching him, and kneeling down to him, and saying unto him, If thou wilt, thou canst make me clean." There was a man filled with leprosy. Perhaps there wasn't a man there who had faith enough to believe that Christ could heal this man; the case was helpless. You take up the Bible and read about the leper—we don't stop to realize what it meant to be a leper. When the Civil War came on, I read the papers, but didn't realize what it meant. I didn't take it in—the battles. At last I was on a number of battle-fields, and from those days on, it seemed to me as if I could see the dying, and hear their groans, and see their wounds. So when I take up this Bible, and when I think of a man being a leper—it was a life-long death; banished from society, sent into a life-long sepulchre—I can imagine how this man came to Christ, full of leprosy. When he came to him he had a sad countenance. His wife had said to him, "What's the trouble?" The man says to his wife, "Wife, I fear I'm a leper. I've got some symptoms of the leprosy." By the law, he was obliged to go and show himself to the priest, and if the priest pronounced him a leper, he must be banished from society and go off into exile. I can imagine his terror that day, as he came and sat down by his wife and children. The children began to weep; they could not be comforted. The mother tried to keep her courage up for the children's sake. The husband came back and said he must leave them and go off outside the walls of the city, never to visit them again. They might come to see him and shout to him at the top of their voices. I seem to see this poor man. He is without hope, home or deliverance. He turns his back upon them. Perhaps the day comes when his little one is sick; but he cannot go to visit that home. He could not close her eyes in death. The next news comes that the child is dead; he could not go to the city to follow it to the grave. His wife is sick and dying; but he could not go to the city, to be there with her in her last hours.

Perhaps he had a story like that to tell to the Son of God. This man could come to Christ with all his troubles. I see him as he said, "If thou wilt, thou canst make me clean." Spurgeon says he was a good theologian—he got the "if" in the right place. He honored Christ and had faith in him. "The Lord was moved with compassion"; he healed him then and there. I would like to have been in that home. What gladness came to the children when they found that their father had been made whole!

But the old-fashioned leprosy was nothing compared with the leprosy of sin. Leprosy may take my hands away. Leprosy may make it hard to eat. A man may be out of his head. But you know that this life is very short; it is only an inch of time, and eternal ages roll on. It's far worse to see a man reeling down to a drunkard's grave than to see a leper, because that may be only of the body; but when a man has destroyed his soul, it is far worse. I don't know of anything blacker and darker than sin. There's nothing that has brought such a woe in this world as sin.

Jesus, the Sinners' Friend

Jesus Christ is the friend of sinners; and if every sinner will do as that leper did, and come straight to Jesus, and say, "If thou wilt, thou canst make me clean," He will cleanse you. Have you got a treacherous disposition? Has sin dragged your life down, and made your life hard and bitter? Come straight to Christ, and say, "Thou canst make me clean." If he could cleanse that leper with a word, he can cleanse you, morally and spiritually, this very hour, and make you whole. He said to the man, "Wilt thou be made whole?" And if there's a man or a woman to-day who wants to be whole, Christ is able to make you whole. Wilt thou be made whole? A man need not go to perdition or destruction, or go down to an untimely grave. A man can live the life allotted to him, if he will turn from sin and live forever. He need never die, if he become a child of God. "He shall never see death." O man, bring your life-burden to him! Come to his great, loving heart and make your appeal to him!

I want to speak to parents. Dear father and mother, don't leave this world and leave your sons and daughters out of the kingdom. Do as that father did in the ninth chapter of Mark. He brought his child to the church and pleaded with them to cast the devil out. Then when the sufferer got beyond the church and beyond all human aid, that father went straight to the Son of God and made his appeal. And Christ commanded the father to bring the son, and the devil tripped him up. But the devil was going to get orders to move out of that temple, although he gave the boy such a blow at his departure that the people thought he was dead. And Christ sent that father home with that boy made perfectly whole.

Now, I can imagine those disciples. The boy had been deaf. They said, "If he cannot hear our voice, we can't help him; and if he can't speak, we can't help him." But the boy couldn't hear or speak. But Christ with a word cast out the devil.

So I want to say to you fathers and mothers, who perhaps have got a greater burden than when you came to Christ with your own sins: There may be a beloved son and Satan may have bound him hand and foot, and your heart is aching. You have brought him to the Church and he has not been converted. Go beyond the Church and get right to the heart of Christ to-day, and say, as the leper did, "If thou wilt, thou canst heal my soul. Thou canst save my boy." And if he don't save him, have a time of fasting and prayer. Make up your mind to get your children into the kingdom of God!

Jesus, the Compassionate One

I don't believe it is the will of God that my children should be banished from heaven, or that Satan should make a drunkard, a thief, or a gambler, or a licentious man, of my son. If there's anything wrong with me that's keeping back the blessing, let me find it out at once and do the right. Don't let the day close without an effort to win your son or daughter for the kingdom of God. They may be hundreds of miles away, or in some foreign land; God can reach them; and I believe that Christ sits on the throne to-day, and is saying, "Bring him unto me." Let your cry go up, "Save my boy to-day; save my son; save my daughter; save my children!" And the Lord will have compassion. He had on that father. His heart was moved.

Another picture. I saw him with his disciples; a great crowd following him. It was when his fame was spreading all over Judea. He came one day near a town; and just as he came near the gate of the town, it was filled with people coming out. There was a funeral procession and his disciples stood aside to let the cortège pass. His heart was moved with compassion. He could not see without compassion the poor widow bearing away her son to the grave. Christ knew about that widow. He knew perhaps the struggle she had had to bring up her boy. He had known how she had given the boy the best chance. In a few minutes she would be returning to her cottage home, almost desolate, because the light of life had gone out. Home was to be for her no more home from that day on. I can see Christ steadily looking upon that son; I can imagine the tears coming to his eyes. He could see death before him, and all around him, and he alone had power to raise the dead. Little did the people know what mighty power he had. And when that poor woman was about to pass him, stepping to the bier, he called to her son and commanded the young man to rise. And I can imagine that at that moment the four young men were commanded to put down the bier, the mother put away her veil, and was a witness to the scene that was to make her heart leap for joy. Jesus Christ, the Son of God, is going to speak, and he said, "I say unto thee, Arise!" And the young man instantly came to life. What gladness in that mother's heart! He broke up that funeral procession.

Jesus, the Restorer

A good many years ago, when I was a young man, I used to spend the summer in Chicago, and when the ministers were gone away, they used to send me to attend a funeral. One day I was called suddenly to attend a funeral. There were to be a great many business men, not Christians, there. I said, "This is my opportunity; I'll give them a Christian sermon." I tried to find one of Christ's funeral sermons, and I found that he broke up every funeral he attended. The dead couldn't stay dead where he was. And when that young man, the son of his mother, heard his voice, he came back to life. The undertaker's work was over!

What was it that brought out the compassion of the father toward the Prodigal Son? It is said that "He had compassion upon him." It was the boy's need that brought out the father's compassion; and if there's a poor, sin-sick soul within my reach I want to tell you that that father of the prodigal represents your God and mine. He will have compassion upon you if you'll turn to him.

Continued on next page

The thirteenth of twenty remarkable sermons by Moody, never before published, and the existence of which was disclosed only a few months ago. The absolute authenticity of the sermons is vouched for by the evangelist's son, Wm. R. Moody, who cordially approves their publication in this paper. The sermons are the exclusive property of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD. One will appear each month.

* This sermon, never before published, was preached by Mr. Moody in Tremont Temple, Boston, Mass., February 24, 1897.

The Compassion of Jesus

Continued from preceding page

I don't know of anything that has er happened in my life which has erhaps helped me so much to get into mpathy with those that need it as is: I always used to spend my sumers in Chicago. There were probably fteen hundred or two thousand chilen in my Sunday School, and hardly ny of them had a church home. One day hen I came home, my wife said that ne of the children of my Sabbath chool had been drowned. They had ot found the body. I took my little irl, four years old, and started for he house. When I got there, some orkingmen had gotten the body and rought it home, and the water was ripping down on the floor. The poor nother sat at the head of the dead hild, stroking her hair. It was her rst-born. She told me the story, hile her husband sat in a corner of he room, drunk. She said, "You see he condition my husband is in. I've orked. I've had to take in washing o care for my children, and I've had o care for him. He's never provided or us—not for five years. Now," she aid, "I have no money to buy a shroud nd a coffin. I wish you would help ne." I put down the size of the coffin nd the shroud. Then she said, "How m I to get a place to bury her?" I aid, "I'll attend to that." And after had attended to it all, I took my little irl and started out; and when I eached the street my little girl, four ears old, said, "Papa, supposing we were very, very poor, and mama had o take in washing for a living, and I nad gone to the Chicago River, and I ould see a stick, as that little girl did, and I should fall in, how would you feel about it?" I can't tell you how I felt then. I took her to my heart, and said, "Emma, you are my only child, and I think I should die." And she said, "Did you feel bad?" The child had been ashamed of her own father.
I was speechless. I had done it unwittingly. I pressed the child to my heart, put her down and took her home.
I asked God to forgive me and give me a tender heart, so that, if I ever should see any one in trouble, I might sympathize with them. Then I went back to that house, and read the fourteenth chapter of John, and comforted the mother. The next day we put the drunken husband, the wife and four little children into the carriage, and little Julia's coffin also. I got in and rode seven miles and comforted that mother all I could. I could weep with her then.

There's a story told of a mother whose boy was wounded in the Wilderness. She started down, of course. Of course a mother would go. But Stanton had sent out word that no mothers should go out through the army. I don't know how she got through the lines. She got down to the front and at last to the ward where her boy was. She pleaded with the doctor that she might be appointed the nurse and watch with her boy. The doctor said, "Mother, you must keep away for the present. Your boy is in a critical state, and the excitement would be too great." She says, "I've come six hundred miles, doctor, to see my boy. I can't wait." She begged and pleaded, and, finally, the doctor said, "I'll tell you; you can go and sit down by the bedside, but don't you speak to him, and when his nap is out, I'll tell him." That mother stole up to the boy. She couldn't keep her hand off. She just wanted to lay her hand on the forehead of the boy; and, without opening his eyes, he cried out, "Mother! have you come?" He knew the touch of that hand.

O sinner! Let God put the touch of his hand upon you to-day. The world may have treated you badly; maybe the Church and Christian people have not treated you just as they ought to have done; but I recommend Christ to you, that he may put his hand of sympathy upon you. Is there one among us who does not need Christ's sympathy of love?

Just Think of It

By EUGENE THWING

EVERY life is lifted up or pulled down by the power of thought acting upon it; and this is not the beneficent or the baneful thought of another strong mind, exerted with benign purpose or malignant intent upon a receptive spirit, but the self-assertive thinking of the mind within the individual himself, selecting its own subjects for thought and fixing upon them with clearly defined choice and purpose. Such thinking makes a life great and powerful or little and useless just as surely as the law of gravitation causes the balloon to rise and the stone to fall.

Emerson declared that "we do not determine what we will think. We only open our senses, clear away, as we can, all obstruction from the fact, and suffer the intellect to see. We have little control over our thoughts. We are the prisoners of ideas. They catch us up for moments into their heavens, and so fully engage us that we take no thought for the morrow, gaze like children, without an effort to make them our own. . . . What am I? What has my will done to make me what I am? Nothing. I have been floated into this thought, this hour, this connection of events, by might and mind sublime, and my ingenuity and wilfulness have not thwarted, have not aided to an appreciable degree." God pity a poor aimless, helpless, drifting human race if that were true!

. . .

DOES not the gardener determine what seeds he will plant in his soil? Or does he simply plow, and harrow, and take away the obstructing stones, and then suffer the fallow ground to take in whatever wild seeds may be brought by the winds, that he may be "fully engaged" with the crop of weeds as they grow, taking no thought for the morrow's harvest? Does not the householder determine what guests he will invite into his home? Or does he throw open his doors, take away his locks and fences and let in the good and the bad, taking no thought of the safety or the sacredness of his fireside?

Yes, many minds are like that, it is true. They lie open and fallow, receiving, without choice or resistance, whatever influences and impressions, good or bad, may intrude themselves; careless of the morrow, indifferent as to the fruitage, developing no initiative, no power, doing no service to mankind, and yielding no glory to Him whose breath created the living soul. But it need not and ought not to be so. God said to the man he created, "Have dominion over every living thing." Until a man has gained control of himself and given direction to his own life he need not hope for dominion over others. "He that ruleth his spirit" is better "than he that taketh a city."

. . .

DEFINITE, purposeful thinking is not easy. Aimless, fleeting thoughts and impressions must be fought and subdued, just as the gardener struggles against the weeds that crowd into his fertile soil. He has decided to grow flowers and fruit, but it takes constant attention and effort.

Old Doctor Johnson said that mankind dislikes to think. It is true only in the same degree that the lazy man dislikes to work. Mental work is a delight to the ambitious man or woman who, like Paul, reaches forth into those things which are before, and presses toward the mark of the high calling.

The young man or young woman at the beginning of life decides by careful choice what subjects shall receive earnest thought and study. This choice decides the life's activities. Thought opens the door of the soul to whatever visitor it chooses. In every relationship of life thought controls the course and determines the end. If we determine what thoughts shall rule us we may set our course whither we will.

. . .

DO YOU want to love your neighbor as yourself? Just think of it. Do you want to bless them which persecute you? Just think of it. Do you want to be patient in tribulation? Just think of it. Do you want to see the good in some one who has seemed to you altogether mean and unlovely? Just think of it. A man said that he had not spoken to his enemy for ten years, and protested against the idea that any dealings between them could be possible. "I hate him and despise him—the rascal!" It was suggested that perhaps this feeling was the product of too much thought upon the ugly side of his enemy's character and too little thought of a possible good side. He agreed—rather unwillingly, but honestly—to try definite thinking for a while on the other side. A few weeks later he reported with a beaming smile that Mr. ——— "wasn't such a bad fellow after all; in fact he's a decent chap, and we've just signed up a fine contract with him."

. . .

FEAR, grief, pessimism, hatred, tear down the bodily tissue and destroy the brain cells. Science has demonstrated the physical injury from such habits of thought. We must not forget that the opposite habits of thought just as surely build up, invigorate and beautify the body. It is within the power of every man and woman to change entirely the mental habit, and to choose, definitely, assertively, a course of optimistic, generous, idealistic, joyous, loving thinking. By such choice the whole trend and action of life may be changed, and better conditions realized. A physical change in the brain cells, in the blood, in the nervous system, may be brought about by adopting a high order of thinking, and life may be made to "yield sweetness, peace, progress, and love," as a garden is made to yield flowers and fruit.

Paul was an inspired messenger of God, and he was also the greatest teacher of health, usefulness and joy, when he said, "Whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things."

Do You Know Your Bible?

IN OUR issue of May 3, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD published a record and rating of 597 letters received in answer to the second list of Bible questions in this department. Since that publication a large number of additional replies have been received for the same list of questions. It is unfortunate that these should have come to hand too late for the first classification. Out of 100 of this latest batch of letters, 2 answered all of the 20 questions correctly, their names being Mrs. J. N. Hess and Anna E. Roberts; 2 answered 19 correctly; 5 answered 18 correctly; 10 answered 17 correctly; 21 answered 16 correctly.

The third list of questions also appeared in the issue of May 3. It is important that an effort be made by all who are interested in this very attractive Bible Study to send in their replies with as little delay as possible, in order that the new lists may appear monthly. We trust therefore to have all the answers to list No. 3, on page 445 of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD of May 3, as soon as possible. To examine all the questions and give proper classification and credit where credit is due, is a work of some magnitude and it is important that all replies should be in hand before it is undertaken.

Van Dyck's Portrait of the Prince of Orange

(See illustration on cover page)

THE famous portrait of William II., Prince of Orange, by Sir Anthony Van Dyck is among the loveliest art treasures of the world. Probably no canvas of the great Flemish master is more widely known, appreciated and loved; for while it is indeed a superb portrait of a royal boy of twelve years, in rich clothing befitting the rank of a nobleman's son, over and beyond this, it is the exquisite portrayal of the lofty dignity of youth.

Notwithstanding the long stretch of two hundred and fifty years since it was painted, the coloring of the great picture, as it hangs to-day in the Hermitage in St. Petersburg, is rich and brilliant almost beyond belief. The luminous white linen, the yellow satin of which the doublet is made, with bright patches of rose in the lining, and shimmering armor, are fairly startling in effect. Brilliant as they appear, however, they are but subordinate accessories, used by the mighty master of light and shade to bring out more clearly the sweet nobility and refinement of the boyish face, which, after all, is the key-note of the picture.

Painted at a period when the great master was in the very zenith of his talent and his powers, this matchless portrait will ever remain one of the world's shrines, at which lovers of the truly beautiful will ever pay exalted homage.

Anvil Sparks

. . THE fool kills time—the wise man makes it do double duty.

. . WORK is the secret of a Christian life. A lazy man soon backslides.

. . HE WHO has been years growing into an experience isn't likely to lose it in a moment.

. . THERE will never be any friction between the couple that keeps Christ between them.

. . THE days are too short even for doing good—how can there ever be time for doing evil?

. . DEAL with men so they will know you are a follower of Christ without having to tell them so.

. . THE man who does nothing at all because he is afraid of doing wrong, is doing wrong right along.

. . EVERY man has thoughts of men, words for men, and ways of conduct toward men, which are peculiar to himself.

A LITTLE TOUR IN INCA-LAND

Peruvian Student
Bible-seller

The Noonday Rest on the Eastern Slope of the Peruvian Andes

A Native Colporteur

By A. R. STARK, Callao, Peru

STARTING at sea level from Callao, let us accompany the Bible seller on his journey up the world's steepest and highest railway. By rapid gradients station after station is passed. The valley narrows to a gorge, and the line zigzags up the ridges of the Andes. Strange names are these —Infiernillo (little hell), Quebrada Negra (dark ravine), Verrugas, which stands for a deadly disease that ravaged the workmen building this famous bridge. Now we are at San Bartolome, with its peaches and granadillas; anon at Surco, and Matucana. Later we come among the silver-smelters of Casapalca. In the early afternoon we reach the snowy solitudes, cross the ridge of the Andes and sweep through the Galera Tunnel—15,665 feet above the level of the sea—the greatest railway elevation in the world. By nightfall the train has descended to Oroya, 12,178 feet. The colporteur sells his books at all the wayside stations.

Chosica lies basking in the brilliant sun. The Rimac, roaring, tossing and ever speeding onward in mad haste, forces its way through village and valley. Green fields sweep down to either brink, trees lend their restful shade and the cattle browse on its banks. The Oroya road, curving upwards to make its long mountain climb over the Andes, runs side by side with the Rimac until it is lost in yon distant turn of the valley, where lie the ruins of an Inca village. The bold spurs of the Andes rise 3,000 feet in the clear air and the eternal snows glitter on the peaks.

"This morning," writes the colporteur, "I went out early in Chosica to select the best places, and found that the most convenient site was the little market-place. There I hung my cartoons, and instantly people flocked from different quarters to see what was there, and then to hear what explanations I made, knowing that the subject was the Bible. It seemed to me that many were familiar with what they heard, for they listened attentively and with good will. Workmen and street-arabs were there as usual, but there were no beatas (i. e., people devoted to the Roman Church). On the contrary, some señoras asked questions. One confessed that it was not right to adore the image of San Antonio or any other saint; but she was not sure either whether it was permissible to worship before an image of Christ. I told her that I would not give her my own opinion, but I would take her back to Christ's own words to the woman of Samaria, and after explaining to them the Scriptural idea of worship, the listeners were well satisfied. I sold my books in peace, and the hotel manager seeing my empty bag wanted to charge me double pension.

"At Matucana, after reconnoitring, I went from house to house with my books. Finding no suitable place to take my stand, I put up my cartoons in the fonda (a Chinese restaurant) at the midday meal. People gathered until the fonda was filled, and they began to buy. 'What is the number of the beast?' anxiously inquired a listener. I read aloud Rev. 13. He was delighted, and gave it his own interpretation. The Gospel has made a good impression here. The town is not large, but all are friendly and respectful."

Oroya is the centre from which the railways branch off for Cerro de Pasca, Jauja and Huancayo, and horses or mules start for Tarma and the Perené. Oroya has a small population and the colporteur soon sold to everybody who would buy. Torrents of rain hindered his work. On days when no trains arrive, deep silence reigns on the elevations. He writes:

"These poor folk are like sheep without a shepherd and only God can raise up among them one who can lead them in the way of light. On us colporteurs falls the duty of comforting these people, by God's help, in our passing journeys with his Word. This we do as we are able; but the devil is ever following up our work and only the Allpowerful can give strength to the ant to overcome the lion."

Having secured a room at the inn at Jauja and filled his knapsack with Scriptures the Bibleman went out to obtain a license to sell. He began by selling a large-print Bible to a barber. Wandering through the streets to find buyers, he exhibited his chromos to a couple of men. Soon many began to crowd round and press upon him. "Make room, make room!" cried the colporteur, "and I will explain about my books." "I want the Santa Biblia," said one. "Give me a New Testament," cried another, and others shouted "Evangelios! Evangelios!" (Gospels! Gospels!) Everybody seemed eager to buy. He handed out the books, and very soon his bag was empty. Then centavos, reales and soles were showered upon him in payment. One said, "I bought a Bible"; another, "I had a Testament"; and so on until every one had paid the price of the book he received.

Crowds kept gathering from the market and the streets shouting, "We want these libros santos!" (holy books). "Sell me a New Testament!" "A dozen Gospels for me!" Many people were looking towards a shop, and the colporteur looked also, and beheld the cura and the gobernador (local authority) gazing in angry astonishment. The colporteur led the way to the inn, and a multitude followed, asking questions. They filled the corridor of the inn, and he sold a great number of books.

As he was ready to leave for Huancayo, a man about forty years old came up and said, "Señor, I have listened to what you have taught here, and I believe it to be the truth. I trust that you will go to Concepcion and visit my house, so that all my family may hear from your lips the teaching of Jesus Christ, and obtain a copy of the Bible. . . . How is it," he went on, "that during all the years of my life I never heard before that Jesus Christ spoke these precious words?"

A Market Scene in Tarma, 11,000 Feet Up in the Andes

At Huancayo people of all classes gathered to hear him —workmen, Indians, doctors and students. Those who had already bought books encouraged those who had not, and any one who came to disturb was quickly driven away. Next he set out to walk to Chongos, three and a half leagues distant, where he took up his position in the village market-place. Little by little the villagers gathered around. He spoke of Christ, and told them about the New Testament. Then they began to buy and soon he had sold out his stock of Scriptures. One man gave him a pigeon for a Testament. They rejoiced at his visit, and invited him back again. At Sicaya, two leagues distant, he visited the schools. The master in one school was doubtful about letting him address the boys. About thirty were present, large and small, and all listened well. Most of the boys bought New Testaments. Turning to the master he said, "Won't you purchase a New Testament, too? Otherwise your boys will know more about the Bible than you do." Rather nonplussed at this, he bought a Testament.

During this journey among the mountains, he sold altogether 1,500 copies of the Word of God. Over 63,000 copies of the Scriptures have been circulated in this Agency of the Republics of the Andes. Our men have been at work among the dusky sons of the Incas, among bronzed-skinned laborers, among Cholas and Asiatics and men and women of every social scale; faces marked with dissipation, figures stamped with poverty, men in the market-place and devout women in the home.

This Farmer His Own Rain-Maker

TO MAKE the acre efficient is the growing problem of the present-day and the future agriculturist. New Jersey has sometimes been called the "Garden State," but she is only now awakening to her possibilities along this line. Dr. Fortier, chief of the Bureau of Irrigation at Washington, in tabulating the rainfall, has found that in thirteen out of seventeen years it has been insufficient in New Jersey for the needs of the crops.

Arthur Seabrook of Cumberland County, N. J., has demonstrated the success of a new system, which secures absolute uniformity of water distribution, eliminates much of the labor and assures the maximum at minimum expense. He uses an overhead pipe system of water distribution. Two years ago, he irrigated four acres by his new method, and the returns were so marvelous that last year he installed the system on ten more acres, making in all fourteen irrigated acres. The story of his experiment is a wonderful one. He is the only South Jersey farmer who makes his own rain. Sixteen years ago Mr. Seabrook was a "trucker" on a small scale, but he watched what he was working at, and he "plugged along," like the rest of the farming community. Being economical and industrious he saved some money, and began hunting for a farm of his own. About four miles from Bridgeton, N. J., he found a farm, comprising fifty acres of woodland, briars, corn and mortgages. Seabrook looked it over and concluded that if some hearty hustler were to trim out the woods, cut out the briars, and wipe out the mortgages, the land might grow real crops. So he bought it for $3,000. The place is worth now $20,000, and is earning its owner $20,000 a year. He has forty of those acres in garden truck—and truck pays.

First, he built a 5,000-gallon tank on a fifty-foot tower, so that the water would have all the pressure required for an irrigated area of moderate extent. The pressure is sufficient to cause the tiny streams of water to spurt from the perforations in the piping that traverses the fields. An engine of four horse-power was introduced, which sufficed to fill the 5,000-gallon tank at the rate of 100 gallons per minute. The irrigation pipes were given a uniform height of eight feet above the ground surface to afford ample room for horses to pass under in the necessary cultivation.

The process of irrigation, after filling the tank, was automatic and purely an affair of gravity. The water ran down hill—that was all. A simple lever was turned at the end of a pipe line, and then over the whole area a gentle rain fell and kept falling until the lever was shut off. There was not a radish or a parsnip that did not get its share of the refreshing draught. The rain is generally turned on toward nightfall. Those four acres, in the year when for the first time they got what they wanted and when they wanted it, fairly coined money for their owner. Last year fourteen acres in all were so filled with overhead-irrigated truck that not a particle of top or subsoil existed within that radius that did not yield its full quota. It was an eight-horse-power engine that did the work this time, operating a duplex pump under ninety to one hundred pounds pressure. All the crops on the irrigated acres profit by the regular and copious rain thus provided. Onions are followed by celery. Early cabbage, beets and radishes are followed by lettuce and romain, and after that comes a third crop of spinach. Leeks, where early lettuce has been gathered, come in and take up the rest of the season.

The Rain-Maker's Irrigation Apparatus at Work

Mr. Seabrook in His Cabbage Patch

The Seabrook farm carries from ten to twelve farm hands for at least three months of the year, and twenty-five hands for nine months. The yearly cost of labor comes close to $10,000; fertilizer and manure from $5,000 to $6,000 a year. These are big outlays, but returns can be surmised when it is stated that the trucker's new automobile was paid for by the proceeds from one-fourth of an acre of parsley! Meanwhile his original farm acreage has had an additional seventeen acres also bought out of profits. The onion crop last year sold for $1,500. He had five acres of golden blanching celery which he got on the market in October and kept on selling through February; 150 tons of beets from six acres, for which a canning factory paid eight dollars per ton; 9,000 bunches of carrots per week disposed of in Philadelphia, while he furnished wagon-loads of truck to the Bridgeton stores every day. Besides the chief rotations he raised large quantities of prime rhubarb, string beans, peppers, egg plants, lima beans, canteloupes, watermelons, parsnips, tomatoes and asparagus.

Man travels under the earth, and in the air; he has harnessed the lightning, and now he can make his own rain. The importance of the new system may be better estimated in view of the fact that for every pound of soil matter added to a plant by growth, there are needed several hundred pounds of water, which are taken up by the plant and evaporated through it into the atmosphere.

Shiloh, N. J. CORA JUNE SHEPPARD.

Revival Fires Glowing in Wales

A REMARKABLE mission has just been concluded in Swansea, Wales, by Dr. J. Wilbur Chapman and Mr. Charles M. Alexander. Swansea was one of the storm centres of the great revival which swept over Wales a few years ago, and it has once more been swept with religious fervor. In this revival, incidents are related of men and women and boys and girls converted on the streets, in the homes, in factories and business houses, and in unusual places. Dr. Chapman formed the men into "Personal Worker Bands," six in each band, to work and pray continually for the salvation of the unsaved. Four bands were formed one evening. Then similar bands were organized among the women, and the boys and girls. Among the boys alone in a short time over fifty bands were formed.

On "Home Night," parents brought their children with them. The evangelist invited fathers and mothers who desired to dedicate their boys to Christ to come forward. No less than one hundred boys were brought forward. Over a score of parents lifted their hands to say that they offered their boys for the ministry. Then they were asked to bring forward their girls, and about four hundred were presented to God. No less than fifty parents raised their hands to indicate their desire that their daughters might become missionaries.

Nearly three thousand members of the Pocket Testament League were enrolled in less than a month.

Dr. Chapman and Mr. Alexander next conducted brief conferences in Belfast, Ireland, and Leeds, England, and concluded the season's work with a short mission at Shrewsbury, England. They then sailed for America. THOMPSON BROWN.

Some Children's Work for Children

FIVE years ago a young woman in Portland, Ore., gathered about her a group of children, and organized a little society to which the name of "The Asha Band" was given. Under the leadership of Miss Hazel Dill Harcourt-Reinhard this group of children took upon itself the responsibility of supporting and educating one young girl in Calcutta, India.

The Asha Band of Helpers, Portland, Oregon

This protégée was to be one of the one hundred and eighteen girls in an independent mission school, which was started in Calcutta by Mrs. Suhkoda Banarjee, and is now conducted by Mrs. E. C. Avetoom. All the pupils of this school are child-widows, who have been rescued in various ways from the unhappy lot to which they seemed doomed. The cost of the education of a girl in this school is $25 per year, and though the raising of this alone was the original object of the band, it has since its inception sent $627.04 on charitable missions.

The children who compose the organization all come from families in which it is not possible for them to have large amounts to spend as they choose, so each cent contributed to their little fund has meant self-denial and careful saving. This valiant band of little folk voted to send $5 to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD Relief Committee for the China Famine Fund. H. S. H.

Portland, Ore.

Mont-Lawn Soon to Open

THERE is a buzz of preparation at our Children's Home at Mont-Lawn on the Hudson. It will be opened the last week in June as usual and everything about the place is being put in readiness for our little guests. For weeks past, poor children of the tenements have been applying by dozens and scores to be "taken to the country." Only those are taken who have no other means of getting a fresh-air outing. It is expected that fully 2,500 little tenement waifs will be received in the "Children's Paradise" this season—the seventeenth year of this benevolent work, which was founded by Dr. Klopsch, who had the inscription written over its gates: "I love God and little children." It costs $3 to give a poor boy or girl a ten days' outing at Mont-Lawn, but all contributions, large or small, in aid of the work are gratefully received and acknowledged. Friends of the Children's Home should send their gifts to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, Bible House, New York.

OUR EDITORIAL FORUM

OTTO KOENIG, President — GEO. H. SANDISON, Managing Editor — THEODORE WATERS, Secretary

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD is published weekly by "The Christian Herald," at the Bible House, Fourth Avenue, 8th and 9th Sts., New York City. The officers are: Otto Koenig, President and Treasurer, Bible House, N.Y. City; Geo. H. Sandison, Vice-President, Bible House, N. Y. City; Theodore Waters, Secretary, Bible House, N. Y. City.

Subscription Price, $1.50 a year, in advance.

Remittances should always be made in the safest manner available to the remitter. Register cash remittances.

Foreign Postage.—For each copy to be mailed outside the United States, Canada, and Mexico, add one dollar a year.

Change of Date.—It takes at least two weeks to change the date, after your subscription is renewed.

Expiration of Subscription.—The date on the wrapper indicates when your subscription ends.

Change of Address.—It requires three weeks' time to make the change. Give both old and new address.

Subscriptions may commence with any issue.

Letters should be addressed, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, Bible House, New York.

Entered at Post Office, New York, as Second-class Matter
Entered as Second-class Matter at the Post Office Department, Ottawa

Exit Diaz

THE sun of Diaz had a brilliant if somewhat lurid setting. Long-time President and Dictator, he realized toward the end that the people were really dissatisfied and that the notable achievements of a remarkable administration were as nothing when weighed in the balance against the popular desire for constitutional liberty, a free ballot and honesty in the public service. He will be remembered with admiration as the leader who drove out the invaders and under whose skilful rule Mexico became great and prosperous, and even his despotic methods will not obscure the fact that the country under his guiding hand has assumed the foremost place among the Latin republics.

There is a picture in the resignation scene in the National Chamber that will live in history. Deputy Aste's dramatic reading of Diaz's letter, followed by wild cheering, which was echoed by the outside crowds, with shouts of "Long live Citizen Porfirio Diaz!" showed that the iron-handed President who had kept his promise with the faith of a true Hidalgo, still held the love of his people, even while they regarded him as the foe of liberty and popular rights. With Diaz out and de la Barra Provisional President until a general election can be held, the speedy restoration of tranquillity may now be hoped for. Fortunately, Madero and de la Barra are both conservative leaders. Their influence and that of their immediate associates will now be exerted for the bringing about of conditions favorable to the nation's peace and prosperity.

The Blessing of Books

WITH the opening of its new public library, New York has entered into the full possession of one of the largest aggregations of valuable books in the world. She may not yet be able to point to such rare literary curios as those held by the Bibliothèque Nationale of Paris, or the British Museum, as priceless treasures; but with a round million and a quarter selected volumes all housed in their new and beautiful home (which cost $10,000,000 to build on a site representing twice that amount in value), the metropolis has a right to be congratulated. To this magnificent collection the Astor and Lenox libraries—both now incorporated with the Tilden—have jointly contributed 800,000 volumes. The united libraries, it is estimated, circulate not less than eight millions of books a year, an unequaled record. Great libraries are the index of a nation's intellectuality, but here we have one which serves not the scholarly class alone, but the whole people, on a larger scale than any of its contemporaries. "To use books rightly," wrote John Ruskin, "we go to them for help; we appeal to them when our own knowledge and power of thought fail, that we may be led into wider sight and purer conception than our own, and receive from them the united sentence of the judges and councils of all time, against our solitary and unstable opinion." So in this splendid new library, the books are there, gallery upon gallery, like the rich veins of gold in a mine, as President Taft happily expressed it in his brief speech at the opening. There are six other libraries with a greater number of books, but none with so many readers.

Peace's Expanding Wings

MOHONK, in turning the illuminating rays of its searchlight along the path of the peace movement, has this year rendered most substantial service to the cause. Dr. Butler's opening address at the Conference was a clean-cut and patriotic presentation of the programme and policy of the Carnegie Peace Foundation, concerning which there had been much speculation. He showed that its work is laid out on practical lines and that at the head of the three co-ordinating branches there will be men who may rightly be regarded as the ablest and most influential in the fields of international law, economics and history. Their propaganda will be a national one in the largest sense. It is a happy coincidence that this important announcement should come almost simultaneously with the great movement for the organization of Peace Circles which THE CHRISTIAN HERALD has begun. Already, in response to our invitation, many earnest and capable men and women are sending us their names and announcing their willingness to undertake the formation of Circles in their neighborhood. Programmes of organization have been prepared and will be mailed to all who write to us for them. These instructions will greatly simplify the work and will enable thousands of our readers and their friends and acquaintances to identify themselves with a great movement which is spreading with phenomenal rapidity throughout the world. These united Circles will form an Army of Peace in which the service will be found profitable, inspiring, developing and wholly delightful. By all means send in your name and let us tell you how to organize and conduct a Peace Circle in your neighborhood.

The Latest Heresy Trial

WE HAD fondly hoped that the days of heresy hunting were past. That they are still with us, however, is evident from the proceedings of the Judicial Commission of the Presbyterian General Assembly, which has recently been reviewing the case of the Rev. William D. Grant of Northumberland, Pa. Dr. Grant was lately tried and acquitted by his own presbytery on the same charges. According to the prosecution, he has given expression in the pulpit to views radically at variance with the teachings of Scripture. It is alleged that he has denied the miracles and explained them by natural causes, called Jonah a myth, repudiated the orthodox account of the fall of man, rejected the authority of the Bible, and declared that certain Scriptural incidents were mere fables and to be so understood. Specifically, he is alleged to have expressed either disbelief in or a new interpretation of the temptation of Eve, the fall of Jericho, the judgment upon Uzzah, who was struck dead for touching the Ark, the divine birth of Jesus, the story of the manger, the temptation of Christ, the resurrection, the judgment on Ananias and Sapphira, etc. If the charges be sustained and if these are indeed the views held by Dr. Grant, his proper place would seem to be outside the orthodox Christian church, for it would be impossible to reconcile such convictions with an efficient Christian ministry. He makes an explanation or defense which has at least the merit of frankness, if not of novelty. To keep his audience awake, he found it necessary to "shock" them at intervals. And it is these suddenly-aroused hearers presumably who, catching the note of emphasis but missing the full meaning of some of the verbal "shocks," have made them the basis of the ecclesiastical inquiry.

There ought surely to be a limit to the possibilities of a preacher breaking loose from denominational moorings and setting up his own individual judgment and interpretation against all the consecrated Christian scholarship that has gone before him. There is no sadder spectacle than a church weighted with such an incubus. Soundness in the pulpit on theological essentials is a vital necessity to the spiritual life of the pew. Heresy trials are a strange anachronism nowadays. It should, however, be quite clearly understood that when a pastor ceases to hold the essential doctrines he is pledged to teach, his honorable course is to seek another allegiance. Whether or not this is the case in the present instance the presbytery will decide.

Laying up Treasure

AT NINETY-ONE years of age, Dr. Daniel K. Pearsons, having given away to charity the last remnants of his great fortune, is about to retire and pass the sunset of his life in one of the sanitariums he himself has founded. He has kept barely enough to supply his personal necessities; but he can look around and see on every side the good results of his splendid munificence. This man's life-story reads like a wonderful romance. He began "poor as Job's turkey" and worked his way through college, living in an attic, chopping wood and cooking his own frugal meals. He taught school, studied medicine and afterward went to farming and lumbering. He had a good wife who shared his ambition to help others, and he used to say, "She wanted me to make money to give it away." And give it they did. Wealth poured in upon him; all his investments turned to gold. The pair were childless, but he remembered his own early hardships and decided to give away systematically all the money he could make to help the struggling youth of both sexes. He has endowed forty-seven colleges in twenty-four States, twelve of them in the South, and declares, "I have had more fun than any other rich man alive. They are welcome to their automobiles and steam yachts. I have discovered that giving is the most exquisite delight in the world. I intend to die penniless." His total gifts to education and charity aggregate $6,000,000. With him, giving has been a passion, and his career illustrates the joy that comes of real service and of living for others. This great-souled philanthropist has shown us the most practical way of laying up heavenly treasure, by a wise, generous and humane disposition of the surplus wealth we accumulate here.

Of David's Line

IT IS not generally known that the royal houses of Germany and Great Britain both claim lineal descent from King David. In the royal genealogical trees or charts kept at Potsdam and Windsor (both of comparatively recent compilation), the lines of King George and Emperor William are traced back to the Israelitish monarch. Queen Elizabeth's famous "family tree," which is preserved at Hatfield House, the home of the Salisburys, traces her ancestry to the same source. Now a Russian princess is betrothed to a prince of undoubted Davidic descent; but she is several removes distant from the royal house of Romanoff—too far to exert any ameliorating influence on the traditional severity of Russia's attitude toward the Jews. Yet, some day, it is not improbable that Russia, looking back over the lesson of history, may begin to believe that not a few of her national misfortunes are due to her conduct toward this helpless race.

Closing Relief Work in China

From a letter from the Chin-kiang Missionary Committee

THURSDAY and Friday of this last week our committee superintended the unloading of 13,267 bags of gao-liang, a little over a thousand tons. It was bought partly with CHRISTIAN HERALD money. It was purchased in North China by Mr. Ferguson. It took twenty-two small native boats. We had seventy-five coolies, and did the unloading in about twenty hours' actual work. It went into North Kiang-su district. Of the last remittance, we have decided to give the distributing committees the cash, as it is getting late for shipping grain. On behalf of the sufferers, we thank you for your hearty response to our cable messages.

JAMES B. WEBSTER, Treasurer.

Contents of this Number

Wednesday, June 7, 1911

	PAGE
Our Mail-Bag	582
Britain's Festival of Empire (Illustrated) By Theodore Rand-McNally	583, 590
The Compassion of Jesus. Sermon By Dwight L. Moody	584, 585
Just Think of It. By Eugene Thwing	585
A Little Tour in Inca-Land (Illustrated) By A. R. Stark	586
This Farmer His Own Rain-Maker (Illustrated) By Cora June Sheppard	587
OUR EDITORIAL FORUM	588
THE BIBLE AND NEWSPAPER (Illustrated)	589
Diaz Surrenders Rule in Mexico (Illustrated)	590
Talks on the Cool Veranda (Illustrated) By Margaret E. Sangster	591
Talking Peace Plans at Lake Mohonk (Illustrated)	592
Our Boys and Girls (Illustrated) By Miss Janet Porter	593
The Miss Janes' Silver Wedding By Annie Willis McCullough	594, 595
The Death of a Nation Sunday School Lesson, by Dr. and Mrs. W. F. Crafts	596, 597
America's First Photographer (Portrait)	597
The Roosevelt Dam	598
What a Child Did for China (Portrait)	599
A Young Evangelist (Portrait)	C01
Grace for Duty. Christian Endeavor Topic	602
The Use of Spiritual Gifts. Epworth League Topic	603

THE BIBLE AND NEWSPAPER

Conducted by FERDINAND C. IGLEHART, D.D.

Great Library Dedicated

THE dedication of the New York Public Library on May 23 was a memorable occasion. There were present at the exercises President Taft, Governor Dix, Mayor Gaynor and others. The exercises were in the following order: Opening prayer by Bishop Greer; delivery of the keys by Thomas Hastings, the architect; addresses by Charles B. Stover, Mayor Gaynor, John Bigelow, George L. Reed, Governor Dix, and President Taft; and benediction by Archbishop Farley. The exercises were held in the main lobby fronting on Fifth Avenue. The seating capacity was limited to 500, and that number of persons holding tickets was present. Two hours later 15,000 to whom special tickets had been given passed through the building two abreast, making a hasty inspection of the institution. The building, of white Vermont marble, has been nine years in construction, costing $10,000,000, and $2,000,000 more are to be expended upon it. The ground on which the building stands is owned by the city and is worth $20,000,000. The building has a floor space of 375,000 feet, as against 326,000 in the Congressional Library of Washington. There are 1,400,000 books on the shelves, and there is shelf room enough for 2,500,000 more. The crowning glory of the edifice is the reading room on the top floor, the largest in the world, being 290 feet in length, 77 feet in width, and 50 feet in height. There are many individual reading rooms for technical study. There is a bindery in the basement; a purser's office; a cataloguing room; a room where books are ordered from dealers; a receiving room; a library school; a manuscript room; a printing office, etc. It was well to make so much of so momentous an occasion. In the greed for gain, in the speed of the race for material success which kills, it is well to pause and emphasize the intellectual and the spiritual, to consider the greater treasures which cannot be weighed in scales, measured by tapes, hauled in wagons, or hoarded in safes, the things of the mind and the soul. Between $3,000,000 and $4,000,000 of endowment has been laid away to support this great institution, which will be the fountain of a perpetual stream to purify the corruptions of city life. It will be another instrumentality which, in connection with the religious and educational institutions, will cure vices, check crimes and develop the highest manhood and womanhood. There was a royal city among the Canaanites called Kirjath-sepher, which meant "city of books," because it was the library city of the realm. There is the account of Caleb's capture of it.

And he went up thence to the inhabitants of Debir: and the name of Debir before was Kirjath-sepher. (Josh. 15:15.)

Opening Ceremonies at the New York Public Library

Flowers for Dead Sailors

It is claimed that the first memorial service for naval men who died in the Civil War was held at the 129th Street Recreation Pier in New York City recently. A little group of men who had command of Federal fleets and members of the Daughters of Veterans assembled there for exercises in honor of the unknown dead sailors and marines of the Civil War. Mrs. Mary D. Ring of the Daughters of Veterans presided and made the address of welcome. The exercises consisted of music and speeches from the veterans who had fought on land and sea. Then a miniature warship made of heavy cardboard, filled with flowers, was taken out from the pier on a launch into the Hudson River. A salute was fired from the shore as it was put into the water and towed about until it sank, its cargo of flowers floating out on the surface of the stream as an offering to those whose resting place was in the sea. It is strange that there should have been a delay of between forty and fifty years since the close of the Civil War to pay such a fitting tribute to those who gave their lives to their country in this department of the service. This exquisitely beautiful memorial service was of course the product of woman's loyalty and love. All these memorial services wherever held only emphasize the indestructibility of the Union purchased at such a price, and the spirit of harmony and affection which exists in all sections of the country, North and South, East and West. The flowers did not find the bodies of the boys; the fragrance they exhaled was not breathed by them; but the blossoms did the living good as an expression of gratitude at the patriotism, heroism and sacrifice of the men who perished in the sea. Earthly immortality is thus mentioned:

Yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors; and their works do follow them. (Rev. 14:13.)

Life in the Stars

Professor T. J. J. See, astronomer in charge of the Naval Observatory at Mare Island, Calif., in a talk to the American Philosophical Society in Philadelphia the other day, laid especial stress upon the proof that planetary systems similar to our own revolve about all the fixed stars, and that these planets are habitable and inhabited like our planets which revolve about the sun. He said life was a perfect general phenomenon in the universe, and that living beings exist wherever a star twinkles in a depth of space. There is a strong probability that Professor See is correct in his statement that the worlds in space are inhabited. It is likely that the omniscient God has intelligences to people such illimitable masses and spaces, and yet it is pure speculation without scientific demonstration to declare that this is so. There is little doubt, however, that science with its great strides will discover some evidence that the universe is peopled with intelligent creatures made in the image of God, and amenable to his royal law of love. God has made the stars; he upholds them in their ceaseless rounds, and knows their number and name, and every creature that may reside in each one of them.

He telleth the number of the stars; he calleth them all by their names. (Ps. 147:4.)

Caught Lions with Fly-Paper

Stewart Peyton, owner of a chain of religious newspapers, returning from India to England, gave an account of the manner in which four man-eating lions were captured by means of fly-paper. The Maharajah of Gwalior imported lions from Somaliland to restock his depleted jungles. Four man-eating lions were turned loose in the jungle. The ruler ordered his captain to bring them to him unharmed. The beasts had taken possession of two deserted huts. The officers spread the space about the huts with sheets of sticky fly-paper. When the huts were opened, the angry animals leaped out upon this paper. Their paws were bound by the paper, and in their efforts to release them the lions covered their eyes and noses. While the beasts were in this predicament the soldiers lassoed them and took them back to the royal cages. We find here apparently one of the weakest instruments having the greatest power to overcome savagery. It often occurs in the business and religious world that the humblest and apparently most insignificant instrumentalities are employed in overcoming obstacles and in subduing appetites that would destroy.

But God hath chosen the foolish things of the world to confound the wise; and God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things which are mighty. (I. Cor. 1:27.)

Cemetery 4,000 Years Old

The Archæological Institute of America had most interesting sessions at Brown University. Papers were read by some of the most distinguished men and women in this country and by specialists from Europe. One of the most entertaining papers was on American excavations in Crete in 1910, by Miss Edith H. Hall, of Mount Holyoke College. She told of the discovery of a burying ground which dated back to 2,000 years before Christ, in which many valuable objects were found. In this cemetery were unearthed 150 large jars in which bodies had been buried. In many cases the bones were entirely decomposed, but some were preserved, so that it could be seen how the bodies were bent and placed in the jars, which were buried mouth downward. Some nations embalmed their dead, others burned their bodies and preserved their ashes in sacred urns; but it has been the general custom of the race to bury its dead out of sight and guard with care their hallowed graves. Oblivion has covered the past with a thick dust, has buried individuals, cities, nations, and even graves far from sight. The spade has to dig hard to uncover this soil and reveal the secret, but when found they are of intense interest to the living. The discovery of the ancient cemetery in Crete reminds us of one much more ancient. In the earliest records there is the description of the purchase of a most beautiful burying ground by Abraham, in which he laid his beloved Sarah to sleep.

And after this, Abraham buried his wife in the cave of the field of Machpelah before Mamre: the same is Hebron in the land of Canaan. (Gen. 23:19.)

Distinguished English Visitors

One thousand clergymen, including Protestants, Catholics and Hebrews, attended a meeting in the interest of international peace, held under the auspices of the Federation of Churches in New York City recently. Three of England's distinguished sons sent in the interest of world peace were to have spoken. These were Allen Baker, Esq., member of Parliament, the Very Rev. W. Moore Ede, D.D., and the Rev. John Clifford, D.D. The two former were delayed on the steamer by the fog, and Dr. Clifford, one of the most eloquent and powerful clergymen in Great Britain during this generation, was given most of the time. The Rev. Dr. S. Edward Young introduced as president, Dr. George Alexander, who presented Dr. Clifford. Resolutions were presented by Frederick Lynch, D.D., and Rabbi Stephen S. Wise. All spoke most eloquently of universal peace through the leadership of England and America. Rev. Dr. Walter Laidlaw, secretary of the Federation of Churches of New York, offered resolutions against the passage of any race-track gambling laws at Albany. A hundred or more of the ministers sat down at a luncheon at the galleries of the National Arts Club, and after luncheon greetings and responses were made by Hon. Seth Low, Allen Baker, Rev. Dr. Jowett, the Very Rev. W. Moore Ede, the Rev. John Howard Mellish, the Rev. Dr. John Clifford and Rev. Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis. The addresses on peace between England and America abounded with humor, wholesome truth and loftiest sentiment. Dr. William J. Schieffelin was the master of ceremonies.

Nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more. (Isa. 2:4.)

Diaz Surrenders Rule of Mexico

Francisco I. Madero

THE NATIONAL PALACE OF MEXICO, MEXICO CITY

Francisco de la Barra

THOUGH the latest dispatches from Mexico tell the story of wild rioting in the City of Mexico and of the depredations of bandits in other parts of the republic, the peace news is, in the main, bright with promise. President Diaz's assurance that he would resign before June 1 had the desired effect of ending the revolution on May 17. This retirement, which took place on May 25, has for a good while seemed imperative, and, though the pressure of circumstances has undoubtedly altered the course of his withdrawal from power, it may also be interpreted not merely as conforming to a general estimate of the necessities of the situation, but as a proof of the patriotic spirit in which, not without mistakes and recently in the face of grievous trials and perplexities, he has served his country for so many years. His rule has been that of the iron rod, but he has made Mexico a nation.

Arrangements for the holding of elections will be made as soon as quiet has been entirely restored. In the meantime Señor Francisco de la Barra, Minister of Foreign Relations, will act as President, and General Francisco I. Madero is to act as his special adviser. The designation of a new minister of war and the selection of the other ministers will be made by the Provisional President in agreement with General Madero. These are not in all respects the terms on which the insurgents have lately been reported to be insistent, but the prompt withdrawal of General Diaz and the official honor paid to Madero will doubtless more than reconcile them to the rest of the offer and the negotiations may therefore be expected to result in a substantial reunion of the people of Mexico in support of a reconstructed federal government under Señor de la Barra. In many ways the Provisional President is finely qualified for his responsible position. He was a successful lawyer before he entered politics and he has represented Mexico at the Ibero-American Congress in Madrid, at two Pan-American Congresses and at the last Hague Peace Conference. He has also been ambassador to Belgium and the Neatherlands and at Washington.

There were many dramatic scenes attendant on the change of régime in the City of Mexico. When, on May 24, it was announced that General Diaz, who was lying at his home too ill to receive any but the highest officials and his most intimate friends, would not resign that day, a great outburst of popular indignation took place. There were wild riots in the streets, and mobs ranged about Diaz's home, calling "Death to Diaz!" and "Viva Madero!" There was nothing anti-foreign in these demonstrations. They seemed rather to be a spontaneous outburst of a hot-headed people who believed they had been duped and deceived beyond endurance. A number of clashes between the troops and the street crowds occurred, and the troops fired several times. Several were wounded and a number of deaths were reported. The revolutionary leaders went into the crowds as soon as they could, and by an appeal to the spirit of patriotism and self-respect, succeeded in restoring quiet. Alfredo Robles Dominguez, who is now the ranking Maderist in the capital, went into the streets accompanied by his staff. Riding from one group of manifestants to another, he exhorted them to remember the dignity of their cause and not to disgrace themselves and their leader by rioting. The crowds did not disperse, but there was a marked improvement in their behavior.

It has now been agreed that a body of 3,000 revolutionary troops shall be brought near enough to the City of Mexico to be rushed in should any further disorder occur. Throughout the afternoon of the 24th, and all the following day, the attitude of the troops seemed changed. Instead of spurring headlong into the midst of crowds and firing on very slight provocation as in former days, more leniency was shown. The people possessed the city and the soldiers and police did little to interfere with their marching and cheering. For the first time in thirty years the populace feels free to voice its political sentiments, and it is only to be wondered at that there have not been even more grave disorders due to sheer exuberance of spirits.

The scene in the Congressional Chamber on the afternoon of the 25th will become historic. The deputy who presented the resignation of General Diaz said: "President Diaz is dead! Long live Citizen Diaz!" The shout in the Chamber at these words was taken up by the crowds outside the National Palace, and the first vivas for the aged warrior in many days were heard.

Britain's Festival of Empire

Continued from page 583

Now that the official year of mourning for the late King Edward VII. has ended, London and all the world that goes to London is taking advantage of the round of social events and celebrations to appear in its gayest attire. Yet though the splendid uniforms and the court dresses form a veritable kaleidoscope of color there are a few noticeable changes in the styles of the circle that moves closest about the King and Queen. King George has revived the popularity of the coat designed especially for his father and called in America the Prince Albert, while Queen Mary's determined attitude toward extremes of dress is having its desired effect. At all the notable functions of the last few weeks the ladies' gowns have shown considerable modification. No woman connected with the court now wears expansive hats. The ladies in waiting are required to wear toques and their skirts, which must touch the ground, have to be two and a half yards in width.

The visit of Kaiser Wilhelm of Germany to London for the unveiling of the splendid gilt and marble memorial to Queen Victoria has provided excuses for the assemblage of great throngs of people. One American visiting in the old capital remarked: "I can't go around the corner without meeting the King, Queen, or Emperor. I stumble on royalties everywhere. Next to unfinished coronation grand stands, clinging to the churches and monuments and other ancient landmarks, Boy Scouts and omnibuses, crowned heads seem the most frequent street spectacle in London."

The activities of the military aeronauts at the Hendon Aviation Field have aroused deep interest amongst all classes, and it is not at all uncommon to see parliamentarian, prince and pauper mingle in the curious crowd that has watched these experiments. The accompanying photograph of Mr. Asquith, Premier of Great Britain, and his son and daughter, was made not long since on the field at Hendon.

One of the features noticed by all visitors in London at this season is the apparent ease with which the great masses of people are handled by the police. At the ceremony of the unveiling of the memorial there was a vast concourse which carpeted the whole wide green slope of the Green Park. Yet only on the very border of the Mall was any real crowding. Everybody was very sedate, and with a few exceptions with hats off, all the way back to Piccadilly, fully a quarter of a mile away. As the guns thundered the salute, the cheers were confined to the crowd along the Mall as the royal personages passed on foot across the few yards between the monument and the palace gates. Not a policeman had been visible in all the wide stretch of park during the ceremony. There had been plenty to guide people in. There were plenty at all the exits, but they were rather ushers than human barriers. The flow of thousands was controlled by a gesture and a word.

Premier Asquith with His Son and Daughter at Hendon

When the ceremony was over and the assemblage broke up there were generals and admirals in full uniform covered with decorations, bishops in their robes, officers of the guards in scarlet, choristers in surplices, notables in court dress—velvet coats, silk stockings, and silver buckles—peeresses, and fine ladies in dainty laces and feathers, all mixed with curious Americans. There were pub-keepers and their wives; and the dingy casual of the street lightly elbowed the royal carriages with flunkies in scarlet and champing and fretting horses. Most of these resplendent notables later mingled on foot with the drab troops of sightseers. Still there was no pushing, hardly even momentary crowding, and only an occasional brief and polite activity on the part of the police to clear the way for a state equipage. So strongly does this contrast with the handling of crowds in our own cities that it is sure to impress all Americans.

The hotel men of London have at last awakened to their mistake in putting such high prices on accommodations in the city, and the newspapers, as well as many of the proprietors of hotels further from the centre of the city than those about Piccadilly, are sparing no efforts to impress upon all the world that there are still good accommodations to be had at comparatively reasonable prices.

THEODORE RAND-MCNALLY.

TALKS ON THE COOL VERANDA

The June Wedding

By MARGARET E. SANGSTER

DOROTHEA is to be married in June. Her most intimate girl friends have been in the secret for several months, and the aunts and cousins weeks ago decided what they would wear at the wedding and how much they could afford to spend upon wedding presents. Dorothea's mother is up early and late in these days setting dainty stitches in the trousseau, and with her own hands finishing garments on which the daughter looks with eyes of loving appreciation as they accumulate in the bureau drawers. No doubt the daughter would relieve her mother of much of this work if she had time, but ever since she left school she has been busily occupied in office work and she does not mean to resign her position until a few days before the great event. Dorothea's people have always been obliged to count their pennies as well as their dollars, and as she is about to marry a young man who has his own way to make and is well started in a business of his own, she hopes to prove herself a good manager and a real helpmate. Why should this young couple feel obliged to go away upon an expensive wedding journey, showing themselves among strangers in the hours of the honeymoon and losing the sense of sacred privacy which it is the privilege of every bride and groom to exact in the beginning of their married life? In the possession of limited means they are to be congratulated beyond young people whose fathers, owing to wealth and splendor, are always in the lime-light and are constantly exploited with glaring headlines in the daily press.

Reporters will not ring Dorothea's door-bell nor fashion journals inquire about the length of her train and the fabric of her wedding gown. She will be a bride of June stepping from the charmed circle of home love and the sweet guardianship of father and mother into a little home of her very own, where she and her husband will enjoy their day of small things and adjust themselves to the strangeness of their new conditions and set forth on a road which from youth to age shall be worthily trodden in integrity, honor and usefulness.

Bridal Showers

Among the interesting features preceding a wedding, the showers planned by friends take front rank. A bride may have a linen, a china, a kitchen or a miscellaneous shower. The hostess of such a function issues her invitations to those who care enough for the bride-to-be to wish very much an opportunity to add to her pleasure. Such affairs may properly be connected with a luncheon, an afternoon tea or at this season with an informal party of the veranda in the early evening. Each individual gift should be wrapped in delicate tissue paper, tied with narrow ribbon and accompanied by the card of the giver on which may be written a sentiment, a rhyme, or simply a greeting and expression of affection. Witty friends sometimes write clever limericks, and these awaken considerable fun when they are read aloud. As the shower is bestowed upon the bride, she thanks her friends one by one, but it is not incumbent upon her to make a speech. Refreshments may be as simple or elaborate on the occasion as the hostess chooses to have them.

The Wedding Dress

Neither Dorothea nor any other bride of June should feel obliged to follow precedent in the matter of her wedding dress or the style of her wedding or the sending out of announcements. For once in her life it is a woman's prerogative to be queenly, and this falls upon her wedding day. A gown of white muslin is as becoming to a youthful bride as one of satin or lace. She may or may not wear a veil. Traditionally, the bridal veil dates back to antiquity. It is a souvenir of the period when the bride's identity was surrendered, so far as her family was concerned, and wholly merged in the family of her husband when he carried her away from her kith and kin to dwell in his father's house. Perhaps the modern aversion to relations-in-law had its early origin in the patriarchal system when a young man had not his own home upon his marriage, but continued to live with his wife under the parental roof. A veil is pretty, if one chooses to have it, but as it does not suit every face many brides look better without this finishing touch on their costume. Dorothea is a maiden and may wear a veil, but if her friend Emily, who is only twenty-three and a widow, were to marry again, a veil would not be appropriate for her, nor should she wear bridal white. A delicate lavender or a pearl gray is the choice for a woman on her second marriage.

June is so beautiful in its abundance of flowers that the home decoration for the wedding may be found in the garden, the meadow or the forest. Heaven bless the brides of June.

. . .

A Good Example

ALL honor to Radcliffe College. It has set a good example to every woman's college and every high school and every grammar school in the whole country, in its recent decision about what the girl graduates are to wear on commencement day. The Radcliffe girl graduates are to wear plain shirtwaists, white, of course, with severe collars and ties furnished by the college. These will necessarily be alike, so that in the matter of neckwear one young woman may not surpass another. The skirts of white linen are to be severely plain and three inches from the ground. Oxford ties and black stockings complete the costume, except for the cap and gown which is the uniform of the seniors. Thus dressed, the graduates will present a dignified appearance and no alarming expense need be incurred by impecunious girls. Hitherto the cost of graduation has borne heavily on parents of limited means. Even in the public schools of New York City young girls graduating from grammar or high school have been obliged by custom to dress in costly frocks, frilled, embroidered or lace trimmed, with white stockings and slippers and wide ribbons. A carriage in which to drive to the school was obligatory because the toilette was too conspicuous or too showy to admit of walking through the street or taking a street car. It may be added that the Radcliffe girls are prohibited from arranging their hair in any fashion except one that is extremely simple.

. . .

Life on a House-Boat

AN inexpensive and delightful method of passing the summer has by some city people been discovered in life on a house-boat. Provided the family home be not too far from the shore of a bay or river, the plan works admirably. For example, dwellers in Brooklyn or on the Jersey coast or elsewhere near salt water have the choice of several excellent beaches. The house-boat is often an old canal boat that has been bought for little money, renovated and painted within and without, and fitted up with the simplest furnishings. Here a mother and children may spend the warmest weeks of the year wearing old clothes and eating plain food, dropping for their daily bath into the waves that lap against the boat, wading far out at low tide and growing strong in sun and air.

"We left our table linen at home for the season," said the owner of such a boat last year, "using white oilcloth instead of damask, and carrying with us a large stock of Japanese paper napkins. We minimized every item of work and forgot the fetters of society. Every evening the tired father came out from business, going back and forth on the electric cars. The baby in her second summer had no trouble whatever, and the mother who had been nervous and depressed rebounded and was like a girl again in her love of fun and her renewal of vigor."

A house-boat colony composed of agreeable neighbors all of whom have a mind to live the simple life rivals in pleasure and profit an opposite colony of millionaires who spend without stint and find the summer much like the winter in social excitement and display.

. . .

Scrap-Books and Clipping-Boxes

TEN years hence when airships are no longer a novelty it will be very interesting to have a history of their progress ready to one's hand. The same may be said with regard to a number of other marvels and discoveries that are at present chronicled in the daily press. The changes going on in Europe, the political progress of this country and the sayings and doings of famous people ought to be preserved by intelligent American families, either in scrap-books properly classified, or in labeled pasteboard boxes. Let one boy or girl in the household take charge of the home clipping bureau, and day by day before the newspapers are destroyed cut out the interesting items and lay them away for future use. They may be pasted or classified on a rainy day or in the evening.

THE ROYAL CHILDREN OF SPAIN

THESE are the children of King Alfonso and Queen Victoria of Spain. This picture, which was taken in the gardens of the Alcazar, at Seville, is one of the best that has ever been made of these sturdy youngsters without older companions. The oldest, Alfonso, Prince of the Asturias and heir to the Spanish throne, was born in 1907. The second son, Prince Jaime, is now nearly three years old, and the little Princess Beatrice will be two on the 21st of next July. King George of England is a cousin of these children, though the Spanish reigning family are Bourbons, descendants of King Louis XIV of France.

Talking Peace Plans at Lake Mohonk

Copyright by Pach Bros., New York

Baron d'Estournelles de Constant — A SCENE AT LAKE MOHONK — Nicholas Murray Butler

IT IS now seventeen years since the first Mohonk Conference took place. On Wednesday, May 24, the Conference on International Arbitration began a three days' session at the lake. There was a large and most distinguished attendance. Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, President of Columbia University, presided, and among the notabilities present were Baron d'Estournelles de Constant of Paris, Herr Prediger F. W. Simoleit of Berlin, Dr. John Clifford of London, Dr. Andrew D. White, Dr. Cyrus Northrup, Chief Justice Sir William Mulock, of the High Court of Ontario, W. L. Mackenzie King, Canadian Minister of Labor; Charles S. Francis and Charlemagne Tower.

In his opening address, Professor Butler reviewed the long years of agitation for peace. He said:

A clever observer of his kind said not long ago that whenever some occupation was discovered making for the peace of the world that was as profitable as is the preparation for war, then the age of militarism would be over. This statement touches upon a very profound and far-reaching truth to which I ventured to allude in this place a year ago. This truth is one that must be seriously reckoned with. We have now reached a point where, unparalleled enthusiasm having been aroused for a rational and orderly development of civilization, it remains to clinch that enthusiasm and to transform it into established policy by proving to all men that militarism does not pay and that peace is profitable. We must meet the money-changers at the doors of their own counting-houses. Just so long as the great mass of mankind believe that military and naval rivalry between civilized nations creates and protects trade, develops and assures commerce, and gives prestige and power to peoples otherwise weak, just so long will the mass of mankind be unwilling to compel their governments to recede from militaristic policies.

The establishment of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace marks an epoch, in that it furnishes the organization and the means for a sustained and systematic effort to reach and to convince the public opinion of the world by scientific argument and exposition. Talk about the evils of war there has been in plenty; we are now ready and anxious for something more constructive.

It has been determined by the trustees of the Carnegie Endowment to organize the undertaking committed to their charge as a great institution for research and public education and to carry on its work in three parts or divisions—a Division of International Law, a Division of Economics and History, and a Division of Intercourse and Education. Otherwise stated, these three Divisions will represent the juristic, the economic, and, broadly speaking, the educational aspects of the problem before the trustees, which is to hasten the abolition of international war by the erection of an international judicial system competent to hear and to determine all questions of difference arising between nations.

The Division of International Law will be under the direction of Professor James Brown Scott, associated with whom will be a board composed of some of the most distinguished international lawyers in the world. The point of view of each great nation will be represented in their councils, and the results to be arrived at will be the joint work of jurists of every school and of every language. Dr. Butler goes on to say:

It is not too much to hope that by the influence of these scholars the international law of the future will prove to be without the division between the law of peace and the law of war, which is now characteristic of it. The method which obtains in the domain of municipal law affords a model and an example for the method to be applied in the field of international law. We need, first, an agreement as to the fundamental principles which should regulate the rights and duties of nations in their mutual intercourse, which principles would then form the substantive law of nations. The means and instrumentalities provided to enforce a right or to redress a wrong would indicate the natural and normal procedure to be followed in international discussion and litigation. It would then appear that for the maintenance of rights and for the redress of wrongs between nations there are, first, the legal remedies, and, secondly, the resort to violence and force. In this way the rules of war would cease to form a part of the substantive law of nations; they would be classed, together with the peaceable remedies and after them, as one of the possible means of enforcing rights and redressing wrongs. The text-books of international law would no longer put war on an equality with peace, but would relegate it to its appropriately subordinate place in the consideration of questions of procedure.

The second division (Division of Economics and History) will be under the direction of Professor John Bates Clark, of Columbia University. It will aim at the education of public opinion and at the formulation of conclusions that may serve for the guidance of governmental policy. With Professor Clark will be associated a score of the world's leading economists.

The third division (Division of Intercourse and Education) will supplement the work of the two other divisions, by co-operating with existing agencies, by the educational work of propaganda, by international hospitality, and by promoting international friendship. It will diffuse information and educate public opinion regarding the causes, nature and effects of war, and will make practical application of the teachings and findings of the Divisions of International Law and of Economics and History.

The speaker assured his hearers that the organization of an international judicial system goes steadily on. An International Court of Prize was created by the Second Hague Conference, and the same body recommended the establishment of an International Court of Arbitral Justice. So soon as these two courts shall be put into operation at The Hague a permanent international judiciary will have been created—one capable of hearing and deciding any and every controversy of a justiciable character which may arise between nations either in time of peace or because of the existence of a state of war.

The International Court of Prize has not yet been instituted. Great Britain did not wish to invest the International Court of Prize with lawmaking functions, and postponed its acceptance until an agreement had been had upon the principles of law which the tribunal was to administer. Upon the invitation of the Government of Great Britain, representatives of the leading naval powers assembled in London from December 4, 1908, to February 26, 1909, and agreed upon the so-called Declaration of London, the purpose of which is to furnish the proposed tribunal with the law which, as the International Court of Prize, it is to administer. In this way the objection of Great Britain has been met. The United States objected to those provisions of this same convention which gave to the proposed tribunal the attributes of a court of appeal, and under which a judgment of the Supreme Court of the United States might be subject to review at its hands. An alternative form of procedure has been proposed, which meets the objections offered on behalf of the United States and which, embodied in the form of an additional protocol, has been approved by the signatories of the original convention. On February 15, 1911, the Senate of the United States approved both the original Convention as to the International Court of Prize and the additional protocol. Ratifications of both instruments by the various signatories will doubtless be deposited at The Hague during the present year, and the International Court of Prize will then be an accomplished fact.

Other speakers at the meetings of the Conference were Don Ignacio Calderon, Bolivian Minister at Washington; Dr. F. J. Yanes of the Pan-American Directorate, and Baron de Constant.

TOPICS OF INTEREST THROUGHOUT THE WORLD

—REV. CHARLES F. AKED'S ministry in San Francisco opened auspiciously. His first sermon was preached to an audience of 1,500.

—IT IS REPORTED from Tokio, Japan, that the government leaders are deeply interested in the proposed arbitration treaties between the United States and France and Great Britain. Those nearest the source of information believe that only hesitation due to uncertainty as to how such a proposition would be received is preventing Japan from opening negotiations for a peace treaty with this country as comprehensive as the tentative drafts show those with France and Great Britain to be. In Washington, D. C., the idea seems to have made a favorable impression, though qualified by the knowledge that one never knows what a treaty will really look like till the Senate gets through with it.

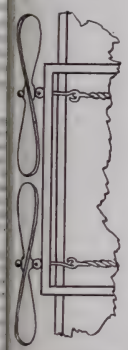
—THE ATTENTION OF EUROPEAN DIPLOMATS has been attracted by the movements of the Turkish government troops on the Montenegrin frontier since the Albanian outbreak. Russia has forwarded to the Sultan's government, through its ambassador at Constantinople, a note, the imperative character of which makes plain that this concentration of forces constitutes a serious menace to peace. German newspapers do not hesitate to criticise this move, but Russia is counting on the support of France, Italy and Great Britain for the prevention of actual hostilities. In case the Turkish government proves recalcitrant, the measures adopted may include a display of naval force, such as was sufficient, in the days of the deposed Sultan, to restore tranquility.

—AT PHILADELPHIA on May 25 the United States launched a new dreadnought in the 26,000-ton battleship Wyoming, which when it gets its full armament will not be surpassed by any fighting ship in the world. The Wyoming went down the ways in the Cramps' shipyard at noon, named by Miss Dorothy Eunice Knight, of Wyoming, in the presence of Governor Carey and a delegation of visitors from the State for which the ship is named. Cheers from the crowds assembled on the launching stand, and at points of vantage nearby, greeted the monster ironclad as she slipped into the water. Secretary Meyer of the Navy Department and many naval officers saw the ceremony. When the battleship is completed she will carry fifty-four officers and 1,030 men. She went into the water one-third toward completion.

—AN EFFORT TO AROUSE THE foundrymen of the nation to a realization of the danger from fire which lies in the permission of smoking in offices and factories was recently made by Thomas D. West, president of the American Foundrymen's Association and of the Anti-Accident Association. In an address delivered at Pittsburg, Mr. West emphasized the great loss of property and life which is due to fires started by the burning matches or the live coals dropped by careless smokers. He cited the recent holocaust in New York City and the great fire in Bangor, Me., as examples of the horrible destruction that may be wrought by a single act of carelessness. He closed by urging the association to awaken to its duty in assisting the great public sentiment in favor of stringent precautionary laws and their strict enforcement.

—WHAT IS CLAIMED to be the oldest manuscript in the world is a roll of eighteen papyrus pages, which is said to have been found in a very ancient monument near Thebes in 1847 by M. De L'Aveunes. It is now in the famous collection of the Bibliotheque Nationale, Paris. The manuscript is supposed to belong to the eleventh dynasty, which is earlier than the time of Moses and possibly even than the days of the Israelitish patriarchs. It was presumably written by a prince of a royal Egyptian house, and is full of advice to the young to "heed the words of ancient wisdom," showing that there was, even in that early day, a philosophy of life which had already begun to be neglected. Humility and obedience the writer declares to be the foundation of all the virtues.

—NOTWITHSTANDING THE TRAGIC accident which resulted in the death of M. Henri Berteaux and the injury of the Premier of France, at the opening of the Paris-to-Madrid aeroplane race, the contest was resumed on the following day by four of the competitors. Emile Train, whose machine was the direct cause of the disaster, retired from the race, saying he had not the heart to continue; but Messieurs Gibert, Vedrine, Frey, and Garros decided to attempt the flight. Mons. Vedrine, after a short flight to test his engine, started at 4.11 A.M. on Monday, May 22, and arrived at Angouleme, 279 miles from the aviation field at Issy-les-Molineux, in the remarkable time of three hours and forty-three minutes. This feat of traversing 279 miles in 223 minutes breaks all world's records for distance in a cross-country flight. The running time for the Paris to Angouleme express train is five hours and eighteen minutes.



Our Boys and Girls

Longer Flights and Double Propellers

ourth of a Series of Articles on Miniature Air-Craft, Written Specially for Christian Herald Boys and Girls by Francis A. Collins, Author of "The Boys' Book of Model Aeroplanes"

HERE is no toy in the world which more richly repays patience and erseverance in the building than the odel aeroplane. Aeroplanes both rge and small are in their infancy. ach year brings many improvements. he amateur builder of model aero-lanes will soon have ideas of his own to ork out and will find himself favor-ng one aeroplane above all others. It difficult to lay down the exact plan f the second aeroplane to be built, but ere are several general principles hich all should bear in mind.

The tendency in aeroplane building toward the simple monoplane forms, nd the amateur will do well to avoid iplanes. One of the first improve-ents to be made on your first model to provide it with curved or flexed wings. If the planes are slightly bowed upward, with the curve at the front or entering edge, their lifting power will be increased and the flights made steadier.

Double Your Propellers

Two Ways

One plan is to build your wings of reed and bend them to the desired curve when wet, so that on drying they will hold their shape. Another plan is to make the ends of the planes of wire and bend them to the right curve. A curved wing should have several ribs bent to the same curve to keep the loth covering even. The curve of oth wings should be exactly the same.

The lifting power of a flexed wing is ncreased by flexing, so that your planes may be considerably narrower han when built flat and be spaced farther apart. After you have built such wings, try them out on your motor base by moving them backward and forward until you get the right balance. The flexed wing being smaller works an important economy in the weight of your model. Be careful to have the covering of the flexed planes perfectly smooth on both the upper and under surfaces. It is a good plan to paint the wings with a thin solution of paraffine.

Double Propellers

To increase the length of your flights your propellers should be doubled. If you increase the size of your rubber bands beyond a certain point, you decrease their efficiency. To mount double propellers you will need a new motor base. The simplest plan is to build a simple rectangle of dowel sticks. Make them six inches in width and three feet in length, nailing and gluing the corners. Now, instead of the square blocks used for the wire axles of your motor, merely fasten wooden strips at both ends of the frame, one inch by one-half an inch and six inches in length. These should be pierced near their outer ends and the shafts of your propellers passed through them in the regular way.

You Will Be Delighted

The propellers in this case may be smaller, and of course they must not strike one another in turning. Connect the hooks of either propeller with the hooks at the opposite ends of the motor base with skeins of rubber bands of exactly the same size. In winding up, turn the propellers in opposite directions, and give each the same number of turns. When wound up, hold a propeller in either hand and let go at the same instant. You will be delighted to find how much farther the double motor will carry your air craft.

The amateur aviator who has commenced with the building of paper gliders and worked up through easy stages, should have no trouble in locating any faults in his new models. The trouble, if any, is likely to be due to poor balance of the planes; but if the model has been built and tested out as a glider, many pitfalls will be avoided. There is danger of the motor being either too strong or too weak. If it be too weak, your aeroplane will instantly fall to the ground. If it is too powerful, the propeller will buzz around, coming to a rest in less than five seconds without propelling the model but a few feet. A good motor should run for about twelve seconds. It is a good plan to test it out thoroughly before making a flight.

WOULD YOU BELIEVE IT?

THAT an apple tied up in a handkerchief may be cut in two without cutting the cloth of the latter will not be believed by any one until it is tried.

Hang the apple wrapped up in a handkerchief by a string, as in illustration. (Old sheeting should be used the first few times until you are sure your knife is sharp enough.)

Take a strong heavy knife and strike up in a line with the string. You will find the apple cut neatly, but the handkerchief undamaged, albeit a little wet.

Great care should be taken not to strike with a drawing motion. The success of this pretty experiment will depend a good deal on your having a very sharp and polished knife, such as a heavy carving knife.

For Very Little People

Oh, ring the bells! Oh, ring the bells!
We bid you, sirs, good-morning;
Give thanks, we pray, for our flowers are gay
And fair for your adorning.

Oh, ring the bells! Oh, ring the bells!
Good folk, accept our greeting;
And may each year bring you good cheer,
So, hey! for our next meeting!

Polly Plympton's Blossom Party

Rings, Brooches—Jewelry of almost all kinds can be cleaned with Ivory Soap and lukewarm water.

Take, for example, the silver-mesh purses, so popular nowadays; an occasional bath in Ivory Soap suds will improve their appearance wonderfully.

If the purse is lined, and the lining is of silk, it need not be removed. If the lining is of kid, detach it if possible.

If that cannot be done, pull it inside out and with a clean, soft cloth, apply Ivory Soap Paste,★ to the soiled parts, using no water, and removing the paste with another clean, soft cloth.

Then, with a stiff brush (a nail brush, or an old tooth brush will do) apply Ivory Soap suds to the meshes. Rub vigorously, changing the water as often as necessary. Rinse in clear water. Dry in the sun.

Ivory Soap can be used for any number of purposes for which ordinary soaps cannot (and should not) be used.
Please make a note of that fact; and use it whenever the question "How shall I clean it?" confronts you.

Ivory Soap . . . 99 44/100 Per Cent. Pure

★ Directions for making Ivory Soap Paste will be found on the inside of every Ivory Soap wrapper. The proper proportions, are: Half a cake of Ivory Soap (small size) to a quart of water.

ABOUT AIR-SHIPPING—an Up-to-Date Booklet

MR. COLLINS' articles on Miniature Air-Shipping have been so popular with THE CHRISTIAN HERALD boys and girls that we have had the entire series put into attractive booklet form. This delightful little book is fully illustrated and contains thoroughly up-to-date material. "How to Build Paper Gliders," "Home-made Birds and Butterflies," "The Wright Machine Model," "Best Miniature Aeroplanes," "Motor Models," "How to Increase the Flying Power of Small Air Craft," "The Trick of Launching," etc., are some of the delightful subjects included in this booklet, which will be sent as a supplementary prize to all who solve or make a good guess at the following puzzle:

How Was It Managed?

A merchant in Mandalay left his fortune, consisting of seventeen Oriental rugs, to his three sons. To his eldest son he left one half of his fortune, to the second son he left one third of his fortune, to his youngest son he left one ninth of his fortune. Since apparently the rugs could not be satisfactorily divided, for neither one would have a fraction of a rug, they fell to quarreling, and a neighbor, noted for his wisdom, was called in to settle the dispute. He settled it satisfactorily. Each son received his exact portion, and, at the same time, the conditions of the father's will were complied with. How was it managed?

The Birthday of Old Glory

JUNE 14 is the birthday of Old Glory. See to it, boys and girls, that the splendid old ensign flies from your own house-top or flag pole from sunrise to sunset. It is an obligation we all owe the old banner. If you happen not to have a beautiful American flag of your own, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD is giving them away in return for a favor. See page 582.

June Prize Offers

THE Aunt in the Cozy Corner will liberally award prizes of money, best books, games, kodaks, appropriate pictures and toys, etc., etc., for best original work sent in before June 19. PROSE—subject: "Vacation." VERSE—subject: "Old Glory" or "The Tin Soldier." PHOTOGRAPH—subject: "A Good Time." DRAWING—subject: "A Bird" or a Cozy Corner Heading for July.

Good-Night Verse: I will sing unto the Lord as long as I live.

Lovingly and faithfully The Aunt in the Cozy Corner

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, Bible House, New York.

IT is second nature to most women to make good coffee. Yet millions of American homes are denied really good coffee because so much coffee is indifferently or ignorantly blended. Here is coffee that will just suit you—blended after the private recipe of Mrs. Rorer, the famous cooking authority.

Mrs Rorer's
OWN BLEND
Coffee

It possesses that indescribable deliciousness, that elusive tang, which draws a sigh of perfect content from the coffee lover. It comes to you with all its full "newly roasted flavor" in our patented triple-sealed package. Order Mrs. Rorer's Coffee at your grocer's today. If it isn't the best you've ever tasted, he is authorized to give you your money back.

FREE: Mrs. Rorer's Book "27 Coffee Recipes"

Write for it today

You'll miss some real treats if you don't learn what enjoyable desserts, cakes, ices and other dainties are made with coffee as a flavor. Write for this free book today, mentioning your dealer's name.

Climax Coffee & Baking Powder Company
Dept. H1 - 39 Main Street, Indianapolis, Ind.

LADIES EASE YOUR FEET

A customer writes, "You could not have fitted me better. For the first time in years my feet are comfortable. The soft glove-like feel of

PILLOW SHOES

is simply charming."

$3.00 Post-paid in U. S. A.

Soft, easy, durable, neat, stylish; genuine hand-turned shoes of Vici Kid. No lining to wrinkle and chafe; no breaking in necessary. Absolute comfort and fit guaranteed or money refunded. Price includes rubber heels. All styles. Write for free catalog and self-measure blank. Customers everywhere.

PILLOW SHOE COMPANY
184 Summer St., Dept. 3, Boston, Mass.

YOUR PHYSICIAN
will tell you that
Sani-Tissue

¶ It is the Best Toilet Paper because it is Soothing and Healing.

¶ It is composed of long vegetable fibre which gives it a cloth-like texture and its treatment with Canada balsam and other emollients makes it the only strictly sanitary, hygienic and soft paper.

¶ Each roll is carefully wrapped in parchment excluding germs and gritty dust.

3 Rolls in a Carton for 25c.

at your Dealer's, or if he does not have it, send us his name, and we will send you a sample pocket packet FREE.

SCOTT PAPER COMPANY
662 Glenwood Ave., Philadelphia
Makers of "Scot-Tissue" Towels, Sc Waldorf Toilet Paper, and other Hygienic Paper products.

The Miss Janes' Silver Wedding

By ANNIE WILLIS McCULLOUGH

"YES," said Miss Jane reflectively, "it's twenty-five years ago the tenth of next month since Janie and I first met." And she looked lovingly at the gentle face in the big rocking-chair by the open fire. "I haven't been sorry, and I hope and believe she hasn't."

"Oh, how beautiful!" cried Constance. She and her friend Edith had come to call on the two Miss Janes, one of whom, bearing the name of Jane E. and so called to distinguish her, had gradually become Miss Janie.

"How beautiful!" Constance repeated. "What a faithful friendship yours has been! Twenty-five years! and you are as loyal and loving as at the very first."

"More so!" ejaculated Miss Janie at this point. "We aren't so spoony as we was, but we think a sight more of each other. People have to, that live together."

"Yes, they do," assented Miss Jane. "It takes a sight of grace for any two people to live together, even if they was born in the same house, which we wasn't."

Edith's large gray eyes had been looking from one to the other of the kindly Miss Janes, whom everybody in Fairhome loved.

"It's just like a marriage," she said softly.

"Yes, 'tis," said Miss Jane, "but it's a good deal more free than marriage, for we haven't got to put up with one another a minute longer'n we want to."

"How long have you lived together?" asked Constance.

"Only about eight years, since Janie's mother was taken away," replied Miss Jane. "We used to live at different ends of the village before that, ever since I came to Fairhome twenty-five years ago, and found Janie. Her folks came here a few years before mine did. It seems they'd lived not over ten miles away from us in the East, but we never met until we moved out here. Wasn't it strange? Pa had heard such wonderful stories about the silver mines that he was determined to come. It was dreadful hard to leave the old home, though. Pa staked out a claim two miles from town—you girls probably know the place—but it never amounted to much. I've always kept it, in memory of my folks. But it's never been any use to me, because the town was settled so far in this direction. After ma and pa died I was alone a few years, and then——"

"And then," broke in Miss Janie with eager haste, "then, what should I have done, when mother died, if Jane hadn't been willing to come with me? It was such a providence for me."

"Yes, for you, Janie," said Miss Jane with sarcasm. "Of course it wasn't a providence for me!"

She knew, and the girls knew, and Miss Janie herself knew—though she would never admit it—that Miss Jane's last resource was gone when her friend proposed that they should live together on her own not over-large income. It was honest Miss Janie's one deception, and she practised it faithfully.

The two ladies talked on awhile about their friendship, and the girls listened, as they always liked to do. The life of the two Miss Janes was one of the romances of Fairhome.

"Twenty-five years," said Constance, musingly, as they walked slowly home after their call. "Do you suppose we will be friends as long as that, Edie?"

"Depends on circumstances," returned Edith promptly. "If we are, we'll celebrate."

"Edith!" cried Constance. "You've put an idea in my head."

"Glad of it," was the retort. "Does it feel strange, dear?"

"Twenty-five years would be a silver wedding," exclaimed Constance, not noticing the sarcasm.

"If people are married, goosie, but we shouldn't be," said Edith.

"Oh, you are dull!" cried Constance. "The two Miss Janes—you said yourself it was just like a marriage. Why couldn't it be celebrated?"

"Constance! Do you mean it? Everybody would laugh at the idea of a silver wedding for two old maids. And the Miss Janes would never hear to such a thing, never."

"It will be the object of my life for a month to make sure they don't hear of it," laughed Constance. "I am in earnest about this, and we girls will put it through, you'll see."

"Would you dare to surprise the Miss Janes?" asked Edith. "Wouldn't it be rather too much of a shock to them? You know, in surprise parties, usually some member of the family is forewarned."

"We'll have to plan it somehow," exclaimed Constance gleefully. "It will be great fun surprising the dear old things. You just trust me."

"Guess I shall have to," laughed Edith as she turned into her own dooryard. "Success to your plans, my dear."

"That is a foregone conclusion," retorted Constance the energetic.

And indeed it did seem as though it was. Everything favored her planning, even a strange circumstance which occurred a few days after her project was conceived. She was taking an early morning spin on her wheel, when, on passing Miss Jane's little "claim," she noticed a stranger stooping low over the ground and looking intently at something he held in his hand.

Constance's curiosity was sufficiently aroused to cause her to turn and repass the place. The stranger was walking slowly, with head bent, and would occasionally stop and dig, and lift something to examine.

"It's very queer," she thought. "I'll ask papa, as soon as I get home, if he knows anything about it."

Squire Thorpe, the legal adviser of the whole town, surprised his daughter by knowing all about it.

"The man was in to see me yesterday. He thinks there is silver in Miss Jane's 'claim' after all. He represents some company that offers a nice little sum for the place, and I shall advise Miss Jane to accept. I myself don't think there is much silver there. There may be, or there may not, but that is their concern. The money will be a godsend to Miss Jane."

Constance was wildly excited. "O papa! can't we keep it a secret for a little while?" she cried, eagerly unfolding her plan for the celebration of the friendship. "And this will make it truly a silver anniversary."

"Well, daughter," replied Squire Thorpe with a twinkle in his eye, "as I keep most of the legal secrets of Fairhome, perhaps, if I try very hard, I can keep this weighty one also—if you will help," he added mischievously.

Meantime, the two Miss Janes, unconscious of the honors that were to be heaped upon them, went their quiet, loving way, and planned a little celebration all their own. Miss Janie was reminded to do so by finding a pair of sugar-tongs that had been given to her parents on their silver-wedding day.

"To think I forgot all about these!" she exclaimed, "when mother was so choice of them! I'm real glad I came across them just now, Jane, for we can get some loaf sugar—even if we don't use it much, which is probably the reason why I forgot all about them—and have a special little tea-drinkin', come the tenth of next month."

"It would be real nice," replied Miss Jane. "And if you say so, I'll make a pound cake. We'd never dare to let it be known, though. How everybody would laugh at the idea of two old

Continued on next page

You Can Weigh Exactly what You Should Weigh

You can be Strong—Vigorous— full of Life and Energy.

You can be free from Chronic Ailments—every organ of your body strong as nature intended.

You can have a Good Figure—as good as any woman.

You can have a Clear Skin.

I no longer need to say what "I can do," but what "I HAVE DONE." I have helped 49,000 of the most cultured, intelligent women of America to arise to their very best—why not you?

NO DRUGS NO MEDICINES

My pupils simply comply with Nature's laws.

What My Pupils say:

"Every one notices the change in my complexion; it has lost that yellow color."

"Just think what you have done for me! Last year I weighed 216 pounds; this year 146, and have not gained an ounce back. I am not wrinkled either. I feel as young and strong, no rheumatism, or sluggish liver; and I can breathe now. It is surprising how easily I did it, I feel 15 years younger."

"Just think! I have not had a pill or a cathartic since I began, and I used to take one every night."

"My weight has increased 30 pounds. I don't know what indigestion is any more, and my nerves are as rested! I sleep like a baby."

"Miss Cocroft, I have taken off my glasses, and my catarrh is so much better. Isn't that good?"

"I feel as if I could look every man, woman and child in the face with the feeling that I am growing—spiritually, physically and mentally. Really I am a stronger, better woman. I don't know how to tell you or to thank you."

Reports like these come to me every day. Do you wonder I want to help every woman to vibrant health and happiness? Write me your faults of health or figure. Your correspondence is held in strict confidence. If I cannot help you I will tell you what will.

My free book tells how to stand and walk correctly, and contains other information of vital interest to women. Every woman is welcome to it. Write for it. If you do not need me, you may be able to help a dear friend.

I have had a wonderful experience, and I'd like to tell you about it.

Susanna Cocroft
Dept. 18-K, 624 Michigan Ave., Chicago

Miss Cocroft is the best authority in America upon the regaining of woman's health and figure thro Natural, Scientific means.

Prevents False Teeth From Dropping

No more inconvenience or embarrassment by the dropping of your plate. Sprinkle a little

NUCHOSE

The New Harmless Antiseptic Preparation

on the surface of your full or partial plate, and it will hold tight for a day.

Send 2c Stamp for FREE TRIAL SAMPLE

Regular Price 50c. per package.

Mailed with nothing on wrapper to show what the package contains.

QUALITY DENTAL SUPPLY CO.
464 W. 145th St., New York City

SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE SUBSCRIPTION SOLICITORS easily earn LIBERAL COMMISSIONS and also can pick up extra prize money by PERSISTENT WORK. For full particulars regarding commissions, prizes, free advertising matter, sample copies, etc., address

Desk 3, 155 Fifth Avenue, New York City

BLYMYER CHURCH BELLS

UNLIKE OTHER BELLS SWEETER, MORE DURABLE, LOWER PRICE OUR FREE CATALOGUE TELLS WHY

Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

The Miss Janes' Silver Wedding

Continued from preceding page

ds celebrating a twenty-fifth anni-sary, same as if they was married."

I don't care," retorted little Miss ie with spirit. "It's been a real on, and that's more than can be said ome marriages. What a farce it when Jabez Lawton and his wife brated their silver wedding! Ev-ody knew they hadn't lived happy, it seemed sacrilege, almost, to e a celebration."

That's so," assented Miss Jane. e'll have out the best china and n, and——"

And what's to hinder our givin' h other silver presents, if we want " asked Miss Janie excitedly.

Nothing at all. I've got a little ney all my own, that I earned," said s Jane. "Of course," seeing Miss ie's face darken, "I couldn't give a present out of your—the money both use together, you know."

Fudge!" said Miss Janie shortly, l went promptly to work clearing table. Such references always up-her.

he Miss Janes passed a quietly py day when their "silver wedding" ived. The gifts they made each er caused excitement enough, for h had been wildly extravagant and purchased something entirely un-essary, a practice they did not ally dare indulge in.

'Here, Jane, my dear," said Miss ie dramatically at breakfast time. don't know what you'll think of me, I don't care. I was determined u should have something unusual once."

Miss Jane laughed with delight when beautiful orange spoon was dis-sed. "It's just what I've wanted," e cried. "It will seem so sort of rich, ving a special spoon to eat an orange th. How did you know, Janie, my ar?"

"I guess I love you well enough to ow your likes and your longings, n't I, Jane? But what is this?" Miss Janie's box was smaller and uare.

"O Jane! it's something fancy, I'm raid!" she gasped excitedly, remov-g the elastic band with trembling gers. "It's—oh, it's a beautiful sil-r pin! Now, Jane, what made you ink of that? The idea of my fixing with new jewelry at my time of e! It is foolish, maybe, but I—I e it. I've wanted a pin ever so long. rhaps it was wicked, but I was tired my old-fashioned ones. You don't ink I'm vain, do you, Jane?" she con-uded tremulously.

"Bless your heart, no! I thought would just suit your white hair, nie. You'll look so pretty that I all enjoy it, on the whole, more'n u, I expect."

"No, you won't, not a bit," declared iss Janie stoutly. "I declare, I shall in front of the glass the whole time."

"And I shall be eating oranges the whole time," laughed Miss Jane.

Just as their quiet tea-drinking was ended, that evening, a ring was heard at the door, and Constance and Edith, with a bevy of girls, fluttered in.

"You don't mind if we've come to spend the evening, do you, Miss Jane and Miss Janie?" cried Constance. "It's your anniversary, your 'silver wedding,' so we girls planned to surprise you. You don't mind, do you?"

The two old ladies said, "No indeed," and invited the girls to go upstairs and "lay off their things."

The merry group, merely the advance guard of a goodly company, come early to pave the way, had a camera with which to take the Miss Janes' picture by flashlight. This was merely a ruse to inveigle the hostesses into their best gowns. Not that any one but themselves would care, for they were favorites alike in their every-day prints or their pompous black silks. But the girls knew how flustered they would be, having a party in every-day garb.

Edith, the photographer, insisted on their sitting at the tea-table for the picture, and amid much laughter and loving fun, the Miss Janes were photographed. Then the girls helped with the dishes.

The silver presents had been shown, and they were all enjoying a quiet game of "Buzz," when about eight o'clock the doorbell rang again, and there the wondering eyes of the Miss Janes saw, first the minister and his wife, and behind them Squire Thorpe and a group of Fairhome people, all smiling and nodding and uttering good wishes in chorus.

When all had been ushered in, and had removed wraps and deposited certain bundles in kitchen and pantry, Squire Thorpe addressed the hostesses in the following words:

"Dear Miss Jane and Miss Janie, we are here to-night, first, in honor of your long and loving friendship, which has inspired more than one of the friends here assembled. You have found out that 'the secret of friendship is the secret of all spiritual blessing: The way to get is to give.'

"We are here, secondly, to present to you"—he turned to Miss Jane—"a little souvenir of this silver anniversary," handing her a nugget of silver. "I have also a document for you to sign, if you will," he continued.

Loud was the handclapping and hearty the congratulations that followed his speech. But Miss Jane, as if her ears were deaf to it all, turned instinctively to her dear friend and companion, and flung herself in her arms.

"It's all yours, Janie, after what you've done for me!" she sobbed.

"No," said Miss Janie solemnly. "Ours."

Sending Money to Advertisers

WHEN you send money to an advertiser, you should do it in the form of a money order, or if you do not care to do this, you should at least register the letter.

For instance, one of our advertisers states that he has received a letter from ne of our subscribers, which was supposed to contain a remittance. When the tter reached the advertiser no money was to be found, although the subscriber isisted that she deposited it in the envelope. She suggests that the fault may e with the post office instead of with the advertiser, while he, in his turn, is nxious to reassure her that her claim will be satisfied in any event.

Now the amount is small, less than $1 in fact, and yet the advertiser desires o go to the fullest extent in satisfying his customer. This is characteristic of he advertisers who use THE CHRISTIAN HERALD. We have had several misunderstandings of this kind brought to our notice, and in every case so far the natter has been adjusted to the satisfaction of the subscriber.

Whenever any of our subscribers is defrauded by an advertiser in THE HRISTIAN HERALD we will make good the claim, provided that the subscriber, ho must be of record, has mentioned THE CHRISTIAN HERALD in writing to the dvertiser, and provided the claim is made to us within two months of the date f the appearance of the advertisement. This guarantee does not apply to nvestment advertisements.

The Howard Watch

Everyone concedes that the Railroad man must have an accurate watch.

His business requires it.

But how about the man in any other calling?

Why should he be content with less than the best in a timepiece?

Is not a cheap or unreliable watch an evidence of slackness in character and habit—a confession as to the slight value he places on his own time?

There is a big change taking place in this country on the watch question.

Respect for a fine watch mechanism increases with culture and civilization.

There are not so many men who think it smart to carry a poor watch and bang it around.

More men every day are willing to put money in a fine watch even if it is carried in the pocket where it cannot always be seen.

A HOWARD Watch is always worth what you pay for it. The price of each watch—from the 17-jewel (double roller) in a Boss or Crescent gold-filled case at $40 to the 23-jewel in a 14-k solid gold case at $150—is fixed at the factory and a printed ticket attached.

Not every jeweler can sell you a HOWARD Watch. Find the HOWARD jeweler in your town and talk to him. He is a good man to know. Drop us a postal card, Dept. W, and we will send you "The Story of Edward Howard and the First American Watch"—an inspiring chapter of history that every man and boy should read.

E. HOWARD WATCH WORKS, Boston, Mass.

DURING 1910, 2,623,412 CHICLETS WERE SOLD EACH DAY

Chiclets

REALLY DELIGHTFUL

The Dainty Mint Covered Candy Coated Chewing Gum

Just ask your doctor what he thinks of Chiclets. Doctors, dentists and trained nurses use and recommend Chiclets for their patients' use and use them themselves in the sick-room, the office or home.

That exquisite peppermint, the true mint, makes Chiclets the refinement of chewing gum for people of refinement.

For Sale at all the Better Sort of Stores
5¢ the Ounce and in 5¢, 10¢ and 25¢ Packets
SEN-SEN CHICLET COMPANY

Just WHY

Old Dutch Cleanser

Is a

Pure Hygienic

Cleanser For

Cutlery & all Food Utensils

Because the Cleanser is entirely free from Acid, Caustic and Alkali, It is mechanical in its action—avoid dangerous chemical cleansers.

Wash steel knives and forks, etc., then sprinkle a little Cleanser on a damp cloth and rub over a few times. Wash again and wipe dry.

Many Other Uses and Full Directions on Large Sifter-Can, 10 Cents

The Death of a Nation*

Sunday School Lesson by Dr. and Mrs. Wilbur F. Crafts

NATIONS die as well as individuals. The kingdom of Israel died in December, 722 B.C., at the age of two hundred and fifteen years. Its mortal sickness was of three kinds: moral degeneracy of the heart, evidenced in loss of faith in God; softening of brain tissues, shown by the worship of foolish gods, and loathsomeness caused by drunkenness and idolatry. It must be said that the kingdom of Israel was born a degenerate. Jeroboam was its father and first king. The nation was brought forth in the throes of rebellion against King Rehoboam, the son and successor of King Solomon. The golden calves set up by Jeroboam, one in Dan and the other in Bethel, marking the northern and southern extent of the kingdom, were the first idols which they worshiped instead of the true God. Then followed the worship of Baal and Ashteroth. They took Molech for their god, which was a huge brazen image with the head of a calf and a crown upon it. The worship consisted of building a fire inside of it, for it was hollow like a stove, and when its extended arms became red hot, living children were laid thereon as a sacrifice to Molech (II. Kings 17: 17, and II. Kings 23: 10). A very small boy, having heard the story, said to his nurse one day while she was dressing him: "I think you must be an idol." "Why?" she asked. And he replied: "Because your hands are so hot." God in his infinite love and mercy continued his loving kindness to these people, making the olive, the fig, and the grape to grow until their land was the garden spot of the world; but that did not win them back. Then God sent to them wise teachers to show them the evil and the danger of their way which would at last bring them to destruction. But they went right on in all their evil doing, and one day their destroyers came in the person of the powerful Assyrian, King Sargon, and his army. They made their attack upon the nation's citadel, its capital city Samaria. And then what happened? There was a deafening sound of crashing stones—the rocks which had formed the ramparts, hurled by the invaders into the valley below. The sky was lurid with flames as the invaders set fire to the city. They bound with chains those who were young and strong, and led them out of the city by chains passed through their lips and noses. They left the old and the feeble to die in the city. They took the captives to their far-away land, and not one thus taken ever returned to his native land. King Sargon sent a lot of his own people to rebuild the city and live there, and the last state of that city was worse than the first, for in every part they set up idols, and built temples for the worship of idols. When traveling in the Holy Land we visited the ruins of that city. It is a sad sight; one would hardly care to go there a second time. Yet it is a good place to go to learn the folly of wickedness, which always results in desolation of body or of property.

The Graveyard of Nations

Where are the nations of which we read in the Bible and in the classics? The world empires of the Egyptians, Hittites, Assyrians, Babylonians, Scythians, Persians, Macedonians and Romans died in turn. Of all the great races of antiquity, the only ones that survive are the great prophetic races, the Jews and the Arabs, both long ago dead politically, surviving only as subject peoples.

Must every nation, then, must our own, grow old and die? No, for in the very nature of the case, a nation may be immortal, like a river, its drops ever passing on to the sea, but ever renewed from its mountain springs. If we maintain the Christian morality and popular education, which Washington declared to be the high sources of national prosperity, and keep unbroken in either hand the banks of liberty and law, our nation's life may go on ceaselessly, singing, like the river: "Men may come and men may go, but I go on forever."

Continuous life of a nation can be achieved only by eternal vigilance. Many who firmly believe nature goes by law act as if history went by luck. As surely as effect follows cause, Babylonian vices will in every age produce a Babylonian fall. We are called a Christian nation; let us make the name good, then we shall be true patriots. Those things which make for morality and righteousness: the little red schoolhouse in the country, the larger schoolhouse in town and city, the churches everywhere, with their Sunday Schools, the helpful homes—these are what will perpetuate our nation.

> O make thou us through centuries long
> In peace secure and justice strong;
> Around our gift of freedom draw
> The safeguards of thy righteous law;
> And, cast in some diviner mould,
> Let the new cycle shame the old.
>
> JOHN GREENLEAF WHITTIER.

In the American Peace Congress recently held in Baltimore "gun patriotism" and "peace patriotism" were often set over against each other. It augurs well for the peace of our country that many of the speakers represented the different departments of our government—first, our President Taft, who spoke for peace with patriotic zeal, and emphasized the peace pact now under consideration between England and the United States. There were Congressmen and Senators, who told about the work of a commission to bring about reduction in armament. There was the director of the Pan-American Union, who showed how it was possible to bind all America in bonds of peace. The consular department was represented by a gentleman who said that "if the commercial and industrial men would say the word and do some of the work, there would be no more wars." There was a representative from the Coast and Geodetic Survey, who suggested that if there could be a geographical institute formed that would fix the boundaries of nations, that would put a stop to war. Mr. John Hays Hammond, special ambassador from the United States to the coronation of King George V., said: "War is great waste—a waste of revenues and energy, that might better be applied in reclamation services to improve agriculture, and the navigability of rivers, and also in the building of a great mercantile marine."

One speaker, not a government official, unfortunately presented a Persian movement as a means of bringing peace to the whole world—a peace that is to come through a Persian prophet, not through Christ. What wonder that a lady arose after the address and said with great emphasis: "This is a Christian nation. The American Peace Congress owes and acknowledges its allegiance to Jesus Christ, the Prince of Peace." When Jesus Christ was born wise men from the East—from Persia—came to Jerusalem after a long journey saying: "Where is he that is born King of the Jews? for we have seen his star in the east, and are come to worship him." Yes, and when, guided by the star, they came to the place where the young child was, they fell down and worshiped him, and

Continued on next page

* The International Sunday School Lesson for June 18, 1911. The Downfall of Samaria. II. Kings 17: 1-18. GOLDEN TEXT: "He, that being oft reproved hardeneth his neck, shall suddenly be destroyed and that without remedy." Prov. 29: 1.

OMO DRESS SHIELDS

are the only dress shields that are odorless wh purchased and odorless when worn.

REMEMBER

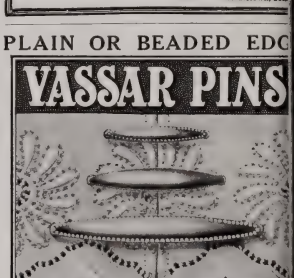
The reason for this, is that they are made from tropical gum, and contain absolutely no rubbe They are light, cool to wear, do not chafe, a absolutely moisture proof and washable.

EVERY PAIR WARRANTED

At all good stores, or a sample pair sent for 25 Our "Dress Shield Briefet" sent free.

INFANTS' PANTS

A dainty, comfortable garment th will keep baby's clothes dry and clean To be worn over the diaper. Made OMO Sanitary Sheeting, which absolutely waterproof and odo less, white, soft and easily cleanse With or without lace trimming. 25 to $1.00.



OMO BIBS

are made of the same sheeting and hav all the good qualities of OMO Pants Prices 15c to 50

At your dealer's

The OMO Manufacturing Co., Dept. C. H. Middletown, Con

PLAIN OR BEADED EDG

Made of tempered steel with coil spring and needle poi that pass through the stiffest linen without tearing it.

EITHER PATTERN SAME PRICE

10 CTS. FOR CARD OF FOUR, size No. 00 No. 0, or FOR CARD OF THREE, s No. 1. Nickel Plate, Jet or Dull Black.

25 CTS. FOR CARD OF TWO, any size, 1 Roman Plate or Bright Rolled G that will wear for years.

Not sold in less than card lots.

If your dealer does not keep Yassar Dress Pins, we v send one or more cards, of style and size wanted on rec of price and dealer's name. Money back if not satisf

Trade Supplied by PRATT & FARMER CO. 273 Broadway, New York

CONSOLIDATED SAFETY PIN COMPANY
202 Farrand Street Bloomfield, N.

FREE You Can Have This Switch FRE

Send us a sample of your hair and we will s you this beautiful 22-inch human hair sw to match. If satisfactory send us $1.50 time within 10 days, or sell 3 to your friend $1.50 each and get yours absolutely free E shades a little higher. Souvenir catalog sho latest styles of fashionable hairdressing, etc request. Enclose 5c postage. Marguerite Co Dept. 119 115 S. Dearborn St., Chicago

AGENTS WANTED FOR "KLOSFIT" PETTICOAT

These petticoats are the rage because they do away wit the drawstring. Fit the body like a glove and give the flou the proper lines required by current fashions. Send $1.00 f agents outfit, which comprises ONE TAFFENA "KLOSFIT Petticoat (regular agents selling price $1.95), and a complet agents' equipment of samples (regular $1.00) for control territory. Don't forget waist and length measure. MONEY RE FUNDED, IF NOT SATISFIED. All goods sent express prepai James A. Mears, 31 Warren St., New York City

LABLACHE
FACE POWDER
As the Touch of Summer
develops the fragrance of the rose, so LABLACHE imparts to the complexion that bloom of youth so essential to the woman of refinement. A toilet necessity, invisible, but protecting the skin from summer sun and keeping it clear, smooth and velvety.
Refuse substitutes.
Does not be dangerous. Flesh, White, Pink or Cream. 50 cents a box. At druggists or by mail. Send 10 cents for a sample box.
BEN LEVY CO.,
French Perfumers,
Dept. 22, 125 Kingston St.
Boston, Mass.

America's First Photographer

HERE was celebrated recently, at New York University, the centey of Dr. John William Draper, who, n professor of chemistry in the versity's early days, took the first tographic likeness ever made of the an face. He achieved this feat in by discovering and applying imvements on the process invented but hort time before by the Frenchman guerre. Daguerre was able to take pictures of interiors, statuary, architecal subjects, and the like. He tried reproduce the human face, but ed. Draper, who had been making tographic experiments for years ng lines dissimilar to those of guerre, took up the latter's process soon as a description of it had ssed the ocean. After repeated trials on the roof of the old Washington Square building of New York University he at last succeeded in getting a photographic portrait—that of his sister, Miss Dorothy Catherine Draper. Daguerre himself was among those who warmly praised Draper's improved photographic process. Dr. Draper was born in the parish of St. Helen's, near Liverpool, England, May 5, 1811. His father was the Rev. John C. Draper, a Wesleyan clergyman, from whom the son inherited his interest in scientific subjects. Draper's early education was received in the old country, though he received his degree as a doctor of medicine from the University of Pennsylvania. He became professor of chemistry in New York University, and in addition to making a number of important discoveries, which secured for him honorary memberships in foreign learned societies, he wrote a number of books and short works on scientific subjects, a very valuable History of the Civil War and The History of the Intellectual Development of Europe. This last book was translated into many languages and won him much renown.

Miss Dorothy Catherine Draper
From the first photographic portrait

LIVING BY THE DAY

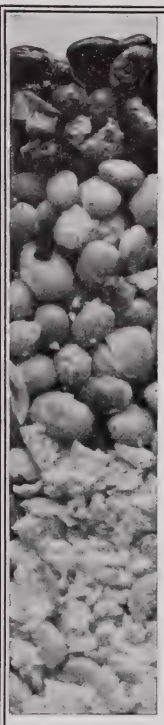
I'M LIVING by the day, just living;
His grace and his comfort he is giving.
I am free from all alarms,
For he folds me in his arms;
I'm living by the day, just living.

Oh, I'm living by the day, just living;
I'm a sinner saved by grace, he's forgiving.
He has banished all my fear,
And my pathway's bright and clear,
For I'm living in his cheer, just living.

Ah, the sweetness of each day, just abiding;
In his voice there's no reproof nor chiding;
On the cross he bore my sin,
And by faith I've entered in,
So in his precious love I am hiding.

Holyoke, Mass. REV. GEORGE M. SMILEY.

Sunday School Lesson



Continued from preceding page

ning their treasures, they offered o him gifts, gold, and frankincense, myrrh. It were well if modern sians would do likewise. It will ainly not be well for Americans to ow a Persian cult that gives ist's place to a mere man, Abdul a, and for the Bible substitutes the an and other religious books. This t of thing is very like the sin ereby Israel sinned. It is a breakof the commands: "Thou shalt e no other gods before me. . . . ou shalt not bow down to them and ve them."

Christ or Jaggannatha?

n that part of India where the temof Jaggannatha stands, there lived rahman a few years ago. His antors for centuries had worshiped re. His mother had held him up en a babe before that shrine, and ght him to clasp his hands in adration. He believed with his whole l in Jaggannatha. When he beme a man the missionaries came into t part of the country. They ached; he heard. They distributed cts; he got one, he examined it, and s wrathful. What! dare it affirm t Jaggannatha is no god at all! He d on, and acknowledged to himself t the tract was written by a man o knew how to put his points clearly l strongly. New truth had seized n him. He decided to investigate subject more thoroughly. He proed a New Testament. Soon a vital stion confronted him: "Who is l—Jaggannatha or Jesus?" He deed on a plan to settle it: Going to a soldier and borrowing his ramrod, he entered the temple of Jaggannatha, and stood behind the wooden idol, intending to thrust the ramrod into the idol to find out if there really was a god inside of him. His soul was like a volcano. His thoughts were as red-hot streams of lava. Perhaps Jaggannatha is God; so my mother told me; so my father taught me; so my people say; so the whole country believes. If he is God, and I strike him, he will strike me back with his thunderbolts." His teeth chattered, and the ramroad almost fell out of his hands. Then arose within him another thought: "The crucified One! This is a wondrous story. Did he love and come for me? Did he suffer, weep, bleed and die? Was it for me? Why do my pulses beat so when I think of him? Our sacred books tell no such tender and touching story as that. Is he the true God and the world's Redeemer? This thought wins its way. It kindles as a new sun upon the horizon of his dark and doubting spirit. A calm, sweet, warm light overspreads his soul. He can no more hesitate, he draws back the iron and dashes it into the body of old Jaggannatha. Jaggannatha submits, he takes it quietly! The spell is broken, the victory is won. There on the spot the Brahman surrendered his entire being to Jesus Christ, and entered into a covenant with him to love him and serve him forever. He went forth out of the heathen temple a new man in Christ Jesus and took his place among the missionaries of the Cross.

"Thy kingdom come; thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven."

Home-Baked Beans vs. Van Camp's

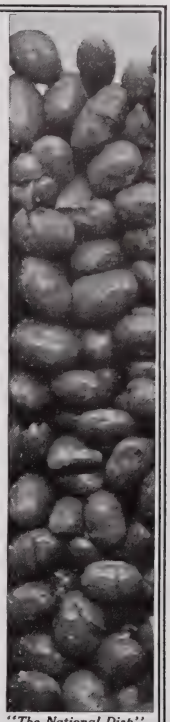
At the left is a vertical section from a dish of home-baked beans. It is reproduced from actual photograph.

At the top are the crisped beans, burned and worthless.

Next come the whole beans which remain unbroken for lack of sufficient heat. They are the beans which ferment and form gas because they can't digest.

Next come the beans which boil during the baking—a soggy mass.

These beans—hard to digest—crisped, half-baked and broken—are the best one can bake in a home oven.



The right panel shows a vertical section from inside a can of Van Camp's. This is also a photograph.

Every bean is nut-like, mealy and whole. None are crisped, none are broken, for the baking is done in live steam.

All are digestible because every bean, in the baking, gets 245 degrees of heat.

That's why a million homes have chosen Van Camp's. These beans are digestible. They are always ready for serving. And they are three times as good as any home-baked beans.

Now that summer is coming, we again invite you to let our cooks bake for you. One can of Van Camp's will forever convert you. Tell your grocer to send a supply.

Van Camp's BAKED WITH TOMATO SAUCE PORK AND BEANS

"The National Dish"

Three sizes: 10, 15 and 20 cents per can (136)

Van Camp Packing Company (Established 1861) Indianapolis, Indiana

Whittemore's Shoe Polishes

Finest in Quality. Largest in Variety.

They meet every requirement for cleaning and polishing shoes of all kinds and colors. Do not soil the clothing or become sticky.

"QUICK WHITE" makes dirty canvas shoes clean and white. In liquid form so it can be quickly and easily applied. A sponge in every package, so always ready for use. Also Quick Colors. Two sizes. Each color 10 and 25 cents.

"GILT EDGE" Oil Polish. Blacks and Polishes ladies' and children's boots and shoes, shines without rubbing, 25c. "French Gloss," 10c.

"DANDY" combination for cleaning and polishing all kinds of russet or tan shoes, 25c. "Star" size, 10c.

If your dealer does not keep the kind you want, send us his address and the price in stamps for a full size package.

WHITTEMORE BROS. & CO.,
20-26 Albany St., Cambridge, Mass.
The Oldest and Largest Manufacturers of Shoe Polishes in the World

1911 Buggy Book FREE

Send a postal—get the Book—and through it visit with Phelps the biggest factory of its kind in the world. Let him show you in his photographs how a good buggy should be made—what it should be made of. Phelps knows. They're all —over 125 styles—every kind—auto Seat Buggies, Surreys, Runabouts, etc. —all sold direct to user on 30 Days' Free Road Test—2 Years' Guarantee—at from $35 to $75 saving. Don't you want the Book? It will post you on styles and what you ought to pay wherever you buy. A postal gets it.

Split Hickory Vehicles

H. C. Phelps, President,
THE OHIO CARRIAGE MFG. COMPANY,
Station 286, Columbus, O.
Largest Factory in the World Selling Vehicles Direct

ORNAMENTAL FENCE
25 Designs—All Steel

Handsome, cost less than wood, more durable. Don't buy a fence until you get our Free Catalogue and Special Prices.

We can save you money.

Kokomo Fence Machine Co.
499 North St., Kokomo, Ind.

FOR INDIGESTION
MURRAY'S CHARCOAL TABLETS
Once Only, for trial
A 25c box for 10c
A. J. Ditman, 2 Astor House, N. Y.

LEARN TO WRITE ADVERTISEMENTS MAKE More Money

We can positively show you by mail How to Increase Your Salary. Book mailed free. Page-Davis, Dept. 44, Chicago.

White Frost Refrigerators

The delight of the housewife because so perfectly sanitary, convenient, economical. Made entirely of metal. Enameled spotless white inside and outside. Revolving removable shelves. Entire inside can be taken out, cleansed and replaced in two minutes. Round in shape, there are no nasty corners, or cracks for dirt and germs to lodge. Refrigeration scientifically perfect, giving a cool, dry temperature with little ice. Handsomest and best Refrigerator in the world. Six years success. If dealer does not handle we will sell at trade discounts, freight prepaid. Write for book and prices.

Metal Stamping Co.
513 N. Mechanic St.
Jackson, Mich.

Send for free booklet to-day

The Roosevelt Dam

THE following interesting details of the Roosevelt Dam have been sent us by Mr. Harry Welch, secretary of the Board of Trade of Phœnix, Ariz. From this account many interesting things have had to be omitted. The great road that had to be constructed to reach the site of the dam, the building of a cement manufacturing plant sixty miles from the railroad which resulted in a saving of $600,000 in cement, the cliff dwellings located within a few miles of the Roosevelt Dam and many other items had to be left untold.

"Prosperity, crop insurance and success is the meaning of this great project to the farmers on 240,000 acres in the Salt River Valley of Arizona. For many years holdings in this interesting country have been cultivated, and when the water was sufficient, with splendid success. No better soil is to be found anywhere in the world. The uncertainty of the supply of the necessary moisture, made the task a hard one and one carrying with it great doubts and uncertainties. This condition of uncertainty was not long to be tolerated, the government was called in to aid, and through the Reclamation Act, the Salt River project was tentatively authorized on March 12, 1903, and the dreams of a storage dam, which the farmers had first contemplated in 1889, were about to be realized.

"The amount expended on the Salt River project to date is about $9,000,000, of which approximately $3,500,000 has been spent on the Roosevelt Dam. This great wall of masonry and cement rises 285 feet from its foundations, which are sunk in the bedrock to a depth of 40 feet. The length of the foundations between the steep canyon walls is 235 feet, and the thickness is 170 feet. From the river level to the crest of the spillways the height is 220 feet. At the spillways the length of the dam is 680 feet and with the two fine concrete and steel bridges spanning the spillways the total length is 1,080 feet. The top of the dam is surmounted by a roadway 16 feet in width with a coping four feet high on each side. The reservoir created by this dam will hold 1,300,000 acre feet of water. The lake is 25 square miles in area, and the drainage area extends over 6,260 square miles.

"The Roosevelt Dam is a storage dam, holding in reserve the flood waters of the winter for use during the summer. As it is required, the water is allowed to re-enter the river through tunnels, generating power in so doing. The development of hydro-electric power is a prominent feature of the Salt River project. Already at the Roosevelt Dam 7,500 horsepower is being produced and a total of 27,000 horsepower will be generated when the whole system of power canals is completed.

"As released, the water flows in the river bed until it reaches the diversion dam at Granite Reef. This diversion dam is built across the Salt River at the head of the valley, and while this work is not as impressive as the Roosevelt Dam it is a very important feature. This dam is 1,100 feet long and its height is 38 feet.

"The Roosevelt Dam is seventy-five miles from Phœnix toward the east; the Granite Reef Dam is only about twenty-six miles from the city. On the irrigated lands the variety of crops is unlimited. Oranges and grapefruit, dates and olives, alfalfa, sugar-beets, cantaloupe, fruits of all kinds are growing luxuriantly. Cattle, sheep and horses all mature young, and there are about 7,000 ostriches thriving in the valley."

A New Reader's Estimate

This is the first year that I have been reading THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, and I feel proud of it. It is the best paper that I am taking. I am taking nine papers this year; I cannot read them all, so I read those I like best and the rest I lay aside. ACHORS BRIDENBECKER.
Blossvale, N. Y.

Warmth that doesn't just Heat but makes You feel Good

Drowsiness and laziness are unknown where pure fresh air warmed to the right temperature and with the proper amount of humidity in it is supplied. You know the dreaded steam-heated house—it may be warm enough, but the stuffy air saps the very life and energy out of you—you feel drowsy and sleepy. Find out about the ideal heating and ventilating system and all things considered, by far the most economical. The pure, fresh, warm air delivered through its register constantly displaces the colder and impure air. It is invigorating, stimulating and healthful heat—it not only warms and cheers but actually makes you feel better. It is the economical system of heating because less fuel is required and because of the saving it makes in doctors' bills caused by impure air and improper ventilation.

Jewel WARM AIR Furnaces

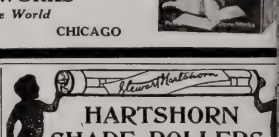
LET THIS BOOK PROVE OUR CASE

Our book is filled with interesting facts about heating—it tells of the many advantages of the Warm Air System—it proves by scientific reasoning that it is the healthful way. Of course this book explains why Jewel Warm Air Furnaces are the best and most economical. It also gives new home building plans and other information. You should read this book. A copy will be sent you free on request. Dept. V.



DETROIT STOVE WORKS
Largest Stove Plant in the World
DETROIT CHICAGO

CUT FUEL BILL IN HALF

The KOOKERBAKER bakes potatoes in 22 minutes and everything else in less time than required by any oven and NO BURN ON BOTTOM—cooks vegetables at same time on any kind of stove over ONE blaze or griddle. Unsurpassed for heating irons. Keeps them clean. By express $1.50. Prepaid $2.00 Agents Wanted

THRIFTY APPLIANCE CO., 13 West 31st Street, New York

HARTSHORN SHADE ROLLERS

Bear the script name of Stewart Hartshorn on label. Get "Improved," no tacks required.

Wood Rollers Tin Rolle

Your Buildings Are Capital

—just as much as your land. You wouldn't think of letting your land run down. Do you neglect your buildings?

Where the paint has scaled off, the weather will soon work ruin.

This spring protect your buildings with good paint. Be sure your painter uses and genuine linseed oil. You can find nothing so protective, lasting and economical. Ask your painter.

"Dutch Boy Painter" White Lead

You can have free our "Helps No. 2156 which tell all you want to know about paint and painting.

National Lead Company

New York Cleveland Chicago
St. Louis Boston Buffalo
Cincinnati San Francisco
John T. Lewis & Bros. Co., Philadelphia
National Lead & Oil Co., Pittsburgh

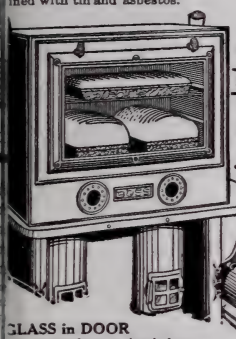
BOYS

A Complete Baseball Outf

You may have one wi out SPENDING A CE

This is the season the year when every b longs to own a compl baseball outfit — s u ball, hat, catching n and all the other thi which help a fellow play good ball.

We are going to give every boy, matter where he lives, an opportunity secure one of these complete baseball o fits, or any part of one,



Without Paying One Cent For It!

If you belong to a "nine" you can sh your friends how they can all have suits their own and you can have the b dressed nine in the neighborhood, or if y want to form a new nine, here is your opp tunity. Just drop us a postal card, and s

"Please send me full particulars of how I can obtain a Baseball Outfit without paying ONE CENT FOR IT!"

Address, JUNIOR DEPARTMENT,
Christian Herald, Bible House, New Yo

USE A PORTABLE
BOSS OVEN
With Patented GLASS DOOR
on your stove or range, either oil, gasoline, acetylene, alcohol or gas.
No more spoiled bakings or worry—No more wasted heat—No more jarring or chilling of oven. Housewives can see their baking without opening door. Economy and convenience both guaranteed in the BOSS—a polished blued steel oven lined with tin and asbestos.

Look for Name BOSS on Every Oven

GLASS in DOOR
is guaranteed not to break from heat because it is secured by our patented yielding pressure retaining strips, which permit expansion and contraction. Glass door fits snugly in a neat beaded front, and is held tightly in place with two turnbuckles, preventing escape of heat.
Baking qualities and ventilation superior to any other oven or range. All heat goes right into the open bottom, and is perfectly distributed to all parts of the oven by means of our patented Heat Deflector. Flame always visible through small mica windows. With the BOSS a baking costs less than a cent. It will many times over pay for itself in saved bakings to say nothing of saved fuel.
Ask YOUR Dealer to show you the BOSS Glass Door Oven. INSIST upon seeing the name "BOSS" stamped in the front of Oven. Then you know that it is genuine and guaranteed.
FREE. Our valuable Recipe Book, containing many cookery helps and full description of BOSS Ovens sent FREE on receipt of postal, plainly written, giving your own and your dealer's names and addresses.
THE HUENEFELD CO. 2712 Spring Grove Ave. Cincinnati, O

EASY TO BUY $10 down and $10 a month
Our monthly payment plan makes it easy for anyone to have the best heating system Buy direct and save the dealer's big profits and excessive charges for installation and repairs. Saves one-third the cost.
JAHANT Down Draft FURNACE
For residences, schools, hotels, churches, etc.
Sold Under a Binding "Guaranty Bond" to give perfect satisfaction after 365 days' use or money refunded We send complete outfit—furnace, registers, pipes, special blue print plans, full directions and all tools for installing. So easy to install a boy can do it.

OUR FREE CATALOG
Explains the patented Down Draft System fully and tells why it gives more heat and saves half the cost of fuel. Write for it now.
The Jahant Heating Co.
6 Mill St., AKRON, O.

APPLE FRUIT PRESS
A most practical, durable press for making Jellies, Jams, Grape Juice, Cider, Fruit Ices, stuffing sausages, etc. No woman has strength to press with her hands, besides without a half the juice and nearly all the pulp, which only great pressure brings is lost. All steel and iron plated, so table, etc. With a few turns of handle material is squeezed under great pressure. 4 qt size. $3.95
Order from us Sold on 10 days' trial. Money back guarantee. Write for booklet "Aunt Sally's Best Recipes" describes press.
VICTOR M. GRAB & CO.
Ashland Block, Chicago, Ill.

SALESMEN WANTED
Trained Salesmen earn from $1,200.00 to $5,000.00 a year and expenses. Hundreds of good positions now open. No experience needed to get one of them. We will assist you to secure a position where you can get Practical experience as a salesman and earn a good salary while you are learning. Write today for full particulars, list of good positions we now have open and testimonials from hundreds of men recently placed in good positions.
Address Nearest Office, Dept. 211
National Salesmen's Training Association
Chicago New York Kansas City Seattle New Orleans

AGENTS We mfr. over 500 newly patd household and office appliances also cutlery, sheers, etc. SAMPLES best sellers and big profits. Catalogue FREE. GEO. N. ERGER & Co., Milwaukee, Wis.

WHAT A CHILD DID FOR CHINA

MARGARET GRIFFITHS, a bright little girl, lives with her parents near Dawn, Mo., and attends the Barry School, a small rural school near that town. She is a country girl, with a kindly and sympathetic nature. Some time ago, she heard people discussing the terrible famine in China, and she immediately formed the plan of asking her schoolmates to unite with her in a juvenile relief movement. Margaret put her resolution into effect. She succeeded in interesting her companions and in a few days she had raised, including her own contribution, $3, all of it doubtless in small sums. She handed the money to Mr. William R. Thomas of Dawn, who has sent it to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, and the generous gift of these golden-hearted Missouri girls and boys, inspired by their "little missionary" associate, will be forwarded by our State Department in Washington by cable to China, when the next remittance is sent forward for the relief of the famine sufferers. Little Margaret has set an example which deserves to be emulated in other schools. With God's blessing, her labors and those of her schoolmates may be the means of saving precious lives in China.

Margaret Griffiths

Answered Prayers

M. A. G., Yurna, Va. "I thank God for his answer to a special prayer."

Reader, Binghamton, N. Y. "God has answered many prayers for me."

Mrs. J. A., Windham, O. "The Lord has answered many prayers for me."

J. M. S., Burlington, Col. "My heavenly Father has answered my prayers."

Reader, West Hoboken, N. J. "I give thanks that God has answered my prayers."

E. M., Fairfax, Mo. "I acknowledge the Father's might in answering my prayers."

J. M. P., Whitneyville, Conn. "I called upon the Lord in the day of trouble and he delivered me."

M. J. M., Washington, D. C. "In answer to prayer my daughter has been restored to health."

Mrs. C. C. R., West Carrollton, O. "I thank God for the restoration of a loved one to health."

S. H., Rheems, Pa. "The Lord hearkened to my prayer in trouble and I acknowledge his goodness."

A. M. C., Missouri. "I thank God for relief from illness and suffering when I was in deep sorrow."

M. E. L., Seattle, Wash. "I wish to acknowledge the Father's goodness in answering prayer."

Z. M. F., Burton Station, O. "I put prayer to a serious test, and was not disappointed. Praise to God."

N. A., Clinton, N. Y. "I am 85 years old, and can testify to the goodness of God in answering prayer."

D. F. G., Portland, Ore. "In a great bereavement I have been comforted and blessed in answer to prayer."

J. M. S., Madera, Chihuahua, Mexico. "I thank God for the recovery of loved ones and for safety in the midst of danger."

Answered prayers are acknowledged by the following: D. C. N., Collins, Miss.; L. M. H., Texas; A Reader, Oskaloosa, Ind.; M. R., Baltimore; T. F. C., Shelby, Ia.; C. R. F., Newton, N. C.; K. R. F., Dand, Ind.; E. N., San Diego, Calif.; W. M. H., Tolono, Ill.; A. H. S., Alexis, Ill.; M. E. E., Madison, O.; M. P., Canandaigua, N. Y.; L. H., Jersey City; Mrs. I. B., Chicago; M. E. S., Hobart, Okla.; L. E. DeM., Auburn, Kan., and Mrs. A. K., Peoria, Ill.

Worth Lots More Than the Price

OLYMPIA, WASH., May 18, 1911.

Dear Christian Herald: I received my beautiful flag a few days ago, and I am so well pleased and so satisfied, that I must write and tell you and thank you for such a nice premium for only getting you one new subscriber. The flag is a most beautiful one, and so well made; it is worth lots more than the price. Thanking you once more, I remain, yours respectfully, J. H. D.

RIPPLE WOVEN
RIPPLETTE
28 Inches Wide
15 Cents a Yard
The Wash Fabric That Needs No Ironing

RIPPLETTE'S trifling cost and its saving of laundry trials allow you to provide yourself and all the children with an abundance of dainty Summer clothing, which can easily be kept as delightfully spic and span as you desire.

When you depend on RIPPLETTE, even white dresses cease to be an extravagance.

In its designs, its crepe finish and its clinging texture, RIPPLETTE conforms to this season's fashion requirements.

RIPPLETTE is durable, pre-shrunk and ripple-woven so that the crinkle is permanent.

It is just the thing for street dresses, shirt waists, house dresses, school frocks, blouses, rompers, kimonos and underwear.

If your dealer does not carry RIPPLETTE, write us and we will send you a book of samples, and then your dealer will gladly get it for you.

BLISS, FABYAN & CO.
New York—Boston—Chicago
Address all correspondence to 72 Franklin St., Boston, Mass.

"Pace-Maker" Fireless Cooker Settles Cooking Troubles
FOREVER. FACTORY TO YOU.
No matter what you cook or how you cook it; in winter or summer; in town or country; whether you burn coal, wood, gas or oil—under any conditions—you save 80 per cent of your fuel bills, and get 80 per cent better food by using the PACE-MAKER FIRELESS COOKER. It leads them all. Constructed entirely of metal. No cloth pads. Three separate compartments. Solid aluminum cooking utensils. Sanitary throughout. Sold under absolute Guarantee on 30-DAY TRIAL.

Ask for Booklet 69, telling all about Fireless Cookers and their use. A postal will do.
THE SHEAFFER-MARION CO., Lansdale, Pa.

TYPEWRITERS ALL MAKES VISIBLE WRITERS
or otherwise
L. C. SMITHS, OLIVERS, UNDERWOODS, Etc.
¼ to ½ M'F'RS PRICES
Shipped ANYWHERE for Free Trial, or RENTED allowing Rent to APPLY
PRICES $15.00 UP
First Class Machines Fresh from the Mfrs.—Write for Illustrated Catalog 71
Typewriter Emporium, (EST. 1892) 92-94 LAKE ST., CHICAGO

Women Make Money
Sell this new and absolutely different household necessity. Big profits for men or women. Sells on sight. Many now making $15.00 to $20.00 a week. One agent says, "The results it produced in my home were so remarkable that two hours after it arrived I was compelled to take orders for seven more for my friends. The next thirty six lasted just two days—and now I am selling six hundred a week." We tell you just how to go about it to build up your business. Territory rapidly going. Send now for full information.
Dept. 44, DUNLAP MFG. CO., Bloomington, Ill.

THE "BEST" LIGHT

One burner will give as much light as ten ordinary oil lamps; six 16 candle power electric bulbs—six 20 candle power gas jets or 5 acetylene gas jets. Costs 2 cts. per week. Produces pure, white, steady, safe light. Over 200 styles. Every lamp warranted. Agents wanted. Write for catalog.
THE BEST LIGHT CO.
3-70 E. 5th St., Canton, O.

ZOBO THE MUSICAL WONDER.
YOU CAN PLAY IT Without Learning.
Sing into the mouthpiece, Zobo does the rest. For Home, Church and Sunday School Entertainments. Full information FREE on request.
STRAUSS MFG. CO., 355 Broadway, Dept. 19, New York

Here Idle Money Is Safe and Profitable
It earns 5% per annum in one of the soundest savings institutions in the country; ask your banker! Assets of over $2,300,000 and the supervision of the New York State Banking Department protect you. For eighteen years
Depositors All Over the World have placed their money with this Company. Dividends remitted by check or compounded semi-annually; paid for every day's use of the money. Deposits received at any time, personally or by mail and withdrawable on short notice. Write for our booklet.
Industrial Savings & Loan Co.
2 Times Bldg., Broadway & 42d St., New York

WHEEL CHAIRS A wheel Chair is often an invalid's greatest comfort. We offer over 75 styles of these easy, self-propelling and Invalids' Rolling Chairs, with latest improvements. Ship direct from factory to you, freight prepaid, and sell on THIRTY DAYS' TRIAL
Liberal Discounts to all sending for free Catalogue NOW.
GORDON MFG. CO.
478 Madison Ave., TOLEDO, O.

I TRUST YOU TEN DAYS. SEND NO MONEY.
$2 Hair Switch Sent on Approval. Choice of Natural wavy or straight hair
Send a lock of your hair, and we will mail a 22 inch short stem fine human hair switch to match. If you find it a big bargain remit $2 in ten days, or sell 3 and GET YOUR SWITCH FREE. Extra shades a little more. Include 5c postage.
Free beauty book showing latest style of hair dressing—also high grade switches, pompadours, wigs, puffs, etc. Agents wanted to sell our hair goods. ANNA AYERS,
Dept. A159 22 Quincy Street, Chicago

MUSIC LESSONS FREE
in your own home for Piano, Organ, Violin, Guitar, Banjo, Cornet, Sight Singing, Mandolin or Cello. One lesson weekly. Beginners or advanced pupils. Your only expense is for postage and music, which averages about 2 cents a day. Established 1898. Thousands of pupils all over the world write "Wish I had known of you before." Booklet and free tuition offer sent free. Address, U. S. SCHOOL OF MUSIC, Box 7-A, 225 Fifth Ave., New York City.

PATENTS That Protect and Pay
Advice and Books FREE.
Rates Reasonable. Highest References. Best Services.
WATSON E. COLEMAN, Patent Lawyer, WASHINGTON, D. C.

Diversified Investment

This Company suggests to careful investors the advisability of dividing their funds among bonds of various classes, in this way obtaining a well diversified investment. Investments made in this manner will possess the individual qualities of the respective classes in combination, thus making the investment well balanced. For instance, we own and offer a 5% railroad bond, a 6% short term note, a 4½% equipment bond and a 6% industrial bond netting at present prices

An Average Yield of Over 5.35%

We will furnish particulars of these on request.

Ask for our Circular D 142

Guaranty Trust Company
of New York
28 Nassau Street

Capital and Surplus, $23,000,000
Deposits $133,000,000

BUYS THE

Pittsburgh Visible Typewriter

The original Visible Writing Typewriter not excelled by any machine at any price

ONE FREE One Pittsburgh Visible Typewriter Free in every City, town and neighborhood. One Free to every man or woman, boy or girl who will do us a small service. No selling or soliciting necessary, only a at all service which anyone can render.

The Pittsburgh Visible does anything that any other machine will do. Has perfect touch, absolute ligment, quick action, back spacer, tabulator, two-color ribbon, universal keyboard, etc. It is easy to operate, is strong, durable and fully guaranteed. The writing is visible at all times.

The Pittsburgh Visible is a perfect writing machine for railroads and large corporations or for the small office and the home. One ought to be in every home.

$65 NOW—LATER THE PRICE WILL BE $100

TO GET ONE FREE and to learn of our easy terms and full particulars regarding this unprecedented offer say to us in a letter: "Mail your Free Offer."

Pittsburgh Visible Typewriter Co.
ESTABLISHED 20 YEARS
Dept. 30. Union Bank Building, Pittsburgh, Pa.

PATENTS: For facts about Prize and Reward offers and Inventions that will bring from $5000 to 10 Million Dollars; and for books of Intense Interest to Inventors, send 8c postage to Pubs. Patent Sense, Dept. 36 Barrister Bldg., Washington, D.C.

5% Your Money Back on Demand at Any Time

Money invested with this Company is abundantly secured by First Mortgages on improved Real Estate.

It earns interest at the rate of 5% for every day it is in our hands—

And it may be withdrawn on demand at any time without notice.

Where can you find a more thoroughly desirable investment?

This Company has been in business more than 15 years—it has never been a day late in payment of either interest or principal.

The "Five Per Cent. Safety" book tells all about it—Write for it to-day.

The Calvert Mortgage & Deposit Co.
1046 Calvert Building, Baltimore, Md.

Thrift's Kindergarten

FEW parents seem to appreciate the importance of inculcating in the mind of the very young child the principles of thrift. It was a wise theologian who said: "Give me the first seven years of a child's life, and I care not what you do with the rest." This has as much bearing upon the question of thrift as it has upon the question of religion. A child gets learning in the schools, but the best part of its education must be had at home, and parents are sometimes apt to forget that in order to win many great prizes of secular life it is imperative that their children have a thorough schooling in the Kindergarten of Thrift; that in the proper use of money there is often too little, or at least no preliminary, training.

The child, if not taught otherwise, is apt to regard money as a medium of exchange, as something to spend rather than as something to save, something in fact which he must barter off as speedily as possible for a sweet to tickle his palate, or a toy to excite the envy of his playmates. And the child through whose pocket the pennies burn holes is apt to develop into the prodigal spendthrift, whose greed and selfishness will ignore the rights of his fellow-men.

The way to teach a child the proper use of a tool is to accustom it to its use, and this use requires responsible handling. The way to teach a child the proper use of money is to acquaint it with the value of money through use and possession, and, let us add, by making it responsible for its proper disposition. Give your child a little bank for the pennies and nickels, and let it be a bank to whose contents it can have access whenever it please, otherwise the lesson of responsibility, a sense of actual ownership, and of self-denial by a refusal to spend foolishly, will be lost. But the guardian, conducting this part of the child's education, should be watchful and considerate. He should take an interest in the child's savings, and every six months he should impress on the child the way in which wise investments increase by adding to the fund a fixed sum by way of interest, and then reinvesting the interest.

Educating the Child

I am quite prepared to hear some one say: "Why, the course you advise would change the innocent child into a little financial prig and that meanest of all things, a miser!" Not at all, my friend. The course advised will educate that child in the proper use of that commodity to the acquisition of which most of its adult working life will be devoted; and in acquiring this knowledge its self-denial and generosity will be developed, and being neither a reckless borrower nor a foolish lender, it will be able "to look the whole world in the face, owing not any man."

The best use to which our growing taxes are put is the education of the young, who within a quarter of a century will be themselves paying, collecting, and spending the taxes. It speaks well for our lawmakers in Washington, whom the unthinking are too apt to abuse, perhaps to show their own superiority, that in recently establishing Postal Savings Banks throughout the country they did not overlook the children, whose education in systematic thrift they felt to be so important to the future of the nation.

Any boy or girl ten years of age who has saved up one dollar can, without the interference or control of parent or guardian, become a depositor in a Postal Savings Bank and collect the interest semi-annually. With one dollar it will be only one cent every six months, but small as such a beginning seems, it may be, as in many other cases, the basis of a competency, if not of great wealth.

The United States Government is not directly concerned in the State schools for children, but that it is not indifferent to this great subject has been demonstrated by the establishment of the Postal Savings Banks, which it has opened to every boy and girl, and it heartily invites them to become members, pupils in these Kindergartens of Thrift.

Expected Results

It is not expected that the boys and girls, who avail themselves of the opportunities for saving opened up to them by the general government, will became rich before the one class is ready to vote or the other to marry, nor is it expected that the amount deposited through this source will greatly affect the total. The accumulations of the child are a minor consideration compared with the educational value of these continued transactions.

If the child has contracted the saving habit, and learned from actual experience the elementary lessons of finance, he will, long before he has attained his majority, have saved enough to warrant his looking about for more profitable sources of investment. Naturally, when his certificates of deposit, bearing two per cent. per annum, amount to twenty dollars, he will take advantage of the government's offer and exchange them for a twenty-dollar gold bond bearing two and one-half per cent. interest. Or, dissatisfied with a return so small, he may turn his certificates or bonds into cash, and place them in a savings bank that gives four per cent. on deposits, payable semi-annually.

By this time the youth, benefited by the thorough kindergarten experience, will have taken a high position in that common school of finance of which something will be told in the next article. He will have learned, as the trained soldier has learned not to rush recklessly into danger, to avoid the allurements of get-rich-quick speculators, and to place his savings where the returns will be in healthful accord with the security offered. He may safely buy a bit of land, on which the taxes are not too high, and for the rise of which the promises are good. Or again he may regard the five per cent. of the bond and mortgage as sufficient for the time. But whatever that young man does with his money, we may be sure that the kindergarten training will prevent his making a fool of himself.

Flames Sweep Great Pleasure Resort

THE clang of fire engines roused all Coney Island and many nearby parts of Brooklyn early on the morning of May 27, when "Dreamland," one of the finest amusement resorts at that world-famous playground, was destroyed by flames. The fire made rapid headway in the light frame structure and papier-mache decorations. Soon it leaped to the great tower that overtops the entire resort. The flames leaped about its fresh white paint, till presently it stood a pillar of fire against the black night sky.

There was a sudden cry of alarm from the crowd which had gathered when it realized that the next building doomed was that in which the incubator babies were kept. Six babies were in there. The attendants had anticipated the danger, and the little ones were carried out through the sweeping flames and smoke. When they reached a nearby hotel, however, it was found that three of them had perished from the effects of the smoke and exposure.

The fire soon ate its way to the wild animal house, where the show animals, scenting danger, were filling the night with their roars and cries. Many of these beasts were highly trained, and the keepers risked their lives to save the most valuable by lassoing them and wrapping up their heads to get them out. Despite this heroic work many perished in the flames, and the keepers shot some that could not be saved so that they might not suffer such a painful death.

Dreamland was one of the two fine enterprises that redeemed Coney Island as a playground for the people. Its cost as it stood was estimated at over a million dollars, and the loss, which includes a great deal of valuable property put into the park for the summer, will probably reach about the same figure. The fire was one of the most spectacular that New York has seen in a long time, and drew crowds of hastily dressed people in automobiles and street cars from distant parts of the city.

Boston Garter
Velvet Grip

is made to suit all tastes, both as to type and style. Its materials are highest grade. The webbings are of the best quality, and will retain their strength and elasticity, giving maximum service. Metal parts are of brass, rust proof, and heavily nickeled.

THESE THREE TYPES

cover any man's needs for all season or occasions. The "Cord" is the original staple "Boston Garter"; "Needraw" for summer wear (no metal next the skin); "Pad," a recent type excelling in comfort and growing in favor.

The trade marks "Velvet Grip" and "Boston Garter" stamped on the loops.

For sale everywhere. Sample Pair, postpaid, Cotton, 25 cts., Silk, 50 cts.

GEORGE FROST CO., BOSTON, U.S.A.

6% NET INTEREST

and the best security in the world!

Principal and interest secured by select Mortgages on Pittsburg Preferred Real Estate

Amounts of any size ($25, $50, $100, $200 or multiples) can be invested, temporarily or permanently. Your money available when wanted. Endorsed by highest financial authorities everywhere.

Our Booklet explains how 6% Interest is possible on such preferred securities.

If your Savings, or any other money, is drawing less than 6%, read our booklet. Copy free on request.

A. C. LESLIE CO.
Suite 117, Bakewell Law Building, PITTSBURG, PA.

GUARANTEED MORTGAGES

For Large and Small Investors

Don't think, because your capital is small, that it can earn only 3½ per cent. or 4 per cent. It used to be so—the small investor for hundreds of years had no chance beside the capitalist. Our

First Mortgage Trust Bonds
On New York and Suburban Real Estate

put you exactly on a par with the wealthiest investor. You have the same security and the same certain returns—5 per cent. or 5½ per cent. You have the same opportunity to withdraw your capital if you should need it.

Under Supervision of New York Banking Department

Write for our Booklet

NEW YORK MORTGAGE CO.
Dept. D, 1470 Broadway, New York City

TYPEWRITERS FACTORY REBUILT

Save $25 to $50 on any make of Typewriter. Our "Factory Rebuilt" Typewriters are perfect in quality, condition and looks. Durable and reliable in construction and serviceable in every way. Buy from the largest factory in the world with branch stores in leading cities. We guarantee for one year against defect in workmanship and material. Write for catalogue and address of nearest branch office.

American Writing Machine Co.
345 Broadway, New York

6% $100. DEPOSITS

6% interest allowed on $100 deposits, and 5% on smaller sums. $2,750,000 of Approved First Mortgages with Trustee, together with $750,000 Capital, Surplus and Stockholders individual liability as your security. 20 years in business—not a dollar loss to depositors. Write for The Nimble Sixpence—it tells our plan—it's interesting.

5% SMALL SUMS

GEORGIA STATE SAVINGS ASS'N
176 York Street Savannah, Ga.

PATENTS SECURED OR FEE RETURNED.

Free report as to Patentability. Illustrated Guide Book, and List of Inventions Wanted, sent free.
VICTOR J. EVANS & CO., Washington, D. C.

CAUSE OF BAD TEETH

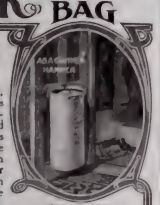
. Wheeler Says It Is Because People Don't Use Them Enough

The reason Americans have such bad eth is that they do not exercise them ough, according to Dr. Herbert L. heeler. President of the American ental Hygiene Council, who has been de- ering a course of lectures at Columbia niversity.

"We Americans are living in the lap of xury," said Dr. Wheeler in the lecture, nd our food is so well prepared for us at we don't use our teeth enough. Regu- exercise for the teeth is as beneficial any other kind of gymnastics."

Out of 11,374 children recently inspected the medical inspector in the schools of ronto, 2,027 were found to have decayed d imperfectly formed teeth. Similar velations have been made by medical spectors in the schools of many of the rge cities in this country.

Sound teeth and good bones come from oroughly chewing the food that is rich the phosphates. To develop sound eth in growing children they must have food that compels thorough mastication d that is also rich in the elements that ake teeth and bone. You cannot build od teeth with mushy porridges, soggy astries or sweetmeats.



The whole wheat grain contains the ecessary phosphates, but the whole grain ust be presented in a digestible form d in a form that compels the child to ew it thoroughly before swallowing. hese requirements are most perfectly d completely met in shredded wheat scuit which not only contains all the one-building elements in the whole wheat rain but has them prepared in a digesti- e form. You HAVE to chew shredded heat. You cannot bolt it down without hewing. The crispness of the shreds ompels thorough chewing and a thorough ixing with saliva which is the first rocess in digestion.

One or two shredded wheat biscuits very morning for breakfast, served with ilk or cream, will build sturdy, robust oungsters with good bones, firm flesh nd sound teeth. It is also a preventive f the stomach and bowel disorders so ommon to children. Most all grocers ell this, the most perfect of all the whole heat foods.

HE PARKER LAUNDRY BAG

Absolutely Necessary In Every Home

A receptacle at once useful, sanitary and ornamental. Its neat and wholesome appearance, with its strong and durable construction, makes it quite up-to-date. Made from an especially woven cotton duck, White or Khaki, which having been thoroughly shrunken, can be washed as often as required.

A Necessity for Every College Student

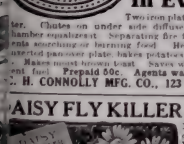
Bags are 10 inches in diameter and 25 inches in length, and hang free from the floor and out of the way of broom or mop. The Ring Fixture is handsomely nickeled and will not tarnish or rust. Is easily attached to marble, wood or plastering.

A complete set consists of Ring Fixture screws for attaching, Two Rings with drawstrings and leather address tags

Price $2, prepaid anywhere in U. S. Money refunded if not satisfied.

J. M. Parker Mfg. Co. 38 India Street Boston, Mass

Booklet on request



Protecto Plate A Necessity in Every Home

Two iron plates, joined 10-inch diameter. Chutes on under side diffuse heat, intervening air chamber equalizes it. Separating fire from cooking utensil, prevents smothering or burning food. Heats flat-irons uniformly inverted passover plate, bakes potatoes in 20 minutes, biscuits in . Makes moist brown toast. Saves worry, utensils and 50 per ent fuel. Prepaid 50c. Agents wanted.

. H. CONNOLLY MFG. CO., 123 Liberty St., New York

AISY FLY KILLER

placed anywhere, attracts and kills all flies. Neat, clean, ornamental, convenient, cheap. Lasts all season. Made of metal, cannot spill or tip over, will not soil or injure anything. Guaranteed effective. Of all dealers or sent prepaid for 20 cents.

HAROLD SOMERS 150 DeKalb Ave. Brooklyn, N. Y.

A Young Evangelist

AMONG the many young preachers who have come here from England, few give promise of a more successful future than the Rev. George T. Bennett. Mr. Bennett was well known in England as a successful evangelist and preacher. Spiritual results have followed his work everywhere, with conversions, upbuilding, and revival at the various places he has visited.

Rev. George T. Bennett

The following is an extract from the London Christian Herald, of England:

"He employs no sensational methods, but tells the 'Old, old story,' striving to show men and women the hideousness of sin, and their need of a Saviour." Mr. Bennett is the founder of a movement known as the "Young People's Christian Crusade," a society for binding together young Christians and bringing them into the Lord's service.

Mr. Bennett at present holds the pastorate of the M. E. Church in Unionville, Mich., which is enjoying a season of unusual prosperity.

Called Higher

William Phillips (84), of Garrison, Kan., has been called to well-earned repose.

Mrs. Olive D. Curtis (86), of Springboro, Pa., has passed to the long home.

Mrs. Mary Groat, of Dubuque, Ia., has been called to the freedom of the Master.

Mrs. Jennie Butterfield Smith (75), Cynthiana, Ky., has passed on to her reward.

Martin L. Shaffner (76), of Huntington, Pa., has passed to that fairer country beyond.

Miss S. J. Conover, of Watkins, N. Y., was called to join the great majority in August last.

William A. Newton, of South Vernon, Mass., has been called to the reward of a life of service.

Rev. M. Porter Snell recently passed away at the Merriam Home for Aged Presbyterian Ministers at Newton, N. Y.

Mrs. Ester Ladd (84), of Anabel, Mo., has passed to the great beyond. "She spent her life ministering to others."

J. B. Williams (72), of Hillsboro, Ill., has passed away. He was a Civil War veteran and a noble Christian.

Mrs. R. K. Struble, of Linden, Mich., has been called to the great beyond. She was for years a reader of this paper.

Mrs. Laura Major (66), of Itasca, Texas, passed away in August last. She was for many years a reader of this paper.

Miss Catharine Poe Bard, of Davenport, Ia., recently passed away at an advanced age. Her last wish was to go "to meet the Master."

Mrs. Jane Manson (76), of Attica, Kan., has gone to be with Jesus. She was a subscriber to this paper for about twenty-five years.

Mrs. M. M. Warren (75), of Blackriver, Ark., has been called to her reward. She was for years an appreciative reader of this paper.

E. A. Maynard, of Brockport, N. Y., has been called to the ranks of "that innumerable host." He was a veteran of the Civil War and a devout Christian.

Rev. A. M. Brown (90), a retired Baptist clergyman of Binghamton, N. Y., has entered into rest and the reward of long and faithful service.

Mrs. Sarah Jane Vance (81), of Topeka, Kan., recently passed away at her home there. She was a devoted Christian and a church member from early childhood.

The Berkshire Hills Sanatorium
For the Scientific and Effective Treatment of CANCER
Without Resorting to Surgical Procedure
The only private institution of magnitude in the United States for the exclusive treatment of Cancer and other malignant and benign new growths. Conducted by a physician of standing. Established thirty-two years.
For complete information address
Berkshire Hills Sanatorium, North Adams, Massachusetts

CHRISTIAN HERALD PILGRIMAGE TO THE HOLY LAND

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD has perfected arrangements for conducting a grand Pilgrimage to the Holy Land. The splendid steamer Cretic, of the White Star Line, will leave New York at noon, Wednesday, September 20, for the Mediterranean, stopping en route in Italy, Greece, Turkey, Asia Minor, etc., and arriving back in New York about Nov. 21.

The itinerary will enable the members of The Christian Herald party to visit the Azores, Gibraltar, Naples, Rome, Athens, Smyrna, the site of ancient Ephesus, Constantinople and Palestine.

Jaffa, where the party will land, is the port of Jerusalem, and members of the party will proceed to the Holy City by train, for a comprehensive study of prominent features of Biblical interest.

Among the points of interest to be visited in the Holy Land will be the Tomb of the Saviour, Mosque of Omar, Mount Moriah, Mount Zion, Garden of Gethsemane, Mount of Olives, Bethany, River Jordan, Jericho, Dead Sea, Wilderness, Bethlehem, Temples of Solomon and Herod, Church of the Nativity, etc. An early booking will secure first choice of accommodations.

For complete information and illustrated booklet with itinerary, address

CHRISTIAN HERALD PILGRIMAGE BUREAU,
BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK CITY

ONLY $5

FIRST PAYMENT

And Keep This Fine Cornet

Only $5.00 down and then easy payments of only a small amount monthly—a $30 cornet with a $50 quality—the Lyon & Healy Professional American Made. You can get our special liberal offers now on any instrument you wish from this catalog. Just send your name and address and we will send you the greatest band catalog in the world.

Greatest Musical House Lyon & Healy, the greatest musical house in the world makes this special limited offer to you now. Complete equipment for a brass band furnished on liberal easy payment terms. Write to us and get the inside pointers on how to organize a brass band and how an amateur band can make money. When you send us your name and address we tell you how you can get a genuine Humanatone free the new musical novelty positively and absolutely free for a little information. Send your name and address today.

LYON & HEALY 21-51 East Adams Street CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

Art Glass Church Windows

At Prices You Would Have to Pay For Imitations

THE Foster-Munger plan enables you to obtain beautiful, genuine stained glass Windows for little more than you would have to pay for paint or imitation glass. For example—paper imitation windows will cost you at least 25 cents per square foot or more installed—whereas you can get genuine Foster-Munger Art Glass Windows for only 45 cents per foot and up.

Even small church churches can now afford the Genuine Art Glass Windows.

Pastors and Building Committees are urged to write for our prices and have just put in the showing a beautiful assortment of designs sent entirely free.

The Foster-Munger Co.
DEPT. 18 CHICAGO, ILL.

BUSINESS WOMEN

A Lunch Fit For a King

An active and successful young lady tells her food experience:

"Some years ago I suffered from nervous prostration, induced by continuous brain strain and improper food, added to a great grief.

"I was ordered to give up my work, as there was great danger of my mind failing me altogether. My stomach was in bad condition (nervous dyspepsia, I think now) and when Grape-Nuts food was recommended to me, I had no faith in it. However, I tried it, and soon there was a marked improvement in my condition.

"I had been troubled with faint spells, and had used a stimulant to revive me. I found that by eating Grape-Nuts at such times I was relieved and suffered no bad effects, which was a great gain. As to my other troubles—nervous prostration, dyspepsia, etc.—on the Grape-Nuts diet they soon disappeared.

"I wish especially to call the attention of office girls to the great benefit I derived from the use of Grape-Nuts as a noon luncheon. I was thoroughly tired of cheap restaurants and ordinary lunches, and so made the experiment of taking a package of Grape-Nuts food with me, and then slipping out at noon and getting a nickel's worth of sweet cream to add to it.

"I found that this simple dish, finished off with an apple, peach, orange, or a bunch of grapes made a lunch fit for a king, and one that agreed with me perfectly.

"I throve so on my Graye-Nuts diet that I did not have to give up my work at all, and in the two years have had only four lost days charged up against me.

"Let me add that your suggestions in the little book, 'Road to Wellville' are, in my opinion, invaluable, especially to women." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

"There's a Reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

Grace for Duty*

A CERTAIN girl was very anxious to become a foreign missionary. Her pastor took means to find out just what kind of a girl she was at home, before he recommended her for the important work she coveted. He found out that she was lazy and untidy; failing to help her overworked mother, on the plea that she was studying the subject of missions; and neglecting all of her daily duties while she dreamed of a glorious destiny in foreign lands.

The supposition naturally was that if she so lamentably neglected duty in one sphere, she would be equally deficient in another, and nobody arose to recommend her for the post she desired. She had never learned to practise the great rule, "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might."

"You tire me so," said a boy of sixteen to his mother. "You make me feel as though I ought to study as hard as I can every minute in school, and then run my errands and play my games as hard as I can—and then eat my dinner hard, and study hard all the evening and then sleep hard all night. It is too strenuous."

The wise mother laughed, but she confirmed his worst fears when she said, "That is really the only way to live, my son. Do everything earnestly, and live each day as though it were to be your last."

We can acquire a habit of duty. An editorial writer on a great paper had a way of going off unexpectedly and leaving to his associates the burden of his work. One of these, somewhat weary after his extra exertions, so calmly imposed upon him without leave or license, remarked, "I can't understand W.'s conduct. This is the second time within a month that he has disappeared, saying simply that he had an engagement and would be back tomorrow, and the rest of us have had to fly around and do his work. The trouble with the man, I judge, is that he was never taught the importance of doing his duty."

William James, in his Psychology, remarks that though it is a startling truth to face, it is probably a fact that a man's personal habits are largely fixed before he is twenty; the chief lines of his future growth and acquaintance, before he is twenty-five, and his professional habits before he is thirty. Let us take care that they are fixed right, and that the habit of duty is among them.

"But duties conflict," you may say. "I have my duty to my family, to my business, to my church, to my neighbors and to my country. Often it seems to me that by doing what is said to be my duty to my church, I rob my family; or that in doing my duty to my profession, I neglect that to my country."

All that one can do in such circumstances is to balance one duty against another as well as one can, and after much thought and prayer choose the one which, on the whole, seems most pressing.

Perhaps the duty which we are likeliest to slight or to omit is that of the patriot. Do you try to keep track of public questions? If builders and landlords are putting up and maintaining unsafe or unsanitary houses, are you ready to help in setting the law upon them? How about your public schools, the cleaning of your streets, child labor in your State, the saloon and tobacco evils, vile shows, bad newspapers? It is a part of your civic duty to know how these matters are going, and to try to correct abuses which may exist in the politics of your town, your State and the nation.

---

* Christian Endeavor Topic for Sunday, June 18. TEXT: Eph. 4:25, 26; 5:1, 2.

Delighted with the Encyclopedia

The beautiful set of the World-Wide Encyclopedia (12 volumes) came in excellent shape to my address. I think them a wonderful bargain. W. S. S.

Camargie, N. Y.

Grand Trunk Railway System

Most Direct Route to the "Highlands of Ontario"

Orillia and Couchiching, Muskoka Lakes
Lake of Bays, Maganetawan River, Algonquin National Park
Temagami, Georgian Bay, Kawartha Lakes

Spend Your Summer Holidays at One of These Delightful Spots

Finest summer playgrounds in America. Good hotel accommodations at moderate cost. The lover of outdoors will find here in abundance all things which make roughing it desirable. Select the locality that will afford you the greatest amount of enjoyment and send for free map folders, beautifully illustrated, describing these out of the ordinary resorts.

All this recreation paradise only one night away from the leading cities of the United States, via the Grand Trunk. Palatial trains provide every travel luxury to your destination. Address—

J. D. McDONALD 112 West Adams Street, Chicago
F. P. DWYER, 290 Broadway, New York City
E. H. BOYNTON, 256 Washington Street, Boston
W. ROBINSON, 506 Park Building, Pittsburg

W. E. DAVIS, Pass. Traffic Mgr., Montreal
G.T. BELL, Asst. Pass. Traffic Mgr., Montreal
H.G. ELLIOTT, Gen'l Pass. Agent, Montreal

WANTED—RIDER AGENTS IN EACH TO and district ride and hibit a sample 1911 Model "Ranger" bicycle furnished by us. Our agents eve where are making money fast. Write at once for full particulars and special offer.

NO MONEY REQUIRED until you receive and approve of your bicycle. We shi anyone, anywhere in the U. S. without a cent deposit in advance, prepay freight, allow TEN DAYS' FREE TRIAL during which time you may ride the bicycle and it to any test you wish. If you are then not perfectly satisfied or do not wish to keep bicycle you may ship it back to us at our expense and you will not be out one cent.

LOW FACTORY PRICES at one small profit above actual factory cost. You save $10 to middlemen's profits by buying direct of us and have the manufacturer's guarantee behind y bicycle. DO NOT BUY a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone at any price until you rec our catalogues and learn our unheard of factory prices and remarkable special offer.

YOU WILL BE ASTONISHED when you receive our beautiful catalogue and st our superb models at the wonderful low prices can make you. We sell the highest grade bicycles at lower prices than any other factory. We satisfied with $1.00 profit above factory cost. BICYCLE DEALERS, you can sell our bicy under your own name plate at double our prices. Orders filled the day received.

SECOND HAND BICYCLES—a limited number taken in trade by our Chicago retail stores be closed out at once, at $3 to $8 each. Descriptive bargain list mailed free.

TIRES, COASTER BRAKE rear wheels, inner tubes, lamps, cyclometers, parts, rep and everything in the bicycle line at half usual pric

DO NOT WAIT—but write today for our Large Catalogue beautifully illustrated and containing a great fun interesting matter and useful information. It only costs a postal to get everything. Write it now.

MEAD CYCLE CO. Dept. L 71, CHICAGO, ILL

Try a Detroit Fireless at Our Risk

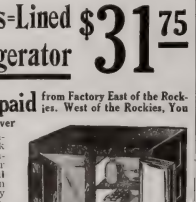
Cooking in a Detroit Fireless Stove (electric or with radiators) is the most delicious way—all flavor and nutriment retained; the most economical way—saves 80% of your fuel bill; the most comfortable and convenient way—saves work over a hot stove—saves constant watching—saves worry. Made in six sizes each.

Built Like a Range—Does All a Range Does

"Detroit Fireless Stoves" (both Electric and Radiant) are made from planished steel and aluminum—no wood to warp or split—no stones to break. No felt or pad to absorb steam and odors. They roast and bake perfectly—rich brown; they fry or boil perfectly; they steam and stew perfectly. A positive revelation and delight to women. Our perfect WATER-SEAL makes all "Detroit Fireless Stoves" steam-tight—keeps in all heat and flavor.

Free Trial Offer A "Detroit Fireless" will be sent you on 30 days' trial; will pay for itself in the first three months. Write to-day—get our handsome catalog and this new offer.

Detroit Fireless Stove Co 107 Jefferson Ave., Detroit, Mich.



Radiant Style
Heat the metal radiators a few minutes only—then imprisoned heat cooks the food.

Opal-Glass-Lined Oak Refrigerator $31.75

Freight Prepaid from Factory East of the Rockies. West of the Rockies, You Pay Freight from Denver

You get this highest grade Solid Oak Wickes New Constructed Refrigerator lined with Opal Glass, "better than marble," for only $31.75—freight prepaid from factory.

You buy the Wickes Refrigerator direct from the factory, at actual factory prices. You save all the dealers', jobbers' and department store profits. You get the Wickes at the price asked everywhere for ordinary "enameled" refrigerators, for which you have to pay the freight in addition.

MEASUREMENTS
Height, 45 in. Width, 36 in. Depth, 21 in. Ice Capacity, 100 lbs.

The Wickes

New Constructed No. 230

is made of solid oak, to last a lifetime—perfectly joined and beautifully finished. The food-compartment and door are lined throughout with OPAL GLASS, 7-16-in. thick. Our exclusive construction gives you double refrigeration from every pound of ice. Opal glass makes the WICKES absolutely sanitary.

Your money refunded if the WICKES is not exactly as represented. See and use this high-grade refrigerator in your home.

Send for Free Beautiful Art Catalog

It shows you the famous Wickes Refrigerators of all sizes—inside and out. Guaranteed and sold by The Brunswick-Balke-Collender Co.

319 Wabash Avenue, Chicago 29-35 W. 32d St., New York
(Established Over 60 Years) (155)

FREE Murray Style Book

Save $30

Before you buy, it will pay you to get this money-saving book. 128 pages and 251 illustrations of Vehicle and Harness bargains. Murray Highest Award Surries direct from our factory; 4 weeks' road trial, 3 years' guarantee. Send for Big Free Book.

The W. H. Murray Mfg. Co 322 E. 5th St., Cincinnati, O.

From Factory To Horse

THIS NEW HAIR BRUSH COMBS AND BRUSHES THE HAIR AND MASSAGES THE SCALP.

The greatest modern invention for keeping the hair beautiful and fluffy and the scalp clean, healthful and free from dandruff or dirt. Keep the scalp clean and properly massaged and nature will grow the hair. Write for free circular.

AGENTS WANTED.

DR. GEORGE LYMAN,
217 Hill St., Peoria, Ill.

Best Turkish Bath At Home 2c

Just flush out the three million porest your body with the "Robinson" Therm Bath. Takes only 15 minutes. Co only 2 cents. Relieves La Grippe, Ba Colds, Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, Ski Diseases. Our Big 52 Book Free.

Robinson Mfg. Co., 186 Snowflake Bldg., Toledo, O

POST CARDS

10 Fourth of July, 10c. | 10 Best Wishes & Greetings, 10c.
10 Birthday . . . 10c. | 10 General Subjects . . . . . 10c.

Any three ten-cent packages mailed for 25c.
A Special Assortment of 100 Birthday or Remembrance Post Cards mailed for 60c.
MADISON ART COMPANY, MADISON, CONN.

GREAT INVENTION FOR THE HOME
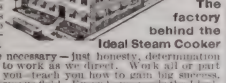
STEAM DOES ALL THE COOKING
Makes One Burner Do Work of Whole Stove

Cook whole meal at once. No oven necessary. Just enough heat to keep two quarts of water boiling cooks entire meal. Saves time—saves fuel—saves money—saves strength—saves labor—saves food. No tiresome work over hot stove. No burned, scorched, smoked—underdone or overdone food. No waste from boiling—baking—frying or evaporation. No loss of flavor or nutriment. No necessity to stay in heated kitchen. Put whole meal in and leave it. No watching, stirring, turning or roasting of food. WHISTLE blows 20 minutes before water is needed. Can be used anywhere—on any kind of stove—any kind of burner—any kind of fuel.

THE IDEAL STEAM COOKER



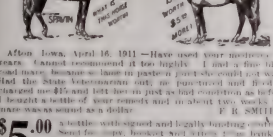
Most wonderful cooker ever made. Costs $6.50. Sent anywhere. Scientists pronounce steam cooking as most healthful of all methods known to man. Fried, boiled and baked foods cooked the old-fashioned way lose strength, flavor, nutrition and weight. Best parts are boiled, fried or evaporated away. Five pound roast cooked in oven comes out three and a half pounds. Cooked in the Ideal Steam Cooker it comes out five pounds. Mrs. E. Jarvis, Ill., writes "The Ideal is the delight of our family. We are more than pleased. It does far beyond expectations." Mrs. Thadeus, Mich., writes "I am using my Ideal Cooker every day. Would not take $25 for it if I could not get another. And it goes. All pleased. The Ideal is simply wonderful. Everybody likes it. Thousands sold. Everything can be cooked in the Ideal. Steaks, bread, custard, beans, potatoes, corn—anything you want. Cook custard and onions on same shelf—custard won't be tainted. Cans 6 one quart jars fruit at one time—worth its price for this alone. Cook right in jars. The Ideal is made from finest quality material. No sharp corners or edges—as easily cleaned as an enamel bowl. Copper bottom—brass hinges. Guaranteed to give satisfaction or money back. The Ideal takes women by storm—just what they want.

Sent Anywhere. Only $6.50

Each cooker tested before shipping. FREE with each Cooker, a fine 100 page illustrated Steam Cook Book. Order a cooker today. You won't regret it.

HUSTLING AGENTS WANTED

Men and women who want to make more money—who want to sell a high grade proposition—something they can believe in—enthusiastic men and women to manage county territory—take care of district sales—appoint agents—canvass—take orders, collect—advertise, etc.



The factory behind the Ideal Steam Cooker

No experience necessary—just honesty, determination and willingness to work as we direct. Work all or part time. We help you—teach you how to gain big success. Think of the enormous field. Every home needs the Ideal. You should sell at almost every house. New homes starting every day. They need Cookers. Hurry! Get in your application. Name locality you prefer to work. Don't wait. Write for appointment now.

TOLEDO COOKER COMPANY
1400 W. Bancroft Street, Toledo, Ohio

"SAVE-THE-HORSE" SPAVIN CURE.

REG. TRADE MARK

Afton, Iowa, April 16, 1911.—Have used your medicine for years. Cannot recommend it too highly. I had a fine blood mare, became a total cripple, could not move. Had the State Veterinarian call, he pronounced and treated it incurable and left her in just as bad condition as before. I bought a bottle of your remedy and in about two weeks that mare was as sound as a dollar. F. R. SMITH

$5.00 a bottle with signed and legally binding contract. Send for copy, booklet and letters from bankers, merchants and farmers in your town, if you. Permanently cures Spavin, Thoroughpin, Ringbone except low Carb, Splint, Capped Hock, Windpuff, Shoe Boil, Injured Tendons and all Lameness. Takes away all loss of Hair. Horse works as usual. Instantaneous Lameness Cure.

Troy Chemical Co. 39 Commercial Ave., Binghamton, N. Y.

Shoo-Fly THE ANIMALS FRIEND

Keeps flies and all insects and pests off animals—in barn or pasture—longer than any imitation. Used and endorsed since 1885 by leading dairymen and farmers.

$1 worth saves $20.00

in milk and flesh on each cow in a single season. Cures sores, stops itching and prevents infection. Nothing better for galls. Kills lice and mites in poultry houses.

SEND $1, if your dealer can't supply you, for enough Shoo-Fly to protect 200 cows, and our 5-tube gravity sprayer without extra charge. Money back if not satisfactory. Write for Booklet, free. Special terms to agents.

Shoo-Fly Mfg. Co., Dept. 34 1301 N. 10th St., Philada.

Largest and Most Complete Iron Fence Factory in U. S.

FREE CATALOGUE. AGENTS WANTED

CincinnatiIronFenceCo
Address Dep't B for prices. CINCINNATI, OHIO.

The Use of Spiritual Gifts*

IT TAKES a good while for some people to find out their gifts. A certain man was bound to be a preacher. His father was a great preacher and was ambitious that his son should be the same. The boy tried, but he made poor work of it. His delivery was slow and monotonous and he could compose only dull sermons; but he was an expert with tools. Every day he spent his spare time in his carpenter-shop. At last, he perfected a great invention which greatly improved the conditions of common life. Then his friends began to beg him to leave the ministry, for which it was plain that he had no gift, and to devote all his time to making more inventions. He did so, and has done incalculable good with his wonderful ingenuity.

On the other hand, a young Christian harnessmaker revealed in the church meetings such a talent for prayer and exhortation, that he was advised to study for the ministry. He had saved a little money, and with this, and with working at his trade while studying, he was able to spend six years in getting a proper education for the holy calling. He became a remarkable preacher and did a great work for the Master.

The world is full of round pegs in square holes and square pegs in round holes. Parents should study the peculiarities of their children and put them on the right track for the accomplishment of the work for which they are best fitted.

A certain minister, conscientious and faithful, but not brilliant, was discovered to have a talent for finance. His churches were always freed from debt; their collections were large; their missions were always strong and flourishing. As everybody knows, the talent for managing money wisely is a rare one. This man was begged to undertake the treasurership of a great university. After reflecting and praying long over the matter, he decided to accept the office, and under his wise management the treasury of the institution, which had long been needy, was soon full to overflowing, and the usefulness of the university was greatly increased. Who shall say that this skilful labor in the cause of sound learning was not as helpful to the progress of God's work in the world as that which this only mediocre minister was doing in the pulpit?

"The one essential for all successful work," says Henry B. Wright, "is conviction that a man is in the right place. Just as surely as one doubts or distrusts his mission, his work fails. This assurance was the secret of Paul's mighty achievements (I. Cor. 1: 1; Gal. 1: 15, 16). It is the key to Jesus' life (Luke 19: 10; Matt. 18: 14). Both were lives with a definite purpose. Only when a man knows that he is in a work called of God, can he successfully overcome the difficulties and face the disappointments that always accompany a great task."

George Herbert, who has given us so many strong and illuminating poetic figures, wrote:

God gave thy soul brave wings. Put not those feathers
Into a bed, to sleep out all ill-weathers.

Almost any sort of work is better than no work; and if one finds that he is in some business which he does not like, and yet from which he sees no way of escape, let him still do it to the best of his ability. That is all God asks of us—to do our best.

* Topic of the Epworth League for Sunday, June 18. TEXTS: Rom. 12: 6-8; I. Peter 4: 10, 11.

It Sustains the Standard

I received the Calendar and splendid portrait of Dr. Klopsch, for which please accept my sincere thanks. I have taken THE CHRISTIAN HERALD for quite a good many years and prize it very much, and am gratified to see it sustain the high standard of merit that was established by its former editor and publisher. And may God speed the time when it shall be placed in every home in our land is the sincere wish of Yours truly.

Groton, Conn. A. H. PIERSON.

5 Beautiful Plants
FOR A FAVOR

THE photograph below shows an exact (one-fourth size) reproduction of the collection of five plants that we have arranged to offer to Christian Herald readers in a way that will enable them to secure the flowers in return for a favor. The collection consists of an unusual assortment of Roses, Vines and Dahlias for both indoor and outdoor culture. There is a Dahlia; a Clematis Paniculata, which is a magnificent Hardy Climbing Vine; an Asparagus Spregeri; a Violet Plant, and one of the Charles Dingee Rose Bushes, which is a new rose and considered by many gardeners as the best, healthiest, and strongest-growing, freest-blooming, hardy Rose Bush in the world. Each plant is carefully labeled, and complete instructions accompany each package. These plants have already reached the period in their lives when the fresh and young green leaves begin to appear, so that fine results are assured. They are now about ten inches high.

Clematis Paniculata The flowers are pure white and they are borne in great panicles or clusters of bloom, fairly covering the plants, so that it is a mass or sheet of fleecy white with an exquisite fragrance. It begins to bloom late in August and reaches a height of 15 to 20 feet. Hardy in all sections of the country.

Dahlia The Dahlia is a very beautiful plant for the yard. It makes tubers not unlike a sweet potato, but it is not hardy and blooms in late summer. The flowers are clear pink.

Violet This Violet is known as the "Lady Hume Campbell." It is the best double blue. Strong, healthy and hardy. It is a plant that has always been successful in various climates.

Asparagus Spregeri

This is a famous and attractive green vine, intended for house culture. It is for pots, vases, or hanging baskets. The long, slender branches droop most gracefully, clothed with feathery, emerald green fronds. It is a strong plant.

Charles Dingee Rose

The Great New Rose known as the "Charles Dingee Rose" is said to be one of the best and most beautiful introductions of the century. It is the result of cross-breeding between Humosa with grand old hardy Pink variety, and White Maman Chochet, perhaps the greatest of all white garden roses, which insures its offspring every point of excellence. It has a hardy, vigorous constitution, and is said to grow to perfection in almost any soil or situation. It grows to a height of 2 or 3 feet and blooms continuously. It produces immense, grandly formed flowers on long stiff, erect stems.

There are FIVE Plants in this Collection, Each Approximately Ten Inches High

You Will Be More Than Pleased With This New Assortment

This assortment of flowers is different from any we have ever used. It is not made up of slips, as these plants have commenced to sprout, and the petals will be found to be green and fresh, all ready for cultivation. They will reach you packed in soil best suited for their production, carefully wrapped in oil paper, and all shipped in a nice pasteboard box, which fully protects their natural and healthy condition.

This Plan Will Enable You to Secure Them Without Cost

We will give this collection of five plants to any Christian Herald reader who will send us a new eight months' subscription to the Christian Herald for some person who is not now a reader, remitting at the same time $1.00 to pay for the new subscription.

Ask one of your friends to give you a trial subscription for the Christian Herald for eight months at $1.00. Send the name of the new subscriber to us together with one dollar, and we will mail postpaid to you, or to any address designated, these five plants, guaranteed to be just as represented. Address:

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD
BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK CITY

Nickels for fireworks cause burns. Nickels for SPEARMINT cause benefits.
Why not spend the fireworks money for the mintleaf juice confection? Why not give your little ones the enjoyment that's so fine for teeth, breath, appetite and digestion?

LOOK FOR THE SPEAR! THE FLAVOR LASTS!

Christian Herald

$1.50 A YEAR — 5c. A COPY
PUBLISHED 52 TIMES A YEAR

COPYRIGHT, 1911, BY THE CHRISTIAN HERALD

NEW YORK, JUNE 14, 1911

VOLUME 34 — NUMBER 24
OFFICES: BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK

THIS AMERICAN FLAG—FREE!

WOULDN'T you like to own a large American Flag like the one shown in the illustration on this page of The Christian Herald—if you could get it without paying one cent?

Not a little hand flag, understand, but a man-size "Old Glory," 6 feet long by 4 feet wide—bigger than the top of your dining-room table.

Not a pitiful wisp of color, mind you, but real red, white and blue, right from the factory of the Government flag-maker. A stanch bit of fabric that will not run or shrink in wet weather.

Here is an opportunity to keep faith with your patriotism, for you will have use for a flag, not only on every holiday for many years to come, but you can also use it constantly for decorative purposes in public and private sociables, in the schoolhouse, in the church and in the home. Imagine being able to celebrate Fourth of July with a flag as big as this! Wouldn't it be better than firecrackers for the children? You may have it without paying one cent.

How?

At this time of the year The Christian Herald usually puts forth an extraordinary effort to increase the number of members of the great Christian Herald Family. We can only do this with the help of the present members. You are one of these and we know you will help us. But we have no right to accept your good offices for nothing, so we make the following proposition:

Compare Size of Flag With Height of Children

THIS OFFER IS LIMITED

We have on hand but a limited number of these flags. They are going fast and we would advise you to Act At Once—Before it is Too Late.

The regular annual subscription price of The Christian Herald, as you know, is $1.50. Isn't there some one among your relatives, friends or acquaintances who you know would be benefited by reading The Christian Herald? You can probably think of several in a few minutes, and it would be comparatively easy for you to get them to subscribe for a short trial period, say eight months.

Get one of your friends to subscribe for The Christian Herald for eight months; send us $1.00 for this subscription, and The Christian Herald will be mailed to any address in the United States or Canada, and in return for your trouble we will send, absolutely without cost to you, this beautiful American Flag.

And in addition to this we will also send you a life-size fac-simile of the Declaration of Independence, 26x31 inches, an exact duplicate in every way of the priceless document which hangs framed on the walls of the old State House in Philadelphia. This document should be in every patriotic home, and it may be in yours, free of charge, if you take advantage of our offer.

Don't Miss This Offer!

Simply get a friend to take The Christian Herald for eight months, send us $1.00, and we will mail to you, postpaid, the large American Flag (4x6 feet) and the Declaration of Independence, without cost to you. Address

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD
615 Bible House, New York City

GET ONE NOW FOR THE FOURTH OF JULY

OUR MAIL-BAG

Questions and Answers

M. M. H., West Chester, Pa. 1. Where can I find the poem, "The Discontented Pendulum"? 2. Who was Jean Valjean?

1. It is by Jane Taylor, and can be found in her Poems for Infant Minds or Rural Scenes. It is also in many collections and old reading books. 2. Jean Valjean is one of the heroes of Victor Hugo's great novel, Les Miserables.

L. S., Tacoma, Wash. 1. Am I correct in saying that a grain of wheat will, under favorable conditions, reproduce itself five or six hundred times? 2. How can I become reconciled to hear a lesson read, previous to a sermon, from the Revised Version?

1. It will reproduce itself many times, in proportion to the soundness of seed and the fertility of the soil. 2. The Revised Version corrects many errors in the earlier translation, and should be regarded as giving us a clearer and more faithful view of the real meaning and message of Scripture. It changes no essential of Christian doctrine, but is a great aid to a better understanding of the Bible. All the Christian scholarship of the present day recognizes this.

S. R. B., Bridgeport, Conn. In what measure is "keeping the peace intrusted to every individual"?

To the full extent of his individual influence and example. He should cultivate the qualities of Christian citizenship, which includes honesty, sobriety, industry, respect of and obedience to law, and love of and consideration for his fellowmen. These qualities will end the cause of peace at home, in the community, State and nation. Extended further, the same spirit will bring men to regard all mankind as brothers, children of the same heavenly Father and not enemies to be feared or assaulted.

E. P. S., Puyallup, Wash. 1. In THE CHRISTIAN HERALD of Mar. 1[illegible] mention is made of Rev. A. C. Dixon, in which he speaks of a "sense of God." In which part of our make-up would he place such sense, the physical, moral or spiritual? 2. I remember reading once a Buddhist prayer that left an indelible impression on my memory, "Oh that mine eyes were open, Lord, oh that mine ears could hear; then flowers and birds and little stars would shine and sing and speak of thee."

1. He meant not only an inward conviction of the divine Omnipresence and universal rule, but a "sense" or conviction that dominated his whole life, directing its thoughts and acts, bringing them into harmony with the divine will, and impressing him with the great fact of God's protecting love and care. 2. The passage quoted sounds pantheistic; but it may be only a poetic form of expression. If we could translate the language of nature, we should probably find much of it to be praise.

Mrs. S. H., San Luis, Mex. 1. When were marriage licenses first issued in Pennsylvania? 2. When did the great flood occur in Allegheny, Pa.?

1. The marriage license law of Pennsylvania was approved June 23, 1885, and amended June 18, 1895. 2. The greatest flood that ever occurred in Allegheny, Pa., was on July 26, 1874, when more than 200 people lost their lives. Great floods also took place there in February, 1832; January, 1886; and February, 1883.

M. A., Worcester, Mass. Should we understand that Jesus came to do away with the Old Testament law? What was his attitude toward it?

He emphasized the old law and came not to abolish it but to fulfil it. That he was familiar with the Old Testament is shown in many of his sayings. He put a new interpretation upon it, however, very different from that of the Scribes and Pharisees. See Matt. 5:17, 18; Matt. 7:12; John 5:39. The rabbins and religious disputants of that time applied the letter but overlooked the spirit. Jesus disclosed the real meaning of the law, its hidden interpretation and its true teaching. The Old Testament was his Bible and all his teaching was rooted in it.

E. R. H., Rosedale, W. Va. In I. Cor. 1:17 Paul said: "For Christ sent me not to baptize, but to preach the Gospel." What does he mean by this language? Some people here claim that he meant to teach that the ordinance of baptism is not necessary, or is done away.

Paul did not use these words to depreciate baptism, even in the slightest degree; on the contrary, he appreciated it highly (see Rom. 6:3). He baptized some of his first converts and would have baptized more; but he recognized the fact that his peculiar gift and mission were to preach the Gospel and plant churches, and exercise general supervision over them.

N. T., Tacoma, Wash. How can one learn of wealthy, cultured ladies, desiring the services of a lady secretary, business manager or companion?

By advertising in the best class of weeklies and monthlies. Such positions are hard to get, as most persons have relatives or friends who can help them in every way.

M. T. C., Newell, W. Va. 1. Please explain Matt. 24:22, 31, etc. 2. Are not the elect the sanctified or chosen of God's people?

1. These passages were prophetic of the destruction of Jerusalem, and were also a warning to the world to prepare for Christ's second coming. They have already been discussed in THE MAIL-BAG. 2. "Elect" is a term variously applied. It sometimes meant the ancient church, and the whole body of baptized Christians; again it was those elected to baptism; and still again, it was the newly baptized who had just been admitted to full Christian privileges. Further it is applied to those especially chosen for the Lord's work, like his prophets and evangelists, and to those who had undergone tribulation and even martyrdom. It has been applied to the whole Jewish people as chosen of God. Finally, it is applied to individuals who, not of their own merit, but through God's grace, through Jesus Christ, are chosen not only to salvation, but to sanctification of the spirit and who are holy and blameless before the Lord. They are individuals specially chosen out of the world to be heirs of salvation and witnesses for God before men. This is not of works, but of free grace.

S. S., St. Vincent, Calif. Your question has not been overlooked, but being of a polemical character, it does not properly belong in THE MAIL-BAG, which discourages mere controversy. Immortality cannot be proved by any physical demonstration, nor yet by science, nor by any logic which deals only with physical and material things. It can, however, be proved to the satisfaction of the spiritual nature of man by various means. His own heart assures him that the same Omnipotence which inspires man with the inherited desire for continued existence supplies the means of its attainment. This is abundantly confirmed by revelation, by prophecy and by the testimony of believers in all ages. Job (the oldest book in the Bible) says: "Though worms destroy my body, yet without my flesh shall I see God" (which is the correct translation in the Revised Version). David said of his infant son who had died: "I shall go to him, but he will not return to me." Enoch and Elijah were translated and never tasted death. All through the New Testament, the doctrine of immortality is taught, and Paul expressly says that Christ "brought life and immortality to light" by his authoritative declaration of the life to come. This is wholly a matter of faith. We must take the love and mercy of God on faith before we can begin to experience them as realities, physically as well as spiritually, in our life thereafter. We must take the promises on faith and the belief in immortality. It is only when one has taken the Saviour at his word and accepted the Gospel message that he begins to realize its actuality—that all the promises are true and that life eternal is something upon which we may enter here and now. The lecture you mention in your letter is one of the ordinary infidel type and simply arises from the vanity of human intellect which tries to measure Omniscience with its own little tape line.

A. C., Iowa. Can stammering be cured?

Most cases can be. Write to the secretary of the Board of Education, Detroit, Mich., where the newest methods of curing speech defects are employed.

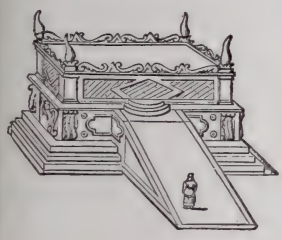
Miscellaneous

L. M. M., LeGrand, Calif. 1. Yes. 2 and 3. We have no information on these subjects.

Mrs. O. G. C., Covine, Calif. The instance you mention is an illustration of how politics and politicians bow to the liquor interest and pay court to it, to secure its support at the polls. It is typical of similar cases all over the country.

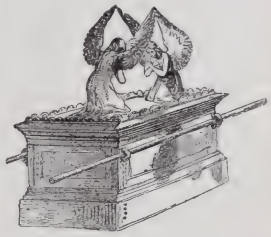
W., Milwaukee, writes: "Referring to the article of Rev. C. W. Stephenson, Detroit, Mich., in which he asks, 'Shall we not thank God sometimes that he has quite as often said no as yes to our unwise and narrow petitions?' I would call attention to a remark of John Ruskin, who once said: 'I have lived to be thankful that some of my prayers were not answered.' Alfred Tennyson said: 'There are more things attained by prayer than this world dreams of.'"

NEW YORK, JUNE 14, 1911



THE · CHRISTIAN · HERALD

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED NEWSPAPER FOR THE HOME



The Mosque of Omar

One of the Reconstructions of the Altar of Burnt Offerings

The Supposed Form of the Ark of the Covenant

HAS THE LOST ARK BEEN FOUND?

All Jerusalem Deeply Stirred by the Discoveries Under the Mosque of Omar

IN A RECENT issue of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, the details were given of the remarkable discoveries said to have been made by a party of English explorers in the immediate neighborhood of the Mosque of Omar and in ancient secret underground chambers beneath the Mosque itself. At the time of the discoveries, the statement was widely published that the Ark of the Covenant, the Tables of the Law and the Altar were among the sacred relics which had been brought to light from their hiding-place of many centuries.

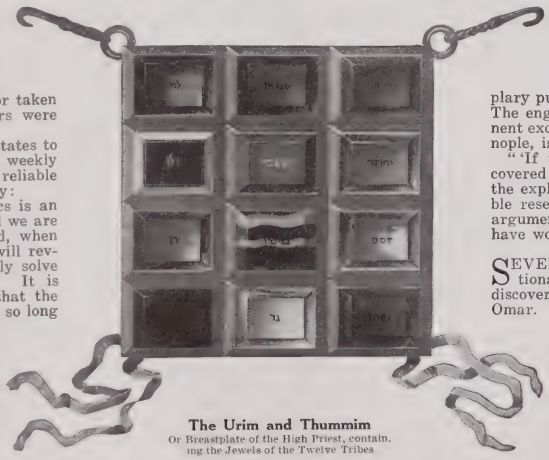
How this extraordinary incident is regarded by the Jewish people in the Holy City itself, as well as by the Moslem population, may be gathered from a most interesting and timely letter which we have just received from a correspondent in that city, Mrs. Abbie C. Morrow Brown, which we print below:

"All Jerusalem has been stirred for weeks over the abstraction of sacred treasure from the crypt underneath the Mosque of Omar, on the site of Solomon's temple. We do not believe the most valuable things have yet been discovered, but that treasures were found cannot be doubted. It is not known whether they were hidden here or taken away in the night, when the two explorers were compelled to leave.

"In the absence of official report, one hesitates to write; but the following from The Truth, a weekly paper published here for the Jews, seems so reliable and is so interesting that I give it quite fully:

"'The nocturnal theft of the sacred relics is an episode of historic and vital importance, and we are positively sure that the articles abstracted, when once universally declared to be bona fide, will revolutionize all religious thought and infallibly solve many historic and philosophic problems! It is moreover beyond the shadow of a doubt that the place of concealment of the valuable objects, so long coveted by every Jew, and so much enlarged upon in the Babylonian and Jerusalem Talmud—yes, that spot was not even known to the sacerdotal authorities of the Sanhedrim of the Second Temple.

"'It appears, from what we have heard on excellent authority, that the illustrious antiquarians came to their work of exploration in Jerusalem with a definite plan and programme, based upon ancient Hebrew documents, written in Samaritan characters, dating from the destruction of Solomon's Temple and from the subsequent exile of the ten tribes of Israel to Persia. These documents are said to have been only recently unearthed in the north of Ireland, and it was by virtue of their definite indications and minute measurements that the exact hiding-place of the precious paraphernalia of the First Temple could be precisely located.



"'The summit of Mount Moriah, where the Mosque of Omar now stands, having been considered by every successive ruler too sacred for any but the unshod foot to tread, it would never have entered the imagination of any one to penetrate below its surface. Moreover, the place supposed to have been ransacked and despoiled is the most unlikely receptacle for such inestimable treasures. The hypothesis that the find consists of sacred relics from Solomon's Temple, is more credited by the Jews than by other nationalities, for the reason that in the Talmud, as well as in other ancient Hebrew books, it is plainly recorded that most of the rich treasures of the First Temple were carefully concealed by the vanquished Israelites, in order that the victorious foe might not lay hands upon them.

"'A gentleman who has lately left for Europe, and whose truthfulness we have no reason to doubt, confided to us, amongst other information, the nature of the explorer's quest. The following is a part of the inventory enumerated in one of the discovered parchments:

1. The Stone Tables of the Law.
2. The Stone Bottle containing Manna.
3. The Urim and Thummim.
4. The Crown of David.
5. The Golden Sword of Solomon inscribed in Samaritan characters: "The sword of peace."
6. The Ark of the Covenant, overshadowed by golden cherubim, containing the first tables of the law (broken by Moses).
7. Sundry vessels connected with the service of the Golden Altar.

"'According to this authority, the Urim and Thummim are inlaid with twelve precious stones, each bearing the name of one of the twelve tribes of Israel. The Sheiks who have been suspected of complicity in this dramatic and sacrilegious pillage, are in prison, and are daily subjected to corporal castigation and raillery. A commission, composed of Ottoman dignitaries, specially appointed by Constantinople, has already arrived in Jerusalem to make full investigation, and award exemplary punishment to those found guilty of sacrilege. The engineer, who acted as interpreter to the eminent excavators and who is well known in Constantinople, is also under arrest.

"'If the documents supposed to have been discovered near Dublin, Ireland, on which authority the explorers based their assiduous and indefatigable researches, were of Israelitish origin, then the arguments in favor of the British-Israel identity have won the day.'" ABBIE C. MORROW BROWN.

The Urim and Thummim
Or Breastplate of the High Priest, containing the Jewels of the Twelve Tribes

* * *

SEVERAL weeks have passed since the sensational reports were published of great treasures discovered by excavators under the Mosque of Omar. Our letter from a correspondent, given above, is the first authentic narrative received since the few meagre facts came by the cable.

It is understood that the particular object for which the search was made was the Ark of the Covenant, but the first reports stated that the crown, sword, and ring of King Solomon had been found, together with an ancient manuscript of the Bible. None of these reports have been absolutely confirmed, but it is believed the discoveries, whatever they were, are of very great value and importance. If a manuscript of the Bible was found, its importance can hardly be overestimated. Such a manuscript, or parchment, preserved in such a place, would, in all probability, be in a good state of preservation.

THE American Pulpit

A Sermon by

Rev. H. P. Lyman-Wheaton, D.D.*

A RICH INHERITANCE

TEXT: Acts 20:32—"An inheritance among all of them which are sanctified."

THESE words form part of the address of St. Paul to the elders of Ephesus. He had been among them for three years, and God had so blessed his labors that we read in the preceding chapter that "the Word of God grew mightily and prevailed." The progress of the truth, however, excited at length considerable opposition, and a tumult was raised among the people, which made it desirable for St. Paul to pass over into Macedonia. His stay in Greece was but short; after remaining there three months, he determined to return to Jerusalem, proposing to arrive there, if possible, by the day of Pentecost. On his way he passed near Ephesus; and sent for the elders of that church to meet him at Miletus, that he might have one more opportunity of affectionate intercourse with those whom he knew (by special revelation) he was never again to meet in the flesh.

The Fulness of the Blessing

It was on this occasion that he delivered the interesting address which is given us in this chapter. He reminded them of his former ministry among them, and the earnestness and constancy with which he had endeavored to make known the Gospel to all, and to press it upon the acceptance of each—"testifying both to the Jews, and also to the Greeks, repentance towards God, and faith towards our Lord Jesus Christ." He then referred them to the uncertainty of his own prospects for the future, and the expectation he had of being called to suffer for the name of Christ; declaring at the same time that "none of these things moved him," but that he only rejoiced to be permitted to exercise his ministry, and to spend whatever time might yet be allotted to him in preaching salvation through the Redeemer's merits. In reviewing his ministry among them, he called them to witness that he had faithfully delivered the whole message with which he was entrusted; so that, if any had not availed themselves of the proffered mercy, it could not be charged upon him that he had failed to make known either the freeness of the offer, the fulness of the blessing, or the danger attending its neglect. He then gave them some directions, relating especially to their duties as elders of the church; and, warning them of the danger which he foresaw would arise, besought them to watch, and directed them to God as their helper, and the "Word of His grace," as able to "build them up," and "give them an inheritance among them that are sanctified." And in conclusion he appealed to them as to his own upright conduct while with them, his freedom from interested motives, and his desire rather to distribute to others than to gain for himself any worldly advantage.

Let me direct your attention more particularly to that part of his address in which we see the resource to which the apostle refers, and the blessings he expects from it.

God's Abounding Grace

I. The resource to which the apostle refers them. "And now, brethren, I commend you to God, and to the Word of his grace." He was about to leave them, and would no longer have the opportunity of observing their conduct, and suiting his instructions to the circumstances which might arise. He knew, too, that he left them in the midst of dangers, both from within and from without; while the greater part of them had only lately embraced the truth, and could not, therefore, be so thoroughly grounded and settled in the faith as he could have desired; or, however great their advancement might have been, he still had cause to entertain fears on their behalf. The strongest Christian is but a sheep, prone to wander, and a sheep, too, in the midst of wolves; there can be little hope, then, for his safety, unless some good Shepherd be nigh to lead and defend him.

They parted, then, all professing to walk in the narrow way of life, all desiring to live to the glory of God here, and to enjoy his presence hereafter; but who could say how many of them would continue to press forward in the path they had entered? or which of them, when they met in the judgment, would be found to have remained to the end the faithful servants of the Lord? St. Paul knew, by the Spirit of prophecy, that not only would grievous wolves come upon them from other quarters, but even "of their own selves would men arise, speaking perverse things, to draw away disciples after them." And we find a few years afterwards, when St. John wrote, that though the sound part of the Church had cast out these false teachers, and received the encouraging testimony, that for the name of Christ it had labored and had not fainted; yet there is added also, even of these, the best portion of the Ephesian believers: "Nevertheless, I have somewhat against thee, because thou hast left thy first love." St. Paul had cause, then, to entertain fears respecting them, and to look with anxiety to their own weakness and to the dangers by which they were surrounded. But what is his recourse? "Brethren, I commend you to God, and to the Word of His grace." "I may leave you; all the outward props upon which you stayed may be removed; the Channel through which you have enjoyed rich communications of comfort and grace is ever the same. His power to bless remains unaltered, and his love continues unchanged; he has provided for you all you have hitherto prized, and can still furnish you with every needed good. You may be weak and liable to err, and unable of yourselves either to continue steadfast in the faith, or to meet the assaults of your many adversaries; but the arm of the Lord is a support upon which you may confidently rely; his grace is sufficient for you. There is nothing that is really good which he is not able and willing to bestow; for he can make all grace to abound towards you, so that ye may always have all-sufficiency in all things."

Preciousness of the Word

Thus the apostle, in parting from them, commits them "to God, and to the Word of his grace," as that was the one channel through which they might receive an unfailing supply. And well might he term it "the Word of His grace"; for the Word he has given us contains the announcement of boundless grace to poor and guilty man. It tells of, and it bids to be proclaimed to every creature under heaven, a depth of compassion and mercy so great, that our minds cannot fathom it; we are lost in its vastness, can only acknowledge that it stands unequaled as the "grace of God which bringeth salvation." And the same Word that points us to the Saviour for pardon shows us that in him and through him we may obtain every other grace; it enters largely into the various gifts which he bestows upon his people, and contains great and precious promises to excite their hopes, important instructions for their guidance, and earnest warnings to admonish and to quicken them; in short, it is all "given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness; that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works." Here, then, was a treasury to which they might always be referred; in the Word of the grace of God they might meet with an unfailing help, whatever human means might be removed; and by constantly searching the Scriptures, they might obtain a rich supply for all their spiritual needs. But the apostle more distinctly mentions some things which they might receive. Let us then go on to consider

II. The blessings they might expect from it. "I commend you to God, and to the Word of His grace, which is able to build you up, and to give you an inheritance among them that are sanctified."

"Babes" and "Fathers" in Christ

St. Paul had been permitted, as an instrument in the hands of God, to lay the foundation of a great and lasting work in many of their hearts; he trusted that they were all resting upon that one precious cornerstone which alone can be a sure support for our hopes. But this was not enough; the building must be carried on as well as the foundation laid; nor could he ever rest satisfied till the "top-stone was brought forth with shouting," and the whole work completed. There were many among them who were young in their Christian profession—but babes in Christ; these needed constant and tender care to feed them with the milk of the Gospel. Others had grown to the age of young men; and even they required no less constant attention; they were in danger lest their energies should be exerted in the wrong direction; nor would they arrive at a healthy maturity, unless they were taught to add to their faith and virtue (or, as the word signifies, courage or holy determination) which they already possessed, knowledge; and to knowledge, temperance; and to temperance, patience; and to patience, godliness; and to godliness, brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness, charity." There might also be in the Ephesian Church some who had become fathers in Christ; but these still needed to be built up; and none more than they would feel their need in this respect; it is the experienced and ripened Christian who is most deeply sensible of how much he has yet to grow, and how far he is from having attained that which he ardently desires—the full stature of a perfect man. But in each of these cases, recourse might be rightly had to the Word of God's grace, which contains all that is suited to their varied wants.

The Way of Salvation

It provides milk for babes, instructions so plain and simple that he that runs may read them; it supplies counsel and admonition fitted to give the young man knowledge and discretion; while at the same time it speaks wisdom to them that are perfect, and affords plentifully "strong meat to them that are of full age," "who, by reason of use, have their senses exercised to discern both good and evil." Nor is it less powerful in giving "an inheritance among them which are sanctified" than in building up the believer in every stage of his progress. It gives the first title to that inheritance; for believers are said to be born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the Word of God which abideth for ever." The Word of God is able, when accompanied by the influences of the Spirit, to arouse the sinner from his slumbers, to teach him the danger of an unconverted state, to make him in earnest in the inquiry, "What shall I do to be saved?" and to point him to the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sins of the world. That Word is able to speak peace to the troubled soul, to give assurance of pardon to the weeping penitent, and to convey the bright hope of an eternal inheritance to him who was before a child of wrath and an heir of misery. And as it furnished him with the means of obtaining that inheritance, so it is effectual in preparing him for it.

The Christian Inheritance

In my text St. Paul calls it "an inheritance among them that are sanctified"; as none can enjoy its blessedness unless their hearts are first sanctified by the Spirit of God, and their minds conformed to the purity which reigns there. "Without holiness, no man shall see the Lord." But it is the Word of God, which he has appointed as the means of producing the holiness in the hearts of his people. "Now are ye clean," says our blessed Lord, "through the word that I have spoken unto you." And so St. Paul, in writing afterwards to the Ephesians, represents the whole Church of Christ as cleansed by His Word. "Christ loved the Church, and gave himself for it, that he might sanctify and cleanse it with the washing of the water by the Word, that he might present it to himself a glorious Church, not having spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing; but that it should be holy and without blemish."

Not only the Church as a body, but each individual believer, shall be presented on that great day, as a holy part of that holy body; he shall then be put in complete possession of that inheritance which has long been the object of his hopes and desires; he shall join the happy company of the redeemed, and enter with them into the joy of their Lord. Then, when he looks back upon all the way in which the Lord his God has led him, he will see that that Word of God has been indeed "a lamp to his feet, and a light unto his path"; he has received daily assistance from it, in all the difficulties he has met with on the road; and, guided by its directions, he has arrived in safety in the mansions of the just. He will then prize that blessed Word, and testify from his own experience that it proved able to build him up, and to give him "an inheritance among them that are sanctified."

* Pastor, Church of the Nativity (Episcopal), Fairview, N. J.

They Loved Mont-Lawn

A SHORT time ago, I had occasion to visit the lower East Side tenement district of New York.

Walking through one of the narrow, dirty streets, I was attracted by the several groups of children at play. I paused to see the baby faces amid such wretched surroundings. One group of five children, boys and girls, ranging between seven and ten years of age, were greatly interested in playing with a very forlorn, tattered ball. As I came close to them the ball rolled at my feet. I picked it up, handed it to the child who rushed up to claim it and was surprised when courteously thanked. My interest was aroused and I stopped to watch them at their games.

One of the group, deeming me friendly, after the ball episode, volunteered a smile, whereupon I responded by smiling too. Immediately the entire group of five stopped their play and came toward me. A small boy, who I afterward learned was ten years old, seemed to be the acknowledged spokesman, and made inquiry as to whom I was "huntin' fer."

I answered that I was interested in them and their game and hoped they were having a good time and were well and happy. They assured me that three of them were in fine trim, but that the other two would not be quite perfect until next summer.

I thought this rather remarkable and made further inquiry, whereupon one replied by saying:

"You see, Dan and Mary ain't been to the Home like me and Kate and Bess; but they'll get there next time."

"What Home?" I asked.

A look of astonishment passed over their faces.

"There ain't but one Home," said one of the little group.

"Is that so?" said I. "I thought there were many homes where little children visited."

"No, there ain't," she replied. "It's at Mont-Lawn. Guess you're thinkin' of 'sylums."

"Oh, I see now," I said. "There is just one Home, the rest are asylums. Now I understand."

"That's it," she replied with a satisfied air.

From that time on I had a difficult time making out all that was said in praise of the Home, for the three tots who had been the privileged visitors at THE CHRISTIAN HERALD'S Children's Paradise were so carried away by their enthusiasm that they all talked at once. However, I gathered this much: They had lived at the Children's Home for the allotted ten days, and those ten days were crowded with all the joys known to a child's heart. They had played on real green grass, where there were no signs to warn them against trespassing. They had plenty of the substantials to eat and many a "goody" besides. They danced, sang, and frolicked to pretty music and finally were tucked by kind and loving hands into the most comfortable bed they had ever imagined.

"And," spoke up little Dan, "there was people even watchin' out for yer whilst yer was sleepin'. I wasn't scairt onct.'

From their eager, earnest talk it was not difficult to gather what a genuine pleasure had been given them and their little faces showed the help gained, both physically and mentally.

I complimented the little girl for being so lady-like as to thank me for her ball, and she answered with great pride:

"I learned that at the Home and lots of other things, too."

I was delighted, and so would you all have been, could you have heard those bright, enthusiastic, appreciative children. They seemed to know, beyond the shadow of a doubt, not only that they desired the visit, but that they were actually wanted as well as welcome, at the Children's Home where little ones are "never in the way."

N. G. G.

Rivers of Life

By EUGENE THWING

NATURE, in the sweet, open country, is calling the tired worker of the town away on his summer pilgrimage of rest. The trees, the hills, the sea entice him; the fields are full of flowers, and the cool, fresh grass invites his weary feet to little journeys of refreshment. Where will you go? What is your favorite retreat when you leave the fret and burden of the town to enjoy awhile the pleasure that never fails in God's out-of-doors?

I like the rivers, little and big. There is so much of companionship and human meaning in rivers—more, I think, than in the sea, or the hills, or even in the trees we all love so well.

. . .

A RIVER is never still. Its motion is very different from the ceaseless, restless tossing of the sea, which comes from no starting-place and reaches no destination. The waves of the ocean heave and tumble aimlessly, responding in wild disorder to the winds and tides, or rolling lazily in the calm. But the river knows whence it came and whither it is going, and, fast or slow, it moves steadily, surely on, in storm or calm, to the place of its destiny. It may have a winding course; it may be turned this way and that, through the pleasant valley or through the rocky gorge; through the busy town where it gives its power, without losing it, to the industries of man; through the quiet pastures where the cattle drink; sometimes through dark shade, and sometimes in the bright sunlight, always on, spending itself and being spent, yet gathering more into itself, until its course is finished and it passes into the great deep.

Just so our lives flow on, day by day, from infancy to old age. They wind in and out through many places and many experiences, now hasting on eagerly toward a desired goal, then suddenly turned aside into another direction by some unexpected barrier in the way of our choice. But just beyond, in the new direction, we find an opportunity for some great work of helpfulness awaiting us, which we would have missed if our way had not been changed. Here the life stream lends its power for service and blessing, and then flows on, none the poorer nor weaker, constantly giving itself, and constantly gathering to itself that which it may later give again with greater power and richness.

So, through shade and sunshine, through the noise and bustle of active work, and through the quiet valleys and fields of rest and meditation, our life stream finds its way in the channel that God has prepared for it until it passes out into the ocean of his love for all eternity.

. . .

A RIVER is very different at its edges and in midstream. The bank claims it, there at the edge, and the river can not ignore its demand. The two are so different in character, yet they must meet and hold close intercourse. When the shore lies parallel with the course of the river, there is a light, rippling, shallow, pleasant and conversational contact at the banks. The grasses and trees bend over in a friendly companionship, and the river yields its water for their refreshment. Men and cattle come to the edge and drink or rest as the river flows past them.

Out in midstream, away from the banks, is the deeper current of feeling and purpose. There is the real life and strength of the stream. Get out there and find the steady pull toward the end to which it is going. At the bank it passes you with a light touch. In midstream the deep strong current carries you with it.

We have had just such contact with strong lives. At the edge, where they meet and converse with the world, they smile and ripple lightly, as it were, without revealing the great hidden power and purposes of their lives. Then, in a time of sympathy and intimate fellowship, we leave the banks and discover the strong midstream current in which their lives are moving, and we feel its pull. Is there such a strong current in our own lives, and whither is it pulling other lives that feel its influence?

. . .

THE source and supply of a river determine its character. Almost always the original source is pure, but often the stream is polluted by taking into itself impure supply. A river that is to be used for the drinking-water of a city must have all impure streams and drains shut off; and a life that is to flow with blessing must be careful to keep out all tributary pollution.

Starting in the pure spring among the hills, the river gathers to itself the waters of other springs as it goes on down the mountain side. If the supply is abundant the river is full and deep. A life which is filled at the start with the rich love of God, and which, as it goes on, makes every new experience and every new blessing a tributary stream for further enrichment, is sure to carry gladness and power all along its course.

Sometimes the supply is small, and the river is shallow and slow moving. It is stopped, or hindered, or disturbed by every stone or stick in its way. In every pool it becomes stagnant. It is unfit to give drink or to do work for man or beast. It shrinks away from the banks it ought to bless. What a pitiful thing is a life like that! When the supply is abundant, the river of life is resistless. It sweeps over all petty obstacles.

. . .

THE river gurgles and tumbles over pebbles near its source, and trickles through narrow banks, or spreads itself in shallow brightness on a sandy bed when it first ventures out into the light after its birth in the forest. It grows ever broader and deeper and more peaceful as it approaches its outlet. There may be sharp rocks still in the bed of the river; a wreck or two may lie hidden there, marking, all unseen, the place of former storms; but the current of the river moves over it full and strong, and the peaceful surface shows no sign of the hidden hurt. The fulness of grace submerges the pain and brings peace as the life moves toward its outlet into the glorious life beyond.

. . .

EVERY river of life must have a purpose outside of itself. What is the purpose of our life river? As it flows onward, is it blessing or polluting? "There is a river the streams whereof make glad the city of God." Every city may be and should be a city of God. The river of his love must flow in human streams to make glad the city. My life shall be one of these streams, and so shall yours.

Insurance or Prevention?

A FEW years ago the system of old age pensions was established in England with little or no opposition of any party, either in the Commons or the House of Lords. Now, Mr. Lloyd-George has introduced a measure for insuring wage-earners against sickness, accident and unemployment.

There are many considerations which must influence the adoption or rejection of this scheme. It is going to take a vast amount of money to inaugurate the system, and though a portion of this will be raised from small premiums, paid partly by the wage-earner when employed and partly by the employer, there must be raised by taxation a sum equal to $27,500,000. This is Mr. Lloyd-George's own estimate of the cost and should it prove, as has his estimation on the old age pension bill, to be only about one-half the required sum, the drain on the yearly earnings and profits may raise the question as to its advisability.

The bill makes many splendid provisions for those unforeseen times of illness and disability which visit all classes alike. It provides free medical attendance and medicines and makes provision for the wage-earning mother. The scheme as outlined would include 14,700,000 workers of all classes.

Of this side of the proposed law, there can be little criticism. It is a great step toward realization of the admonition, "Thou shalt love . . . thy neighbor as thyself." Of the provision of insurance against unemployment, it is more difficult to judge.

All civilized nations admit the necessity of caring for the pauper in health as well as in sickness. Yet pauperism has always had its stigma and the removal of that feature by this method of aid to the aged, the ill or those out of work, might seem like an encouragement to the ne'er-do-well element which exists in all lands alike. The greatest problem that presents itself to either government or charitable organization which would extend aid to any class, is how to prevent the very necessary help of the moment from becoming a demoralizing influence for the future. To provide even the most limited assistance for the shiftless, the lazy and the improvident, is to instil a subtle poison that must in the end lead to the loss of that wholesome dread of being classed as dependent, which has always animated the English speaking race.

Even in its provision against disablement by accident, the bill is open to question. Payment to the maimed wage-earner or his bereaved family after an accident, has little to recommend it when compared with the expenditure of an equal sum in the prevention of such dismemberment and fatality. Laws of compensation are in force practically throughout the American Union. Not the payment of insurance, reddened by the blood of crippled workers, but the expenditure of money without stint for every appliance which man has invented for the promotion of health and the prevention of accident is the need of our own land.

Anvil Sparks

..THE devil's toll is all—if you patronize his mill.

..A LITTLE opportunity is a big chance to do your best.

..LONG-DRAWN contention seldom indicates breadth of view.

..IT IS hard to catch up with a lie, even with an automobile.

..YOU can never measure life's best things with the dollar sign.

..YOU cannot always hide from your troubles, but you can hide the most of them.

..EVERY one is willing to take short measure when it comes to receiving his share of troubles.

..JUST do the best you can, and let the criticisms of other folks be to you like rain to the duck's back.

IN THE LAND OF LITTLE FOLK

Mrs. Cameron Amusing the Little Tots at Play Hour

Three Pretty Maids of the Land of Little Folk

Orphanage Babies with Their Native Nurse

By ALLAN N. CAMERON,
CHANGSHA, CHINA

CHINA is a land full to overflowing with lively, talkative, playful children. Its houses and huts, streets and lanes are crowded with boys and girls, who are as eager for any passing show, or procession, or to see the performing monkey, or even the missionary with his singing, as any American boys or girls could possibly be. How the Chinese little folks love to fly their kites in the first warm days of spring, and how the girls never seem to tire of playing shuttle-cock or the many other little games they have!

China is said to have 400,000,000 people, including about 160,000,000 children! Much missionary work has been done among the older people, but what room is there for work among this vast array of receptive little ones for children's meetings, Gospel day schools, classes for learning the precious Bible verses and the Gospel songs! These people have wonderful memories, and the children can easily learn from one to five verses every day, and repeat them without an error. The Chinese are not noted as singers, but the children readily learn our foreign tunes, sing them nicely, and love them, as is shown by the way they sing them. The great favorite in China is "Jesus Loves Me"; but "When He Cometh" is a close second, while "I Am so Glad," "Happy Day," and many of the slower church tunes are to be heard sung every day.

Much new and aggressive work has been done among a few thousand of the neglected children of China since the last famine (1907), and THE CHRISTIAN HERALD and its readers have the privilege of being great helpers to the missionary workers in this respect. It supports 2,000 of the famine children, full orphans being given the preference. These are maintained and trained in about a dozen homes and orphanages throughout Eastern and Central China, with one or two in the farther North. We feel that the allowance for their support is sufficient, and indeed it appears to be lavish when we look into the poverty-stricken homes around us, and hear the reports from the new famine field. Girls are sold in every famine and for a mere song, only at last to find their way, in too many cases, to the ante-rooms of sin that abound in Shanghai and Canton.

I write to tell you just a little of the blessed work in one of the smallest of our Homes or orphanages, the one located at Changsha, in the heart of Central China, and of the "hostile" Province of Hunan. The work had a small beginning—very small. A clean-shaved head, but a dirty-faced little boy—that was all! That boy was the forerunner of a band that grew to 100 strong and over. How they did sing, and they had their verses every week, and got their cards, too. Then a castaway baby girl was put at our door. We took her in. Then another and later larger girls were left with us, and soon we arranged a paper to be signed, whenever we could find a parent or guardian.

Now we have a most unique and unheard-of thing. In the midst of conservative Hunan, all our children are signed over to us, with a responsible guarantor, "FOREVER," and they thus become ours to train, educate, feed and clothe, arrange marriages for (as is the custom in China), and this without ever having to refer to heathen relations! At the present we have just fifty boys and girls, and a happier, freer band it would be hard to find. Their ages range largely from five to fifteen.

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD'S support of the famine children has proven an abundant blessing these two years and over, and the children will thank the Christian supporters through all eternity for the blessings brought into their poor lost lives. Forty-three of our homes are being supported month by month by the readers of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, the funds being sent each quarter.

We enclose some little photos recently taken of the children. These speak largely for themselves, though they do not reveal the ragged, wan appearance, and the dirty faces and fright of hair many of the children came in, or the crushed little feet of some of the girls. Now they are for the most part in splendid health, all have natural feet, and could race well with any others of their ages, and their faces look happy and contented. They literally sing "all the day," at morning and evening prayers, at every meal a verse, at opening of school, and often as they play—they really love the Gospel songs.

Some of the Larger Girls of the Changsha Orphanage
Mr. Cameron in Native Dress

Our twenty-one boys are from some six provinces though, of course, mostly from Hunan. A numbe were formerly beggars; some came from the Huna famine district, some are from very poor homes some have lost one parent, some both. One boy i a Miao, or aborigine, and is specially supported b his missionary patrons, with the hope that he er long goes back with the Gospel to his people in th western mountains. Four of our boys are now i our tract printing office, and two are very fair pres boys.

The gowns of the girls are figured or flowere native calico, and the smaller girls have fanc woolen band hats. The hair is dressed differentl and in heathen homes, jewelry and powder are dail in use. Some of these girls were slaves; severa were rescued from homes ruined by opium and a came from the depths of poverty and need. The are a bright, helpful band now; make their ow shoes, sew on machines or by hand, knit, work mot toes, read and write. Six of the older of the girl are baptized Christians.

The Girls' Bible Class is entirely a Home affai and has eight members at present. The missionary a Kansan in full Chinese costume, is their teache The boys have a class of the same size, which meet one evening a week. These two classes have hun dreds of Scripture verses by heart, and also kno many of the tunes and words of the Sankey Song

Our smaller children enjoy an outin much as young folks would at home, onl that we use cows in the place of the fami iar horse, when the little ones take a rid One day we went to the open space beyon the North Gate of the city. Many peopl saw and admired the children, and nex day a poor woman brought to us a we mite she had in pity picked up fro among the graves, and begged us to tak it, as she had one of her own and was ver poor.

Three of the castaway baby girls hav stolen the heart of the missionary's wif and in fact seem to be much of an attrac tion to all of the visitors. Little "Mis No Name" was left at the mission doo Another we call Tien-en, meaning "Heav enly Grace." May her life prove it!

Our heavenly Father shielded us fro the recent riot, when destruction and fir raged on three sides of us, and provided native boat for a refuge till the worst wa past; then we were the first to get back Perhaps because we were so small, and s much like Chinese, they thought it n worth while to bother us. Our homes wer not burnt in our absence either, and ou Father sent the warm south wind for co ering and rice from a gunboat for foo so we all got back well. We praise hi for this great deliverance, and for th band of workers we see training for hi work.

Washington's Philanthropic Women

By ABBY GUNN BAKER

Mrs. James A. Reed
Copyright by Clinedinst

Mrs. Larz Anderson
Copyright by Harris & Ewing

Mrs. John Hays Hammond
Copyright by Harris & Ewing

Mrs. Richard P. Hobson
Copyright by G V Buck

Mrs. Martin Littleton

IN ALL circles of society this is the age of philanthropy. Gradually, like the leaven in the meal, we are coming to the realization that in the teachings of Jesus the saving of one's own soul is simply the beginning in His great plan of salvation; that the Fatherhood of God brought with it the obligation of brotherhood quite as impellingly as the duty to save one's own soul. It is this truth which, consciously or unconsciously, underlies every movement, great or small, which is being made for the world's betterment to-day.

To no one class of people has this truth seemed to come with so great an awakening force as to the rich, and those who occupy positions of power and prominence. It is not an unusual occurrence now for a rich man to give a community a public library, or a woman of wealth to endow a college; and yet what a stir it created, not so many years ago, when Miss Helen Gould began to erect buildings for the Young Men's Christian Association!

Look at Mrs. Russell Sage, quietly, wisely, laying out her late husband's dollars in investments which are bearing interest in the treasuries of heaven. Who would have believed, even twenty years ago, that millions of dollars could be raised, when the suffering of humanity demanded it, in small subscriptions averaging a few dollars and less? Yet every reader of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD knows it has been done.

The present Red Cross movement emphasizes the advanced attitude the world has taken in regard to the obligations of brotherhood. It had its day of small beginnings, but it has done splendid work many times in calamity, for the people are always ready to respond when a catastrophe takes place in any part of the world. When Miss Mabel Boardman took hold of the Red Cross organization she determined that it should become a national affair responsible to the people, working under a charter which Congress could annul if necessary, and in co-operation with the various departments of the government. All of this she succeeded in doing, and a great deal more; for she it was who persuaded President Taft to become the President of the Red Cross Society, and she interested nearly every prominent public man in the country in the organization. Then it was she who undertook that which so clearly illustrates the larger place to which philanthropic movements have come. She is endeavoring, and with an assured success in view, to secure an endowment fund of two million dollars for the Red Cross. With this she expects to organize and equip Red Cross Societies throughout every part of the country, which will be ready for instant action whenever a call for help comes.

Not only are rich men and women willing to give their money to help make the world a better place, but many of them are giving their time, thought, brain—themselves; and that is infinitely better.

In 1901 the National Civic Federation, probably the strongest and most influential of recent organizations for world betterment, was started in New York City. The membership is not confined to the men, and a few years ago it broadened the scope of its activities by organizing the Woman's Welfare Department. The object of this department primarily is to improve the working and living conditions of wage-earning women, and the hearty manner in which women of wealth and leisure have gone into it is one of the encouraging signs of the better day which is coming. Mrs. Taft is the honorary chairman and has identified herself with the department from its beginning. Mrs. Horace Brock of Philadelphia was the original national chairman, and through her wise administration it reached its present influential position. Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, of New York City, is the first vice-chairman, and Mrs. Richard Wainwright of Washington is the second. Mrs. Medill McCormick, daughter of the late Senator Hanna, Mrs. Huntington Wilson, wife of the First Assistant Secretary of State, Mrs. Beekman Winthrop, whose husband is the Assistant Secretary of the Navy, Mrs. Murray Crane, the wife of the distinguished senior Senator from Massachusetts, Miss Wetmore, daughter of Rhode Island's wealthy Senator, Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, Mrs. Larz Anderson, wife of the American diplomatist and herself a gifted writer, with many other equally as prominent women, are members of the department, and are helping to prosecute its good work.

Mrs. John Hays Hammond, wife of the well known mining expert, and a member of the executive council of the Civic Federation, has recently succeeded Mrs. Brock as National Chairman of the Welfare Department, and she is admirably qualified for the position. The Hammonds have great wealth; she will be able to travel in all parts of the Union to acquaint herself with labor conditions and to organize Welfare branches. They maintain a winter residence in Washington and have a splendid country place at Gloucester, Mass., where she can entertain elaborately and where she will come in touch with government officials and others of station. She will meet large employers of labor and call their attention to the conditions and needs of their employees. More than that, she is a woman who is personally acquainted with both sides of life. Her husband is a civil engineer by profession, and in the days before they had their wealth she shared the hardships of life with him, living in mining camps and seeing at first hand what the hardships and the dangers of that kind of life involved. This experience has given Mrs. Hammond the real fellow feeling which makes the success of all endeavor for humanity's uplift. Mr. Hammond was appointed by President Taft as the special ambassador at the English coronation ceremonies, and he and Mrs. Hammond are now in London.

At the recent annual meeting held at Mr. Hammond's Washington residence, Mrs. Archibald Hopkins, chairman of the District of Columbia branch, announced that Mrs. McCormick had determined to establish a model boarding-house for wage-earning women at the national capital. The building was opened a few days later, and has created much interest. Mrs. McCormick has it plainly understood that it is in no sense a charity. She expects it to be a self-sustaining institution and eventually to become a small paying investment. She has leased one of the splendid old-time mansions in Georgetown

Continued on page 625

Miss Mabel Boardman
Copyright by Edmonston

Mrs. John W. Kern

Mrs. Beekman Winthrop

Copyright by G V Buck

Copyright by Edmonston

Mrs. A. B. Cummins

Mrs. La Follette

Mrs. Huntington Wilson
Copyright by Clinedinst

Mrs. Isaac R. Sherwood

Mrs. Ernest W. Roberts

Copyright by Clinedinst

Mrs. James Bryce

OUR EDITORIAL FORUM

OTTO KOENIG, President GEO. H. SANDISON, Managing Editor THEODORE WATERS, Secretary

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD is published weekly by "The Christian Herald," at the Bible House, Fourth Avenue, 8th and 9th Sts., New York City. The officers are: Otto Koenig, President and Treasurer, Bible House, N.Y.City; Geo. H. Sandison, Vice-President, Bible House, N.Y.City; Theodore Waters, Secretary, Bible House, N.Y.City.

Subscription Price, $1.50 a year, in advance.
Remittances should always be made in the safest manner available to the remitter. Register cash remittances.
Foreign Postage.—For each copy to be mailed outside the United States, Canada, and Mexico, add one dollar a year.

Change of Date.—It takes at least two weeks to change the date, after your subscription is renewed.
Expiration of Subscription.—The date on the wrapper indicates when your subscription ends.
Change of Address.—It requires three weeks' time to make the change. Give both old and new address.

Subscriptions may commence with any issue.
Letters should be addressed, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, Bible House, New York.

Entered at Post Office, New York, as Second-class Matter
Entered as Second-class Matter at the Post Office Department, Ottawa

Will Germany Join the Peace Circle?

IT IS gratifying to learn that Germany has intimated a desire to enter the Peace and Arbitration Circle along the lines laid down by this government in its negotiations with Great Britain and France. Of course, as Secretary Knox has made clear, the road is open to any government to unite in the proposed international pact; but the advent of Germany would be an event of the highest significance since it would bring into close agreement the four great powers, whose united attitude would go very far toward determining the peace of the world. With Germany, France, England and America in complete accord and pledged to arbitration on all questions arising among themselves, their individual interests as governments reach out so extensively across the globe that it is not difficult to foresee a solidarity of influence in favor of peace and arbitration that would almost encircle the world. Germany's entrance into the peace field would be the greatest event since the century opened. It would be a splendid triumph for the principles for which peace lovers have long contended and which THE CHRISTIAN HERALD has been proclaiming for twenty years, viz.: violence or the resort to arms decides no principle, and no difference, quarrel or dispute can arise between nations that is incapable of honorable and equitable adjustment by arbitration, according to law.

A Lawless Trust Condemned

IT WOULD be difficult to cite a decision at once so sweeping in its condemnation yet just in its severity as that of the United States Supreme Court in the Tobacco Trust case. It is shown to have been a piratical trust from the time of its inception twenty-one years ago, to the moment of the issuance of the order of dissolution. It meant to have the tobacco trade of the world in its grasp, and to accomplish this it ruthlessly drove out competitors, buying them off where it could not terrorize them, closing them up by means familiar to the conscienceless trader, and purchasing plants not to work them but to close them. Reading between the lines of the court's decree, it is impossible to avoid being astonished at the uninterrupted exploits of this great freebooter, which for two score years has been a privileged violator of the law, amassing millions for itself and ruthlessly overriding all opposition with a sovereign contempt for the courts and the rights of others. So hopelessly incorrigible did Justice Harlan consider this trust that he added to his note of dissent a line to the effect that he had found nothing in the record that would make him at all anxious to perpetuate any new combination among the sixty-four corporations composing the trust, which the court had conceded "had at all times exhibited a conscious wrong-doing!" Yet the Supreme Court, with a desire for absolute fairness, has given this monstrous combination of lawless monopolists an opportunity to reform and to reorganize their business on an honest basis. We have no sympathy with the tobacco business; but if it must exist, it should be compelled to keep strictly within the law hereafter. We leave to the legal fraternity the inevitable discussion of the "rule of reason" and its application in the present instance. On the evidence presented the court might easily have gone further; but if its reluctance to employ the full rigor of law should result in making a decent concern out of a convicted monopoly, its course will meet with general approval.

Summer Resort Dangers

CONEY ISLAND, the strip of sand redeemed by man's ingenuity from the Atlantic, has grown to be a national pleasure resort. Nowhere else on the globe is there a place that combines innocent amusement with genuine instruction to the same remarkable extent. Its popularity may be gauged from the fact that on holidays as many as 700,000 visitors—a very large majority of them of the working class—have gone there to escape the midsummer heat and enjoy an economical and healthful outing. Like all other resorts of the kind, it has its drawbacks, moral and otherwise; but this aspect of the place has been magnified by sensational and imaginative writers who love fiction more than fact. The great fire that swept a wide lane through the heart of the island, leaving scores of beautiful buildings a pile of smoking timbers, has played havoc with many of the picturesque attractions of the resort, and is a cause of genuine regret to multitudes. It has thrown thousands out of employment. But Coney will quickly rebuild. Its misfortune is one that might befall any of our slightly yet thickly built summer resorts. The one redeeming feature of the fire was that there was no loss of human life, which was remarkable under the circumstances.

Remember Mont-Lawn

ON JUNE 28 we shall again open the hospitable doors of our Children's Home at Mont-Lawn. This beautiful charity, now in its seventeenth year, was founded by the late Dr. Klopsch, who labored for it with loving, earnest care up to the time of his death. He it was who caused to be inscribed over its entrance gate the words: "I Love God and Little Children." We hope this season, with the kind aid of those friends who have helped Mont-Lawn in the past, to welcome nearly 3,000 little tenement waifs to a summer outing in the "Children's Paradise." Mont-Lawn exists solely for the children of the poor. It is a place where children are never "in the way"; and when they leave, they carry with them influences that help to mould their whole after life. The home is a great boon to those little ones of poor families who have no means of getting an outing from any other source. Its shady lawns, large playgrounds, abundant table, tonic air and beautiful surroundings bring color to pale cheeks and strength to tired and frail little bodies. They enjoy to the full the kind treatment, the simple services and the hours of song in the beautiful Children's Temple. Last year, many readers of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD shared with us the joy of bringing a section of heaven into the hearts of the children. We would be glad to have as many as possible to share the same happiness this year. It costs $3 to send a little tenement child to Mont-Lawn—a trifle to the giver, but ten long, delightful days of happiness to the tiny guest. We take them out of unwholesome and malodorous city slums during the hot midsummer days and surround them with those influences that make for the right development of mind and body. When you are making your summer arrangements, just give a thought to Mont-Lawn and if you can send even one poor little guest there for a fresh-air outing "in His name," the recollection of it will add zest and enjoyment to your own holiday and will be a great blessing to your tiny protégé.

Vain Regrets

IT WOULD seem that Rev. Dr. William D. Grant of Northumberland, Pa., whose trial for heresy we commented on last week, has undergone a radical change of mind since the announcement of the verdict of the Presbyterian General Assembly finding him guilty. His friends had looked for a favorable verdict, or at the most a disagreement, and the adverse result was wholly unexpected. It suspends him from the Presbyterian pulpit until he makes renunciation of the objectionable utterances. Dr. Grant, after the blow fell, suddenly seems to have realized the seriousness of his situation. He is quoted as saying:

> I still remain unshaken in my faith in my Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, in his deity, divine birth, resurrection and mediatorial office and in the Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments. To the world I profess my innocence and declare my unshaken belief in the Word of God. I can see now that some of my statements and writings are subject of misconstruction. If I cannot preach the great doctrines of grace as given by the New Testament in the Presbyterian Church, I ought to be denied the ministry.

The unfortunate pastor deserves sympathy. His experience should stand as a warning against the all too common evil of loose preaching. Heresy trials, however, are sadly out of date. A simpler way of disposing of such cases would be for a preacher who finds himself unmistakably out of touch with the church's creed and doctrine, to promptly step down and out from the pulpit. T remain under such conditions is disloyalty to th Christian cause and dishonor to the pledge to hi denomination.

Temple vs. Civil Marriage in Utah

SEVERAL readers have written referring to ou recent comments on the statement which ap peared in the Deseret News, concerning the 1,10 marriages which President Joseph Smith of th Mormon Church in a conference address in Sal Lake City spoke of as "illegal marriages contracte not in accordance with the law of God." It woul now seem that while the News was right in its facts the extract it gave from the speech of Presiden Smith was calculated to convey a wrong impres sion to the public mind. This was the extract:

> We ought to obey the rules of the Church with regard to mar riage. Eleven hundred marriages were contracted last year not in accordance with the law of God. As announced time and time again at these conferences, plural marriages have ceased in the Church. There is no man who is authorized to perform a plura marriage. No man and no woman have the authority to have this ceremony performed for them. We have been doing all in our power to stop this.

Now, as we are informed by readers of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD in Idaho Falls and Salt Lake City (who, though non-Mormons, have lived for many years among these people), the marriages referred to were not polygamous marriages, but unions solemnized under the civil law. In all of these 1,100 cases, the principals were young members of Mormon families who for their own reasons chose to be wedded by the civil ceremony, instead of the Mormon service in the Temple. They were civil marriages of monogamists and had no reference to polygamy whatsoever. Further, the writers assure us that the Mormon Church is honestly trying to obey the decision of the United States Supreme Court, declaring plural marriages unlawful. These facts, together with the explanation given above, give a new meaning to the speech at Conference which has been so widely misunderstood. It is only just to all that the truth should be known, and THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, which believes in presenting both sides of every case, takes this opportunity of giving "the other side," so that it may not be said that the Mormons have been unfairly held up to criticism for a palpable misunderstanding of terms instead of a real fault.

General Note

—THE YOUNG MEN'S BUSINESS Association of Port Huron, Mich., has received the acceptance of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Premier of Canada, to visit Port Huron in September the same day that President Taft will be there. In view of the general interest in the pending reciprocity treaty the announcement that President Taft and Premier Laurier are to be in that city on the same day has received extraordinary attention.

Contents of this Number

Wednesday, June 14, 1911

	PAGE
Our Mail-Bag	606
Has the Lost Ark Been Found? (Illustrated)	607
A Rich Inheritance. Sermon By Rev. H. P. Lyman Wheaton, D.D.	608
Rivers of Life. By Eugene Thwing	609
In the Land of the Little Folk (Illustrated) By Allan N. Cameron	610
Washington's Philanthropic Women (Illustrated) By Abby Gunn Baker	611
OUR EDITORIAL FORUM	612
THE BIBLE AND NEWSPAPER (Illustrated)	613
A Great Sunday School Convention (Illustrated)	614
Coney Island After the Big Fire (Illustrated)	615
The Bowery Mission's New Field. By J. G. Hallimond	616
Talks on the Cool Veranda (Illustrated) By Margaret E. Sangster	617
Quelling the Revolt in Morocco (Illustrated)	618
A Notable Ohio Bible Class (Illustrated)	618
Our Boys and Girls (Illustrated) By Miss Janet Porter	620
The Angel of the Four-Horse Dray By Frederick M. Holmes	621, 623
The Way to Serve God Sunday School Lesson, by Dr. and Mrs. W. F. Crafts	622, 625
The Tobacco Trust Must Dissolve	623
The Winning of the Great Race (Portrait)	626
Young People's Societies	627

THE BIBLE AND NEWSPAPER

Conducted by FERDINAND C. IGLEHART, D.D.

Bright Outlook for Mexico

WHEN the revolution began in Mexico it was thought that Diaz would manifest his accustomed wisdom and courage, and that his administration was so well organized that he would make short work of the insurrection, but the opposite has been true. Old age relaxed his grip on things and men. The despotism under which he had ruled the republic for a generation had wrought deep injury and provoked well-nigh universal resentment, and in an incredibly short time the political convulsion threw him from the summit of his glory and power to the ground, and he is to-day in Spain, an exile from home. His letter to the President of the Chamber of Deputies was one of the most pathetic messages ever written, and will be a memorable document in Mexican history, containing hints of the man's greatness, a true record of his marvelous deeds in building modern Mexico and in giving to it such material wealth, general education and widespread happiness. The letter closes with these significant words: "I hope, gentlemen, that when the passions which are inherent to all revolutions have been calmed, a more conscientious and justified study will bring out in the national mind a correct acknowledgment, which will allow me to die, carrying engraved in my soul a just impression of the estimation of my life, which throughout I have devoted, and will devote, to my countrymen." The letter and spirit of this dramatic farewell of the late President has opened the way auspiciously for his successors, Francisco de la Barra as Provisional President, with Madero, who exerts the largest power of any individual in the country, as his adviser. The new authorities are setting themselves in good earnest to the task of restoring peace to the country, subduing the revolutions against the revolutionists, rebuilding the telegraphs and railroads, administering all public affairs and preparing for a general election which is likely to be beset with perils, and all within six months' time. An electoral system must be contrived. The governors of the various provinces, who have only acted as the tools of Diaz, must have their independence and duties better defined, the corrupt politicians and judges and men who have enriched themselves by the privileges of the late administration must be checked, and the people must have a fair and free election. These things, we believe, Mexico will have as the immediate result of the revolution. What a pity that Diaz did not see the handwriting on the wall; that he did not realize that neither the times nor his great nation would tolerate despotism; that he did not appreciate the fact that he was too old to keep up the pace of his nation's progress or adjust himself to his new conditions. Then he could have saved the contests in the provinces and the riot and bloodshed in his beautiful capital and claim an honorable retirement as the greatest man, ruler and benefactor Mexico ever had. The mutabilities of time, the insecurity of earthly estate, the vanity of earthly glory, are illustrated in the overthrow of a man who was for more than thirty years one of the most popular rulers of the world, and whose nation under his authority enjoyed a period of prosperity scarcely equaled. The prophet thus enforces these lessons:

Say unto the king and to the queen, Humble yourselves, sit down: for your principalities shall come down, even the crown of your glory. (Jer. 13 : 18.)

Paid an Old Debt

Jimmy Osborne, a little lad on his father's plantation in North Carolina, fell into the river and was drowning, when one of his father's slaves jumped into the water and rescued him. Almost half a century later, a son of this old slave killed a man and was put on trial for his life in a court in New York City presided over by Judge Crain. One of New York's leading lawyers, Hon. James W. Osborne, a former assistant district attorney, was employed to defend him. The attorney seemed glad to defend this son of his old rescuer, and thus pay back somewhat of the debt, the full measure of which he felt could never be met. The jury was out only a few moments and brought back a verdict of acquittal, believing that the young man had acted in self-defense. If we are good to the children of others there is a strong likelihood that others will be good to our children. The books are not always balanced in this life, nor is there always visible exchange of value for value; but the strong tendency, even here in this world, is to get back what we give in service or in love, in things temporal or spiritual. The likelihood of being paid back what we give is suggested by the words:

He that hath pity upon the poor lendeth unto the Lord; and that which he hath given will he pay him again. (Prov. 19: 17.)

Wireless Belting the Earth

A wireless message was sent from Glace Bay, N. S., to Dakar on the coast of French Western Africa. The message was sent from Glace Bay to the Eiffel Tower Station in Paris and from there relayed to Dakar Station, the message going in just sixty seconds. The experiment was so successful that it is announced that the British dependencies will be linked together by wireless and that sixty or seventy new stations will be erected to make the wireless circuit of the globe. There are scarcely any of the scientific discoveries of the times that do not magnify God's wisdom and bring about a closer relationship between the Uncreated and the created mind. It does not tax the faith of the person who credits the scientific fact of the wireless circuit of the globe, to believe in man's ability to speak to his Creator and listen to His voice in return.

I will fetch my knowledge from afar, and will ascribe righteousness to my Maker. (Job 36 : 3.)

Copyright by Underwood & Underwood, New York

United Troops of Mexico Passing Through One of Mexico City's Streets

Paradise for Cranes

Fifty sandhill cranes have a paradise for themselves and their young in the tall white oak trees on the farm of Anton Schildmeier near Indianapolis. The oak grove covers seventy-five acres and the trees are almost 100 years old, some of them 150 feet in height. These birds have come back from the South to their Northern paradise in the trees, where hang their nests, woven of sticks and weeds, large as a bushel basket. Mr. Schildmeier is eighty-three years old, and has lived on his present farm seventy-four years. He has secured a competency by his successful farming, but does little else now than spend his time with his trees and his birds. Recently a lumberman offered him $15,000 for the white oak trees in his forest, and was astonished when the old gentleman not only declined the offer, but said he would not take fifteen times $15,000 for them. He said his father brought him over from Germany and that he had spent seventy-five years with those trees, which had grown up with him to maturity, and that he loved them like children. He said they made such a beautiful home for his birds that were so dear to his heart. His woods are also filled with squirrels, rabbits, birds of every plumage and melody; Doe Creek, which flows through the forest, is full of fish, and he spends the evening time of his earthly existence amidst the nature life for which he has made such ample provision, and with Infinite Love, the author of all. This old German presents a beautiful picture; he does not care how many millions of feet of lumber his trees will produce, nor how much a foot he could get for it; he wishes only to drink in the beauty behind them and his birds, and the Personality underneath and around all. The old man had worked hard and laid up enough for his own support and for his family after him, but he took time all his life to feed his soul with the things of the Spirit.

Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God. (Matt. 4: 4.)

Nerves Sewed Together

By a telegram from Trenton, N. J., the statement is made that Dr. G. N. J. Sommer had just sewed together the nerves in the arm of H. L. Jobes and effected a cure for paralysis in his arm. The member had been fractured and paralysis was the result. He came to St. Francis Hospital for examination, where the operation was performed, as a result of which he is able to use his arm as well as before the accident. Medical science is constantly reporting some new discovery. God through secondary causes cured the paralysis of this man's arm with needle and thread. Christ when he was in the world cured the complete paralysis of the body by his own will as a First Cause. The man arose from a complete paralysis at these words of Christ.

I say unto thee, Arise, and take up thy bed, and go thy way into thine house. (Mark 2: 11.)

The Puckerless Persimmon

The Department of Agriculture in this country has performed the feat and the favor of taking the pucker out of the persimmon. Few boys or girls who have lived in the South need to be told how quickly a green persimmon will tie the lips into a knot, and how delicious that fruit is when the hard frost has made it pink and soft. For five years the Agricultural Department has been experimenting, and has just announced its success in removing the pucker from the persimmon. The fruit is put into tanks into which carbon dioxide has been forced and left there three days. Taken out, it is sweeter than a Bartlett pear and will keep three times as long. The dioxide reduces the canin in the fruit to tiny tasteless crystals. This new discovery will make an added delicacy for the bill of fare and a field of profit to the districts where the persimmon tree grows. What an art and heavenly mission it is to kill the bitterness of life with sweet, and to take the pucker out of discordant and discontented minds! A cheerful face and pleasant words out of an unselfish heart have much to do in giving sunshine and sweetness to our fellow-men. This thought has appropriate expression in these words:

Pleasant words are as a honeycomb, sweet to the soul, and health to the bones. (Prov. 16 : 24.)

A Great Sunday School Convention

JOHN STITES
Pres't Int'l Sunday School Convention

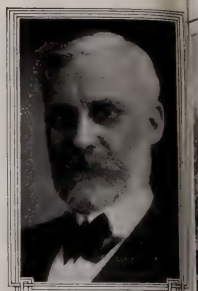
DR. GEORGE W. BAILEY
Treas'r Int'l Sunday School Convention

REV. DR. A. F. SCHAUFFLER
Ch'm. Int'l Sunday School Lesson Com.

REV. DAVID G. DOWNEY, D.D.
Sec'y M. E. Board of Sunday Schools

"THE open Bible and the Uplifted Cross" is the golden theme which will run through all the harmonies of the thirteenth International Sunday School Convention which meets this month in San Francisco, Calif. The proceedings cover a whole week, from June 20 to 27, the changes being rung on a scale of topics apropos of the tercentenary of the Bible; the progress and problems of the Sunday School; the International Lessons; the World's and International Associations; the Sunday School in its relation to the home, to missions, to temperance, to education, and to the pastors. In addition to the general sessions, there will be a special conference of the eight departments of Sunday School work; a Congress of Pastors and of Sunday School Superintendents, and of Personal Purity Workers and of Home Missions.

Over one hundred speakers are listed. They include Rev. Dr. David G. Downey, Chicago, secretary of the Board of Sunday Schools, M. E. Church; Rev. E. M. Ferguson, editorial superintendent Sunday School Missions, Presbyterian Church; W. E. Carpenter, Brazil, Ind., superintendent of a Sunday School numbering 4,000; Dr. George W. Bailey, Philadelphia, World's Sunday School Association president; Rev. Dr. H. H. Bell, San Francisco, vice-president of the National Sunday School Association and chairman of the California General Committee; Rev. Dr. Charles D. Bulla, Nashville, Tenn., superintendent Adult Bible Class Department, M. E. Church, South; Dr. W. A. Duncan, Syracuse, N. Y., founder and chairman of the Home Department; Mr. E. C. Knapp, general secretary Inland Empire Sunday School Association; Mrs. A. A. Lamoreaux, Chicago, general secretary International Elementary Department Committee; Rev. Dr. George Merrill, Minneapolis, secretary executive committee International Sunday School Association; Miss M. E. Kennedy, general secretary, Birmingham, Ala., Sunday School Association; Mr. H. J. Heinz, president Pennsylvania Sabbath School Association; Mr. William Hamilton, Toronto, Ont., chairman Visitation Department Committee; Dr. and Mrs. H. M. Hamill, Nashville; Mrs. Bertha Hegeman, Oakland, and many other secretaries of Sunday School boards; superintendents, chairmen of Sunday School Departments; editors and leaders in the international Sunday School movement. Nearly all of the fifteen members of the International Lesson Committee, Rev. Dr. A. F. Schauffler, chairman, will attend.



Hon. Hiram W. Johnson, governor of California; Mayor McCarthy of San Francisco, Justice MacLaren, of Toronto; and half a dozen bishops of as many different denominations; Principal Rexford, of Montreal; Principal Patrick of Winnipeg; President Hemphill of Louisville; Professor Price, Chicago University; Professor Lampey, Louisville; Professor Tipple, Madison, N. J.; and leaders of temperance and missionary work are also among the speakers.

Work in Mexico, in the West Indies and South America, and among the negroes, which has made great progress during the three years, will be described by the special workers. Mr. John Stites, Louisville, Ky., is the presiding officer.

The first International Sunday School Convention was held in Baltimore, Md., in 1875, with 463 delegates present, twenty of whom were from Canada. The delegates at San Francisco will number 2,000, and will represent Sunday School Associations in the United States, Canada, Mexico, Central America, Cuba, Porto Rico, the Philippines, Hawaii, Alaska, and South America. One of the most interesting reports comes from Mexico, where in 1872 there was not even a railroad from the United States, few schools of any kind, and not one Sunday School. The Bible was a sealed book. Native workers have been trained, lesson helps provided in Spanish, and the Bible has been opened to thousands of eager and attentive adults and children.

Sixteen million members are enrolled in the 275,000 Sunday Schools of North America. Every State in the United States and every province in Canada is elaborately organized for Sunday School work, so that even the remote cross-roads school is brought into touch with the international organization. Every one of the 200 Protestant denominations has now embraced the Sunday School as a factor in the development of Christian character, urging upon parents and guardians the importance of training the children and youth in the knowledge of the Scriptures.

J. A. S.

MARION LAWRANCE
Gen'l Sec'y Int'l Sunday School Ass'n

MISS M. E. KENNEDY
General Secretary

WILLIAM N. HARTSHORN
Chm. 12th Int'l Sunday School Conv'n

DR. MARTIN GROVE BRUMBAUGH
Vice-Pres't Int'l Sunday School Convention

Dr. Jowett's Fearlessness

APROPOS of the opening of Dr. Jowett's New York pastorate, a writer in the London Morning Leader has this to say regarding his fearlessness in the pulpit: "I am sure that Dr. Jowett will not flatter New York. He will not flinch from the hard task of telling it the truth about sin. The word has an archaic sound. One seldom meets it in modern literature. It is nearly as obsolete as Satan himself. But Dr. Jowett is a preacher who is able to make sin seem as real as goodness. I can never forget a sermon he preached in the City Temple, London. He recited twice over the appalling catalogue of sins made out by St. Paul. He applied that catalogue to the modern world. He spoke to a great assembly of men and women with the fearlessness and candor of a Savonarola. He held up sin after sin and denounced them in words that blistered and burned. He did not scourge sin as a vague and nebulous abstraction. He defined it in its awful phases, and connected it with the actual life of living men and living women. He descended into the very hell of wickedness and made men shudder at his valiant ruthlessness. I have never heard plainer speech or bolder condemnation. And yet there was an utter absence of sensationalism. The man was grappling with spiritual death and disease. He was fighting with wild beasts. He was in mortal agony. He suffered in the coils of evil. The serpents of sin were strangling him. And then he rose a victor from the struggle."

TOPICS OF INTEREST THROUGHOUT THE WORLD

—AN INQUEST INTO THE sudden and tragic death on May 29 of Sir William S. Gilbert, the celebrated dramatic author and librettist, was held a few days later. The coroner's jury rendered a verdict that death was due to syncope, brought about by Sir William's overexertion while attempting to rescue one of the women of his bathing party at Harrow, who had got beyond her depth.

—ON MAY 30 THE NATIONAL GIDEON Society shipped 25,000 copies of the Bible to San Francisco. This society is an official adjunct of the Christian Traveling Men's Association of America, the object of which is the placing of a copy of the Bible in every room of all of the hotels in the country. The copies shipped are to be used at the convention of the International Sunday School in San Francisco. There is to be a parade of Bible classes, and it is planned to have every parader carry a copy of the Bible.

THERE WERE POST-ELECTION manifestations in the streets of Lisbon, Portugal, on May 31. A crowd attempted to mob the officers of the newspaper Dia, but the Civil Governor and other authorities intervened and prevented the destruction of property. It is reported that Sir Edward Grey, the British Foreign Secretary, recently told the Portuguese representative in London that the British Government was ready definitely to recognize the Portuguese Republic as soon as the constitution was voted. Foreign Minister Machado announces that the Constituent Assembly will open its sessions on June 19, and that the constitution will be voted by the end of that month. The Chamber will then elect a President of the Republic.

—KING FREDERICK OF DENMARK gave an audience to Rear-Admiral Badger, commander of the squadron of American battleships which is on a visit to Copenhagen on May 31. He expressed his gratification over the visit of the warships, and asked the American commander to convey his greetings and warm appreciation to President Taft. Dr. Maurice F. Egan, the American Minister, gave a dinner to Rear-Admiral Badger and his officers. The function also was attended by members of the Cabinet and Danish naval officers and notables. In the evening large crowds lined the shores to see the brilliantly illuminated warships. The squadron sailed for Stockholm on June 1.

—THE DALAI LAMA OF TIBET, who has heretofore never been interviewed, and whom very few men of white skins have ever seen, while many hundreds of followers hold him to be a deity, has at last had to give up to a pursuer having a newspaper mission. The interviewer is William T. Ellis, an American, formerly of Philadelphia, who saw the Lama, whose full name is Ngag-Wang Lobsang Thubden Gya-Tsho, in the little village of Darjeeling, within sight of the Himalayan snows. His asylum there is one the British have prepared for him, in which they maintain him as their guest. Mr. Ellis was given a long, white scarf of Chinese silk, and bearing this in his arms, thumbs up, he approached the Lama, who was seated on a modern couch. He was allowed to go to within four paces of him. The impression received at this close range of one of the three men of the world who are regarded as divine personages by their followers was not such as to impress the American very deeply. "His face is thoroughly pock-marked," he wrote, "and his ears, which are large and pointed at the top, are his most noticeable feature. His mustache is waxed horizontally, while his head in a lesser personage, would be called bullet-shaped." The Lama's personal cleanliness, however, was remarked by his interviewer, who wrote that "he eats from a golden bowl and drinks from a golden cup, and sleeps between spotlessly white satin sheets."

—AN AMUSING INCIDENT concerning the Grand Duke Wilhelm Ernst of Hesse recently found a place in the news of the world. The Duke is extremely democratic, and delights to go amongst his subjects very plainly dressed and entirely unattended. It happened that on one of these rambles he met and got into conversation with an unemployed clerk. The Duke sympathized with him, and when the talk grew more intimate the stranger, taking his companion for a fellow-clerk, asked if he might ask him for the loan of a little of the German equivalent for "tin"—English slang for money. If he could let him have some, he could probably obtain a job. "Tin" was an entirely new expression to the Grand Duke, who wondered what such a metal could have to do with a clerk obtaining employment. Desirous of discovering the connection, he inquired and received the reply: "Why, I mean 'dough,' of course." This completely nonplussed the Grand Duke, who, not caring to display his ignorance further, remained silent. His companion, thinking he was hesitating, then said: "You need not be afraid. If you will lend me the 'tin' I can buy a suit, and I will repay you out of my first wages, because I can certainly get a job." Then it dawned on the Grand Duke what was wanted, and, without replying, he led the way towards the palace gates. The sentries, much to the young man's astonishment, saluted, and then a gorgeously uniformed official appeared and asked: "What are your Highness's commands?" The Grand Duke replied: "Take this young man to my tailor's and see that he gets a suit and have the bill sent to the palace." Then he said a hearty goodby to the out-of-work clerk and wished him success in his search for employment.

Coney Island After the Big Fire

THE RUINS OF WHAT WAS DREAMLAND, LOOKING ACROSS SURF AVENUE

THE details of the great fire which wipped out a large part of Coney Island, New York's greatest popular shore resort, on May 27, disclosed the fact that it was by all odds the most destructive and most spectacular fire which has ever visited that too frequently fire-swept island. The short account of the conflagration which appeared in the last issue of this paper was written while the fire was still burning and its final results were unknown. Although the disaster brought with it a score of the narrowest kind of escapes, not a single human life was lost. The property losses were variously estimated at from $2,250,000 to upward of $5,000,000.

The Fire Department's last resort, the "2-9" alarm, was turned in by the Deputy Chief in charge of Brooklyn, almost immediately upon his arrival at the scene. The "2-9" means that the alarm telegraph clicks off nine straight taps twice, and in fire parlance it signifies that "every wheel rolls."

It is the first time that "2-9" has been rung for action since a great fire in lower Broadway, in 1904, and the second time in the history of this department.

Owing to the almost prohibitive rate for fire insurance, based upon the admittedly non-fireproof construction, the fire insurance policies carried on all the property in the area laid waste will not, it is believed, amount to more than about one-tenth of the loss.

One of the most startling and at the same time one of the most pitiful features of the fire was the fight for life made by the wild animals of the Ferrari show, known for years to New Yorkers as Bostock's. Black Prince, a widely advertised Nubian lion, one of the largest and most ferocious of the performing herd of the Ferrari show, finished his career on the highest turret of the "Rocky Road to Dublin" show with some seventy bullets in his carcass, and at that he died, not from the lead, but the steel of a fireman's axe wielded by a policeman.

Before his spectacular finish Black Prince furnished the immense crowd which had quickly gathered to view the fire with a thriller. In a mix-up in the runway leading to the arena of the Ferrari show the big Nubian in some manner escaped from the trainers who were trying to beat him along with his fellow captives into the iron-barred arena. By that time the fire had caught his mane and the thicker coatings of his bristly hide, and the pain drove him mad. He burst through the passageway leading to Surf Avenue and headed east without an apparent thought of the hundreds of human beings who started a wild scramble to escape him. At the entrance to the "Rocky Road to Dublin" ride, a hundred yards up the avenue, he turned in and dashed up the spiral obstructions leading to one of the double turrets which adorn that building.

At the top of the incline he halted, but even then he scorned to notice the advancing policemen, who were blazing away at him as swiftly as they could discharge their revolvers. One picked up a fireman's axe as he joined the chase, and with that he smashed two fierce blows on the lion's skull. The Nubian dropped at the first, and if that did not finish him the second blow did, but even then the policemen made sure of their ground by firing a dozen more bullets into his prostrate body.

Ferrari, Captain "Jack" Bonavita and Vincent Refire, the owner and principal animal handler of the Ferrari show, made a brave attempt to rescue the beasts, and, failing in that, to end their sufferings by shooting them to death, but the quick spread of the flames frustrated their humane impulse.

The screamings and trumpetings of the animals as they found themselves hopelessly penned in by the fire reached the ears of the crowd above all the roar of flames and the hissing of the water, and started a second panic but slightly less intense than that engendered by the appearance of Black Prince. Some few of the beasts were herded into their transfer cages and trundled out of the burning park to the quiet safety of a nearby livery stable.

While the wild animal end of the disaster was furnishing perhaps the most exciting part of the spectacle, another life and death drama was being enacted in a quieter but no less heroic fashion in a smaller building between the building where the fire started and the Ferrari show's headquarters.

This was in the baby incubator building, where Dr. S. Fischel and his assistants had five little charges in their care. Two o'clock in the morning is a regular feeding time for these incubator babies, and the three nurses on duty at that time were just preparing to attend to that important function.

Something or other, he doesn't know just what, started Dr. Fischel out of a sound sleep, and he jumped to his window just in time to see a watchman running to the fire alarm box. The doctor dashed to the incubator room, and bundling up two of the babies in his arms directed the handling of the other three by the nurses who were there, and the little procession started for safety. Later in the morning the babies were sent by taxicab to the New York Infant's Hospital, in Manhattan, where they were reported to be "all doing well."

Through a preliminary investigation by the Deputy Fire Marshal, instituted immediately after the fire had been checked, it was learned that a slight explosion presumably resulting from a short circuit of the electric wires in a tunnel of one of the show places was the cause of the costly blaze.

Extinguishing the Last Flames Amongst the Ruins

THE BOWERY MISSION'S NEW FIELD

IT OPENS A FREE LABOR SETTLEMENT FOR THE WORKLESS

THE problem that faces the workers of the Bowery Mission with ceaseless persistence is that of finding work for the unemployed. All but a very small fraction of the multitude to whom the Mission ministers belong to this class.

It is an easy thing to write and speak of them as a class, but it is when you get down to the individual, as mission workers are obliged to do, that you begin to realize something of the unspeakable agony of being without, as Tennyson described it, "the means whereby to live." It means not only, in many cases, a great deal of physical suffering, but, what is worse, the utter breakdown of the spiritual element in the man, the eclipse of the soul, the loss of hope, and the dragging downward of the divine principle of life, until it becomes a mere material, animal existence. Unemployment means destitution, dirt, disease, degradation, and death.

The first duty, therefore, of the Mission to men who have accepted its Gospel of spiritual life in Christ is to help them to secure employment. For over three years, the Free Labor Bureau has been organized, and during that time has found positions for nearly eleven thousand men, many of them in permanent places in the country at living wages. With few exceptions these men have made good. The number of positions in country places would have been much greater had not the difficulty of transportation intervened. In every case employers are expected to pay transportation charges. The Mission charges no fee, either to employer or employee.

The heavy responsibility, however, of caring for the men, feeding and sheltering them until positions are found; then fitting them out with proper clothing with which to assume their new duties, has fallen upon the shoulders of the Mission. This has been, and is still, an anxious, onerous and costly undertaking. Many of the men, wearied out with waiting, have passed on and no one knows what has become of them.

These considerations have created the necessity for opening out another branch—the Bowery Mission's Labor Settlement. Here men are given temporary work, cared for in a clean, healthy, comfortable Christian home, provided with plain, wholesome food, and kept constantly under kind supervision and the best religious influences; until permanent positions are secured for them. Here, also, it is intended to give a certain amount of training to inefficient men, those who have not in earlier life been fortunate enough to learn a trade, or been the subjects of any educational or disciplinary course of living.

The institution is under the charge of the Rev. Joseph M. Conway, who has had considerable experience with men in connection with the Volunteers of America, the Crittenton Mission, and the National Bible Institute.

We invite the readers of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD to assist this new work of the Bowery Mission by sending as often and as regularly as they possibly can every scrap of cast-off clothing, furniture, books, magazines, etc., they can gather together. The following list of useful articles may help our friends in sending in their contributions. The suggestion is made that goods be packed in barrels and consigned, freight paid, to the Bowery Mission Labor Settlement, 4643 Bronx Boulevard, Wakefield Station, New York Central Railroad, New York City.

Sent to Work on the Labor Settlement

Men's, women's and children's clothing of every kind, hats shoes, overcoats, rain coats, overalls, bed clothing, blankets, sheets counterpanes, comforters, pillow cases, towels, bath towels, kitchen utensils, pictures, carpets, rugs, articles of household furniture, valises, trunks, shaving utensils, toilet articles, provisions, tea coffee, preserves, ham, bacon, canned milk, flour—in fact, about anything that you will no longer need, or are inclined to contribute. It would be a good thing to have a barrel standing handy in some corner of the house, known as the Bowery Mission Barrel, into which any likely article might be placed from time to time. Then, when filled, the barrel could be forwarded as above.

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD will also be pleased to have offers from those interested in the work of the Bowery Mission, who will be willing to undertake the formation of town or village circles of contributors, so that barrels of goods may be regularly sent to help this work along. J. G. HALLIMOND, Superintendent Bowery Mission.

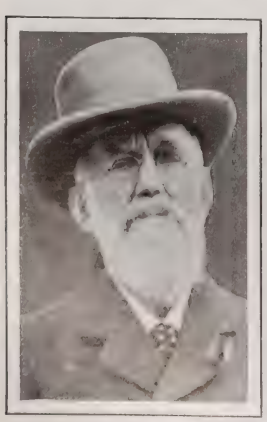
TWO PAIRS OF SHOES

By Pauline Frances Camp

ONE little pair is of dingy hue,
Patched at the heels and toes;
The other is shiny and trim and new,
Gay with buckles and bows.

One little pair, of its beauty shorn,
Treads dustily Tenement Row;
The other's at home on a velvet lawn,
And walks that are white as snow.



The worn little pair has a light, light tread,
When there is some one sick;
But the other one heeds not an aching head,
If it chooses to stamp and kick.

The patched little pair on an errand runs,
To the lilt of a merry song;
Not so do the gay little buckled ones:
They scuffle and drag along.

Now, the secret about these shoes is this:
One is a lady's shoe.
Shall I tell you which pair of the two it is?
Or do you know the secret, too?

DR. JOHN CLIFFORD, OPTIMIST

THERE is no reliable antidote for pessimism. Generally the last thing desired by a person so afflicted is to find a cure. But granted that in any specific case healing were craved, one could prescribe nothing better than a half hour's talk with Dr. John Clifford. Here is a man of seventy-five, who has carried the weight of an unbroken pastorate in the world's metropolis for fifty-three years, going to his field, the Westbourne Park Baptist Church, Paddington, London, direct from his university preparation. Almost countless calls for special service have come from his denomination throughout the British Isles.

Dr. John Clifford

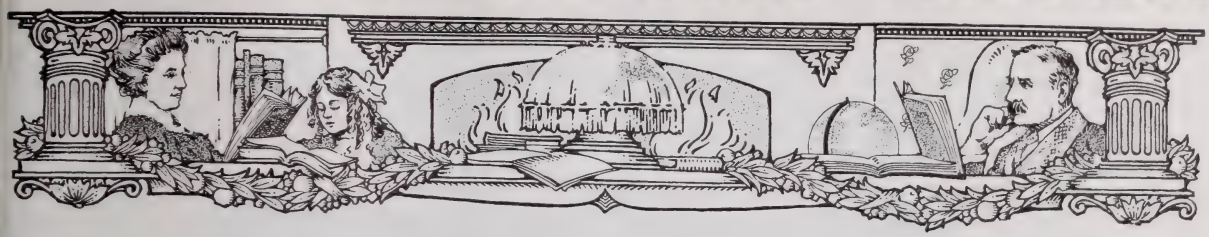
He has allowed himself to be made a very wheel-horse of social reform, and a half dozen great causes, dear to the hearts of the British people, owe as much to him severally for their advancement as to their most active originators, advocates, and promoters. Perhaps more than any other individual he must be counted the pivotal personality that has made possible the Federation of the Free Churches and all the benefits that have flowed from that union. Yet he comes to America at this time and moves through the circle of his engagements seemingly with the freshness, virility, and blithesome ease of one in middle life. The energy of battle is still in his blood, but the unending campaign in which he contends is one for justice, truth, humanity, Christlikeness, brotherhood. Therefore his first utterances during this his third visit to the United States, have been on behalf of universal peace —before a great assembly of ministers in New York City just after he landed, and then at the Mohonk Peace Conference. His one sermon in New York grandly uplifted Jesus Christ as the centre and source of life and light for the race. Among his other main services is a sermon at the Chicago University and his varied duties at Philadelphia, June 18 to 24, as president of the Baptist World's Alliance, in what will doubtless prove one of the most significant meetings ever held by the Baptist hosts of the world.

Dr. Clifford believes that it is now assured that the English Government's Veto bill will be accepted by the House of Lords, and that the way will thus be cleared for the realization of the will of the people. Five great measures of amelioration and progress are almost certain to follow: (1) the abolition of plural voting, so that there will be one man one vote; (2) home rule for Ireland; (3) a new licensing bill that will adequately control the liquor traffic; (4) Welsh disestablishment; (5) a new educational measure, that will do away with unjust taxation as respects the primary schools.

He does not hold with special seriousness the apparent showing that the Free Churches of Britian are at present losing in membership, or making in some cases no advance, or offering in others slight gain. He considers that these results are due in the first place to a new movement of emigration of the active and enterprising to the colonies, especially to Canada.



The growth and assertive influence of the high church party in the Anglican communion is plainly tending to make that body less responsive than in former years toward all forms of dissent. Nevertheless Dr. Clifford, calmly and with a genial twinkle in his deep-set eyes, states that eight million communicants of his particular brand of belief are so illogical as to continue to persist throughout the world, to say nothing of the much larger number of Baptist adherents. Then somehow it happens that especially at this period men who have been born and bred in the realm of dissent have formed the annoying habit of getting into the British Cabinet, such as Premier Asquith, who has clear Congregational connection; Chancellor of the Exchequer Lloyd-George, who is a devoted member of the Baptist Church and regular in attendance at the humble church at his Welsh home and in London; Haldane and Birrell, two other members of the cabinet with close Baptist associations, and John Burns, whose sympathies are clearly with the general realm of dissent.

But, best of all, Dr. Clifford is able to report that five hundred thousand men have been brought into sympathy and co-operation with the Free Churches since the beginning of the Pleasant Sunday Afternoon and Brotherhood movements, fifteen years ago, and the prospect of increasing advance in this direction is most bright. Even technical socialism in Britain is in closest touch with the Free Churches and its leaders have received their first training in the lines of church life and activity.

Dr. Clifford has no unseasoned word to give us about personal immortality —the question that meets the mind of our time perhaps with a new insistence. He rests in the word of our Lord and his apostles, and asks nothing further. But he knows personally and intimately Sir Oliver Lodge and sees a possibility that a form of proof of the life beyond may come that will enhearten with new courage some who are fighting the battle with evil and who may need this added reinforcement of their faith. Dr. Clifford sees no reason why we may not accept it if it comes as a part of that increasing disclosure which God is making of himself and his provision for his children as the ages pass.

REV. CHARLES H. MORGAN, PH.D.

TALKS ON THE COOL VERANDA

Women in Council

By MARGARET E. SANGSTER

NO TOPIC recently considered has awakened so much interest among our readers as that suggested by the sensitiveness of the second wife to the continuance of the first wife's picture in a conspicuous place in the home. Several letters among many are here presented:

A Question of Fairness

"It seems to me absurd to consider a second marriage fair to the memory of a first wife and the removal of a portrait from its accustomed place unfair to that memory. The ability to get another's point of view is a rare gift. No husband could by the farthest stretch of imagination conceive that he was giving his present wife pleasure by keeping her predecessor's picture always in her sight. In my own case my husband had a group picture of himself, his first wife and their children enlarged, and a copy given to each child, so that I have had to gaze at this in several rooms of our home. It is not agreeable to me. In his office my husband has photographs of the entire first family, and I one day laid a picture of mine on his desk, without saying a word. He placed it with the others. I cannot believe that a man would endure the situation patiently were it reversed.

"J. G. S."

A man is much in the habit of accepting a situation as it is. Probably this good husband has not the faintest idea that he is giving pain to his wife, and he will never understand that he does so unless she tells him the fact in plain terms. Suggestions will pass him by unheeded. As for the children, they cannot be blamed for prizing their own mother's picture and liking to have it with that of their father in their own rooms. When a woman marries a second time and becomes a stepmother she must accept everything implied in that condition.

Another View

"I am interested in the situation described in a recent communication to this page. A husband must love his wife deeply and trust her fully, or he would not allude in any way to a former marriage. A case comes to my mind, that of my next door neighbor, who often spoke freely of his first companion in the presence of his second. The second wife entered as heartily into praise of the first as her husband did. The husband explained his feelings in this way: 'I loved Hattie for her own sake and because she was the mother of my children. I love Maggie for hers, because she has filled an aching sense of loneliness in my heart.' S. R."

No doubt this explanation covers the ground, yet it would be in better taste for a man who has been able to repair the waste place in his life, to let a mantle of gentle silence fall over the past.

A Word of Advice

"I want to say to the little woman who cannot bear the sight of the first wife's picture in her drawing-room that she should bravely try to overcome that feeling of repugnance. If she is happily married and her husband is, as we are told, devoted and attentive to her, she should be satisfied. She was aware of her husband's previous marriage before she became his wife, and she should therefore be able to endure his memory of that earlier union. Let me give a brief outline of my own experience. At the age of twenty-two I became the wife of the one man who was 'all the world to me' and who had some years before buried his former wife. He has always loved her memory, and her portrait has hung in our home for nineteen years. Our oldest daughter bears her name. I named her myself. The first wife's portrait has never caused a moment of unhappiness between us. In the light of my nineteen years of wifehood I can say to any one who is making herself unhappy over jealousy of the dead that she is making a most unreasonable mistake. M. B. C."

PLAYING GRANDMA AND GRANDPA

How funny it seems to be playing like this!
Were Grandma and Grandpa once Master and Miss?
Did they ever have fun, did they romp, did they skip,
Did their feet ever fly as our merry feet trip?
There's one thing just certain, they're both very dear,
And mother is sure they grow younger each year.

A Bugle Note

WHAT do our readers think of the following bugle note from a veteran? It ought to shame despondent young people:

"In one of the Comfort Corner articles occurred these words: 'Persons who see themselves distanced in the race by young and strong competitors.' I object. The writer is looking into the wrong end of the telescope. I am seventy-four years old, and I feel that I have distanced all young competitors far away and ahead, and I don't see how they can ever catch up. I am almost there. It can't be many leagues off at the most, and if the young run the allotted race of men, I am at least fifty laps ahead. Do I want to be amused? The world is full of books on the wonderful advance made in science, political economy and religion. Do I wish to meditate? I have the Greek classics, Homer and the Old Testament. Do I wish to speculate on the future realities? I have the Book of Revelation. The young have my sympathy. The road before them is long and dusty. Sharp stones will cut their feet, thorns line the way, the sun will smite them by day and the moon by night. The vexations are all behind me. 'Oh for a well-tuned harp!' The Delectable Mountains are just ahead. Yours for a seat around the throne,

I. W."

Comfort in the Kitchen

IN THE building of houses more attention should be given to the kitchen and the laundry than is usually the custom at present. Many of us are obliged to spend the largest part of the day in the kitchen and it should therefore be sunny and spacious, even if the parlor where we receive our friends loses something of its charm. In other words, the kitchen where the work is done, the dining-room where meals are taken and the living-room where the family commonly assemble, are of more consequence than a reception room used now and then. Every one is aware that the ordinary sink is too low to be comfortably used by the ordinary woman, whether she is mistress or maid. "If I were an architect," said a tired woman the other day, "I would plan my sink so that it should be well lighted and sufficiently high to save me from an aching back." The number of steps that a woman is obliged to take in the course of a single day from closets and pantries to the table, from the refrigerator and the dairy to the cellar and back, are enough to consume the vital energy of an athlete, and many of the steps could be saved were the house more conveniently adjusted to the housework. One of the professors at Cornell indicated to the wife of a farmer an alteration that would save her the necessity of going up and down three steps to her milk-room a dozen times a day. The woman admitted that the change would be beneficial, but shaking her head remarked, "We have always had it this way, and I am afraid the men folks would not take kindly to a change." The fact is that conservatism is at the bottom of the feminine mind, and tradition holds us fast in fetters that we are reluctant to break.

Clean Hands and Faces

THE little ceremony of washing before meals ought to be a matter of course in every well conducted home. Boys as they are growing up are often indifferent to the necessity for clean hands and imagine that if they wash their faces when they get up in the morning they have done their duty for the day. A mother who wishes her children to be refined in manner and neat in appearance should insist on immaculate hands and faces at the table.

The next step from well-washed hands is the assuming a clean jacket or a fresh print dress by the boy or girl, particularly before the evening meal. A little care and attention as to this detail makes for health. Absolute purity should characterize everything about the table, not only in the cooking and serving of the meals, but in the toilet of those who partake.

Quelling the Revolt in Morocco

FRANCE has given a practical reply to the request of Mulai Hafid, Sultan of Morocco, that a force should be dispatched to the relief of Fez, which was recently invested by turbulent tribesmen who would upset the present government if it were in their power to do so. The French column, under the command of General Moinier, which entered Fez on May 21, was fairly well equipped but had a difficult task in hand, and much anxiety was felt both in Paris and in Tangier as to its position. The French Government have declared all along that their sole objects were to deliver their officers in Mulai Hafid's service from the danger in which they stood and to support the government of the Sultan as the only safeguard against chronic and general anarchy in his dominions.

There is nothing in the agreement as to Morocco made at Algeciras five years ago that authorizes France to use force outside the seven ports open to commerce. Even within the so-called police zones recognized in the agreement there was provision only for a relatively small contingent of Morocco police, officered by Frenchmen and Spaniards and under the general command of a Swiss superintendent. The troubles in Morocco long since got beyond the control of such a body. The Sultan invited French assistance, and it has been given to him in the most prompt and efficacious way. A gentleman who recently left Fez says: "The state of affairs now existing is the outcome of an original idea of the heads of the tribes most directly affected to attract, if possible, the attention of the civilized world to their unfortunate position by an armed demonstration. It is significant that there is no general rising in Morocco, for many of the tribes have declined to take part in such a venture, and would never do so unless their particular section of the country were as directly concerned as is that around Fez."

The French force met with no opposition from the rebellious tribesmen besieging the Sultan's southern capital. All the Europeans in the city are safe. The latter part of the march of General Moinier's column was uneventful. With the exception of a few bands of Cherada tribesmen, which were easily dispersed by the artillery, the general rebel forces were not encountered.

It is stated that dissensions had broken out among the rebellious tribes besieging the city, and that they engaged in serious fights among themselves, later separating and going to their villages.

A few days ago a dispatch announced that Spain is attempting to extend her dominion in Morocco and has dispatched two columns of troops from Melilla, one to occupy Ras el Hasian and another to occupy Mulay er Rexid with the object of assuring communications between Selouan and Ain Zaio. A Spanish gunboat in the roadstead off Betoya was fired upon recently by Moors from the beach. The gunboat replied, inflicting heavy losses among the tribesmen.

Morocco is an empire or sultanate which, according to the somewhat vague knowledge possessed, contains about 314,000 square miles, made up chiefly of flat sterile land or steppes and the northern portion of the Sahara Desert. The present reigning Sultan, Mulai Hafid, came to the throne on January 10, 1908, in succession to his brother, Abdul Aziz, who had reigned since 1894.

One of the Gates of Fez by Which the French Entered the City

AMONG THE WORKERS AT HOME AND ABROAD

—SEVENTY-ONE new members were received into the "Old First" Presbyterian Church, Glens Falls, N. Y., at the April communion. All but nineteen were by confession of faith, and several were heads of families. This large accession was the outcome of the regular Lenten services, at which the sermons all bore upon personal surrender to Christ, followed up during the week by faithful pastoral visitation, especially in the homes of those not yet committed to Christ.

—ACCORDING to the prospectus for the Seventh Season of the Tent, Open Air and Shop Campaign, issued this week by the Evangelistic Committee of New York City, this summer's work will begin on Sunday, June 18, and conclude Sunday, September 10. Tents will probably be erected in twenty centres: eight English, seven Italian, one German, two Bohemian-Slovak, one Finnish-Swedish, and one for colored people. Shop meetings are planned for thirty-five centres, and there will be forty-eight open air centres. During the year just closed 1,929 meetings were conducted in eighty-four centres at which there was a total attendance of 2,210,000. These services were conducted in eight languages. No collections are taken in the meetings. The work—which is interdenominational—is maintained by offerings from churches and individuals. Some individuals and churches have undertaken the support of entire centres in the past, some have supported workers, some have provided Bibles, Testaments and Gospel portions, while others have furnished tracts. Last year the receipts were $32,905.34. This year the opportunity for work is even larger than in other years, especially among young people and foreigners. The Committee asks for $40,000 so that the work may be extended, covering the very needy fields suggested. There are said to be in New York City over 800,000 boys and girls who do not attend Catholic, Protestant or Jewish Sunday Schools regularly; 1,395,000 Protestants who seldom if ever go to church; 1,200,000 foreigners who appear to be giving up all religion. To these various classes of non-churchgoers the Evangelistic Committee of New York City carries the message of salvation wherever they may be found—in the street or park or pleasure resort, in the shop or factory, in the tent of the congested tenement districts. Stephen Baker, President of the Bank of the Manhattan Company, has been elected treasurer, to succeed the late John S. Huyler. Headquarters of the Evangelistic Committee of New York City are at 541 Lexington Avenue.

—ON WEDNESDAY, May 17, was celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Business Men's Noon-Day Prayer Meeting in New York. It was held in the old John Street Methodist Church, and over 300 were present. Three Christian business men in 1886 secured premises from the trustees of the church to use as a prayer meeting room. On the 17th of May in that year the first Business Men's Noon-Day Prayer Meeting was held, ninety-five people being present. Many souls have been saved, a multitude of Christians built up, and joy brought to thousands of hearts.

—REV. JOHN P. HENRY, pastor of the Church of All Nations (East Side Parish), 9 Second Avenue, New York, writes to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD concerning the Summer Fresh-Air work of his church at Long Branch, N. J. It has there a home by the seashore to which come poor mothers and children and working girls, Chinese, Hebrew, Italian, Russian and American. The work is supported by voluntary contributions, and all sums sent will be gratefully received and judiciously applied.

—REV. ROSS F. WICKS, who for twelve years was pastor of the large Institutional Church in Dayton, O., his first church, has rented a cottage at Ocean Grove, N. J., where he will spend the summer before taking up a new field of labor.

—AT THE closing service of the Union Evangelistic campaign in Cincinnati, conducted by Rev. Milford H. Lyon of Wheaton, Ill., and his assistants, the pastors declared the series had produced as tangible results as any work the city has ever known. More than seven hundred professed conversion. The eight churches of Norwood have invited Mr. Lyon to conduct a campaign next fall. A large tabernacle will be built.

A Notable Ohio Bible Class

EAST LIVERPOOL, Ohio, has a remarkable Bible class. It has 297 members, and large as the group appears in the photograph, it represents less than the average attendance. The church some time ago proved too small in seating capacity to accommodate this class in addition to the others, so they now use the Carnegie Library of East Liverpool for their meetings. A fine new church building is being erected, however, and this class has pledged $1,000 toward its erection. The large class was organized in March, 1905, with eight members. Rev. E. P. Wise, the pastor, is the founder and leader. In teaching he uses the lecture and question methods combined so as to make the work something of a study and yet not too heavy. Aside from the usual committees, this class has twelve captains, each having a list of members to look after. Mr. James Larcombe is president of the class, Mr. George Firth is the secretary and treasurer, and Mr. James Norton, assistant secretary.

Snider's Tomato Catsup

Makes the best foods better

Pedigreed tomatoes, grown by careful farmers upon plants we furnish them, pure spices, utmost care every step of the way, and the famous Snider recipe —these make Snider's Tomato Catsup superior. Try this

Tomato Sauce

1 tablespoon butter; 1 tablespoon flour; ½ cup Snider's Tomato Catsup; 1 cup hot water. Heat the butter thoroughly in a granite pan, stir in the flour and then add catsup and water. Boil for two minutes, stirring constantly.

The above is delicious upon all cutlets, chops, steaks, veal loaf, and all dishes usually served with tomato sauce.

For Spaghetti and Macaroni add some "snappy" grated cheese. Cut this recipe out and place in your scrap book for reference.

SNIDER
Process
PORK & BEANS
are delicious for luncheon or dinner. Every good housewife should have a dozen cans in the pantry.

* * *

Snider's Chili Sauce adds zest to meats, hot or cold.

* * *

Every good grocer sells and recommends Snider products.

"It's the Process"

THE T. A. SNIDER PRESERVE CO., CINCINNATI, U. S. A.

All Snider Products comply with all Pure Food Laws of the World.

Out of Doors in the Cozy Corner

JUNE

No price is set on the lavish summer;
June may be had by the poorest comer. . . .
Whether we look, or whether we listen,
We hear life murmur, or see it glisten.

The cowslip startles in meadows green,
The buttercup catches the sun in its chalice,
And there's never a leaf nor a blade too mean
To be some happy creature's palace;
The little bird sits at his door in the sun,
Atilt like a blossom among the leaves,
And lets his illumined being o'errun
With the deluge of summer it receives.

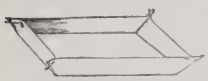
Now is the high tide of the year,
And whatever of life hath ebbed away
Comes flooding back with a ripply cheer,
Into every bare inlet and creek and bay;
Now the heart is so full that a drop overfills it,
We are happy now because God wills it.

LOWELL.

Coronation Chair. Built into the famous Coronation Chair in Westminster is the stone which according to legend Jacob slept upon and set up in Bethel in memory of his dream.

ABRACADABRA! DUM! DUM! DUM!

JUNE is such a busy month in the Cozy Corner. So many delightful letters are crowding in every day from boys and girls over all the world, and every one is more welcome than the other. I found myself wishing this very morning, while sitting at my busy desk, here in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD'S big offices, for a magic carpet which would carry me everywhere that I wanted to go, like the Prince Houssian's wishing carpet in the Arabian Nights. "I would sit upon it," said I to myself, "Abracadabra, dum, dum, dum, and choose to go a-visiting among all my boys and girls in their homes where THE CHRISTIAN HERALD goes." And now let me tell you just what happened. I had not finished thinking of this, when something said to me, "Why, Miss Porter, your wish is answered. THE CHRISTIAN HERALD itself is your magic carpet, and each week it takes you into the homes of your friends." I had never thought of it like that before, but I believe it is true, and I do know that this is the month of magic, and that the Cozy Corner is coming into your homes more laden with good things than ever before.



Meanwhile here is a puzzle. Put on your thinking caps and work it out, for I shall send beautiful little buttonhole American flags of Japanese silk to every one who guesses it.

A Geography Puzzle for Everybody

ONCE upon a time, as they were playing together, (1, a city in Italy) said suddenly to (2, a city in Bulgaria), "I will run you a (3, cape in Newfoundland)." "Very well," said S., "We will start from this (4, city in Arkansas) and run to the (5, mountains in New Hampshire) fence yonder. The prize for the winner shall be a bottle of (6, a city in Germany)." The little girl who proposed the race was doomed to (7, cape in Washington). She lost the prize, (8, a port in Africa) (9, a cape in Greenland) to her little friend, and ran home.

A SIMPLE SCIENTIFIC EXPERIMENT

PAPER will not burn until it is heated many times hotter than boiling water. You cannot make water hotter than 212 degrees Fahrenheit, no matter how much coal or gas you burn under it, until all of the water has been turned into steam, and so, as long as paper is in contact with water, it cannot burn. It is a simple matter, then, to boil water in paper. Take a sheet of paper and pinch up the four corners, fastening them with pins, to form a shallow tray. Place this on a hot stove, and immediately pour water into the tray to a very shallow depth. The paper will not burn until the water has boiled away, because it is cooled below its burning point by the water. The water may try to leak out of the paper, if it is thin, but it will be turned to steam before it can get through.

A Shallow Paper Tray

When you go fishing or camping out for the day, add to your kit a strong manila paper bag or two and some pulverized coffee. Try boiling your coffee in a paper bag. It can be done easily, and hot coffee in the woods is a treat.

Good Things That Are Coming

NEXT week we shall have a page of splendid plans for celebrating a stirring Fourth of July without gunpowder; the week after, it will be a fairy page for the littlest folk of all. After that I shall be telling you how to go camping in the nicest, easiest way. Then there is a Salad and Sandwich Picnic, a Veranda Party, a Merry-Making in the Barn, and the Jolliest Mid-Summer Market to tell you about. Perhaps we shall plan a little later to go a-journeying to some far-away lands in a magic airship from which we shall be sending souvenirs to all of you who write and introduce yourselves to the Aunt in the Cozy Corner. Indeed, there is not room to tell you about all of our plans for the summer. But keep writing to me and enter all our prize contests and I shall be writing many a long newsy letter to the Cozy Corner Family this month. Remember, you may write me as often as you like. I dearly love answering your letters, and am proud to be your friend.

THE SCHOOLHOUSE FLAG

When I am on my way to school,
I always look up high
To see our flag that looks so bright
Against the dark blue sky.

As it floats upon the breeze,
It seems to say to me,
"Where I am, there is honor found;
Where'er I wave, 'tis free."

Then, children, let us love this flag,
Which waves o'er us to-day;
The flag for which our fathers fought
Should honored be alway.

SCHOOL READER.

For Our Very Little Folk

Naughty Pussy

Our peacock's tail is full of eyes
That show him where to go;
In the glow-worm's tail a lantern hangs,
For mother told me so.

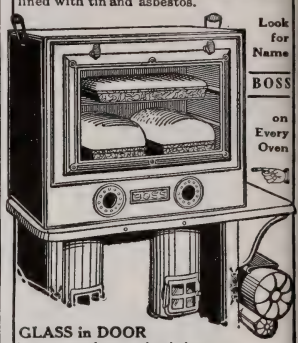
Now, pussy, dear, your furry tail
Is plain and blind and rough;
I am really quite ashamed of it—
I think I'll cut it off.

JUNE PRIZE OFFER

THE Aunt in the Cozy Corner will liberally award prizes of money, best books, games, kodaks, appropriate pictures and toys, etc., etc., for best original work sent in before June 19.

PROSE—subject: "Vacation."
VERSE—subject: "Old Glory" or "The Tin Soldier."
PHOTOGRAPH—subject: "A Good Time."
DRAWING—subject: "A Bird," or a Cozy Corner Heading for July.

Be sure to enter this contest, because: Besides the many beautiful prizes that we shall award our boys and girls, every one who sends in original work, this week and next, and all who write for the first time to Miss Porter (the Aunt in the Cozy Corner) shall receive a set of our beautiful Friendship Post Cards.



The Good-Night Verse this week is "And, behold, I am with thee, and will keep thee whithersoever thou goest; . . . I will not leave thee." It is from the story of Jacob in the twenty-eighth chapter of Genesis. Read the entire beautiful story of Jacob's vision, beginning where he tarried because the sun was set, and put a stone under his head and lay him down to sleep. The story of Jacob's dream is one of the loveliest things in all of Holy Writ.

Hoping to hear from you all this month and promising to answer your letters as they come, I am as ever,

Lovingly and faithfully, The Aunt in the Cozy Corner

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, Bible House, New York.

USE A PORTABLE
BOSS OVEN
With Patented GLASS DOOR
on your stove or range, either oil, gasoline, acetylene, alcohol or gas.
No more spoiled bakings or worry—No more wasted heat—No more jarring or chilling of oven. Housewives can see their baking without opening door. Economy and convenience both guaranteed in the BOSS—a polished blued steel oven lined with tin and asbestos.

Look for Name BOSS on Every Oven

GLASS in DOOR
is guaranteed not to break from heat because it is secured by our patented yielding pressure retaining strips, which permit expansion and contraction. Glass door fits snugly in one piece beaded front, and is held tightly in place with two turnbuckles, preventing escape of heat.

Baking qualities and ventilation superior to any other oven or range. All heat goes right into the oven bottom, and is perfectly distributed to all parts of the oven by means of our patented Heat Deflector. Flame always visible through small mica windows. With the BOSS a baking costs less than a cent. It will many times over pay for itself in saved bakings to say nothing of saved fuel.

Ask YOUR Dealer to show you the BOSS Glass Door Oven. INSIST upon seeing the name "BOSS" stamped in the front of Oven. Then you know that it is genuine and guaranteed.

FREE: Our valuable Recipe Book, containing many cookery helps and full description of BOSS Ovens sent FREE on receipt of postal, plainly written, giving your own and your dealer's names and addresses.

THE HUENEFELD CO. 2712 Spring Grove Ave. Cincinnati, O

Moth Proof Red Cedar Chifforobe
Saves Cold Storage Charges
Sent on 15 Days' Approval

Direct from Factory

Formen and women alike, this elegant Chifforobe will greatly add to their convenience. It is built of fragrant Southern Red Cedar, has air-tight doors. Protects Furs and Clothing Against Moths without use of camphor is dust, damp and mice proof.

We prepay freight and sell direct from factory AT FACTORY PRICES. Write for handsome illustrated catalog—shows many designs in Chifforobes, Highboys, Wardrobes, also wide range Piedmont Red Cedar Chests. Piedmont Red Cedar Chest Co., Dept. 68, Statesville, N. C.

Sell Soft Drinks

Make Big Money
Make it easily, quickly, selling our delicious, healthful drinks at Picnics, Fairs, Parks, Ball Games, Resorts, everywhere. We show you how to start. Our Crescent Orangeade Powder makes finest, richest drink imaginable. Just add cold water and sugar. Fully Guaranteed under Pure Food Law, U. S. Serial No. 11,768. Over 4c profit every glass. Attractive Display Signs Free. Big money selling our powders, etc., to Families, Stores, Restaurants, etc. Send 10c for trial package (enough for one gallon or 17 glasses), with illustrated catalog and valuable information, postpaid. Send at once!
CHAS. T. MORRISSEY & CO.
3406 Ogden Avenue, Chicago

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD
BOND BOOK
WE have received so many requests for copies of the financial articles which have been appearing in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, that we thought it wise to preserve them in pamphlet form. Any reader may secure a copy of this useful booklet without charge by forwarding 4 cents in stamps to cover postage. Address
The Christian Herald, Dept. 96, Bible House, New York

Folding BATH TUB
Costs little, no plumbing, little water. Weight 15 pounds, folds into small roll. Full length bath far better than tin tubs. Lasts for years. Write for special agents offer and description. ROBINSON BATH CABINET CO., 691 Jefferson Ave., Toledo, O.

Wanted a man or woman to act as our information reporter. All or spare time. No experience necessary. Opportunity to earn big money. Nothing to sell. Send stamp for particulars. SALES ASSOCIATION, 166 Association Building, Indianapolis, Ind.

THE ANGEL OF THE FOUR-HORSE DRAY

By FREDERICK M. HOLMES

THE knocking grew sharper, more insistent, at the big hall door.

"Confound the fellow, whoever e is," growled Rodney Markham, busing to a petulant consciousness. What does he want at this time of ight? Why can't he go on about his usiness and let me alone?"

The knocking continued.

"Father!" called a girl's voice hrough the darkness from another oom.

"What is it, Lucy?"

"There is somebody knocking at the all door."

"I hear 'em," growled the father, hough in a milder tone; "it's probably ome tramp trying to get me to the oor to assault me; though I don't now what they'd find to steal in this ouse."

"Perhaps it's some one in trouble," uggested the girl. "You'd better find ut."

"Oh, I'll have to get up, all right," apitulated Mr. Markham. "Hold on here!" he called out of the window; what's the trouble?"

"I'm awfully sorry to disturb you," ame a voice from below, "but I'm on ny way to Plainville with a heavy load, nd my horses are too tired to go any arther. I expected to reach there efore dark, but I had to wait more han five hours on account of that ard rain, and then the roads became oft and made it harder going. If I an only get a place to put in the orses for the night and feed them, I hall be satisfied; I can stay in the arn."

"Wait a minute," called back Mark- am. "Blessed if I know what to tell im," he muttered, as he turned away rom the window.

"Go down and let him put in his orses," urged the girl; "and then, if e looks all right, ask him into the ouse. You know the saying, 'Be not orgetful to entertain strangers; for hereby some have entertained angels unawares.'"

"All right, just as you say, Lucy; we'll entertain this angel, horses and all. I'll be right down," he called out- side.

Hastily dressing and catching up his hat and a lantern, the still sleepy par- ent cautiously opened the hall door and flashed a light on the clear-cut, good-humored features of a young man. One look was enough to disarm all suspicion. "Got two horses, have you?" he asked, as they started from the house.

"Four," replied the stranger. "It's a four-horse dray. I'm taking part of a boiler across country to the Plain- ville Mills; something more than four tons in the load, and the roads are rather bad, too."

"Four horses, hum," mused the farmer. "Well, I can't give you sep- arate stalls for that many. Two of 'em will have to stay on the barn floor, but it's a warm night for this time of year, and we'll make 'em comfortable."

He assisted in unhitching and caring for the tired animals, growing better- humored as his sleepiness passed off; and, when all was finished, invited the young man to the house.

Here the stranger was agreeably surprised to receive an ample lunch, which had been prepared by Lucy; but he was entirely unconscious as to the cause of her slight confusion when Mr. Markham observed that she should have provided angel-cake.

They were up early the next morn- ing and the young man busied himself in caring for his horses while Mark- ham was doing the chores.

"Where did you start from?" asked the farmer, as he came to announce breakfast.

"Hampton," was the answer.

"Make the boiler there?"

"Yes; at Bradford & Conklin's."

Markham's face changed slightly. "You work there?" he inquired.

"Yes, I've been working there a couple of years."

"Is it Richard Bradford?"

"Yes, Richard Bradford."

"Like him, do you?"

"Yes."

"Think he's a good man?"

"I certainly do."

The farmer was silent and they went in to breakfast, where the stranger again apologized for disturbing them on the previous night.

"Never mind about that," returned Markham. "I've had my sleep now, though I did hesitate about turning out at the time. But Lucy settled it; said we might be missing a chance to entertain an angel unawares; so of course I got right up." He glanced waggishly across the table.

The young man flushed slightly. "I believe the word 'angel' is from the Greek angelos, meaning a messenger," he replied; "that was probably the sense in which it was meant."

"Is it customary for teamsters to understand Greek nowadays?" in- quired Markham.

"Not that I know of," returned the other, smiling; "and my knowledge of it is slight; still it doesn't interfere with my work."

"I'm sure of that," responded the farmer, heartily; for he was begin- ning to like this frank, manly fellow. But after breakfast, Markham's face grew more serious as he was helping the young man to get ready to leave.

"I wish I could ask you to come here and see us again," he said, "but I can't."

"No?" inquiringly.

"No, I can't," replied Markham; "not but what we'd be glad to see you," he added, hastily; "but you were lucky in reaching here last night and not two weeks from now."

"Why?"

"Foreclosure," was the terse answer; "we're through here; closed out; got to move."

"How comes that?"

"Well, it's connected in a way with that same Richard Bradford, of Brad- ford & Conklin, your honorable em- ployer. You see we did business to- gether once and I thought as much of him then as you seem to now. It was Bradford & Markham then, and we invested some surplus money in indus- trial stocks. Bradford was a good judge of such investments, and they paid. When we dissolved I took my share almost entirely in the stock of one company that was paying well. Bradford told me soon after that a rival company had been organized, but I was busy and paid little attention to it. I came out here and got this place, intending to pay for it out of the stock. The first thing I knew I read in the papers that the Chambers Manufac- tures Company had failed for a large sum and they were coming back on the stockholders. That stock was about all I owned, and I had nothing to pay any assessment with. I had left Hamp- ton; scarcely any one knew where I was; the manufacturing company was hundreds of miles away; so I just kept quiet. They never found me, although I heard from a friend two years ago that some one representing the Cham- bers Company was still looking for me. Perhaps it would have been as well if they had found me, for I was depend- ing on the proceeds of that stock to pay for this place. As it was, I had to mortgage it heavily, and we struggled along in a losing contest for years, and

Continued on page 623

KINGSFORD'S
CORN STARCH

The creamy delicacy of Kingsford's Corn Starch desserts is exactly the right contrast for the tart of fresh fruits and berries. The combination is refreshing to the eye and the palate. Besides, one box of berries will serve the whole family when used with a Kingsford's custard or Blanc Mange.

As a careful housewife you will look to the quality of the berries, but how about the quality of the custard or Blanc Mange. The entire suc- cess of these desserts depends upon the delicacy and purity of the corn starch. Kingsford's has meant supreme quality in corn starch for over sixty years. Yet women will accept inferior substitutes or low-grade corn starches and pay the same price as for Kingsford's. You doubtless ask for Kingsford's, why not insist in getting it?

KINGSFORD'S PUDDING—3 cups scalded milk, 6 level tablespoons Kingsford's Corn Starch, ¼ cup cold milk, ½ cup sugar, ¼ teaspoon salt, 2 eggs, 1 teaspoonful vanilla. Mix corn starch with cold milk. Stir the scalded milk into this mixture, return to double boiler and stir constantly till it thickens. Cook eight minutes. Beat the eggs slightly, add sugar and salt. Add to corn starch mixture and cook one minute longer. Take from fire and add vanilla. Serve cold with cream and sugar and berries. (Serve six persons.)

Send for Cook Book O—168 of the best recipes you ever tried. It's free—just send your name on a post card.

T. KINGSFORD & SON, National Starch Company, Successors, OSWEGO, N. Y.

5% Compounded Semi-Annually

is quite often better than 6% simple interest. Why tie up your money in a 6% mortgage, when for eighteen years we have never paid less than 5% compounded semi-annually, to depositors all over the world. Your earnings become greater, and your money cannot be safer than with this Company.

Assets of Over $2,300,000

The New York State Banking Department supervises this Com- pany; all loans and investments made under the strongest New York laws. Money withdrawable on short notice; earnings allow- ed for every day. Make your idle money work. Write for booklet.

Industrial Savings & Loan Co.
2 Times Bldg., B'way & 42d St., New York

INDUSTRIAL SAVINGS & LOAN CO. NEW YORK CITY

PATENT YOUR IDEAS

$8,500 for one invention. Book, "How to Obtain a Patent" and "What to Invent" sent free. Send rough sketch for free report as to patentability. Patents advertised for sale at our expense in fourteen Manufacturers' Journals.

Patent Obtained or Fee Returned
CHANDLEE & CHANDLEE, Patent Att'ys
Established 16 Years
916 F. Street, Washington, D. C.

STAMMERING
Habit Permanently Corrected

Natural speech taught. No beating time, drawling or other tricks. Reed Method being introduced into public schools. Department for training teachers. In- struction educational, scientific, systematic, progressive, thorough. Endorsed by highest authorities. Special summer classes for children. Trial Week Free.

REED SCHOOL 367 Hubbard Ave., DETROIT, MICH.

MARVEL SOLDER
INSTANTLY MENDS ALL LEAKS

In all kinds of household utensils—enameled, tin, iron, copper, brass, etc. Solders Without Heat. Just squeeze from tube and spread over hole or crack with fingers. Hardening, it makes solid, smooth surface. Patches all machinery. Fine for motorists. Send 10c for trial tube. AGENTS WANTED.

MARVEL SOLDER CO.
1937 Broadway Dept. 8 New York

UNLESS IT'S Duplex ROTARY RICHMOND, VA. DE IT'S AN IMITATION

Specify "Duplex-Richmond"
999 times out of 1000 when you bear the Duplex Envelope System of Church Collections commended, reference is made to the original sys- tem published solely by DUPLEX—Richmond, Va.

10 CENTS A DAY

buys the Pittsburgh Visible Typewriter. Made in our own factory at Kittanning, Pa. $65 now—later the price will be $100. The best typewriter in the world, far excels any $100 machine made. Entire line visible. Back spacer, tabulator, two color ribbon, universal keyboard, etc. Agents wanted everywhere. One Pittsburgh Visible Machine FREE for a very small service. No selling necessary.

To Get One FREE and to learn of our easy terms and full particulars regarding this unprecedented offer, say to us in a letter, "Mail your FREE OFFER."

THE PITTSBURGH VISIBLE TYPEWRITER COMPANY
Dept. 30, Union Bank Building. Established 20 Years. PITTSBURGH, PA.

YOU CAN AFFORD to have a new Song Book in your Church or Sunday School, and one for every person when you can get "FAMILIAR SONGS OF THE GOSPEL" for $3 for 100. Words and music, 83 very best songs. Sample copy 5 Cents. E. A. K. Hackett, 100 North Wayne St., Fort Wayne, Ind.

The Way to Serve God*

Sunday School Lesson by Dr. and Mrs. Wilbur F. Crafts

HOW did Elisha do justly, love mercy, and walk humbly with his God? When Naaman, the great general, came to him to be healed, he did not refuse to help him because he was a Syrian. When those who had been seeking his life were blind prisoners in Samaria, and the king prepared to kill them, Elisha said, "No, but give them food to eat, and water to drink, and then let them be free, to return to their own land." In the hour of danger Elisha fully trusted his God, and prayed that his servant might have the same vision.

How Joash Served God

How did King Joash do justly, love mercy, and walk humbly with his God? He learned to serve his God during the six years of his childhood that he dwelt in God's temple under the care of Jehoiada the high priest, his uncle, and his aunt Jehosheba. He was crowned at seven years of age, and as long as Jehoiada lived to be his guide and counselor, the young king wholly followed the Lord. But after the death of the high priest, his uncle, he allowed himself to be influenced by his wicked courtiers. He dealt justly by his people in enlisting them to repair the temple. He aroused a great enthusiasm among them to do it, and they brought great treasures of gold, silver, etc., which King Joash had weighed and wisely distributed among those who were to do the work. And it is recorded that "they dealt faithfully." King Joash was both just and merciful to the priests who officiated in the temple, for he gave special care that they should receive their portions, according to the law of Moses.

What shall we say of Jonah? He did not do justly, he did not show mercy, and he did not walk humbly with his God. He rebelled against God when God told him to go and preach saving truth to the people of Nineveh. He had no compassion on the people. After God had imprisoned him for three days in the body of the whale and then released him, he did go to Nineveh, but he was not cured of his evil spirit, for after he had preached the Word of God, and the people turned from their wickedness, Jonah sulked on the outskirts of the city, because the people of Nineveh took the chance which God gave them to repent of their sins and save their city.

King Uzziah's Service

Now what of King Uzziah? He was crowned king when he was only sixteen years of age, and he reigned fifty-two years in Jerusalem. He showed justice and mercy to his people by building towers and strongly fortifying the city against their enemies, making Jerusalem a safe place for them to dwell in. Throughout the whole of his kingdom he looked after the well-being of his people by the conservation of their fields and vineyards and flocks; and by what we call in our day a "reclamation service," he provided the people with water by means of a series of cisterns. But alas! there came a time when King Uzziah praised himself instead of God; then God had to punish him by making him a leper, and he was a leper until he died.

How was it with the prophet Isaiah? "Here am I, send me." These were the words he spoke out of his heart whenever God made known there was something to be done for the good of men, some errand for God; and in this way he was active for fifty years or more. He dealt justly with the people by telling them of their sins, and warning them of the sorrow and desolation they were bringing upon themselves. He set before the people the mercy of God as no prophet before him had done.

There was Micah, the prophet of peace. He sounded a note in that long ago which has not ceased its reverberation, if it is not really growing stronger, and reaching further and further around the world, echoing "Peace, peace, peace, in Jesus Christ, the Prince of peace." Micah prophesied "a time when there shall be no more war," and people shall "do justly and love mercy."

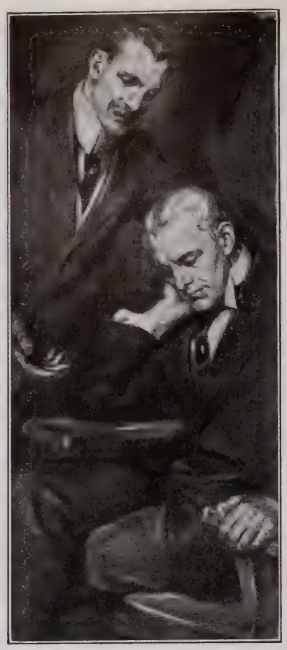
There was, too, the prophet Hosea, whose words of warning to the people of Israel were like the tolling of a funeral bell. While he was delivering his messages of warning and doom his own soul was sad because of his message, but he felt it his duty to deal justly, to love mercy, and to walk humbly with God.

Hezekiah, the Just Servant

What shall we say of the great King Hezekiah? He had a great faith in God and a great hope in the people. He deidolized his whole kingdom, made it as bare of idols as a land that is deforested. He dealt mercifully with those who had long been alienated from God and the temple, worshiping at the shrines of the calves set up by Jeroboam. He invited them to come back, and participate in the great Passover, the like of which had not been known since the days of Solomon. Many of them came, and there was great rejoicing. Need we wonder that when Hezekiah was about to die, he prayed for fifteen years more of life in which to serve God and the people, and that God heard and answered his prayer?

At last we come to the stiffnecked, hard-hearted people who would have none of God, even those of the kingdom of Israel, who were wholly given up to idols. They had no place in their lives for justice and mercy to others, nor for the service of God. They heeded not the warnings of Isaiah, Micah and Hosea, and were overcome by a foreign foe even in their capital city Samaria, and taken prisoners to a far-away land, never to return; so completely lost that no one has ever been able to find them, though the search has gone on for centuries.

On which side of the line have we placed ourselves? Are we among those who deal justly, love mercy, and walk humbly with God, or are we with those who do not?



Balaam, the Stubborn Servant

Let us read the story of the ass on which Balaam was riding, as a mere hireling on his way to curse Israel for a reward offered by the king of Moab. (Num. 22: 1-35.) "Thou shalt not curse the people," God had said to Balaam. Nevertheless he went right on. The ass was wiser than Balaam, for she thrust herself against the wall, and crushed Balaam's foot, and when Balaam beat the ass, she spoke the words which God put into her mouth: "What have I done unto thee, that thou hast smitten me three times? Am I not thine ass, upon which thou hast ridden all thy life long unto this day?" etc. Then the Lord opened the eyes of Balaam, and he saw an angel in the way who had come directly from heaven with a message from God, that he should speak for the king of Moab only the words which God should give him to speak, and they were words of blessing instead of cursing for the Israelites, and great was the anger of the king of Moab.

A writer in Our Dumb Animals tells

Continued on page 625

* The Quarterly Review for June 25, 1911. GOLDEN TEXT: "What doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God?" Micah 6:8.

HON. JOHN W. KERN,

U. S. Senator from Indiana, writes:—

"As a restorative and tonic, Sanatogen has been of real benefit to me. I feel sure that this preparation is deserving all the praise that has been bestowed on it."

HIS EXCELLENCY, PROF. DR. VON LEYDEN

Director First Medical Clinic, Berlin University, writes:

"I have gladly and frequently prescribed Sanatogen in cases of delicate patients, in my clinical as well as my private practice, and am extremely satisfied with the results."

REV. H. N. COUDEN

Chaplain National House of Representatives, Washington, D. C., writes:—

"Your Sanatogen is admirable. It has been taken with excellent results by a member of my family who felt the need for a strengthening tonic. For overworked people especially Sanatogen should be a great boon."

"I know that Sanatogen will help you"—

THUS speaks conviction born of experience. The man who has watched and felt the revitalizing power of Sanatogen is the man who with sincerity and enthusiasm will recommend its use to others, because he knows that Sanatogen is the true reconstructor of a nervous system weakened by worry, overwork or disease. He himself has felt the benefits of its use, has felt its wonderful tonic action, its upbuilding, rejuvenating effect, its remarkable power to regenerate digestion and assimilation.

Personal recommendation lies behind Sanatogen's amazing success. Physicians recommend it (15,000 of them have stated so over their own signatures), leading brainworkers endorse it, men and women everywhere, in every corner of the globe, are earnest in its praise.

Sanatogen is today the most widely recommended article of its kind because it "makes good" and it is able to do so because it is the only true, scientific food-tonic. Sanatogen represents a scientific union of pure albumen of milk and glycero-phosphate of sodium—the two vital essentials of nerve repair—in completely assimilable form. There is no duplicate or substitute for Sanatogen because Sanatogen marks a discovery and as such is protected by U. S. Letters Patent.

People of judgment no longer buy "some tonic," they buy the tonic—they buy the food-tonic Sanatogen, because they know that Sanatogen feeds and reconstructs where the ordinary "bracer" stimulates and depresses. YOU who are run-down, nervous or dyspeptic—should grasp the helping hand of Sanatogen. Get a trial box today and so lay the foundation for better health, better strength, greater vitality, greater happiness.

Sanatogen is sold by all leading druggists at $1.00, $1.90, and $3.60

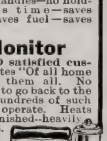
Write for a FREE copy of "Our Nerves of Tomorrow"

The work of a physician-author, written in an absorbingly interesting style, beautifully illustrated and containing facts and information of vital interest to you. This book also contains evidence of the value of Sanatogen which is as remarkable as it is conclusive.

THE BAUER CHEMICAL CO.
Everett Building, Fourth Avenue, NEW YORK

IRON WITHOUT A FIRE

PLEASANT SIMPLE EASY



at a cost of only one cent. No hot stove—no stuffy, suffocating kitchen—no burned hands—dirty blaze, scorched irons—no changing of irons or handles—no holders. Saves time—saves strength—saves fuel—saves money.

The Improved Monitor

Self-Heating. Used by 275,000 satisfied customers. Mrs. C. Wilcox, Neb., writes "Of all home conveniences the Monitor leads them all. No amount of money could induce me to go back to the old way of ironing". We have hundreds of such letters. The Monitor is easy to operate. Heats instantly. Highest quality—finely finished—heavily nickel plated. A pleasure to use it.

Agents wanted everywhere. Rapid, easy seller. Big profits. Write for big circular and territory.

The Monitor Sad Iron Co.
69 Wayne St. Big Prairie, O.

I Was Deaf 25 Years
NOW I HEAR PLAINLY

with this artificial EARDRUM in my ears. I never feel them—they are perfectly comfortable, and no one sees them. I will tell you the true story, how I got deaf, and how I made myself hear.

Medicated Ear Drum Pat. July 15, 1908

ARTIFICIAL EAR DRUM COMPANY
2 ADELAIDE STREET DETROIT, MICH.

Does Your Granite Dish or Hot Water Bag Leak?

Don't Throw It Away

MENDETS

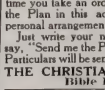
Mend all leaks instantly in graniteware, hot water bags, tin, copper, cooking utensils, etc. No heat, solder, cement or rivet. Any one can use them. Fit any surface. Smooth. Sample box, 10c. Complete box, asstd. sizes, 25c, postpaid. Wonderful opportunity for live agents. Write today. Collette Mfg. Co., Box 122 Amsterdam, N.Y.

A WAY TO MAKE MONEY

IF YOU desire to increase your income so that you can earn more, have more, and save more, you will most likely be interested in our Plan.

It isn't a plan that will start you up in business and immediately produce large profits. Those opportunities are still as scarce as ever. It is, however, a straightforward opportunity that is worth looking into. It isn't a "something for nothing" scheme. But it has splendid possibilities. There is no catch about it; it is plain, simple and easy. There is something to sell and some talking to do. But it's good work—fine, glorious work! You'll enjoy it! And you'll be making money every time you take an order. We don't want to tell you all about the Plan in this advertisement; we prefer to make it a personal arrangement between us.

Just write your name and address on a postal card, and say, "Send me the Plan for those who want to make money." Particulars will be sent to you gladly without cost. Do it now.



THE CHRISTIAN HERALD AGENCY DEPT., Bible House, New York City

5 Beautiful Geraniums by Mail for 25c

Or 6 Beautiful Fuchias, - 25c
6 Splendid Carnations, - 25c
6 Best Chrysanthemums, 25c
12 Pansy Plants, - - 25c
30 Early Cabbage Plants, 25c
6 Scarlet Sages, - - 25c
6 Mixed Petunias, - 25c
6 Mixed Coleus, - - 25c
6 Fancy Verbenias, - 25c
30 Red Tomato Plants, 25c
Any Five Collections for $1.00, Postpaid. Catalog FREE.
ALONZO BRYAN, - Florist, - WASHINGTON, N. J

Ideal Folding BATH TUB

Pat. Pending

For houses without baths, campers, sportsmen, cold water flats. Use in any room. Light, lasts years. Write for Low introductory offer.
N. O. Y. BATH MFG. CO. 103 Chambers St., N. Y.

BE AN ILLUSTRATOR—Learn to draw. We will teach you by mail how to draw for magazines and newspapers. Send for Catalog. School of Illustration, 44 Page Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

The Tobacco Trust Must Dissolve

THESE are days when the wicked trusts are coming to judgment. The United States Supreme Court on May 29 decided that the American Tobacco Company, with all the corporations and individuals that compose it, is a combination "in restraint of trade," within the prohibitive meaning of the Sherman Anti-Trust Act, and that it must be dissolved. Six, or, if necessary, eight months will be allowed for the disintegration process, the filing which production by the concern may be enjoined and a receiver be appointed. In this sweeping decision were included the United Cigar Stores Company, the British American Tobacco Company and its subsidiary concerns which were excluded by the finding of the lower court.

Justice Harlan coincides with the general decision, though dissenting on two points. He opposes the delegating to the lower court of discretion "to ascertain whether new conditions cannot be recreated in harmony with the law." This he declares was unnecessary, as there was sufficient evidence before the Supreme Court to enable it to decide. He declares that the application of the "rule of reason" is practically new legislation and defeats the will of Congress.

Chief Justice White, who delivered the opinion, gives an extended review of the case, and reaffirms the principle we laid down in the Standard Oil decision, that the Anti-Trust law "must be construed emphatically by the rule of reason." Literal construction, he argues, would render impossible that broad application of the law which enabled the court to find the American Tobacco Company and its subsidiary corporations in violation of the statute. The opinion continues:

> Indeed, the necessity for not departing in this case from the standard of the rule of reason, which is universal in its application, is so plainly required in order to give effect to the remedial purposes which the act under consideration contemplates, and to prevent that act from destroying all liberty of contract and all substantial rights of trade, and thus causing the act to be at war with itself by annihilating the fundamental right of freedom to trade which, on the very face of the act, it was enacted to preserve, is illustrated by the record before us. In truth, the plain demonstration which this record gives of the injury which would arise from and the promotion of the wrongs which the statute was intended to guard against which would result in giving to the statute a narrow, unreasoning and unheard-of construction, as illustrated by the record before us, if possible serves to strengthen our conviction as to the correctness of the rule of construction, the rule of reason, which was applied in the Standard Oil case, the application of which rule to the statute we now, in the most unequivocal terms, re-express and reaffirm.

Applying this "rule of reason" to the Tobacco Trust, the opinion pronounces the evidence of wrongful purpose and illegal combination overwhelmingly established. The entry of others into the trade was blocked by the control of the whole product by the purchase of plants for closing and not for operation and by various other illegal methods which constituted "unreasonable" and criminal restraint of trade.

Attorney-General Wickersham says the opinion of the Supreme Court sustains the government in a comprehensive and sweeping manner. It condemns the Tobacco Trust on the ground of planning and acquiring illegal domination and control of the trade, of driving competitors out of business by working upon their fears or their cupidity and of exercising restraint of trade within the first section of the Sherman Act.

There are sixty-four allied corporations in the Trust, two in Great Britain and the majority of the others in New Jersey. The whole case is remanded back to the Circuit Court to devise a plan or method of dissolving the combination and of recreating out of its present elements new conditions which shall be honest and not antagonistic to the law. Any plan agreed on must be finally passed upon by the Supreme Court before it becomes effective. On this point Judge Harlan in his note of dissent writes: "I have found nothing in the record which makes me at all anxious to perpetuate any new combination among these companies, which the Court concedes had at all times exhibited a conscious wrongdoing."

The capital stock of the Tobacco Trust is placed at $380,000,000 and it has a bond issue of $148,000,000. The Trust was organized twenty-one years ago, when the American companies combined with the British Trust to "divide the world's business." The first action against the Trust was begun by the government in 1907 in the United States Circuit Court in New York, to which court it is now remanded for dissolution proceedings.

THE ANGEL OF THE FOUR-HORSE DRAY

Continued from page 621

finally lost out, after all. The foreclosure proceedings began some time ago and the sale comes next week."

"Why, I never heard anything about this at the works—about the Chambers Company, I mean; are you sure there isn't some mistake?"

"Am I sure? Rather; but is it Richard Bradford's custom to talk matters over with his teamsters?"

"N-no," returned the young man, "not the general run of teamsters; but he does sometimes talk things over with me. I—if you don't mind I'll bring this matter to his attention."

"He knows all about it, well enough," muttered Markham, "and my advice to you is to say nothing to him about it; that is, unless you're anxious to be looking for another job."

By this time the horses were ready and, refreshed by their rest and feed, moved off easily with their load as the last good-bys were exchanged. Markham and his daughter stood and watched until they disappeared around a bend in the road.

"Well, Lucy, the angel's gone with his four-horse dray," remarked the farmer, with a feeble attempt at humor; "and," he added, sadly, "I guess it's just as well we entertained him, for I'm afraid we won't do much more entertaining in the old house."

Slowly the days dragged by until the afternoon of the day before the sale. Markham had gone to the well by the side of the house and was just straightening up with a pail of water in one hand, when he heard the humming of a rapidly approaching motor. He noted that it slackened speed as it neared the place.

"Going to turn in here," he remarked, bitterly; "probably some city chap to look the place over and see if it's good enough for him to spend part of his summers on. No, it isn't; I know him. Here, Lucy! Here's the angel of the four-horse dray! Wonder where he got the automobile?"

Mr. Markham extended his hand cordially as the car stopped and the young man stepped out.

"I've been talking over that stock deal with my father," he began, after the greetings were over.

Markham's face hardened. "Your—father!" he interrupted.

"Yes," replied the young man, cheerfully; "I'm Richard Bradford, Jr. You didn't ask my name when I was here before, and I didn't give it; I was taking the place of a sick teamster for that trip. Had to go and set up the boiler any way; so I thought I might as well drive. But about that stock. I knew that father was all right, and I was sure there must be some mistake—and there was."

"I should really be glad to learn about it," said Markham, with a touch of sarcasm.

"Of course you will be," replied Bradford, frankly. "You know my father told you that another company started away out there in the same place?"

"Yes, I remember that."

"It was the Chambers Manufactures Company; they tried to steal all the ideas and all they could of the name of the other company; and they failed—miserably."

"Well?"

"Why, man alive, don't you see? You were in the Chambers Manufacturing Company; they made a big thing of it; quadrupled their plant in the last twelve years. Your stock is worth two hundred cents on the dollar to-day—and you've got ten dividends coming to you. They hunted all over to find you and pay you, and, not succeeding, they put your money in a trust company, and you'll have to take three per cent. interest in addition!"

Markham put one hand to his head and waved the young man back. "Don't!" he implored, feebly. "Don't! Wait a minute. Give me time—time—to get this thing—through my head. I—I wasn't looking for anything like this."

It was Richard Bradford, Jr., who took charge of Mr. Markham's affairs for the next two days; and it was to Richard Bradford, Jr., as agent for Rodney Markham, that the place was struck off at the sale.

On the third day Rodney Markham, looking ten years younger, went with him to the driveway when he took his departure, and, wringing his hand, said heartily: "I didn't ask you to come again the last time you were here, but I'm going to now. Come again! Come soon; come often; come just as often as you can! Come any hour of the day or night; I don't care of it's three o'clock in the morning—nor if you bring eight horses!"

From the "Buford's" Captain

IN a letter from San Francisco after the return of the troopship Buford from her mission of mercy to China, Captain W. F. Creary writes:

"I am sending you under separate cover THE CHRISTIAN HERALD flag and the Seattle Commercial Club flag, which were flown by the Buford during her last voyage. We had a very rough and disagreeable trip over and a lot of nasty weather in China, but rather a smooth and agreeable trip back. The Viceroy, and in fact all of the officials whom I met, were loud in their praises and expressions of appreciation for the act of our people, the government and the Seattle Commercial Club in dispatching the Buford and her cargo to their famine-stricken people.

"I did not have the time to go up into the famine district, but saw evidences of the suffering and distress at Chukiang and Nanking. The condition of the people is most deplorable. The Buford's cargo will do much good and save many lives. I am pleased to state positively that every ounce of the cargo reached and was distributed to the suffering people for whom it was intended."

Macbeth "Pearl Glass" lamp-chimneys bring the right balance of draft to the flame, and let the light shine without hindrance.

Common chimneys give a dull light. They hinder the light because the proportions are wrong and the glass is misty.

Get my Index and you will know just what lamp-chimney to get. I make one for every style and size of burner. Address,

MACBETH

Macbeth-Evans Glass Co. Pittsburgh

CHICAGO: 178 East Lake Street

PHILADELPHIA: 42 South Eighth Street

NEW YORK: 19 West 30th Street

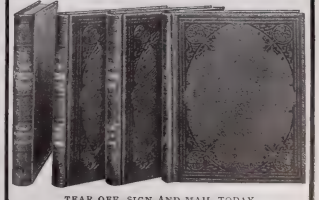
PATENTS: For facts about Prize and Reward offers and Inventions that will bring from $5000 to 10 Million Dollars; and for books of Intense Interest to Inventors, send 8c postage to Pubs. Patent Sense, Dept. 36 Barrister Bldg., Washington, D.C.

TOMB OF ABSALOM. There is no story, even in fiction, more pathetic and interesting than the story of David and his rebellious son Absalom. This photograph shows Absalom's Tomb, known in the Bible as Absalom's Place, erected by himself nearly 3,000 years ago. This illustrates but one of the 448 wonderful 7 in. by 10 in. photographs in the marvelous

Self-Interpreting Bible Library

Consisting of 4 splendid volumes, containing the complete authorized version of the Bible, together with all the Helps, Tables, Commentaries, Atlas, Dictionaries, Photographs and Side-Lights necessary to enable anyone to understand the Sacred Scriptures. It makes reading the Bible a pleasure and a delight, and opens up a world of beauty and interest that has been almost meaningless to the average reader. Introduced and edited by Bishop John H. Vincent. Endorsed by Bishop D. G. Tuttle, Rev. Frank W. Gunsaulus and leading ministers of all protestant denominations.

THE 448 ACTUAL PHOTOGRAPHS



Realizing how much easier it would be to appreciate the Bible if every one could visit the Holy Lands and see for themselves the places and scenes of Bible history, the Society equipped a special Expedition at a cost of $25,000 to four Bible Lands and to secure actual photographs of all the places made sacred by the footsteps of Christ and the great events of Bible history. The result is a truly priceless collection of 448 wonderful Biblical and historical photographs, by means of which the Society now brings Bible Lands to us in our own homes.

THE CROSS INDEX

Prepared for the first time in connection with the Scriptures, by means of which every person, place and event recorded in the Scriptures is now readily accessible.

Handsome Illustrated Portfolio—FREE

To readers of The Christian Herald who respond promptly we will mail free a copy of our splendid 48-page portfolio, "Footsteps of the Man of Galilee," containing beautiful 7 in. by 10 in. photographs of principal scenes in Christ's life, secured by our Photographic Expedition to Palestine, with descriptions by our author, and showing new and interesting method of Bible reading. Send for it at once.

TEAR OFF, SIGN AND MAIL TODAY

THE BIBLE EDUCATIONAL SOCIETY,
516 Harvester Bldg., Chicago

Mail me, without obligation on my part, free copy of "Footsteps of the Man of Galilee," a handsome, 48-page portfolio, containing photographs of principal scenes in Christ's life, and particulars of your Special Introductory Price and easy payment plan offered Christian Herald readers. (6-11)

NAME.....

ADDRESS.....

Drop a Letter in the Mail

TO THE CHRISTIAN HERALD

And Find on Your Doorstep

A BIG 12-VOLUME "WORLD-WIDE ENCYCLOPEDIA"

WE still have some sets of this great, practical library of knowledge—this "Home University Course," as it has been called, because it supplies a liberal education to those who cannot go away to college but who are hungry for knowledge of the great, busy world. We want to put these remaining sets into Christian Herald homes where they will do the most good and be most appreciated. So now, while it is yet possible, and while other big encyclopedias are demanding high prices, and going still higher up into the hundreds of dollars a set, we are glad to offer a few more of our own readers this remarkable opportunity to obtain, for only $1 cash down, the big 12-volume "WORLD-WIDE ENCYCLOPEDIA," immediately ready for use, at less than a tenth the cost of the others. Only $1 now, and $1 a month to pay for a few months!

Knowledge is Power

THIS SPLENDID LIBRARY OF KNOWLEDGE IS A STOREHOUSE OF POWER FOR YOU

Money Saved is Wealth

YOU WILL SAVE MORE THAN $100 BY BUYING THIS GREAT ENCYCLOPEDIA NOW

Such an opportunity does not come to you often. If you let it slip now, we shall be sorry and so shall you, but there will be no help for it when the few sets we are able to supply have all been taken. Send your order TO-DAY while you may.

To CHRISTIAN HERALD READERS:

The barrier of price has been broken down! The need of a great, complete, reliable and usable Encyclopedia in the family may be met at once almost without cost.

Instead of offering you somebody's American or British hundred-dollar Encyclopedia, which perhaps you can not afford to buy, and which you might be afraid to use if you had it, we have rubbed Aladdin's lamp, and will place in your home the great 12-volume World-Wide Encyclopedia for just about one-tenth the lowest price of other big Encyclopedias—and only $1.00 to pay now.

We can't let every CHRISTIAN HERALD family have this remarkable bargain. Sorry, but we are compelled to limit the number to 4020 sets. Those who get their orders in first will have these sets at the surprisingly little price of $11.75 each—$1.00 with order and $1.00 a month thereafter. (The regular price for the cheapest binding would be $30.00.)

The World-Wide Encyclopedia contains the important facts of all knowledge, from the earliest times of the world up to President Taft's administration. It sweeps every field of human enterprise, faithfully records all recent discoveries, traces the mental and moral development of the race, the growth of nations, their governments and their commerce and manufacture. It is a rich treasure-store of History, Geography, Industry, Science, Art, Biography and Literature. It is a sure authority on all subjects, and has the imprint and endorsement of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD as a guarantee of a superior excellence and complete reliability.

The World-Wide Encyclopedia is in 12 large octavo volumes, containing 9807 pages and 96 maps. It is durably bound in heavy silk-finished cloth, with gold stamps. The set stands 9 inches high and fills 26 inches of shelf space.

The fact that only $1.00 need be paid before the entire set is shipped, and then only $1.00 a month, makes it possible for families that really need a complete, reliable Encyclopedia, but cannot spend a fortune for one, to get possession at once of this splendid World-Wide Encyclopedia.

We fully guarantee every set. If you are not entirely pleased in every particular, you may return the Encyclopedia within ten days and get your money back.

Really, this is a wonderful bargain. We are glad of the chance to give CHRISTIAN HERALD subscribers such a valuable Encyclopedia and save them so much money. We wish we could supply every family on our list, but this time we are compelled to limit the offer to 4020 sets at so great a discount.

Send at once this Coupon with the first $1.00, and the World-Wide Encyclopedia will be boxed and shipped to you promptly, freight charges payable at your end.

Publishers of
THE CHRISTIAN HERALD

June 14, 1911.

SIGN AND MAIL THIS COUPON (OR A COPY OF IT)

CHRISTIAN HERALD BOOK DEPT., 481 Bible House, New York City.

Gentlemen: Please send me at once one of the 4020 sets of the WORLD-WIDE ENCYCLOPEDIA, offered to your subscribers at the Special Price of $11.75.* I agree to pay the balance at the rate of $1.00 a month. You guarantee satisfaction.

Signed .....

P.O. .....

Freight or express office .....

Date ..... State .....

*If you send remittance in full with order, you may deduct 10% from the price.

To Your Buildings Need Paint?

Examine your buildings and see if they need painting now. If they do, don't put the work off because you believe linseed oil will drop in price. There is no hope of it. Besides, the price of paint made-to-order of

"Dutch Boy Painter"

White Lead and pure linseed oil is lower than you may think, if you have not actually figured it. Get prices from your dealer on the ingredients for this old-fashioned, long-wearing, pure white lead paint. You will find it cheaper than any other paint you'd think of using.

Write for our free "Painting Helps No. 2256

NATIONAL LEAD COMPANY

An office in each of the following cities:

New York Cleveland Chicago St. Louis Boston Buffalo Cincinnati San Francisco (John T. Lewis & Bros. Co., Philadelphia) (National Lead and Oil Co., Pittsburgh)

CHRISTIAN HERALD Pilgrimage to the Holy Land

Including points in Palestine, Syria, Egypt, Dead Sea, The Jordan, Jerusalem, Jericho, Jaffa and other places connected with the life and death of our Lord.

White Star Liner Cretic leaves New York September 20, stopping en route in Italy, Greece, Turkey, Asia Minor, etc., returns Nov. 21.

For further information regarding this opportunity to visit scenes of events described in the Bible, address at once,

Christian Herald Pilgrimage Bureau
Bible House, New York City

GENUINE Hand Woven PANAMA
Rare Bargain
Panama Hats more popular than ever this Summer
By importing large and low we are enabled to offer this exquisite new genre. These hats are warranted genuine hand-woven, unblocked, ready to wear, at a reduction to men, women and children. Easily blocked in any shape style. Just as worn by the fashionable set at a fraction of the cost. All sizes. Small medium and large sizes. Light weight. Send $1.00. Order today. Satisfaction guaranteed. Sent prepaid on receipt of PANAMA HAT CO., Dept. C, 830 Broadway, New York City

COMES A TIME

When Coffee Shows What It Has Been Doing.

"Of late years coffee has disagreed with me," writes a matron from Rome, N. Y. "Its lightest punishment being to make me 'logy' and dizzy, and it seemed to thicken up my blood.

"The heaviest was when it upset my stomach completely, destroying my appetite and making me nervous and irritable, and sent me to my bed. After one of these attacks, in which I nearly lost my life, I concluded to quit the coffee and try Postum.

"It went right to the spot! I found it not only a most palatable and refreshing beverage, but a food as well.

"All my ailments, the 'logginess' and dizziness, the unsatisfactory condition of my blood, my nervousness and irritability disappeared in short order and my sorely afflicted stomach began quickly to recover. I began to rebuild and have steadily continued until now. Have a good appetite and am rejoicing in sound health which I owe to the use of Postum." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

Sunday School Lesson

Continued from page 622

of a very practical use to which a ventriloquist put his talent: While overseeing a gang of men, who, with mule teams, were hauling loads of dirt, a friend of mine, a ventriloquist, came up and stood by my side. Presently a mule, driven by a fiery-tempered fellow, balked right in front of where we were standing. The driver lost his temper, and began to beat the animal. Every now and then, the mule would turn his head, and look reproachfully at the fellow, but refused to budge. "Now just watch him," the ventriloquist whispered in my ear. At that moment the fellow gave the animal a kick with his heavy boot. The mule turned his head, and looking the man square in the face, opened his mouth: "Don't you do that again." The voice sounded as though it came directly from between the mule's parted lips. The whip dropped from the fellow's hand; for a moment he stared at the mule, and then, without a word, bolted down the street as fast as his legs could take him. Both stories of the ass are true, but they have different points of view: one as God sees, and the other as man sees; both teach the lesson of being just and merciful, one to man, and the other to animals.

Walking With God

A little girl had been very much interested in hearing the story about the translation of Enoch. "And Enoch walked with God, and God took him," she repeated after her mother, and then she remarked: "I suppose he walked every day with God, and one day they walked so far that they walked straight on to heaven, and Enoch never came back any more." That is a child's way of putting it; now listen to a man's way: "Enoch reaches the point of renown in godliness; he walked with God three hundred years at least (he lived to be three hundred and sixty-five years old). His walk was on the high hills, so high that he simply stepped into the next world without troubling Death to go through his long dark process. 'He was not, for God took—' As if he had walked so near that God opened the doors and took him in; and we, too, might pass in as easily if we walked on the same sunny heights. Solemn indeed is the word 'Enoch walked with God'; it means so much; there was a serenity about the man unlike all other quietness; a tender light made his face shine, and in his voice there was a tone, rich, pensive, joyous, altogether wonderful in its combination of humility and triumph. To walk with God is to pray without ceasing; to walk with God is to be absolutely free from care and independent of human judgment; to walk with God is to be in heaven."—Dr. Joseph Parker.

In Stockport, England, one of the largest Sunday Schools in the world has an annual "Walking Day," and this has been the custom since the year 1812. It is thus described by an eye-witness: "Great crowds of people, headed by the chief city officials and leading men and women, including more than five hundred teachers, and thousands of pupils, some of them over eighty years old, and others very, very small: 'cradlers.'" What a great company that would be if all could be counted who are walking with God in every part of the world, not only on one day in the year, but on every day! Let us join the happy throng if we are not already in it, and let us try to keep step with Jesus as he leads us into ways of patience, meekness, righteousness, godliness, faith and love. He has left all of these footprints in the world to make it easy for us to follow on. Let every day be a walking day in his footsteps.

A Hint for Primary Teachers

The review lesson is always the hardest to teach in all the quarter, first, because it is so easy for little children to forget. Richter says: "We must excuse children for being children." We believe teachers will have their best success by using the large Bible picture roll. As the children see each picture in turn, much that has been told them will be recollected by them.

As to the Golden Texts: It was our privilege to hear eighty-five little Chinese boys in Canton—none of them over eight years of age—recite all of the Golden Texts for two years, without any hesitation and in strong voice—nothing wavering. What little folks in China can do, little folks in the United States should certainly do.

Washington's Philanthropic Women

Continued from page 611

and had it remodeled into a modern apartment for her boarders. The rooms are sunny and spacious and beautifully equipped, and there is a great big old garden which she has had planted in flowers and vegetables, to be under the care of the girls. She has taken a fifteen years' lease on the house, and the highest-priced room, with board, of course, to a single occupant, is seven dollars a week, while the lowest-priced one is, with three girls in a room provided each with a cot bed, two dollars and a half. Thirty-three girls can be accommodated, the house is in charge of a matron, and the government is in the hands of a board of management made up from among the girls themselves. It is a beautiful exponent of what the Welfare Department hopes to do, and will be watched with much interest.

But the Welfare Department is only one of the many enterprises in which women are working for the betterment of the world, and the names of those who are helping are legion. There is Mrs. Bryce, the wife of England's widely useful ambassador at Washington, one of whose proudest possessions is a diamond pin which was presented to her by the factory women in Manchester, England, for her philanthropic work among them.

There is a large number of brilliant women in the Congressional circle who can be depended upon to help any endeavor to improve general living conditions. The wife of the Speaker of the House, Mrs. Champ Clark, stands among this number. She is a very brilliant woman, thoroughly in touch with the stirring events of the times, a perfectly delightful hostess, and yet in her busy life finds time to be interested in everything which tends for the betterment of women. She has a keen, clear judgment, and weighs things evenly.

Everybody knows how influential Mrs. Martin Littleton was in her husband's election out on Long Island last year; yet but few know that she has one of the largest mid-week Bible study classes in the city, composed of New York's ultra-fashionable women, which meets every Wednesday morning in her library. Mrs. Hobson, the wife of the hero of Santiago, is greatly interested in Child-Welfare, and seconds Captain Hobson in all his religious and charitable work as heartily as she does in his political ambitions. Mrs. Isaac Sherwood, one of the brainiest women of this coterie, has the distinction of having organized the Woman's Relief Corps; Mrs. Burleson, the wife of the Representative from the tenth district, Texas, is a successful playwright and uses her pen for the elevation of the stage. These are but a few of the many women who might be mentioned in the Congressional circle.

Safety and 5%

$500 First Mortgage Real Estate Notes

Secured by a Deed of Trust on a specific parcel of high grade improved Real Estate.

We own and offer, subject to prior sale, the unsold portion of the following issues:

Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary
Fort Worth, Texas. Total mortgage, $60,000; valuation of security, $150,000. Notes payable serially, one to five years.

First Presbyterian Church
Spokane, Wash. Total mortgage, $40,000; valuation of security, $146,000. Notes payable serially, one to five years.

Right Rev. John B. Morris
Little Rock, Ark. Total mortgage, $70,000; valuation of security, $190,000. Notes payable serially, one to ten years.

Broadway Baptist Church
Fort Worth, Texas. Total mortgage, $20,000; valuation of security, $70,000. Notes payable serially, one to five years.

Corner Realty Company
St. Louis, Mo. Total mortgage, $425,000; valuation of security, $700,000. Notes payable May 1, 1916.

The above are only a few of the many First Mortgage Real Estate Notes we have to offer. On request, complete detail circulars of all issues will be sent you, giving full description of properties, amount of insurance and the maturities available. All interest payable semi-annually, evidenced by interest coupons.

A most convenient form of investment with absolute security.

Price any maturity to yield 5%.

Real Estate Loan Department

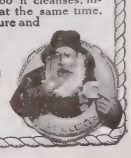
Mercantile Trust Co.
SAINT LOUIS, MO.

Capital and Surplus:
Nine and One-half Million Dollars

In answering, mention The Christian Herald

All Office Men Should Use

LIFEBUOY SOAP



YOU who handle office papers, money, or anything handled by others, are always exposed to infection from unseen disease germs lurking everywhere.

PROTECT yourself by using Lifebuoy for all toilet purposes at the office and home. For the Bath and Shampoo it cleanses, invigorates and disinfects at the same time. Delightfully refreshing, pure and wholesome.

5c. at All Druggists and Grocers.

If not at your dealer's, send 5c. (stamps or coin) for full size cake to

LEVER BROS. CO.
Dept. S
Cambridge, Mass.

The Winning of a Great Race

BY winning the Petit Parisien's prize of $20,000 in the perilous Paris-to-Madrid cross-country, cross-mountain aeroplane race, Mons. Pierre Vedrine has not only earned a place as one of the world's greatest aviators, but has made new records in man's conquest of the air. In the course of his journey he made the fastest time for the longest distance that has ever been recorded. He flew over seemingly unsurmountable mountains, even vanquishing a belligerent eagle in his flight. Upon his arrival in Madrid he was greeted by enthusiastic throngs that cheered themselves hoarse in his honor. On landing at the Getafe aerodrome he was so tired after his hardy voyage that he jumped from his aeroplane and flung himself on the ground to rest. A frantic crowd soon rushed up, however, and bore the victorious aviator on their shoulders to the tribunal. On reaching the judges' platform he was showered with roses and kissed repeatedly by women. Later, on complaining that he was still numb from his flight, he was removed to an infirmary, where he received medical attention and a short but much needed rest. On reappearing at the aerodrome the Frenchman smilingly delivered the messages which he had brought with him from Paris, and was congratulated on his magnificent flight by the civil governor of Madrid on behalf of King Alfonso. The following day the King granted him a private audience and after congratulating him with a hearty handshake invested him with the Order of Alfonso XII., a decoration which is reserved for those who have distinguished themselves in the arts and sciences. The King then engaged Mons. Vedrine in conversation for an hour and was deeply interested in the details of the splendid journey.

Monsieur Pierre Vedrine

Winner of the Paris-to-Madrid Aeroplane Race

The Paris-to-Madrid race was begun on May 21 under the auspices of the Petit Parisien, which offered a prize of $20,000. In addition the Spanish Aero Club gave prizes amounting to $10,000 and King Alfonso offered a special prize for the fastest speed over the Spanish section. The journey was divided into three stages—Paris to Angouleme, Angouleme to St. Sebastian and St. Sebastian to Madrid, a total distance of about seven hundred and twenty-one miles.

A STRANGE LEGACY

Goldwin Smith used to relate a story of Lord Cardwell to the effect that when Cardwell was a law student, the executors of a will desired to be advised whether they were bound to pay a large legacy to a cat and a parrot. Cardwell's answer was that the bequest might be good, but that as the cat and the parrot could neither sue in person nor appoint an attorney, the legacy might be safely withheld.

Resignation

THY way be mine; Thou leadest me
Through waters still and deep;
The dusk of years is over me,
I lay me down to sleep.
Each soul that lives is crucified,
Each calls at last to Thee;
Each wretched heart hath bowed and cried,
"Do Thou remember me;"
Lord God of Hosts, with me abide
At my Gethsemane.

Thy way be mine; Thou leadest me,
The path of countless souls;
No way but Thine can comfort me;
The key my Master holds.
When darkness falls and endless mists
Hide all for which I pine,
Grant, Lord of hosts, that through the rifts
There be some word or sign;
Give me, O God, the faith that lifts
Man's spirit unto Thine.

Thy way be mine; Thou leadest me
From darkness unto light;
Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done,
But spare the dread of night;
Lead, kindly Lord, unto the place
Where earth and heaven meet,
And ere I see my Maker's face,
Make Thou my peace complete;
Guard and protect me, Lord of Grace,
Before Thy mercy seat.

R. D. Ross.

Called Higher

G. E. Sherman (80), of Stanton, Va., has gone to be at rest.

Mrs. Barbara Alheim (73), of Forest, O., has been called to her long home.

Richard Baxter Ware, of Daretown, N. J., has been called to his reward.

Mrs. E. L. Higgins (92), of Sandovel, Ill., has been called to her reward.

Mrs. Fannie S. Phillips (74) was called home on January 10 at Ellery, Ill.

Mrs. Kate J. Blake, of Sutton, Vt., has gone to the presence of the Master.

Mrs. C. E. Watson, of Mt. Etna, Ind., was called to the home beyond on January 5.

Miss Anna G. Kuech was suddenly taken to higher service at Nazareth, Pa., on January 31.

J. D. Wilson (70), of Bridgeport, O., passed to the reward of faithful service on February 20.

Mrs. Sarah J. Reynolds (84), of Athens, W. Va., was called to her reward on February 17.

Pauline Fate (15), of Alingdon, Ill., has been taken to be with him who said, "Suffer little children to come unto me."

John A. Johnston, a well known educator of Allegheny, Pa., has been called to the reward of loyal service for the Master.

R. D. Barber, M. D. (72), of Corona, Calif., has passed beyond the veil. He was a subscriber to this paper for many years.

Mrs. Fannie A. Boyd, of Eldora, Ia., passed on to her long home on January 15. She was for years an earnest Christian worker.

Charles Albert Hurd, of Marseilles, Ill., was called higher on February 1. He was an earnest Christian and for many years a reader of this paper.

Mrs. Margaret E. Campbell entered into rest January 24, 1911, at her home in Ypsilanti, Mich. She had for many years been a subscriber to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD.

Mrs. Eliza Rose Lambling, of Novelty, O., passed away August 13, 1910. For the past twenty years she has been an appreciative reader of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD.

An Innovation in China

THE Chinese Calendar for 1910—the second year of the new Emperor, Hsuan T'ung—was remarkable for one extremely important fact: the Christian Sabbaths were marked, along with the Confucian feasts and holy days. The importance of this from the missionary point of view becomes apparent when we remember that this "calendar" is an official document in a way. It is issued by the government for the guidance of its subjects. It is more than a calendar. It is a guide to correct conduct during the coming year. For example, the red printing on the top of the pages mentions the "lucky days" for starting on journeys, etc. There is also full guidance given as to the proper days to select for weddings, burials, etc.; lists of days when visits are to be paid, presents offered and accepted, etc.; the dates for united worship before the tablet of Confucius; and now, for the first time, in addition, the dates of the Christian worship days are marked! The calendar has a huge circulation.

POST CARDS

10 Birthday . . . . . 10 cts	10 General Subjects 10 cts
10 Best Wishes & Greetings 10 cts	10 Floral . . . . . 10 cts
10 Decoration Day . . . 10 cts	10 Fourth of July 10 cts

2 Birthday Letters Printed on Superior Paper with Envelopes to match, 10 cents.

Any three 10 cent Packages Mailed for 25 cents.

MADISON ART COMPANY, MADISON, CONN.

Chairs & Tricycles

For Invalids and Cripples

Worthington Co.

414 Cedar St., Elyria, O. (2)

ENDURING
AS
THE PYRAMIDS "Lest We Forget"
More Than $90,000 Worth of White Bronze Memorials have been sold by us direct by mail, to readers of the Christian Herald. About the same amount has been sold by local agents secured through the Herald.
These thousands of customers will testify to our fair and liberal dealings and will recommend White Bronze from their own experience, because of Durability, Artistic Beauty, Cheapness.
Designs, prices and full information FREE to any interested. Let us know about what expense you anticipate and we will send a special selection. No obligation to buy. We deliver anywhere. Distance no obstacle. Write now.
Agents Wanted—Liberal Pay
THE MONUMENTAL BRONZE CO.
355-D Howard Av., Bridgeport, Ct.

FREE OIL
"3-in-One" oils sewing machines perfectly. Cleans out dirt and grease and lubricates every delicate part so your Sewing Machine
works more easily, more smoothly and lasts longer. You do more work, better work, with half the labor. Prevents rust on all metal parts; saves cost of expensive repairs. Generous trial bottle and new booklet free.
3-IN-ONE OIL COMPANY
54 B'way
New York

AGENTS Here It Is
POCKET SEWING MACHINE
That's what Hopper calls it. Sold 97 in few days He's pleased. Retails at ridiculously low price. If you want a quick seller, one that gets the money easy, send now for confidential terms and FREE BOOKLET, "Inside information on the agency business." A few hours a day means many a dollar in your pocket. Send a postal.
100% PROFIT
MATHEWS 612-4 Warne Street, DAYTON, OHIO

PUFFS ON APPROVAL
Send long lock of hair with 5c postage and I will send sample of our 20 puffs to match, and $2.75 — return goods in 10 days — and I will SEND FREE as a present 3 others, 10 inches, 24 inches, all wavy switch same tone of preferred, guaranteed natural human hair. FREE BOOKLET of New York's latest hair styles.
MADAM RETTLAW
128 Wadsworth Ave., New York

BOYS!
A Complete Baseball Outfit!
You may have one without SPENDING A CENT!
This is the season of the year when every boy longs to own a complete baseball outfit — suit, ball, hat, catching mitt and all the other things which help a fellow to play good ball.
We are going to give every boy, no matter where he lives, an opportunity to secure one of these complete baseball outfits, or any part of one,
Without Paying One Cent For It!
If you belong to a "nine" you can show your friends how they can all have suits of their own and you can have the best dressed nine in the neighborhood, or if you want to form a new nine, here is your opportunity. Just drop us a postal card, and say:
"Please send me full particulars of how I can obtain a Baseball Outfit without paying ONE CENT FOR IT!"
Address, JUNIOR DEPARTMENT,
Christian Herald, Bible House, New York

Young People's Societies

Missions in China*

WHEN Paul organized churches in Asia Minor, on his way back to Antioch, he appointed and ordained elders in every church. This same method has been adopted in all the mission fields, and notably in China. Dr. Speicher says that few Chinese have been converted through direct contact with the missionary. He organizes the church; advises in the emergencies and dilemmas which are constantly arising; teaches classes in religious studies, and trains leading natives. To these, the new convert naturally turns for help and guidance; so that, in nearly every land, it is largely by the efforts of their own best and bravest that salvation comes.

The conditions of social and civic life in China are such that the missionary is often obliged to give a large part of his time and attention to them. For example, it is no uncommon thing to have a church member, often through no fault of his own, but from the enmity of some influential person, thrown into prison. As the prisons of China are filthy beyond description and even leprous, the pastor works hard to prove the innocence of his parishioner, or in some other way to get him out; and all the time he has to be endeavoring to rouse public opinion on the subject of improving the prisons—a slow business in China, where matters have run on for ages with little change. They would probably have so continued forever, if the unwelcome foreigners had not come in to turn the placid Chinese world upside down.

The chief hope of those who are working for civic reform in China, lies in the fact that China, although she often pretends to despise Japan, is really greatly affected by her example. She sees how Japan is patterning after the Western nations, and, little by little, she, too, is introducing railroads and telegraphs, electricity and schools.

One of the authorities on mission work has enumerated the traits which the worker in the Chinese field must surely possess. First, he must be a good theologian, for the Chinese mind is keen and probes to the kernel the truths which are taught by the preacher.

Second, he must know something of pathology and medicine. He may have a physician as a co-worker, and then he does not need to prescribe so often for the physical ailments of his people; but circumstances are always likely to arise in which he will need to administer quinine, a good "pain-killer," castor oil or some other common remedy. He should know something also of dentistry and of surgery.

He must, thirdly, have administrative ability, and good, sound judgment. He must learn the laws and customs of the people, and keep them in mind while organizing his church and his schools.

He must also be a good teacher and trainer. His converts, however zealous they may be, do not know how to perform the duties of church officers, Sunday School teachers or even of active church members.

He must also know how to keep books, for much money may pass through his hands, and he should be able to account for every cent of it. He must understand also something of architecture and building. At Kityang, during the decade between 1897 and 1907, the missionary had to superintend the building of two two-story dwellings; a large central chapel; twelve chapels in outstations; the making over of ten old buildings into chapels; and a large hospital.

Take the missionary journals and follow the development of Christianity in China. No work of fiction is so thrilling as is the story of its progress.

*Christian Endeavor Topic for Sunday, June 25. TEXT: II. Cor. 11: 21-28.

Spiritual Power*

WHEN Benjamin Franklin succeeded in drawing down lightning from the clouds, a scoffer said to him, "It is a pretty thing that you have done, to be sure, but it is of no use."

"Perhaps not," said the great philosopher, "but there is power, and who knows what that power may do?"

As we see now the wonders performed by electricity, we wish that the stupid man could be alive to behold them also.

Often a discerning teacher sees marks of promise in a composition by one of her pupils, though another may discover no especial meaning in it.

"What do you see there?" inquired a teacher of such an one, who had asked her opinion concerning a boy's essay. "It is rambling, ill-constructed and disconnected."

"Yes," said the other, "but it grips one, and you feel power there."

The young writer was encouraged and he became a mighty influence for good through his skilful and consecrated pen. The power had been trained to harness. If the essay had been smooth and well proportioned the teacher who was consulted might have thought it good. A certain intuition seems to be required to detect power under a rough, unattractive surface.

It is a common experience with us all to hear young people say when asked to carry some unaccustomed responsibility, "Oh, I am not able to do that. I haven't the ability. I haven't any influence."

It is true that, as the poet says,

Some are born in blight,
Victims of perpetual slight.

But most of those who have enjoyed any chance at all for education and culture, are simply timid or lazy when they say such things. Let them remember what Paul wrote to Timothy—that God gave us not a spirit of fearfulness. That spirit comes from beneath, not from above. By earnest prayer it may be driven out, and you may gain power. Try it—go bravely forward, trusting in your Leader, and you will be surprised to see how you will be sustained in your endeavor.

But do not expect to find the path to success smooth and easy. It is ever set with thorns. Only keep on and pray without ceasing, and strength will be given you to triumph in the end.

Remember that, as President Hyde says, "a man is what he does." In the broad sense, his work and he are one.

"Blessed is he who has found his work," wrote Carlyle. "Let him ask no other blessedness. The only happiness a brave man ever troubled himself with asking much about, was happiness to get his work done."

The main thing therefore in the pursuit of this wonderful gift of power, is courage to start upon it. The Christian gains this by contact with God through prayer. Then all he has to do is to go forward.

"We learn an art," said Aristotle, the greatest of philosophers, "by doing that which we wish to do when we have learned it. We become builders by building, and harpers by playing on the harp. By doing just acts, we become just; by doing acts of temperance and courage, we become temperate and courageous."

A shoemaker was asked by a passing friend, "Have you got any religion to-day?"

"Just enough to make a good shoe, glory to God!" he replied, as he kept busily at his work.

It is our religion which can give us power. "Trust in the Lord forever, for in the Lord Jehovah is everlasting strength."

*Topic of the Epworth League for Sunday, June 25. TEXTS: II. Tim. 1:7; Acts 1:8; I. Cor. 1:26-28.

You Can Learn TO Play and Teach
The Piano
In Your Spare Time at Home

You can get this instruction on the piano from the Correspondence Course of one of the greatest artists and teachers of our time, Wm. H. Sherwood. Mr. Sherwood was one of the splendid galaxy of world famous artists, who gained their inspiration directly from the great Liszt himself. He put the best fruits of his successful career as artist and teacher into this Course of Lessons. The Course has the unqualified approval of such world authorities in music as Paderewski, Leschetizky and Moszkowski; so that in taking these Lessons, you are learning the methods and principles of these great artists and teachers, and you will enjoy all the prestige which a diploma from a school having the approval of these great men will give.

Music Has Never Offered Brighter Prospects

to its devotees than in this country today. Music is heard everywhere, and everywhere encouraged and applauded. Good, competent, progressive teachers have no difficulty in securing large classes of pupils, netting them a good and sure income. Music is being taught in the Public Schools. Concert players and accompanists receive good salaries. And, socially, no accomplishment gives your friends more pleasure, and makes you more welcome in their midst, than this very gift of music.

If Already a Piano Teacher

—you may possibly, for all your efforts to the contrary, be getting into the inevitable "teacher's rut," your teaching growing more and more like drudgery, and your own playing needing guidance and inspiration. All this will be changed through these Lessons in the Sherwood Normal Piano Course. The Lessons will not only provide you with a safe and trustworthy guide in planning the work of your pupils from the very first to the last, but will give you new power and renewed inspiration in your own playing. It will mean a fresh start with revived interest and courage in all your work, which will become at once evident both in your playing and in your teaching.

If You Are a Mother

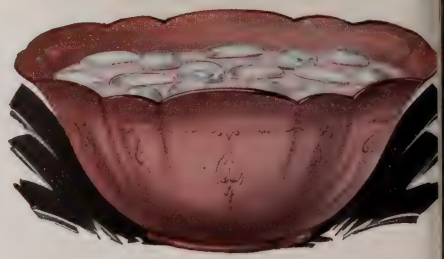
—we can help you teach your little children to play the piano with the aid we will give you through these Lessons. Froebel's ideal of the Kindergarten was that of the Mother teaching her children at home. In addition to these Piano Lessons, therefore, we are conducting a course in Kindergarten Music, by Frances E. Clark, the most successful of all our Educators in Kindergarten and Public School Music, by which every Mother can give her youngest children Kindergarten training at home In this way you can lay the best foundation for your children's singing in School, at Home, and in later life.

Guarantee of Satisfaction

We guarantee to refund every cent you have paid us if you are dissatisfied with the Course. What other reliable School of Music will give you such a guarantee?

Free—Handsome Illustrated Catalog Telling You All About Mr. Sherwood's Course

If you have any musical talent at all, or are directly interested in music, we will send you a copy of our beautiful, illustrated, seventy page catalog. This will prove to you how you can, in your own home, learn to play or teach the piano through our Courses of Lessons, as conducted by our skilled staff of artists. In writing be sure to tell us in detail of all your own individual needs and wishes, whether you now play or teach, and how much you have studied, how old you are, and what are your particular technical difficulties. Write today. We can help you with your musical education.



Diploma Granted
Siegel-Myers Correspondence School of Music
2380 Monon Block : Chicago

FREE SAMPLE
[illegible] Send us the first letter [illegible] new Essay from [illegible] present business. Write today. METALLIC SIGN CO., 470 [illegible] Street, Chicago.

Puffed Wheat or Rice With Berries
—a Delicious Blend

For Luncheons or Suppers —Puffed Grains in Milk

The Royal Foods of June

In the past few weeks — with grocers stocking for June—the demands for these puffed foods have been overwhelming.

For June is the month of berries. And countless people mix Puffed Wheat and Puffed Rice with them.

June starts the months of cold suppers — when people serve Puffed Wheat and Rice in milk. The grains are crisper than crackers, and four times as porous as bread. And they are whole-grain foods.

With June comes the time for ready-cooked cereals. And four people in five prefer these puffed grains to any other cereal creation.

The ice cream season starts with June. And these crisp grains add a garnish which tastes like nuts.

And schoolgirls' vacations begin in June. They use a wealth of Puffed Rice in their home candy-making.

100,000,000 Dishes

So with June starts the greatest demand for Puffed Wheat and Puffed Rice. A hundred million dishes, served in one way or another, will doubtless be served this summer.

But some homes won't have them because the housewives don't know them. They will serve foods not one-half so delicious.

That's why we print this page—now on the verge of June. They who know Puffed Wheat and Puffed Rice will all have them. But the millions who don't know are here told what they miss.

Puffed Wheat and Puffed Rice are like wafered nuts. They are porous and crisp — eight times normal size — ready to melt in the mouth. Most people regard them as the two finest foods in existence.

We want to urge you — for your own sake—to start using them this June.

Puffed Wheat, 10c Except in Extreme West Puffed Rice, 15c

Children at play get hungry. And the best food to serve them between meals is Puffed Wheat or Puffed Rice.

They like to eat the grains dry—as they come from the package — sprinkled with a little salt. They like them at bedtime in milk.

These puffed grains never tax the stomach. Never was cereal food made even half so digestible.

All the food granules are literally blasted to pieces, so digestion acts instantly. It begins before the foods reach the stomach.

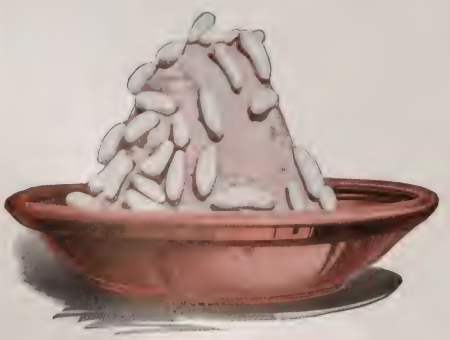
Let children eat them at any hour—between meals or bedtime. They are not like foods hard to digest.

Exploded by Steam

These are Prof. Anderson's scientific foods—the foods shot from guns.

The puffing is done by a steam explosion, which literally blasts all the food granules to pieces. Cooking, baking or toasting never made cereals half so fit to eat.

The raw grains are sealed up in bronze-steel guns. Then the guns are revolved for sixty minutes in a heat of 550 degrees. That heat turns the moisture in the grain to steam, and the pressure becomes enormous.



Suddenly the guns are unsealed and the steam explodes. The grains are puffed to eight times normal size. Every food granule is broken. Yet the grains remain shaped as they were when they went in the guns.

The aim of the process was to make grain digestible. But it also created the most enticing cereal foods we know.

Telephone your grocer—now before you forget it—to send you a package of each.

The Quaker Oats Company

Sole Makers—Chicago

Puffed Rice as a Nut-like Garnish for Ice Cream

Puffed Wheat and Puffed Rice Blended —Served With Cream

Christian Herald

SUBSCRIPTION, $1.50 PER ANNUM
PUBLISHED 52 TIMES A YEAR

COPYRIGHT 1911 BY THE CHRISTIAN HERALD

NEW YORK, JUNE 21, 1911

VOL. 34—NO. 25. PRICE 5 CENTS
OFFICES: BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK

Shadows in the Stream — From the Celebrated Painting by Fritz Thaulow

It's Printype!

"What a beautiful typewritten letter—as plain as print—as easy to rea as a primer! It must be the new Oliver PRINTYPE. I wish all ou correspondents used The Printype Oliver Typewriter!"

—A composite quotation from ten thousand business and professional men on being introduced to Printy

ALL eyes are watching Printype. Its attraction is irresistible. Its beauty and grac in a typewritten letter, are alluring, attention-compelling. Printype has come t stay. Although absolutely new to typewriting, its counterpart—Book Type—has bee used on all the world's presses since the printing art had its inception.

Yet Printype was an inspiration. It is simply a dream come true. It is th Oliver ideal of perfect typography applied to typewriter uses.

We had brought the machine to its maximum of efficiency. We had added, or by one, a score of great innovations. There remained but one point in which it d not excel its several excellent rivals—and that was the type itself.

Then came the inspiration which meant nothing less than a revolution in typ writer type. We would design and produce a new typewriter type face, conformin to the type used in newspapers, magazines and books.

We did! It's here! It's PRINTYPE!

Printype is not an experiment. It represents the crystallized experience of ce turies. It is, in all essentials, the type that meets your eye when you read yo morning paper, your magazine or your favorite novel.

Now that Printype is an accomplished fact, and such a tremendous succes the thought occurs to thousands, why didn't typewriter manufacturers think of years ago? The same question was asked, by other thousands, when we intr duced visible writing, over ten years ago.

To the Business Executive

Who Seeks Increased Efficiency by Applying to Daily Work the Wonderful New Science of Management

In many industries the new Science of Management is being developed with startling gains in efficiency. The slogan of Scientific Management is: "Take the short cut to best results." The application of its principles to the ancient trade of bricklaying has raised the capacity of the individual workman from the former average of 1,000 bricks a day to as high as 5,000 per day. In the handling of pig iron it has raised the standard, per man, from 12½ tons to 47 tons per day, without demanding additional effort. Manual operations of laborers have been timed to the hundredth part of a minute, to secure the data which results in saving a great many thousands of dollars. If Scientific Management can produce such tremendous gains in the efficiency of men at the bottom, think what possibilities lie in applying the same principles to the work of the men at the top.

The high-priced man whose seconds of time are worth more than the laborer's hours.

Printype increases the efficiency of the business executive himself.

It makes typewriting twice as easy to read. It saves time, saves eyesight, conserves nerve energy. It safeguards against errors due to rapid dictation, and high-pressure transcription. It aids all who deal with correspondence—at both ends of the line.

To the man who dictates hundreds of letters daily, reads them before attaching his signature, and who in addition reads incoming mail, Printype is indispensable.

The Printype Oliver Typewriter meets the insistent demand for speed, accuracy, durability and efficiency in the conduct of correspondence. Why not avail yourself of the short cut to best typewriting results?

A Long Step in Advance

The change from the old-style thin outline letters known as Pica Type, universally used up to now on all standard typewriters, to the new, beautiful, readable Printype, is one of vast significance.

It means relief from the harmful effect on eyesight of the "outline" typewriter type. For Printype is as easy to read as a child's primer.

It means less liability of mis-reading due to blurring of outline letters, whose sameness frequently makes the words run together. Printype letters are shaded, just as Book Type is shaded.

Printype letters maintain their separate characteristics.

It means less danger of costly errors due to confusing the numerals. No possible chance of mistaking 3 for 8 or 5 for 3—each figure is distinct.

It means a degree of typographic beauty never before known in typewriting. Printype is artistic, distinctive, refined, and immensely effective.

And now, because of its newness, it has the enhanced charm of novelty.

How Printype Leaped to Fame

The reception of Printype by the business public has been more enthusiastic than we had dared to expect. We withheld any formal announcement until the machine had been on the market for one year.

Personal demonstrations were its only advertising. The resulting sales were stupendous. Printype letters soon began to appear among commonplace old-style correspondence. Wherever received, these mysterious, distinctive, beautiful letters awakened immediate interest. Business men began asking each other, "What's that new kind of typewriter that writes like real print?" Users of Printype Oliver Typewriters were besieged with such inquiries. Thus the fame of Printype grows and grows, as day by day its beauty and utility dawn on the business world.

Printype Conserves Eyesight

The manifold merits of Printype are a constant source of surprise. Aside from its intrinsic value in raising the artistic standard of correspondence, its benefits in conserving eyesight make its use of the most vital importance. Printype is restful to eyesight. It delivers its message in the most easily readable form.

The constant reading of thin outline letter typewriting plays havoc with the eyes. It sends thousands to oculists and opticians whose eyes need rest more than medicine or glasses.

A comparative test of Printype and ordinary typewriting will win you to the type that reads like print.

Address Sales Department

The Oliver Typewriter Company
738 Oliver Typewriter Building, CHICAGO

We Have Not Raised Our Price

Although thousands of dollars have been expended designing and producing Printype, and although we contr it exclusively, we do not ask a premium for The Printy Oliver Typewriter. The price is $100, the same as our regul model with Pica Type. We have virtually declared a big di dend in favor of typewriter users by supplying this wonderf type, when desired, on the new model Oliver Typewriter.

"17-Cents-a-Day" Offer on

Printype — OLIVER Typewriter

The Standard Visible Writer

You can buy the new Printype Oliver Typewriter—o latest model, the No. 5—on the famous "17-Cents-a-Da Purchase Plan. A small first payment brings the machir Then you save 17 cents a day and pay monthly. No matt what make of typewriter you are using, you can turn it on your first payment.

If the Penny Plan interests you, check square in coup and full details of the generous offer will be sent prompt

Ask for Book and Specimen Printype Lett

To supply the widespread demand for Printype infe mation we have issued a special book.

We will gladly send you a copy, together with a lett written on The Printype Oliver Typewriter. This lett will reveal the great fundamental advantages of the n face of type which has created such a sensation. The coup or a letter or postal will put all the facts in your possessio

Press the Button for Printype Demonstratio

Our great sales organization enables us to make an i provement of this character immediately and simultaneous available to the public. Press the button and see how quick an Oliver Agent will appear with a "Printyper," ready tell you all about it and write several Printype letters for yo

THE OLIVER TYPEWRITER CO.,
738 Oliver Typewriter Bldg., Chicago

Gentlemen:—Please send Book, "A Revolution in Typewriter Type," and a Specimen Letter in Printype.

Name.....

Address.....

Occupation.....

If Interested in "17-Cents-a-Day" Plan Place a Check in Square. ☐ (114)

NEW YORK, JUNE 21, 1911

THE · CHRISTIAN · HERALD

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED NEWSPAPER FOR THE HOME

Crowds on the Dock Watching the Great Ship Go Out

Up on the Hurricane Deck Ready for Five Glorious Days at Sea

THE ANNUAL RUSH TO EUROPE

ONE of the most remarkable passenger traffic rushes that the transantlantic steamship companies have ever had to deal with, occurred in eastward bound bookings during May and the first weeks of June. Europe has not in many years offered such a number of great attractions to the rest of the world as she displays this summer. On the Continent there are fine exhibitions in many cities; Switzerland is making a special bid for the sightseers from other lands, but the cynosure of all the world is London. It is upon the coronation ceremony of June 22 that the steamship companies place the responsibility for the great increase in the number of passengers to Europe.

There were on June 4 seventy-seven passenger steamers on the Atlantic, and despite the fact that thousands had already landed at European ports and that thirty-six of these ships left their American ports practically filled to capacity, the remaining forty-one were in turn filled on their departing days.

Never have more animated scenes been witnessed at the docks than those of the last few weeks. The noisy but orderly bustle of taking on the late arriving luggage, the elbowing of messengers and delivery men from the fruiterers and florists, the coming and going of stewards laden with the bon voyage offerings of the hordes of friends who crowded the decks with a gayly dressed throng, have filled the hours just before sailing time. Then with the calling of "All ashore who are going ashore!" come the final good-bys. Sometimes the smiles shine through the tears of separation, and as the great ship, yielding to the puffing tugs, slowly leaves the pier and starts down the river on her long voyage, a thousand fluttering little flags wave their remembrance of home and friends to the happy voyagers.

The last of the coronation rush had gone by June 14, though the agents still expect bookings from those persons who do not depart until the vacation season opens and who are somewhat constrained by the school periods. At this time there are thousands of school teachers who annually leave in the latter part of June and in July, coming from all parts of the United States.

Many of these will arrive in England for the final weeks of the brilliant season which is to mark the coronation of the most philanthropically inclined king Great Britain has ever had. Already it is said throughout the British Empire that as Victoria labored unceasingly to safeguard the empire, and Edward VII. earned the title "The Peacemaker" by his efforts to promote good relations with other powers, so may George V. be known as "The Reformer" by his sincere efforts to improve the lot of his poorer and less fortunate subjects.

In London, the Whitsuntide holidays gave a brief respite to the coronation preparations, which were then resumed with increased energy. The city, so far as the route of the procession is concerned, has become unrecognizable in its garb of new paint, decorations, scaffoldings for stands, and pillars for street adornment.

In Westminster Abbey itself the structural changes were completed several weeks ago. For the great coronation ceremony tribunes have been erected with a seating capacity for 8,000 persons. The prevailing colors of the decorations are blue and gold. The programme was fully arranged by the first of June and it only remained to hold a number of rehearsals for the two hundred persons engaged in the coronation ceremonial. This, though mainly following the lines of King Edward's coronation, will present some new features, notably the inclusion for the first time of standard bearers representing the over-seas dominions, Canada, Australia and India, as well as England, Scotland, Ireland and Wales. The over-seas troops will also have a post of honor outside of Buckingham Palace and around the Victoria Memorial on coronation day.

The foreign contingents and the troops from the oversees dominions are now all in the city, and all Europe awaits the great pageant.

A Crowded Ocean Liner Leaving Her Dock for the Transatlantic Voyage

The American Pulpit

A SERMON BY

Rev. Charles M. Sheldon, D.D.*

GOD'S UNIVERSITY

TEXT: Job 36:22 (R. V.)—"Behold, God doeth loftily in his power. Who is a teacher like unto him?"

WHAT is an education? It is the right development, in the right direction, all the time, of the whole being, for the purpose of giving one as much life as possible for himself, and to share with others.

This means that the whole person must be taken into account. Education means more than a one-sided development of one talent or ability. It means symmetrical and many-sided growth. The reason why there are not more interesting people in the world is because so many people are content with a one-sided development. They are willing to be musicians and nothing but musicians. They are willing to be newspaper men and nothing but newspaper men. They are willing to be lawyers and nothing but lawyers; teachers and nothing but teachers; ministers and nothing but ministers. And so their range of thinking, of conversation, and of action is limited. True education takes into account a whole being, with many different possibilities—a life which has in it the elements of surprise and an eagerness to know everything which can be known about a very great world in order to sympathize with and enter into the thought, so far as possible, of all sorts and conditions of men.

The Earthly Teacher's Limitations

Now, with this thought of an education in mind, we "go to school," as we say; and we begin to learn the things which the school offers. Our educational system in America provides a large variety from the grades up through the University and the special training schools; a vast number of subjects for study is offered the student. But in all this system the one great thing which is always of supreme importance is the teacher. Modern buildings do not make grammar schools or high schools. Brick, mortar, concrete, and architecture do not make a college. The only real factor which the thoughtful student takes into account is the man or woman who is teaching.

Now the teaching which the modern system of education offers the boys and girls of the United States is of a high order; but it can have at the very best a limited range of experience and ability, and in many cases helps to develop only a small part of the whole being. Mathematics, science, history, language, can have a certain range; but there is a great field beyond which the average teacher in the schools cannot touch. That part of our nature which deals in what we call the ideals of life, the moral and ethical region, the region of religion, is in many cases almost untouched in the course of an average educational career.

It is at this point that the greatest factor in the universe steps in—that is, God himself. And it is concerning this great source of education that I wish to speak. "Who is a teacher like unto him?" In many educational systems, even the thought or suggestion of God is seldom entertained. He is considered as a subject for the theologian or the church or the minister or the prayer meeting or the Sunday School, but as a matter of fact there is no power in the modern world so capable of educating the mind, the heart, and the body, as God.

"Who Is a Teacher Like Unto Him?"

Without the least thought of anything approaching the familiar, to say nothing of the irreverent, we may speak of the "University of God," and consider ourselves each one as entitled to enter this university, and place ourselves under the instruction of one "who doeth loftily in his power," and who stands ready to teach his children in the most wonderful manner the most wonderful things which we need to know. "Who is a teacher like unto him?"

If we acknowledge the existence of a God and then define him as a Father, a living, personal, loving being, we must have to acknowledge that once having such a God we cannot regard him as sitting off somewhere looking at his own creation with indifference or complacency or selfish pride. If he has made the world and loves it, he wants to have something to do with it. If he has made human beings and placed them here, he must be tremendously interested in their welfare; and it stands to reason that human beings who have such a God as this have a most stupendous opportunity to grow in wisdom and in knowledge with such a teacher. Most students who have been through the university will say that one or two teachers at the most out of the entire number have influenced their own lives and put some kind of touch upon their characters. These teachers are the ones who have themselves been taught of God—real teachers in the largest sense of the term—very rare beings. They have caught a vision of the great Teacher of the world and have learned how to teach by being taught themselves of God.

But suppose we enter this University of God, in a course which is not prescribed by the public schools, which is not found in the curriculum of any high school or university in the land. What are the possibilities for such a course, and what are the lessons which God can teach, and which he alone does teach to those who enter this course? How shall we know what he would teach?

First Lesson—Life's Greatness

I think the first lesson learned in God's University is the fact that life is a very great and wonderful thing; that it is well worth living; and that it should be lived with the largest possible amount of joyous enthusiasm, purity, and power. Let us not get far from the text: "Behold, God doeth loftily in his power; who is a teacher like unto him?" I think the first lesson he wants to impress on all his students in his classes is the greatness of life. We play at life and make light of it. We "fool away the time," to use a common expression for which we can find no other term. We jest at the most sacred things. One of the commonest so-called witticisms to be found in all our publications in this country is continually to sneer at or cast an innuendo against the marriage relation or woman. It is only one item out of hundreds of others which proclaim with fearful grossness the fact that we have not defined life itself in large or dignified terms. We ought not so to belittle humanity. If human life is anything at all, it is a tremendous thing. It is not a jest nor a joke. It is not something to be taken lightly. The minutes, hours, days, weeks, months, and years of a human creature's existence are full of the most engrossing values. This does not mean that life is a solemn thing or a sombre or sad thing. It means just the opposite; that the exhilaration of living as a product of God's thought is higher than any other thing known to the world. The exuberance and vitality of an individual ought to proclaim the very greatness of life which cannot be compared with anything sensual or commonplace. What I am trying to get at is the first lesson that God wants to teach us; that is, the life of each one of us is a unique thing. It has no parallel elsewhere. When a life is rubbed out, whether it be by indulgence or dissipation or cynicism and foolishness of any kind, a divine spark has ceased to glow; and something has been subtracted from the sum total of the light of the world. If we learn this first lesson in God's school, we will learn it well, and if we have as a definition of ourselves something superlatively mighty it does not seem possible that we may reduce such greatness to the common littleness with which so many people are apparently satisfied. Once for all, let us make up our mind to this fact, that life is the greatest of all things, and it seems as if we ought to treat it with great dignity and be exceedingly careful how we fill the time with foolishness and little things when we have been taught in God's great first lesson the greatness of his own creation.

Second Lesson—Two Choices

The second lesson which God will teach in his great school is that every human being faces only two things continually; and faces them with the power continually to choose. These two things are simply good and bad, right and wrong, life and death. This is a primary lesson in the divine university. The minute we begin to have any conscious existence, that minute we have thrust upon us the fearful responsibility and privilege of choosing. Now no one can choose to be either rich or distinguished at will. No one can deliberately choose to be a king or an emperor or a president of a republic and expect his choice to be fulfilled. Vast numbers of things like these are far beyond the reach of our choice; but when it comes to the choosing of the most vital things in life, every human being has it in his power. There is not a person in this room at this minute who cannot deliberately choose from this very minute to serve God the rest of his life with all his heart. There is absolutely nothing in the way to prevent such a choice being made by any human being here. As you sit here you can deliberately choose that you will not serve God. There is nothing to hinder you. Or you can choose as you sit here from this minute to live a selfish life and look after number one, make the great aim and purpose of your life the search for pleasure or the daily toil for money. There is absolutely nothing to prevent your making such a choice and living up to it. In the wide universe of God, nothing is so divine as this faculty of choice. You are absolutely unhampered. No one will hinder you in what you deliberately will to do on the right or the wrong side of conduct. You can choose to be pure or impure. You can come to the end of the day unstained by any wicked thought, or you can reach the end of the day with your mind filled with fearful images of unclean things. It lies entirely with yourself. I think this second lesson which we will learn in God's university is one of the most important of all. We need to get clear in our minds the great fact that we have got to work out our own salvation. Salvation is not free in the sense that it is thrust upon us whether we will or no. It is simply free in the sense that it is offered to us; but we must exercise deliberate will before it is our own. That is the eternal theology of God. He will never confer this degree of salvation upon us unless we choose to take it.

Third Lesson—Each One at Work

The third lesson that this immaculate, this unmeasured Teacher is able to teach us is that we are here to work, and so add to others' happiness and power. There is no excuse for the butterfly in man or woman. Play-time is simply an incident in the great range of the beautiful day's work. Nothing is so insipid and valueless and miserable as a life which has in it no purpose beyond the day's amusement. The master teacher is a master worker. No man has a right, no woman has a right, to this divine cycle of life unless the heart of it is ringing with the bells of labor. It was not a curse pronounced upon the first man when God said to him, "By the sweat of your brow you must earn your bread." That was a token of God's mercy, and rightly interpreted has been so understood by the workers of the world. Whatever we do in this world should add to its happiness, to its real power and to its real life. At some point or other every one should be a producer. The idler, the sycophant, the parasite, are as much out of place in God's great world as a beam of useless steel would be out of place hung upon the fly wheel of an engine or upon the driving wheel of a locomotive. The great Teacher would like to impress this lesson upon every one of his pupils. Might we hope to hear him say to us to-day, "Go work in my vineyard, go make disciples of all nations, go do what I tell you to." God has no use for the shirk or the idler or the useless in his great kingdom.

Fourth Lesson—Brotherhood

I think perhaps the fourth lesson the great Teacher wants to teach us is the great need of his world that every one in it should learn how dependent every other being is upon him; how necessary to a full and happy development of life it is that every one should do his part to help some one else. For centuries the entire world, civilized and uncivilized, has groaned under the insufferable barbarism of warfare. Why is it? Simply because men have not learned this primal lesson that God would teach: that men are brothers, and ought to love one another instead of hating and fighting one another. Why do the Christian nations at the present time keep up this old delusion, this awful growth of a dead past? It is simply because they have not learned the first child-lesson of trust in one another, instead of distrust, and have not learned the lesson of interdependence. If we could release the modern slave from his fear, the slave of political governments and commercial machinery from his fear, this unbound slave would leap up from his shackles and rush out upon the fields that are not tilled, into the waste places of the earth, into the great highways

Continued on next page

* Pastor Central Congregational Church, Topeka, Kan.

God's University

Continued from preceding page

at are possible for commerce, and arkets that are now not supplied, to e happy lives, tilling the earth, eating products for the enjoyment of e senses. No longer bound unto uel bondage to serve as hired marrs, to kill their brothers in the case some fancied insult to honor—nor which the nations have guarded ore carefully with their guns and ttleships than they have guarded the rtue of their women and the happiss of their little children. If the tions of the world were as careful d particular about the poor creres who work in the factories and in e tenements and in the slums as they e over their poor "national honor," would not be long before the world ould see the era of peace. But this the great lesson God wants to teach. think he is the only teacher great ough to teach this lesson, and that is e reason we ought to go to school to m.

Fifth Lesson—Consecration

The fifth great lesson we ought to arn and can learn in God's university the lesson of a consecrated life. It no use to get an education unless e gets convictions with it. Culture oes not mean anything except paganm if it is simply culture. Some of he heathen people, as we call them, of he Old World have vastly more culure than the graduates of our univerities so far as learning is concerned; ut many of them are unspeakably vile n their personal conduct. Learning oes not mean anything unless it is aplied to relieve suffering. Mere knowdge is useless unless it is used to nake a better world. By this lesson f consecration God means the whole eing devoted to the greatest possible ife in the loving of God and the oving of men. These are things the chools do not teach. They cannot be earned except by private tutoring with God. By consecration I mean that a man's body is treated like the temple of the Holy Ghost, that it is with supreme horror that one ever accepts a single impure thought or deed or a selfish passion which will hurt the master and the student; the growth of the whole life which affects not only one's self, but those who will come after him. By consecration God means the giving up of one's wealth in the divinest kind of sacrifice—saying to God, "This is your money and talent, not mine. Take it and build with it churches, schools, hospitals, asylums, missionary stations, refuges for the halt and blind and lame. Take this which is yours and relieve human distress with it. Rescue the child from his unnatural labor; rescue the woman from her impossible task; save these girls from lives of evil in the great cities; take this and touch it with thy finger, and redeem society; banish poverty, chase the pain of the world away." By consecration God means the use of talent like that of music and painting and literary skill and the vast gifts of science and of physical beauty; the using of them all in ways to make a happier, stronger, healthier world; the elimination of personal greed; the wiping out of individual selfishness. By consecration he means the whole being given up to loving, enthusiastic, joyful service. When we come to this word "serve" we come practically to the end of the lessons which God has to teach. For it is said, "Jesus came into the world not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many."

Will you make this choice to-day to go on with your education in the University of God to be taught of him? Will you choose to-day, before the sun sets, in the quietness of your own resolve, that you will let God teach you his deep things, and then face the future with a calm and joyous confidence that he will lead you on and up into the way of everlasting life? "Behold, God doeth loftily in his power; who is a teacher like unto him?"

Wisdom and Genius of Man

By P. G. MEATH

MAN with his wisdom and success seems to pry into the hidden mysteries of the world. With his telescope computing from the earth's orbit, he tells the distance and magnitude of Sirius, the Dog Star, millions of miles away. On the other hand, he turns his microscope on diminutive animal life and brings before the human eye parasites increased in diameter four thousand times and sixteen millions in surface.

He tells the distance, magnitude and density of every planet in the Solar System. He located the planet Neptune before it was ever seen by the human eye, giving its distance and location nearly three billions of miles away. He searches out the hidden treasures of the earth with wonderful success; analyzes them and applies them to his needs with great advantage. He stores and controls that invisible, subtle agency, electric force, making it the greatest power in the world to move the wheels of industry. Through invention, he has managed to travel both land and sea at wonderful speed and in comparative safety. And just now it appears he will successfully explore the heavens above him, flying higher than any bird has ever ascended. All this and much more can be said to his credit in an uncertain, transitory life of three-score and ten.

Now, if this life was man's only birthright—no ray of hope for a continuation of life further on—it could be said to his credit that he is wise and consistent. He is faithful to the light he has. But such is not the case. When we know he has the promise of a life far greater and better further on, and that promise coming from no less authority than God himself, we must admit that the old proverb fits man's case. He is "penny wise and pound foolish," for here in this life he is but a transient on the bounty of an hour. Yet with what care and toil he provides for a life so frail, brief and uncertain, giving little or no thought to his departure.

Man's failure in being truly wise establishes the fact that our Lord's words are as true to-day as when first uttered. "Strait is the gate and narrow is the way that leadeth unto life, and few there be who find it." Yes, few there be who are looking for it. Few there be who are really anxious to find it. And not a few who would prefer to climb over the wall rather than enter by the strait gate. The meddlesome would presume to improve on the authorized way. It is written in Eccles. 7: 29 that God hath made man upright, but they have sought out many inventions. And they still continue to seek out many inventions. Men have the presumption to attempt improvement on the law and works of their Creator. They would build a new way to the kingdom, a modern tower (Babel) built of vain, foolish, untrustworthy material, all to their own confusion and delusion. Spiritually, men are totally blind to commonsense and self-preservation.

If man could say the way of life was uncertain, dark and obscure, there would be some allowance for his failure; but on the contrary, the way is as clear as the sun above him. All men who enter this life are born of the flesh, and the way to spiritual life, as laid down, is to be born of the Spirit. Every man born of woman knows that he is born of flesh. In that matter he is not in doubt. And every man born of the Spirit of God is, to say the least, equally conscious of the fact. Is any man that is a householder unable to determine whether or not he has a tenant in his building? Is a Christian, being the temple of his God, and having that love and peace that God alone can give him, unconscious of his presence? Speaking from experience, we know such a thing is impossible.

If Job, in that elder day (when the Spirit of God was sparingly given to the world), could say in his hour of trial he knew that his Redeemer lived and in that latter day would stand upon the earth, now that to us the Spirit of God is given without measure; now that we have lived to know of the birth, death and resurrection of that Redeemer; now that we know of his presence, love and peace, can there be any room for doubt? We cannot be in doubt; we have opened the door of our hearts and the Lord has come in. Hence we are Christians, not because of our Church membership, not because of our peculiar creed, not because we belong to a body of worshipers who claim to have the keys of the kingdom, but simply because we are under the blood. We have opened wide the door of our hearts and the Saviour has come in. In a measure, we live in both the natural and spiritual worlds. We stand on the threshold of the eternal world and before us we see that there is no dark valley there. We have in our possession the Pearl of Great Price. In our journey on the high sea of life, it is for us the anchor of the soul, sure and steadfast. Doubting Castle and Giant Despair are far in the background.

Were the millions who claim to be Christians entitled to the claim and possessed of the evidence, there would be little need of armed men and battleships, but Christians would have instead the kind of defense we find in the fifth chapter of Matthew—namely: peacemakers, humility, meekness, mercy, patience, and purity. Those implements of warfare cost nothing and with them we are sure to be successful in the end.

The People in It

SOME love the glow of outward show,
The shine of wealth, and try to win it;
The house to me may lowly be,
If I but like the people in it.

What's all the gold that glitters cold,
When linked to hard and haughty feeling?
Whate'er we're told, the noblest gold
Is truth of heart and honest dealing!

A humble roof may give us proof
That simple flowers are often fairest;
And trees whose bark is hard and dark
May yield us fruit and bloom the rarest.

There's worth as sure among the poor
As e'er adorned the highest station;
And minds as just as theirs, we trust,
Whose claim is but of rank's creation.

Then let them seek, whose minds are weak,
Mere fashion's smiles, and try to win it;
The house to me may lowly be,
If I but like the people in it.

The Highways

Psalm 84: 5

THAT life is blest with blessings rare,
Whose strength is in the Lord.
In whose heart are the highways fair,
Kept open by His Word.

There is the highway of our Faith,
On which we meet our Friend,
The Lord of Life, the Foe of Death;
Our comrade to the end.

There is the highway of our Hope,
Which leads across the vales
Of shadows dark, where spectres grope,
Up where the light prevails.

There is the highway of our Love,
Cast up by heavenly hands;
Where with the pure in heart we rove,
Joined in love's joyful bands.

Along these ways from strength to strength,
We journey without fear;
And by these ways we shall at length
Before our God appear.

East Orange, N. J. FREDERICK B. PULLEN.

Anvil Sparks

..HE who doesn't give doesn't half live.

..THE man who is beyond approach is not beyond reproach.

..THE weaker the man the easier he can break a resolution.

..THE man who is going down in life isn't able to stop by himself.

..BLESSED is he who makes a religion of doing without, but woe unto him who does without religion.

..THE choir which sings so that the words cannot be understood is out of tune with the spirit of divine worship.

..THE world is full of "get-rich-quick" schemes. The church ought to promote all kinds of "get-right-quick" schemes.

..HE WHO goes the gait he should not go, shows the traits he should not show, blows the stakes he should not blow, soon knows the aches that are his to know.

Mothers and Mont-Lawn

By KATE UPSON CLARK

IT WOULD seem as though there could scarcely be a mother whose heart would not beat more warmly at the thought of Mont-Lawn. It is probably beneath the true number, if we estimate that fully 12,000 mothers during each of the last seventeen summers have been made happy by the love and care given to their children there. It is a thrilling and inspiring thought.

To realize the deep and permanent good wrought by this noble charity, one should talk with those who have themselves experienced it, and who love to come to the office of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD and tell of it.

One day three fine looking young men entered the counting-room there, and one of them proffered a dollar bill to the clerk in attendance.

"For Mont-Lawn," he said briefly.

The editor chanced to be standing near by.

"So you are interested in Mont-Lawn," he said. "How does that happen?"

"Indeed I am. We all are"—he pointed to his companions—"for the happiest summer of our lives we spent there, and we hope to be able to do more for it some time."

Such incidents as this have occurred many times.

On another occasion, a group of horny-handed workingmen entered the office. One of them asked diffidently, and with a strong accent: "Is this where they leave money for Mont-Lawn?"

"Yes."

He pulled out a soiled piece of paper on which five names were scrawled, evidently by hands unused to a pen. Then laboriously he counted out $3.60.

"Here," he said, "five of us want to give this to Mont-Lawn."

"Oh, but we can't take it from you hard-working fellows. No, no—you have to struggle to get along at all. Thank you very much, but we really ought not to take it. Enough rich people will subscribe to keep the institution going."

He turned to his friends and for a moment they talked together. Then he said with decision: "You must take it. Every one of us has had children there, and it did them so much good, we want to show how thankful we are."

It is the mothers to whose hearts such teaching and such care especially appeal. The best efforts of Dr. Klopsch's remarkable mind were addressed to the problem of making Mont-Lawn a truly safe and improving place for children, morally, mentally and hygienically. It has become the model for many other institutions. Let every mother and every one who reveres motherhood contribute freely to this beautiful and beneficent charity.

Successful Prohibition in Canada

THE ADVANCE GUARD. "RAILWAY BUILDING REQUIRES THE STEADY NERVES OF SOBER, RESOURCEFUL MEN"

By JOHN ARBUTHNOTTE

IF THERE is one question more biting than any other in Canada it is as to the best way to suppress the traffic in liquor. The struggle to find one has gone on for over seventy-five years. In the Canadian provinces it has come very near to being answered—so near that the traffic has been bound down to limits tighter perhaps than are thrown around it anywhere else.

Sir Donald Mann
Vice-President of Canadian Northern Railway

The Canadian liquor laws, in practically all the provinces, have come about through a cold consideration of the public good. The prairie provinces have more drastic regulations than those of the East, because they came naturally, as a necessity of development. Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta have been alike in treating this evil, but the most effective results have been reached in Saskatchewan, where railway extension and the necessity for sobriety in the wheat fields—the richest in the world—have joined with governmental policy to narrow the whisky market and almost to prohibit drinking outside regularly conducted hotels; and even there, a house holding a license must submit to inspection of all its departments, and live up to requirements that make evasion practically impossible. The main force at work in this reform has been furnished by the railway companies.

Across Saskatchewan, the Canadian Northern Railway has pushed its main stem, and up and down the province, branching north and south, it is putting in an enormous system of feeders. This work is under the direct control of Donald D. Mann, one of the ablest and most tireless of railway builders. It began about fourteen years ago, and has grown ever since at the rate of a mile a day. In such an enterprise there was no place for a drunkard, nor any for a man who sold whisky. The laborers must be sober. A very large proportion of them are men who would drink if they could, and the presence of whisky in or near a construction camp would mean delay in the work. Mr. Mann never has tasted whisky, and has no love for the whisky trade. Largely with his assistance, the demand of the people for stringent liquor laws has been complied with by the provincial parliament, with the result that nobody in Saskatchewan can drink when or where he pleases, not even in an hotel of the first class; and as to the railroad workers and harvesters, it has become just about impossible for them to get any liquor at all.

Though Saskatchewan has gone a little farther than the sister province of Alberta, the spirit and reasoning animating both provinces is very well expressed in an official circular recently issued by the Alberta Government, summarizing the laws of that province, and stating their ground.

"Temperance legislation more than any other legislation demands for its enforcement and administration a strong and healthy public sentiment behind it. The fight of temperance has been carried on in every age against ancient and deep-rooted prejudices involving the strongest considerations of personal rights and the exercise of individual liberties. The purpose of temperance legislation is to control the sale of intoxicating liquors and hedge the traffic around with restrictions in conformity with the will of the great majority of the State or community. The ultimate aim of temperance reformers is the total suppression of the liquor traffic and the disuse of alcohol as a beverage.

"It is apparent that the State as a guardian of the public health and morals is bound to use its great powers to restrain and control its citizens by prohibition or restriction, provided that in so doing it does not interfere with the inherent right of the individual to use any food or drink he may choose without injury to himself or others."

The whole province of Saskatchewan is divided into license districts, all subject to a license board. No one may have a license in any rural neighborhood where there are not at least fifteen dwelling houses within an area of 1,280 acres. This is called "a rural locality." In towns, only one license is issued where there are three hundred people or less. For more than three hundred, a license is permitted in a rising scale up to four for a population of twenty-five hundred, and one more for each additional fifteen hundred. Excepting to brewers and distillers, who are closely regulated, no license can issue save to an hotel, a wholesale dealer (for wholesaling only) or a commercial traveler who carries samples of liquors. No license will issue save upon application by a person who must meet certain prescribed requirements, and whose application must be supported by a recommendation of at least ten out of twenty householders nearest in a direct line to the premises proposed to be licensed. A protest from the other ten householders will defeat the application.

Selling liquor to a drunken man, or a confirmed drunkard, forfeits a license on the second offense. Sale of liquor to minors works a fine for the first offense, and fine and forfeiture for a repetition. There are interdicted days besides Sundays, and the opening and closing hours are very close together, as compared with those in the United States. Bars must actually close at eight o'clock in small towns, and ten thirty in cities. Bars are shut up tight at those hours, and all within must leave. Retail license is to all intents confined to actual hotels, and there can be no infraction of law that does not carry with it almost confiscatory penalties.

No checks or other evidences of indebtedness to employed persons may be cashed in a bar. No dice nor other form of gambling can be played on licensed premises. All the license fees are heavy, and so are the fines and punishments.

These are a few of the features of the law as applied to places having stationary population above a given number. Below the lowest given number, no liquor can be bought, sold, traded in or for, or given away, nor in any manner obtained—except upon doctor's prescription. Doctors, if caught prescribing it where it can be used as a beverage, are fined heavily. In the country, liquor is absolutel prohibited.

For a long time illicit whisky peddling was s profitable in construction camps that dozens of me were getting rich by it. They could buy the stu for a dollar a bottle and sell it in the camps fo three dollars. The business was carried on under ground, so to speak, and usually the first notice contractor would have that a liquor peddler ha been near him would come in the form of a drunke crew next morning, usually followed by anywher from a day to a week of idleness and riot. Rail roads do not get across continents by any such per formances.

One of the most surprising developments wa that many farmers were quietly carrying on whisky trade. They would have five-gallon keg cased up inside barrels of apples, and shipped t them at the nearest point on the new road. Fo a while this was wholly unsuspected. Then a con stable one day became suspicious of an apple barre that gurgled when it rolled, and bored into it with long auger. The auger went into the five gallo keg, and the whisky followed it out. The constabl waited until the farmer came to claim his barre and arrested him. He was fined fifty dollars, an lost his precious barrel besides, for the law direct that all whisky seized in unlawful traffic shall b destroyed.

Saskatchewan has been doing a great temperanc work. It has been demonstrated that temperanc at least can be enforced in towns and cities, and tha strict prohibition may be had in country places Thus an effective answer is presented to the ol objection that restraint of the liquor trade is unpro gressive, and a detriment to the business interest of a community. If that were so, Saskatchewa would be poor; whereas to-day, with the liquo trade strictly minimized in some parts and alto gether suppressed in others, it is one of the mos prosperous commonwealths on this continent.

General Notes

—THE WATCHWORD OF THE United Presbyterian Church, "A million dollars for missions and 25,000 souls for Christ thi year," was forcibly impressed upon the delegates at Washing ton, Pa., at the session on May 31 of the Fifty-third Genera Assembly in the speeches and reports of committees. J. J Porter of Pittsburg, chairman of the Ways and Means Commit tee, outlined plans to raise the $1,000,000.

—AN EXPLOSION, the actual cause of which was not ascer tained until several days later, occurred in Fort La Loma a Managua, Nicaragua, on May 21. One end of the Presidentia Palace was reduced to ruins and at least 117 persons were killed. That number of bodies had been taken from the ruins by the afternoon of the next day. It was then officially statec that the blowing up of the fortress was due to a political plot. Many Liberals, supporters of ex-President Estrada, were placed under arrest. President Adolfo Diaz, against whom the plot is said to have been directed; his ministers, and others identified with the government escaped unhurt. So far as a widespread revolutionary movement is concerned, the government has issued an emphatic denial, but the situation in Managua is said to be quite as serious as that which arose when the attempts were made against President Estrada last February. On June 1 troops were guarding the palace and public buildings, and de tachments of cavalry were patrolling the streets. The capital was then practically in a state of siege.

London's Most Beautiful Monument

THE completion of the beautiful composite memorial in London to the late Queen Victoria was speedily followed by its unveiling, with ceremonials that will not be forgotten during the present generation. The monument on which Londoners now gaze with pride, as all visitors must look at it with admiration, is the elaborate work of the well known sculptor, Mr. Thomas Brock, R.A. One of the first acts of the late King Edward VII. after his accession was to appoint a distinguished provisional committee to advise as to the best means of raising a memorial to the deceased Queen. Their deliberations resulted in the decision to erect a monument in front of Buckingham Palace. The scheme was munificently subscribed to by the British public. Mr. Brock (who has lately been knighted) sent in designs that won success in a competition which included the foremost sculptors of Europe. The accepted design has occupied nine years in execution. It consists of a great base, circular in form, on which are superimposed allegorical figures. Two broad flights of steps lead up to a wide circular plateau on which stands the wonderfully beautiful central feature. The Queen is seen seated on a throne in front of a massive and lofty pedestal. On either side of the pedestal are groups representing Truth and Justice, while at the back is another group representing Motherhood—a woman caressing three children. Truth, a winged figure, holds a mirror, whilst at her feet on one side is seated a woman searching archives, and on the other a boy holding a sheaf of palms. Justice, also a winged figure, clasping a sword in one hand, is in the act of raising a crouching woman with the other. Over the arched cornice of the pedestal are two eagles with outspread wings, the symbols of Empire. Above them on a superbase are seated two figures, Courage and Constancy, while above these all surmounting all towers the winged figure of Victory, poised on an orb.

The colossal statue of the Queen, on account of its size, had to be composed of several blocks of marble, but they have been so cleverly put together that the joints are not superficially visible. The figure, as seated, is thirteen feet high. The other seated allegorical figures are all colossal. The memorial occupies a circular space of 200 feet in diameter, and its extreme height is 82 feet. More than 2,000 tons of the finest marble from Carrara, Italy, have been used in the monument, some of the blocks weighing twenty-five tons. Upwards of 800 tons of granite were employed in the structure of the two flights of steps and the paving of the circular plateau. In addition, seventy tons of bronze are used. The total cost has amounted to a little over half a million dollars.

The central feature of the Victoria Memorial, London, showing Victoria the Good "looking toward the heart of the great city, whose people she knew and loved so well."

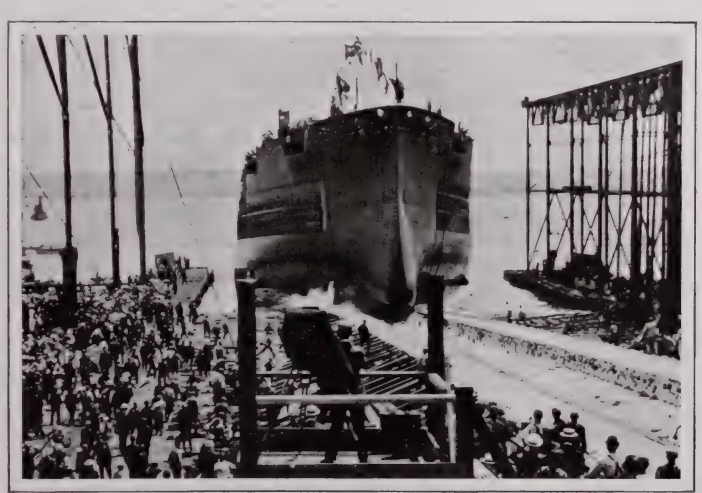
Mr. Brock has furnished various English cities with statues of Queen Victoria. Some of these are at Birmingham, Carlisle, Hove, and his native city, Worcester. At Belfast, Ireland, there is another, and in India there are three more, at Lucknow, Agra, and Cawnpore, while one stands at Capetown in South Africa, and another at Brisbane in Queensland, Australia.

REV. WILLIAM DURBAN.

. . .

For the unveiling ceremony the King, the German Emperor and the other members of the royal party were gathered on the plinth of the memorial. When the culminating moment came the King touched the controlling lever, and immediately the white veiling which had covered the statue fluttered to the ground. All eyes were raised to the marble effigy of Queen Victoria, the King stepping backward to get a clearer view, while the German Emperor gravely saluted.

In one of the British weekly publications, Mr. Harry Graham says of the memorial: "It suggests something of her womanly dignity, of her love of peace, of her devotion to higher things. And when the curtain was finally drawn aside, the scene upon which her statue looked down may justly be said to have been one that would have appealed very strongly to her to whose memory we had met together to do homage. The impressive religious service would have been pleasing to one whose piety was so profound, whose simple faith never wavered; the military ceremonial would have gratified the heart of one whose last years were troubled with anxiety for the welfare of the gallant soldiers who were fighting her battles in a far land. And it is not too much to say that she would have found pleasure in the presence of that imperial foreign kinsman who always held her in so deep a regard and affection, and now joins with those who are so often persuaded to look upon him and his subjects as the implacable foes of England, in that solemn ceremony wherein we consecrate to the nation a fitting memorial to the most noble of England's Queens:



"To guard her memory and preserve her story,
And stand a lasting symbol of her glory."

TOPICS OF INTEREST THROUGHOUT THE WORLD

—THE ATTENTION OF THE French Government has been called to a dramatic incident demonstrating the faithfulness to duty of the family in charge of the Kerdonis Lighthouse on the southeast point of Belle Ile-en-Mer, a windswept spot on the west coast of Brittany. Matelot, the keeper of the light, while tending the revolving lamp, was stricken with illness. He continued his work until he was carried by his wife in a dying condition to his bed. The woman was unable to summon aid in any way and would not desert her post of duty even in this awful emergency. As dusk came she mounted the tower to light the lamp and returned only in time to hear her husband's dying words. One of the four little children discovered that the light was not revolving, and their mother, realizing the danger of disaster to mariners on that perilous, storm-swept coast, who might mistake the Kerdonis for some fixed light, worked vainly long into the darkness to repair the mechanism. Finally, when she found the task beyond her strength, she set the two eldest children, aged respectively seven and ten, at work, and throughout the night, while a merciless storm raged about the lone lighthouse, their puny hands turned the heavy warning light.

—ALFRED G. WILKES, who arrived in Los Angeles from London on June 1, brings the report that under the name of the California Amalgamated Oil Company, Limited, the Rothschild interests have secured their first holdings in America. Mr. Wilkes is the managing director of the California Amalgamated. He says that this is the first step in a keen war of competition which the Rothschilds propose waging against the Standard Oil Company, and when the Standard Oil Company, as is alleged by Wilkes, broke its agreement with the Rothschild group by which Standard Oil was to keep hands off recognized territory, it became apparent that the Rothschild interests would soon look about for a foothold in America. The Rothschilds, he says, have taken over immense holdings in the Midway oil fields. The entire directorate of the California Amalgamated, declares Mr. Wilkes, is made up of Englishmen notably identified with the Rothschild interests. "I can say," said Mr. Wilkes, "without the least hesitation, that the Rothschild interests are coming into California to stay and fight the Standard Oil interests as they have never fought before."

—THE BOY SCOUTS IN CLEVELAND believe there is no limit to the field of their utility. Upon the heels of reports from Alberta and Saskatchewan, in Northwestern Canada, that a detachment of the young scouts had captured three desperadoes who had murdered a police chief, it was announced recently that the Cleveland corps of the scouts had declared war and mapped out a campaign against flies. "Swat the fly" is their battle cry. With weapons of every description, from a wad of newspapers to a patented wire "swatter," the boy scouts are chasing flies wherever found and ending their career as germ-mongers. Back of the boys is the Cleveland Board of Health, which is seeking to enlist the school children in a city-wide campaign against flies and mosquitos. The Board of Health is circulating literature calling the attention of the public to the dangerous menace the fly is to the public health of that city.

Copyright, Underwood & Underwood

U. S. S. "Wyoming" Going Down the Ways at Cramp's Shipyard, Philadelphia, May 25

—THE RUSSIAN volunteer fleet steamer Ryanzan, while bound for Vladivostok, ran ashore on a reef near Nagasaki, Japan, on June 5. The Crown Prince of Siam was a passenger on the ship, and he, together with all the other passengers, was saved. As soon as the news of the disaster reached Tokio, the Japanese warship Iwate was dispatched at the orders of the Naval Department to assist the stranded steamer.

—A LITTLE MORE than two months after he passed through St. Louis on his way to Mexico City to assist in restoring peece in Mexico, Jose Yves Limantour, once Mexico's financial agent in the United States, returned to that city and declared that his work was done. Asked whether he believed that the peace he helped to make would be permanent he shrugged his shoulders and replied that he would not talk polities. "I have been eighteen years in politics and I have just been through the trying scenes in Mexico," he said. "I am tired out and need rest. I am going to Europe for a trip of about two months." The party will make a trip through Canada and thence to New York, where a ship will be taken for the journey to France.

OUR EDITORIAL FORUM

OTTO KOENIG, President — GEO. H. SANDISON, Managing Editor — THEODORE WATERS, Secretary

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD is published weekly by "The Christian Herald," at the Bible House, Fourth Avenue, 8th and 9th Sts., New York City. The officers are: Otto Koenig, President and Treasurer, Bible House, N. Y. City; Geo. H. Sandison, Vice-President, Bible House, N. Y. City; Theodore Waters, Secretary, Bible House, N. Y. City.

Subscription Price, $1.50 a year, in advance.
Remittances should always be made in the safest manner available to the remitter. Register cash remittances.
Foreign Postage.—For each copy to be mailed outside the United States, Canada, and Mexico, add one dollar a year.

Change of Date.—It takes at least two weeks to change the date, after your subscription is renewed.
Expiration of Subscription.—The date on the wrapper indicates when your subscription ends.
Change of Address.—It requires three weeks' time to make the change. Give both old and new address.

Subscriptions may commence with any issue.
Letters should be addressed, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, Bible House, New York.

Entered at Post Office, New York, as Second-class Matter
Entered as Second-class Matter at the Post Office Department, Ottawa

Our Record Wheat Crop

THERE should be no excuse for short-weight loaves or higher prices for bread this season. Our wheat crop will be the biggest ever harvested. According to the estimates of the Department of Agriculture, the yield of spring and winter wheat together will be about 764,000,000 bushels, an increase of 66,800,000 bushels over last year. Spring wheat will total 284,000,000 bushels, or nine per cent. above the last crop. All the weather conditions have been favorable and the crops have had no set-back, with the exception of a drought throughout the country in May, but fortunately the dry spell was of short duration. All the other cereal crops are making satisfactory progress. It would be a poor American indeed who failed to recognize God's blessing in showering these material bounties on our land in such abundance. If the grain gamblers are held in check, we shall soon enter upon a season of agricultural prosperity such as our farmers have never known. What a contrast between our own favored country and those lands that are periodically in the clutch of famine! There are vast sections of China and India where a plentiful crop is the rare exception and other countries also are regularly visited by "lean years," when the struggle to exist becomes a hard one. When the countries round about Egypt were suffering from famine, Joseph's grain-cribs had corn in abundance and he helped their needs. We should be devoutly thankful that out of our overflowing cribs we as a nation have been able to send the blessing of bread to those lands that were struggling with the lean years. It has been our privilege to send help to Russia, India, Armenia, Finland, Cuba, Japan and China. This glorious work, in which the readers of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD have borne a foremost part, was made possible by God's goodness in sending us abundant harvests and general prosperity. We praise him for all his blessings and pray that we may ever be led to make the noblest use of them.

Anti-Semitism Rebuked

PRESIDENT TAFT did a wise and tactful as well as a just act when, in a recent communication to the Secretary of War, he ordered that official to reprimand an army officer who had displayed prejudice against a private in his command, because the soldier had a Jewish ancestry. The soldier was a candidate for admission to West Point, and the officer, after reciting the facts of his parentage and humble social standing, wrote upon his examination papers: "I would not desire him in my command as an officer and a social and personal associate." He admitted that the young man was "honest, upright, ambitious and probably deserving," but he drew the line against him solely because he was a Jew. Further he added: "I have found, except in few cases, few communities where Jews are received as desirable social associates." In his letter to the Secretary of War, the President expressed severe condemnation of this attitude, and ordered that the candidate be admitted to examination for a lieutenancy. Public sentiment will sustain the President. There is no room for anti-Semitism here, either in the army or in civil life, and its appearance in this form is an offensive anomaly which deserved the prompt and effective rebuke it encountered. Had the officer in question studied the pages of American history, he might have saved himself the shame of official condemnation. There he might have learned that it was a Jew, Santangel, who financed the memorable voyage of Columbus; that the same race was represented in the foundation period of our government, and that our forefathers were not unappreciative of the worth of the Jew as a citizen, for, following the lead of New York, State after State decreed political equality and religious liberty. This was largely in recognition of the influence of the Jew. As to the patriotism of the race, the Jew has borne his part honorably even from Colonial days. It was Haym Solomon, a Jew, who supplied in all over $650,000 to carry on the war of the Revolution, in which twenty-five Jewish officers fought on the side of the patriots, while many others of the race were in the ranks. In the Mexican War, the names of DeLeon, Levy, Dyer, Seligson, Mordecai, Davis, Henry and Hirschborn were made conspicuous by Jewish bravery. In the Civil War, seven Jews received medals from Lincoln's own hand for courage on the field. Over 8,000 of the race took part in that great struggle, although there were then less than 150,000 Jews in the country. They were to be found in both the armies and navies and over 600 of them were officers of various ranks, from general to captain. In the Spanish-American War they were there in plenty. Seven of the race marched alongside of Roosevelt at San Juan Hill. They were with Dewey in Manila Bay. By sea and land the Jew has vindicated his courage and his right to all the privileges of an American. To endorse or permit to pass unrebuked any official act leveled against a Jew because of his race and religion, would be catering to a dangerous prejudice which has involved other countries in shame and disgrace—a prejudice which is altogether out of place in our own land of freedom and religious toleration.

Madero's Patriotic Plea

MADERO'S stirring appeal to the Latin-American peoples of South America to unite in a movement for political freedom, is a fitting sequel to the success of the recent revolution. "We are all brothers," he said in his speech in Mexico City on June 7, "for in the conquest of liberty we see a contrast with the sentiments of sister republics. They are now going to understand our sentiments, but they are slow to fight for liberty. I know well that the sentiment of liberty has no frontiers. History shows the influence of the French Revolution on other countries. None of us shall feel satisfied until democracy reigns supreme throughout this continent." The great little Mexican, who led in the fight for liberty in his own land, may yet be hailed as the liberator of the Southern republics from the petty despotism and the narrow ecclesiasticism which have been stumbling-blocks in the path of progress and to which in large degree may be attributed the periodical disturbances that have unsettled business, made life and property insecure, and impeded political progress. Madero has cleared up the atmosphere in Mexico. Let us hope that the magnetism of his successful example may be felt from the isthmus to the southernmost of the Latin republics. Although Madero thrust aside presidential honors, which came to him after his success in the field, there is little doubt that the Mexican people will yet place him in the seat of Diaz. He is apparently idolized by the nation. Those who a few months ago derided him as a dreamer, a wild and dangerous enthusiast, belittle him no longer. All their prophecies of disaster have been reversed, and the little, dark-bearded, silent man has emerged from the national struggle with a patriotic fame that will probably make him the choice of the whole country at the October election.

The British Coronation

THIS is gala week in the English metropolis and throughout the British Empire. Coronations of the past will probably be eclipsed by the splendor and magnificence of the ceremonial which takes place on June 22, when the crown of empire will be placed upon the head of George V. But the coronation is only the beginning of the national festival, which will last a month. Every nation will be represented, our own included, and the English-speaking peoples most largely. It will be a season of impressive functions, with a richness of display hardly equaled. It is interesting to note that over 2,500 ladies will be present by invitation at the coronation to-morrow, 700 of them being ladies of title, including three duchesses of American birth, a countess or two, eight American baronesses and one American viscountess. One of the time-honored rules observed on such occasions regulates the length of the trains to be worn by the women strictly according to rank. Thus, while Queen Mary herself will have a train eighteen feet in length, duchesses will have six feet of finery trailing behind them, marchionesses, five feet three inches, countesses, four and one-half feet, viscountesses, three feet nine inches, and baronesses, three feet. All others below this rank must not exceed two and one-half feet, and no deviation from the traditionary rule will be permitted. But the great attraction of the coronati will not be the display of jewels, regalia and ro robes. The ceremonies in the venerable Abbey Westminster will be to the whole English-speaki race not simply the investiture of a new monar but the renewed recognition of the Divine goodn to a Christian nation. With the rich and impressi ritual of the Anglican Church there will be mingl prayer and praise and patriotism. And the clim will be reached when the King and Queen, havi been anointed and crowned and having received t homage of their people, put off their crowns a their ermine and humbly bow themselves before t Lord as Sovereign of all, acknowledging their dependence upon him and imploring his guidance a blessing upon their reign.

The Bible and its Assailants

FOR some reason, not altogether clear, the A lantic cable was burdened the other day with report of George Bernard Shaw's address at Ca bridge on "The Future of Religion." Of all perso Shaw seems the most unlikely to know anything value as to the future of religion. What he has say on these subjects is but an echo of Nordau, Positivist who denies God, the soul, and judgme to come," and who looks upon the individual as "unimportant episode in the life of the All," wh ever that may mean. And although Norda Conventional Lies of Civilized Humanity and Degeneration were published less than two d ades ago, the world has nearly forgotten him a his theories; but it has not forgotten or ceased read the Bible. William Jennings Bryan, the oth day in an address to the students of the University Pennsylvania, spoke in quite a different strain fr that of Shaw and Nordau. "For nineteen hundr years," declared Mr. Bryan, "this Bible has be attacked by the materialists and the atheists. B it has withstood all assaults. . . . The Bible h stood through all the world, and to-day the peop of the world are contributing $25,000,000 annua to missions to send its message through the worl

The Weekly Half Holiday

THE Saturday half holiday is a boon to worki people. It might become universal if othe than those engaged in direct toil would co-opera Most women who shop, for example, could so a range their affairs that they should finish the errands on Friday afternoon, particularly the summer. Few experiences are more trying the patience of the girl behind the counter than be compelled to wait on a tardy customer who com in at a quarter of twelve, is hard to please a reluctantly departs as she sees the closing of t outer doors. After the apparent business of t day is over, there are details to which attenti must be given, and thus a portion of the precio half-holiday is stolen from those who need it.

Contents of this Number

Wednesday, June 21, 1911

	PAGE
The Annual Rush to Europe (Illustrated)	631
God's University. Sermon	632, 633
By Rev. Charles M. Sheldon, D.D.
Wisdom and Genius of Man. By P. G. Meath	633
Successful Prohibition in Canada (Illustrated)	634
By John Arbuthnotte
London's Most Beautiful Monument (Illustrated)	635
By Rev. William Durban
OUR EDITORIAL FORUM	636
THE BIBLE AND NEWSPAPER (Illustrated)	637
Recalling Puritan Days in Old Milford (Illustrated)	638
Mexico's Show Volcano Spreads Destruction	639
Pastor Dixon's Farewell (Illustrated)	639
Our Mail-Bag	640
Our Boys and Girls (Illustrated)	641
By Miss Janet Porter
To the Gods of Toquay-to	642, 643, 649
By Leonora Beck Ellis
Thrift's Common School	644
The Baptist World Alliance	645
Vacation Bible Schools	645
How Prayer Helps	646, 647
Sunday School Lesson, by Dr. and Mrs. W. F. Crafts
Hayti Sends a Pastor (Portrait)	648
Our Comfort Corner. By Margaret E. Sangster	650
Young People's Societies	651

THE BIBLE AND NEWSPAPER

Conducted by FERDINAND C. IGLEHART, D.D.

teel Corporation Investigation

HE House of Representatives appointed a special committee to investigate the United States Steel Corporation and especially its ation to the absorption of the Tennessee Coal and ro Company, November 19, 1907. The testimony f ohn W. Gates before that committee made a ational sensation. Stung with anger at the deal nche personal financial loss he sustained, he was ry bitter in his charges of misconduct against the ited States Steel Corporation. He insisted that s company had crowded its weaker rival into a er and taken it by sheer force for a price far ly its value. He took occasion also to speak on methods of the organization of the steel company n of what he called the misdeeds of its life. As rt a sensation was furnished to the country at r by the testimony of Judge Elbert H. Gary, the utive head of the United States Steel Corporaio. At one of the sessions he sat for six consecuve hours, telling why the deal was made and exining it to the minutest detail. He claimed that he rival company was taken over to prevent a ncial collapse during the panicky autumn of , and that the price paid for the company was e than it was really worth. With the utmost kness he spoke of the memorable meeting at the te House, November 5, when Henry C. Frick n he had met President Roosevelt and Secretary &c., and said that the correspondence and records f he United States Steel Cooration upon this or ar other subject would be en freely to their inion. The statement ch astounded the nation re than all else in the timony was his willingss to submit to governntal control, expressed hese words: "Eventualcompetition must give to publicity and coeration. The United tes Steel Corporation uld like to know where it tands: would welcome opportunity to go to e responsible governntal source and say, re are our facts; what e may we charge?" s would be radicalism ong the radicals, such as ght have been expected m the lips of a few the more pronounced; it was a great surprise ing from the head of billion-dollar steel corration. For years neither business nor the courts the country seemed to ow just what the Sherman law meant. The deons of the Supreme rt in the Standard Oil l Tobacco cases are to much in clearing up the stery. Two great corations, having been found guilty of unreasonable straint of trade, have been ordered to dissolve. e Steel Corporation is now on trial, and a Consional committee has been appointed to investie the Sugar Trust. The Lumber Trust is being gged into the limelight, and it is likely that each at industrial corporation will be investied with the most careful scrutiny. There never sted such industrial conditions in the world be-re, and the people in this free government are ng to have wisdom and virtue enough by legal ocesses to compel the busines institutions of a llion or a billion dollars' capitalization to do right d obey the law as much as the humblest indi-dual or institution. In this just demand the nest rich man will concur as readily and cheerly as the poor man. Our nation is making comndable progress in its suppression of the lawsness of the mob on one side and the wholesale regard and purchase of law by the rich and powful on the other side. Labor seems more determined than ever to drive the lawless elements t of its ranks, and fabulous wealth says that, w that the law has been interpreted, it is willing give cheerful obedience to it. Our human statues are valuable only as they express the divine w as revealed in the Scriptures. These institutions that are undergoing governmental investigation may well offer the prayer of the Psalmist:

Give me understanding, and I shall keep thy law; yea, I shall observe it with my whole heart. Incline my heart unto thy testimonies, and not to covetousness. (Ps. 119:34-36.)

The Special Congressional Committee Which Is Investigating the Steel Trust

LEFT TO RIGHT:—Representative H. Olin Young of Michigan; Representative Charles L. Bartlett of Georgia; Representative A. O. Stanley of Kentucky (Chairman); Representative Jack Beall of Texas; Representative M. W. Littleton of New York, and Representative D. J. McGillicuddy of Maine.

Great River Under Texas

Geologists are claiming that the greatest underground river in the world flows from the Rocky Mountains underneath New Mexico and Texas, emptying itself in the Gulf of Mexico. This river is thought to be in places several miles wide, and it is believed that it feeds rivers that flow upon the surface. The artesian well belt of Texas is pointed to as the uplifting of the water from this river, often from 800 feet below. God started the great rivers of the world out of the snow melted in the mountains. He has cut a way through the rock on the surface for some. He has made tunnels for others and sent them under the surface to the sea.

He cutteth out rivers among the rocks. (Job 28:10.)

Hopeful Immigrants

Among the vast number of undesirable foreigners that drift to our shores there came from Russia the other day a splendid self-respecting family, which we hail with gratitude and hope. Frederick Schneider, of Odessa, Russia, sold his farm of 300 acres for $27,800 of our money, and set sail on the steamship George Washington for New York with his wife and fifteen hardy, healthy children. His 23-year-old son is already in Glenellen, N. D., where he owns a small ranch, and the Schneiders are on their way to join their son and brother. It will take $1,800 to move the Schneiders, and the head of the family has $26,000 in cold cash to invest in the Northwest. Mr. Schneider's $26,000 is likely to double, treble or quadruple in his lifetime; and as it is, he is as well off in proportion as many who have $2,600,000; not so much because he has saved this cash—which is a matter of importance—as because he has sixteen healthy, handsome, virtuous children, believers in Luther's Bible and his Christ. These are the best material there is out of which to build a nation. Domestic good fortune is thus pictured:

Thy wife shall be as a fruitful vine by the sides of thine house; thy children like olive plants round about thy table. (Ps. 128:3.)

Surprised With Fortune

This story is told in a telegram from Elizabeth, N. J. About a year ago William L. Ralston went to that city down and out. In the desperation of his circumstances he went to a rescue mission in charge of Superintendent Howard P. Scheckler, where he confessed his sin, accepted his Saviour and entered upon a career of labor and hope. He was competent, made a good income, and commanded the respect of the best people in the community. The other day he received word from Pittsburg that an aunt had died there and that he was one of the heirs. He went to Pittsburg and found that his share of the estate would be a quarter of a million dollars or more. He says that the first $50,000 of cash that comes to him from the estate he will devote to the endowment of the mission in Elizabeth that saved him. It is to be hoped that the story of his big fortune and good intentions will prove true. Gratitude for spiritual benefits and a desire to share them with others which Ralston's promises suggest are the natural fruit of a regenerated heart. Eternity alone can measure the results of rescue mission work. Christ suggests that class of work in the parable.

And the lord said unto the servant, Go out into the highways and hedges, and compel them to come in, that my house may be filled. (Luke 14:23.)

Job for Every Man

James Eads How, a wealthy young man of St. Louis, is devoting his life to the solution of the problem of the unemployed. He is a graduate in theology and medicine, is just finishing his law course, and has lived the life of a tramp for a year. Mr. How says that the Bowery Mission of New York, through its wide affiliations, has learned that there are at this time 4,500,000 men unemployed in the United States, when in ordinary times the number ought to be only about 1,000,000. Mr. How is organizing brotherhoods among the unemployed in various cities, and will devote his life to the solution of the problem of a job for every man. The mission of this young man has in it benevolence and piety. If he shall succeed in any measure in carrying out his plan, he will be a genuine reformer and a singularly fruitful Christian. The law of labor is one of the ten commandments. The second part of the commandment, rest on the Sabbath, is emphasized; but there is a first part which reads:

Six days shalt thou labor, and do all thy work. (Ex. 20:9.)

Massacre of the Streets

From a report of the National Highway Protective Society it is learned that in one month 45 persons, including 26 children, were killed in the streets of the five boroughs of New York City by vehicles, besides 128 injured seriously, including 39 children. In Manhattan alone 38 were killed, 21 being under sixteen years of age. In the greater city 10 persons met death by automobiles, 11 by cars, and 29 by trucks. In the streets of New York people are being killed and injured at the rate of 2,000 a year, more than fall in single battles of the world. In shooting across the border lines by the Mexicans, one American soldier had his hat punctured by a bullet, another his scalp abraded by a stray shot. Those stray shots provoked a conference of our State Department, and messages to Mexico, and apologies from the Mexican government; and yet 45 people are killed in a month in one of the cities of our commonwealth, much of which slaughter could have been prevented, and we go on as though nothing had happened, busy with the cent per cent., while hearts are broken and families are left without support and penniless. Unintentional homicide among the Jews was punished by the avenger unless he took advantage of a refuge which the state provided, so high an estimate was put on the protection of human life.

These were the cities appointed for all the children of Israel, and for the stranger that sojourneth among them; that whosoever killeth any person at unawares might flee thither, and not die by the hand of the avenger of blood, until he stood before the congregation. (Josh. 20:9.)

Recalling Puritan Days in Old Milford

PURITAN costumes and customs present a fascinating study for the artist and student of history. The picture illustrating the scenery at Milford, Conn., and the clothing worn by the Puritan settlers has made a setting for a composite portrait by C. Brower Darst, of New York City, using the descendants of Thomas Sanford in the preparation of the typical face of men of that family. At Milford, Conn., on Memorial Day a window was dedicated by the Sanford Association of America in the First Church and the dedication prayer offered by its pastor, Rev. F. A. Sumner.

Thomas Sanford, the Puritan

This window, designed by the same artist, had as its pictorial feature the First Church building used by these Puritans from old England at the time when Thomas Sanford and Sarah his wife joined this church in 1642. A large number sat down at the luncheon at 1 P.M. and the after-dinner speeches and Sanford stories brought the descendants long separated in their family movements closer together. This was the fifth reunion since Rev. Elias B. Sanford, secretary of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America in the Bible House, just under THE CHRISTIAN HERALD office, invited Rev. Arthur B. Sanford, now of Port Washington, N. Y., and Rev. Ezra T. Sanford to lunch with him, and then and there these ministers of differing religious faith found a bond of union in organizing the Sanford Association of America, electing Dr. E. B. Sanford as president, and giving official duties to the other two organizers.

After the unveiling of the window at Milford, an open-air meeting was held at Memorial Bridge, the westerly end of which stands on Sachem's Island, granted in 1651 to Thomas Sanford by the colony. In 1660 Governor Treat appointed Thomas Sanford to search for the regicides who were wanted by the King for their part in the execution of Charles I. of England. An old deed, dated 1674, with the autograph of this planter of Milford, the property of Carlton E. Sanford, of Potsdam, N. Y., who has recently published a Sanford genealogy, was exhibited during the day, and Miss Julia M. Sanford, of Warwick, N. Y., received quite a number of new names of members of the association, who give a dollar a year and receive the items of interest published as occasion offers.

The Old Puritan Church at Milford

The decoration of the Sanford stone on Memorial Bridge, placed there by John Sanford, of Amsterdam, N. Y., and Sanford graves in the old cemetery made the day full for the many visitors who came from East and West on this pilgrimage to the home acres of Thomas Sanford the Puritan.

In honoring the memory of their ancestors, the descendants but carry out the prophecy of t Pslamist, who says: "The righteous shall be held everlasting remembrance." Thomas Sanford, fr the environment of a Puritan ancestry in old En land, son of Ezekiel and grandson of Thomas Sa ford, a tradesman of Essex, was born in 16 and is first mentioned in New England as a lan holder in Dorchester, Mass., in 1634. His brothe Robert and Andrew and cousin Zachary had al come to this land of opportunity, even as Jo Sanford came to Rhode Island in the time of Rog Williams and William Sanford to New Jersey little later, all of whose descendants comprise t field of service for the Sanford Association America. Thomas Sanford and Sarah, his wi removed to Milford, Conn., soon after the foundi of the colony in 1639, for he is mentioned in t town records as one of the original planters of M ford. The life in that colony, made up of pio enterprising people from old England, was like un that of the Plymouth colony of Pilgrim fathers, a when one looks at a picture of this old Milfo meeting-house beside the Wepewage, as Ausaut way and other Indians called the Milford River, b side which Thomas Sanford was granted land, o can almost imagine such a scene as when John Ald looked upon Priscilla at the Plymouth Church.

One of the sons, Ezekiel, who was born at Do chester, and the other three, Samuel, Thomas, a Ephraim, grew up in the atmosphere of the pio people of Milford. Peter Prudden was the past who instructed in holy things. With his wife Sar and the four sons and three daughters, this Chri tian family were among the regular worshipers a church that required all colonists to be chur members. Peter Prudden's labors were ended death in 1656, and in 1660 the famous Roger Ne ton, son-in-law of Thomas Hooker, first pastor Hartford, became the minister, and it was und his ministry that Thomas Sanford and Sarah h wife finished their labors in the Church of Chri in Milford, and were both laid to rest in the cem tery in Milford by Pastor Newton in 1681, leavi behind them a large family of descendants to ent into their labors and follow in his hope expres in his last will made shortly before his death, sta ing: "I commit my soul into ye hands of G through Jesus Christ, in whom alone I hope to saved."

The large collection of family papers and a tiquities, including his autograph signature on deed to his son Ephraim, will be deposited with t Connecticut Historical Papers, and the spirit of t fathers who founded this land will continue und the blessings of God to make it a country where dwelleth righteousness.

An Out-Door School for Frail Children

SHORT hours of work and long hours of play and rest make school a thing greatly to be desired by the score or more children who have been admitted to the Phipps Fresh-Air School, which was recently opened on the roof of the College Settlement at 433 Christian Street, Philadelphia. This is one of the first completely equipped out-of-door schools to be opened in that city, and was planned and organized by Alexander Wilson, director of the Phipps Institute, to provide special care for children whose parents are afflicted with tuberculosis. Those who have been admitted so far are not actually suffering from the dread disease, but are what the doctors term "suspicious." Many of them have been ill and unable to attend regular school, while others are under-developed and unnourished and thrown into danger of contagion in homes where proper preventive measures are hard to obtain.

The school was opened through the combined efforts of the Phipps Institute, the College Settlement and the board of education. The use of the roof and two rooms is donated by the settlement, and the board of education has provided a teacher, desks and all the necessary books. A trained nurse is in constant attendance, and the children are under careful medical supervision all day long. They arrive at eight o'clock in the morning. The first process is a thorough washing, followed by a carefully selected breakfast, especially suited to each child's needs. At nine o'clock, lessons begin and continue with frequent ten-minute rest-periods, until 11.30. Then comes the "scrubbing up" for dinner, which is served at twelve o'clock. After a hearty meal, the youngsters stretch out in the comfortable steamer chairs arranged out in the sunlight, and doze away until three o'clock, when lessons are resumed until four. A light luncheon is then served, and the children play until 5.30, when school is dismissed for the da The little ones see thoroughly to enj both the work and t play of this new ord of things, and Dire tor Wilson is confide that within a mon there will be a mark change in their a pearance. They a learning many thing too, outside the reg lar school. Each chi has received a lin bag, individual marked, containin toothbrush, nailbrus soap and towels, a a comb and brush. T nurse, Miss Ma Blondell, has beg to see that these ar cles are used effe tively every day. An attractive little dining roo has been fitted up. And here, too, the outsi teaching comes into play, for the youngsters a taught table manners as incidental accompanimen to the wholesome food.

Resting After Dinner at the Phipps Out-Door School

The school is to continue all summer under t direction of Miss Grace E. Phelps, a former teach of the Randall School, who has undertaken t formidable task of teaching these ungraded pupil who are of varying ages. During the summer t children will take up gardening and botany on small scale. It is the ambition of Director Wils to have these children thoroughly strong and their regular school places by next fall.

100,000 Children Reviewed by the President

PRESIDENT TAFT spent a busy afternoon in New York on June 8 when he reviewed about one hundred thousand of Brooklyn's Sunday School children. It was Brooklyn's biggest annual festival and the officers of the Brooklyn Sunday School Union had more than 70,000 pupils in the parade, which moved in twenty-four divisions at various points in the borough.

Mr. Taft, his secretary and aide-de-camp, who were met at the Pennsylvania Station by a committee from the Sunday School Union and a small group of government officials, went directly to the Hanover Club in Brooklyn, where the President was welcomed by Mayor Gaynor. From there the party went to the Union League Club and were the guests of Mr. William Carri at the annual luncheon which he tendered the officers and guests of the Sunday School League.

Then the procession started for the Long Meadows in Prospect Park, where the largest preparations had been made for a Presidential review. Arriving at the park, the automobiles were allowed to go directly over the lawns to a reviewing stand in the center. The President's stand was situated so that a long view to the south stretched before it over the meadows. To the right and left, at right angles to the front of the President's stand, were two large stands filled with spectators. The park was crowded with spectators, and the police had difficulty in keeping them within the limits assigned to them.

When the President was seated, a mounted officer of the Twenty-third Regiment of Brooklyn galloped away to the south. In the distance could be seen a vague mass of banners and moving forms. Suddenly a band struck up, and the mass moved forward. As they mounted a little rise and came within view of the stands, an impressive sight was presented. In the middle came a big band, making stirring march music out of an old hymn. At either side was a mass of white-frocked children stretching away as far as the eye could reach, banners flying, little legs twinkling in and out, curly heads nodding and tossing, and thousands of "grown-ups" to give the gathering solidity. Four lines of stakes with pennants formed three lanes seemingly interminable. In the centre one came the band, and to each side the paraders, so closely massed and far-reaching that the official estimate of 20,000 marchers seemed inadequate.

The President enjoyed it hugely. He wore a continual smile and nodded, lifted his hat, and waved his hand in response to greetings from those in line. The latter were of all ages and descriptions. Little tots who had to be carefully herded by teachers when their enthusiasm threatened to break the lines were hemmed in by older scholars, evidently conscious that they were marching for the President of the United States, and knowing just who he was. There were elderly ladies who showed the fatigue of marching in the hot sun, and portly gentlemen. But they were all Sunday School workers. In other sections of the city the President reviewed those divisions which were too distant to go to the park to parade.

President Taft Reviewing the Sunday School Children in Prospect Park, Brooklyn

MEXICO'S SHOW VOLCANO SPREADS DESTRUCTION

COLIMA, the only active volcano in North America, was the focal point of an earthquake that rocked and jarred Mexico from border to border and ocean to ocean on June 7, costing in the aggregate no fewer than 1,300 lives and destroying property to the extent of several million dollars.

With the restoration of telegraphic communication on the following morning it was learned that the volcano broke forth in violent eruption on the previous Tuesday. Lava was thrown to a great height and the molten mass, which since the eruption of 1869 has not reached a point further than 1,000 feet below the crater, burned its way through the rank tropical vegetation that covers the west side of the mountain. As seen from the nearest points it seemed that a new crater had opened on the west side of the mountain, but owing to the dense smoke rolling up in an almost straight column thousands of feet high and covering the crater most of the time, it has been hard to ascertain the exact conditions.

Five hundred persons have been killed in Zapotlan, where the cathedral, built on the site of the one destroyed in the earthquake following the eruption of 1806, has been destroyed. The loss of life would have been greater had not the inhabitants, expecting an earthquake to follow the violent eruption, made arrangements to sleep in outhouses of cane. Many, however, were careless, as the eruptions in 1902 and 1909 were followed by only light shocks, which did no damage. A large detachment of Red Cross nurses and doctors has been sent to Zapotlan from Guadalajara. Other smaller delegations have been sent to Tonila, San Andres, Platanar, Tuxpan, and the city of Colima, where the mortality has been heavy.

Mexico City fell within the territory, getting the full force of the movement of the earth, but as the greater portion of the city is protected by the bed of silt which formed the old lake bottom on which the city was built, damage occurred only in the northern section where the houses are constructed on the solid ground that formerly was the shore of the lake. Here sixty-three persons were killed and seventy-five wounded and property worth $450,000 was wrecked. This injected a note of tragedy into what was to have been a day of pure rejoicing over the arrival of Francisco I. Madero, Jr. The property loss estimate is based on calculations made by owners and contractors. Little of the loss is covered by insurance.

About half of the dead accounted for in Mexico City were soldiers. They were caught beneath the walls of the Artillery Barracks in San Cosme, near the Mexican Central Station. Twelve women, wives of artillerists, also lost their lives. At the city power plant of the street car company eight persons were killed and six wounded. Steel rails had been stacked in the iron and wood departments there and fell on shacks built alongside the structure and demolished them. The barracks building was an old structure, but unlike many of the older edifices of the city its walls were thin. Seventy-two soldiers and the wives of many were sleeping in the house. The outer wall fell away, and the roof crashing down on the sleeping persons on the second floor hurled them through the ceiling on their comrades below. Those who escaped began the work of rescue at once without spreading the alarm for some time.

Two of the capital's old churches and the National Palace show effects of the shock. Long cracks appear in all of them. In the palace a keystone in one of the arches was thrown almost out. The two churches are Santo Domingo and La Profesa, the latter in San Francisco Street. It had been cracked by other earthquakes. After the shock the cracks were found to have widened and the building was ordered closed. The water mains of the city were not injured, and the light and power company suffered little inconvenience in operations. Some damage was done to street car tracks, but not enough to interfere with traffic, except on one line.

El Volcan de Colima is one of the most conspicuous features of the State of Jalisco. Because of the isolation of the cone and its fine contour it is one of the show places of that part of Mexico. The mountain is 12,278 feet high. The crater is almost circular and its greatest diameter is about 1,600 feet.

PASTOR DIXON'S FAREWELL TO HIS AMERICAN PULPIT

OUR illustration shows Dr. A. C. Dixon making his farewell speech to members of his church in Chicago, who gathered at the station to bid him good-by. A procession of about a thousand adults and Sunday School scholars marched to the depot with flags in their hands. They were led by the band from the Moody Church, of which Dr. Dixon has been pastor for four and a half years. They gathered on a vacant plot in front of the station and Dr. Dixon stood in a carriage and made an address. A great farewell service was held in the Moody Church on the evening previous to his departure, and his people bade him a most affectionate good-by. He was presented with a banner on which the word "LOVE" was spelled in large letters with British sovereigns.

Dr. Dixon has the distinction of having filled several well known and important pulpits. Two of these churches, the Metropolitan Tabernacle and the Moody Church, are quite generally acknowledged amongst the most famous in America. Churches in Baltimore, Boston and Brooklyn have also enjoyed successful pastorates by Dr. Dixon. Not only is he a powerful preacher, but a facile writer.

J. G. LAWSON.

Dr. A. C. Dixon Speaking from a Carriage at a Chicago Railway Station

A Shipment of 25,000 Bibles

THOMAS NELSON & SONS, the New York publishers, have started what is probably the largest shipment of a single Bible at any one time, viz., 25,000 American Standard Bibles—to the International Sunday School Convention at San Francisco. These Bibles go first to the Convention for the Adult Bible Class parade. The Gideons will then distribute them in the hotels of different cities on the Pacific Coast.

Questions and Answers

A., Binaug, Laguna, P. I. Can you tell something about the delegates of the Philippines, as to what they have done and what they are still doing in the United States Congress?

The secretary to the speaker of the House, to whom this question was referred, replies as follows: The Philippines enjoy the same courtesies as to representation in the United States Congress that are extended to Hawaii, Alaska, Porto Rico, and the territories in Continental America, New Mexico and Arizona. The delegates have the right of speech, but cannot vote. There are two Philippine delegates, called Resident Commissioners. They are Manuel Luis Quezon, elected by the Philippine Assembly, and Benito Legarda, selected by the Philippine Commission. Commissioner Legarda has made at least one speech on the floor of the House of Representatives, in which he advocated free trade between the islands and the United States. Commissioner Quezon attends Congress regularly, and has inaugurated a publicity campaign to focus the attention of the American people on the capabilities of the Filipinos for self-government.

J. L., St. Paul, Minn. Explain Isa. 55: 7.

It is a leaf from the prophet's personal experience. He had been a sinner and had known the mercy of God. He had learned that the Divine laws of grace are immutable as the laws of nature—that with like conditions like results will follow. God is not capricious in his dealings with men. "He is faithful and righteous; the same yesterday, to-day and forever." Every unrighteous one who forsakes his way and his evil thoughts and turns to him for strength and forgiveness, he will abundantly pardon. Thus the fulfilment of the promise rests, in the initial stage, with ourselves; we must leave our sins and turn in faith to God and the result will follow, just as in nature we must first plant the seed before, in accordance with the immutable law, the harvest can come. All of the promises may be ours, if we but fulfil the conditions.

G. S., Jackson, Mo. Please mention some things (suitable for boys) which I can make for a fair, none of them to be sold for more than five cents.

1. Pen wiper. (This can be made of almost anything and cut in almost any shape.) 2. Calendar. (Take a pad from an advertising calendar, or buy one for a penny or two. Paste on cardboard, decorated with a drawing or painting or pictures cut from papers.) 3. A large covered ring (suspended by a ribbon) on which to hang neckties (there are many kinds). 4. Puzzle cut out of cardboard (put up in envelope). 5. String box. (Cut down almost any box; make a hole in the cover for the string; place a ball of string inside; glue the cover on; decorate the box.) 6. Linen or chintz napkin ring. (Fasten with button and button hole; bind neatly; embroider.) 7. Handkerchief case of chintz or linen. 8. Match scratcher. 9. Some home-made candy, prettily put up in some box that you have saved. There are many more which your ingenuity should suggest to you.

A. E. R., Medford, N. J. 1. Define regeneration. 2. What is spiritual death?

1. Regeneration is being born again, and is the work of the Holy Spirit, by which we experience a change of heart. It is perhaps better expressed as being "born anew from above" (John 3: 7), being "awakened" (Eph. 2: 1), Christ coming into the heart (Gal. 4: 19), "renewing of the mind" (Rom. 12: 2), the "purifying" (Titus 3: 5). Man is not the author of his own regeneration. The change consists in the recovery of the moral image of God upon the heart, leading us to love him supremely and serve him as our highest end. It is wholly the work of the Holy Spirit. The change is in the heart and the will—in our moral and spiritual faculties; and the natural faculties, being dominated by the will, while they may resist for a time, ultimately follow the change. The evidences of regeneration are conviction of sin, sorrow and repentance, faith, love and devotion to God. In regeneration we receive from God, whereas in conversion we turn to God. 2. The "second death," to which your question applies, implies "everlasting punishment" (Rev. 21: 8)—the utter lack of all spiritual hope of restoration or assuagement. It means entire separation from God. Death, in the destructive sense, applies to the entire man and every part of his nature. We speak even now of men as "spiritually dead" while they yet live in the body, just as we speak of men who may be already in the grave, as "spiritually alive," and who shall never die. Spiritual death may begin even in this life. Death, therefore, need not imply extinction and annihilation. One commentator writes: "The proper life of the spirit lies in the harmony and subjection of its powers and disposition to the nature and will of God; its death in contrariety and enmity to him. This involves the disruption of a holy and dutiful relation with the Father of spirits, and by inevitable consequence a deprivation of the fruits of his love and favor on which life and blessedness depend. The whole man shall go away from the glory and joy of God's presence into everlasting punishment." Your other questions are purely controversial.

C. P. M., Detroit, Mich. Of whom was it said, "a man after mine own heart, which shall fulfil all my will"?

Of David (Acts 13: 22).

J. H. S., Jamestown, N. Y. 1. Please explain what is an Egyptian "dynasty." 2. Also say if there is any hope of universal peace until after the second coming of the Lord.

1. Egypt had a series of dynastic rulers, or successive representatives of different groups or dynasties. The first dynasty—the Thinetes, is supposed to have commenced about 5000 B.C. A dynasty is an unbroken line of successive rulers of the same family or tribe or clan, or from the same ancestral stock. Some of the dynasties were of short duration and there were instances in which two dynasties ruled simultaneously. The fifteenth and sixteenth were a double dynastic rule and there were probably others. There were in all some thirty-one dynasties up to the time of the conquest of Egypt by Alexander the Great. 2. While the general tendency is strongly setting toward the decline of war, the Scripture teaching is that wars will continue until the end of the present age.

G. R. M., Iberis, Va. Last Sunday in our Sunday School class some one mentioned Jephthah's rash vow. Some said that he did not kill his daughter. A local preacher said her punishment was only that she was not allowed to marry.

Commentators are divided with respect to the fate of Jephthah's daughter. While the vow is very clearly stated in the Scripture story, there is no definite record of its fulfilment. It was the hope of every Jewish family that the promised Messiah might come through their line and the deprivation of this hope would have been considered an especially heavy punishment, and to the mind of a man like Jephthah would have been worse than death itself. Volumes have been written concerning this rash vow, and while Josephus, the Jewish historian, and perhaps nearly all the early Christian fathers, held that the daughter was offered as a living sacrifice, Jephthah's act is nowhere extenuated. Josephus calls it neither lawful nor pleasing to God. Jewish writers unite in saying he should have refer it to the high priest. Many eminent writ including Joseph Kinchi, Ben Gerson Bechai (Jewish authorities) and a number Christian authors, held that instead of be sacrificed she was shut up in a house speci prepared by her father and visited there by daughters of Israel four days in a year as l as she lived. In support of this theory it pointed out that the Hebrew term employed express Jephthah's vow is the word נְדַר which means a "consecration" and not che-r which means "destruction."

D. H. S., Ionia, Mich. 1. Is there any diff ence between the terms "creation" "making"? The first verse in the Bible rea "In the beginning God created the hea and the earth." Does the Bible teach t God had anything out of which to m the earth? 2. Moses, Aaron and Elis had staffs to use under peculiar circu stances. Were those staffs canes or wa ing sticks?

1. "Creation" means, in the orthodox sen that God of his own free will and by his ab lute power called the whole universe into bei evoking into existence that which before w nonexistent. See Rom. 4: 17, Ps. 33: 6, Heb. 3: 4, Acts 17: 24, Acts 14: 15, Ps. 102: Jer. 10: 12, John 1: 3, Rev. 4: 11. It is nec less to speculate on these matters. If we cc cede the absolute power of God, we must acce his power both to create and annihilate, stated in the Scriptures. There are ma problems which the finite mind cannot who grasp and which must be accepted by faith left alone. 2. The staffs of Moses and Aar were neither canes nor walking sticks, but mo correctly speaking wands or rods of office, the possession and use signifying authority a power of direction.

R. McD., Leavenworth, Kan. Please expla I. John 3: 5.

It is one of the mightiest passages in t New Testament and in a few words compr hends the whole meaning of the Incarnatio the purpose of which was "to take away sin —the sins and shortcomings of the whole h man race. Man had missed the mark of t Divine purpose and Jesus came in the fle that he might lift the load of sin from ou shoulders, "for," as John adds, "in him is n sin." Being God, he has the power to do th to all who believe in and accept him. He ca pardon us and relieve us of the load and h can also save us from sin's dominion here after. Being man, yet perfect and sinless, h is a model for us to follow; but if he wer merely man, as we are, he could not take awa sin, however perfect or sinless he might b The essential point of the passage is that it not by virtue of the fact that Jesus is God, bu by the manifestation of that fact in the flesh that sins are taken away from all who accep him as Saviour.

E. K., Aylmer, Que. What are the duties an salary of the Chief Marshal of a State?

In most States, the Marshal is called the Sheri or the High Sheriff. His duties are to keep order punish law-breakers and preside over certain pro cessions and other ceremonies.

Eulalia, Millstone, N. J. 1. Was "Martha Finley the real name of the author of "the Elsi books"? 2. Please translate "mon pere" an "outre."

1. "Martha Finley's" real name was Marth Farquharson. She was born at Chillicothe, O. April 26, 1828, and died in 1909. She was a devote Christian and wrote many books. Her latest hom was in Elkton, Md. 2. "My father;" "eccentric, or "outlandish."

China Grateful for America's Aid

THE following letter, reproduced from the original, has been received from His Excellency Chang Yin-tang, Chinese Ambassador in Washington, and will interest all who have had a share in the life-saving work in China during the recent famine:

IMPERIAL CHINESE LEGATION
WASHINGTON

June first, 1911.

Mr. Otto Koenig,
THE CHRISTIAN HERALD
New York City.

Dear sir:

I take pleasure to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of 29th ultimo, and copies of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD containing the announcement of the close of the China Famine Relief work. Permit me to avail myself of this opportunity to say a word in appreciation of the splendid work your valuable paper has been doing in this connection and the generous manner in which thousands of your readers have responded. I need hardly say that the good you have thus accomplished is not to be measured alone by the number of those whose suffering and distress these gifts have been the means of alleviating. This example of American liberality will always be looked upon by my country as a material expression of cordial feeling of friendship and will contribute in no small degree towards drawing more closely the bond of amity between the two peoples.

Yours very truly,

Chang Yintang

Miscellaneous

Mrs. J. F. A., Greenfield, N. Y. Six hundre and sixty-eight churches and eighty-six thou sand members.

W. V. K., North Point, Va. 1. See a dic tionary for definition you want. 2. To whic "saints" do you refer?

The peace statue in Washington, a photo graph of which appeared in a recent number was erected to commemorate the close of th Civil War.

Reader, Free Union, Va. 1. It is entirely proper for you to extend such an invitation if you are sure that it is desired and that you are taking no chances of the humiliation which would result from a refusal. 2. A letter addressed to that gen tleman at New York will reach him. 3. The form of address you mention is correct for a friend or acquaintance. A business or formal letter should begin, "Dear Sir."

FOURTH OF JULY IN THE COZY CORNER

"WHAT SO PROUDLY WE HAILED"

Picnics, Parties and a Campfire Supper

NEVER in the history of our nation have preparations for celebrating the Fourth of July in large cities been on so magnificent a scale.

At least five of the largest cities will have Pageants-of-Nations in which every nationality living in those cities will represent themselves in some elaborate way. The Spanish element in New York, for example, will send floats representing, in all its splendor, the court of Ferdinand and Isabella when Columbus made his famous plea for funds with which to equip his ships. The English, Dutch, Italians, Germans, Scandinavians, will vie with one another to have the most splendid float in the pageant. With martial music and plenty of red fire burning along the line of march, living pictures representing some of the greatest moments in the history of the world will pass before cheering crowds of enthusiastic citizens.

Evenings at Home

PROGRESSIVE town in the Middle West is celebrating Independence Day with an open air performance of tableaux on an heroic scale, depicting fourth pictures of early home life in America. The Indian in his wigwam, the Pilgrim in his humble stone home, the Dutch patroon surrounded with the elegance and luxury that was characteristic of the Hudson River colony, the English nobleman on his plantation in the South, the exiled Huguenots in their humble elegance, the peasant Creole, the Spanish cavalier in his gipsy life—will all be pictured, besides the rude shacks, shelters, log cabins and sod houses of the sturdy Buckskin Knights who made their way into the Far West and weathered the undreamed hardships of pioneer life in young America. This ambitious celebration is to end with a torchlight procession in which all the citizens will march.

Another Stirring Fourth

THE High School boys in a little town in Indiana have hung up placards in the railway station, the village store, and on the trees along the roadways announcing

STIRRING FOURTH OF JULY.

PATRIOTIC PARADE AND PICNIC!

Every one in twenty miles around is invited to come and join the

CENTERVILLE CELEBRATION!

Any one who can play a fife or a drum, or who will make a five-minute speech, is invited to bring some picnic and stay to the CAMPFIRE SUPPER!

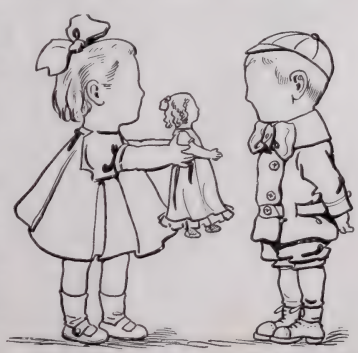
. . .

The programme is definitely planned and reads something like this:

Assemble promptly at ten o'clock in Court House Square. The Mayor will give the call to order and at the proper moment will give the command to "fall in." All join in singing "Hail Columbia"; this to be followed by two or three five-minute speeches by popular citizens. March through the main streets for an hour and return to the square. Song and chorus, "Yankee Doodle," voluntary recitations. Break ranks, and the farmers, it seems, have provided road-wagons enough to carry all the boys into the woods, where the pioneer supper of beans, flap-jacks and coffee will be served. While the supper is preparing there will be games and contests, and before returning to the village the boys will be rallied to sing "My Country, 'Tis of Thee," and to salute the flag.



Plan a Fourth of July Parade

THIS is a good suggestion, boys. Pitch right in and get up a modern Fourth of July celebration of your own. Get the girls and every one else to help you. Ask the village paper to print a notice about it for you and get the village photographer to take your picture. Begin right away, corral all the boys you know, put your shoulders to the wheel and do all in your power to get up a Fourth of July parade and picnic that will be a credit to your town and to you.

Speeches and Debates

IF YOU find you cannot plan anything so ambitious as a parade, then get all your chums together and, on the back porch or in the woods, or from the roof of the barn, have speeches and debates. This is great fun. Let one or two boys out of each "bunch" prepare a five-minute speech, and the others select subjects for debates.

Almost any thrilling hero story will do to make a speech about, and good subjects for debate are: "Courage versus Foolhardiness," Patriotism versus Jingoism," "The New versus the Old Fourth of July," etc., etc. In your speeches hark back to the days of the Buckskin Knights. Nothing is more inspiring nor fuller of manhood and bravery than the lives of those old pathfinders, in the most romantic period of our nation's history. Davy Crockett's last stand at the battle of the Alamo or Kit Carson's exploits as a trapper along the old Spanish Trail would make splendid speeches. The vast region from the Cordilleras to the sea, known now as California, was like the "Golden Fleece" of modern history; tell how Kit Carson and Captain Fremont captured it, and your speech will be a thriller. Let some one be sure to make a speech out of the life of Jonathan Chapman ("Appleseed Johnny"), the "Little Friend of the Pioneer World," who, unarmed and alone, crossed the wilderness in the days when wild animals and savages lurked in every cover. Get together meaty material for a good five or ten-minute speech and speak it out bravely. Your enthusiasm for your country's heroes will grow amazingly as you warm to your subject. Your chums will cheer when you drive a good point home, and will call "more! more!" Try it. Believe me, speech-making is thrilling. It will arouse more real patriotism in your hearts than hundreds of dollars' worth of dangerous fireworks. Yours for a good time on Independence Day, SPECIAL PRIZES—Trace or make a free-hand copy of this picture. Draw in the features and tell a little story in verse or prose about it. First prize, a kodak; second, a Junior League base-ball; third, a box of Japanese water color paints and twenty smaller prizes. All work that is up to the average will receive something.

The Aunt in the Cozy Corner

"Christian Herald," Bible House, New York

Ivory Soap is Not Too Good to be Used for Washing Dishes.

No soap is too good.

What is needed, for washing dishes, is a soap that is absolutely pure—a soap that will clean thoroughly but will not injure the hands.

Ivory Soap fulfills these requirements better than any other soap.

It is pure.

It cleans thoroughly.

It will not injure the hands.

"But," you say, "Ivory Soap costs more than ordinary laundry soap."

It does.

But the difference is small; not more than ten or fifteen cents a month.

If it were five times that much, it would pay you to use Ivory Soap.

Ivory Soap . . 99 44/100 Per Cent. Pure.

To the Gods of Toquay-to

By LEONORA BECK ELLIS

"IT WOULD be wholly farcical but for a certain serious shade to the background." Commenting so to himself, Esmond Levering shut off his own laugh with a sigh. "A work-aday citizen of the great Republic, I, the ever-practical, conventional, commonplace, to put it broadly, to chance in such incredible wise upon an island-kingdom, half-genuine, half-Utopian, and altogether savage, buried in untraversed seas, guarded by adverse currents that seemed to break only this one time and let my leaky tub of a craft be blown into this impossible port!"

He laughed again, mockingly, but resumed serious conversation with himself.

"Can I be still delirious, and shall I soon come back to myself, to find that I have had a touch of tropical fever, and am still in my Manila quarters? The Princess Wiyuna declares me now restored to reason, announcing at the same time, no longer ago than this morning, that King Matazino, her royal sire, desires an interview with me to-morrow, when the court physician shall dismiss me. Flashlight and peanut applause! Why, the story will be too rank for my paper, and when I'm back in my correspondent's den, I'll have to invent something saner."

. . .

Months later, Levering was still in the royal palace of Toquay-to—as prisoner or guest he himself could scarcely decide. Back at home, his paper had filled a gap in the ranks of its foreign correspondents, and the world was moving on no less equably because one rather clever young man had disappeared from the view of civilized eyes.

"I'm here, whether permanently or not," Levering told himself occasionally; "I'm very emphatically here for the present moment, and I see no earthly or celestial good to be attained by sitting down to the doleful entertainment of wishing myself back in reach of cables, mail steamers, white faces, and all that goes with these."

Of those scores of uncounted isles that swing out from Luzon, the central gem of the loose belt, Toquay-to, though tiny, is one of the richest and most beautiful. Matazino now held it by hereditary right, as kinglings of his kind hold many others dotted over the Polynesian waters. It was into this snug harbor that a wanton wind and current had sent its strange flotsam, months ago.

"It was a propitious chance that sent you walking down the cactus avenue and towards the water's edge that morning," commented Levering one day, talking easily, as always, to the Princess Wiyuna. "Propitious to me, I mean," he added, as she lifted her large dark eyes to his in mysterious questioning.

"The guards who had found me must have meant to kill me without delay if you had not intervened," he went on.

"They thought you already dead," the Princess returned, in quaintly cadenced but correct English. "But they would have returned your body to the sea that gave it. It is our custom."

He laughed a little bitterly.

"You forget," she answered the charge his laugh implied, "the evils threatening our frail little kingdom from strange vessels and strange men."

"I understand," he rejoined, fairly. "And death is easy to think of in a land like this," he added, in a lower tone than might reach her. "But what did Mata — the king — think?" he pressed her.

"He thought—but you were an American, we surmised, and even here we have learned the power in the name."

"So I have only my nationality to thank for my life?" Something had impelled him to urge the question. What was the feeling in his breast which made him think he might prefer to owe existence to another thing, to believe, indeed, that he did so owe it?

She gave him one slow, curious glance, turning away with the semblance of a flame's reflection passing across her smooth brown face.

Puzzling, Esmond left her. But he went to his appointed interview with the king certain of one thing: he owed his life to the Princess Wiyuna.

An hour afterward, Matazino was saying to him: "Alien, you have been most useful to me, and you can be yet more so. The men of your race seem born to plan great things. But would they make as good kings as councillors? I doubt me. Years back, one of your brothers stayed with me twenty moons. I had bought him and his family from a people I was trading with. His wife taught the Princess your tongue—you see how well."

"You bought them — they were slaves?" Esmond questioned quickly, repugnance in his tones.

"If buying them made them so, yes," returned his Majesty, quite calmly. "They had gone to the other people freely, and with a message the chief words of which I remember as 'peace and good will.' But they were facing worse than death when I offered a cargo of spices from the royal groves for the three. I thought it might please the Princess, who was sorrowing in her earliest widowhood. And it did."

Levering weighed all this in silence, and found several things growing clearer to his inner vision.

"Did they deliver their message here?" he asked at last, when the king seemed to expect him to speak.

"I would none of it—for myself or my people. But I listened sometimes to the man, when he must needs talk of other things, at my behest. Finding him somewise clever, I gave him better work for a while than his message. The Princess never seemed to tire of the Little White One and the yellow-haired woman with the bird's voice."

"Where are they now?" the young man found himself unable to refrain from asking, although fearfully.

"He is asleep under the almond trees over there." Esmond looked, with shadowing eyes, where the fat brown hand indicated, then back at the monarch boldly.

"No, I did not have it done," Matazino continued, placidly, facing the distrust in the other's gaze. "For," he added with royal naiveté, "he never gave me cause. It was a fever. The woman grieved without comfort, until the Princess would send her and the little white man back where they could reach their own. I might not have had it so—but her Highness has ways."

The royal eyes shot a look, keen, searching, in Levering's direction; but it was lost, for the alien's thoughts were full of the queer, sad little story.

Long ago, in his college-town, there had been a girl in whose power it lay, he told her, to shape his life to large ends and measureless happiness. But she could not see it with his vision. Work in the mission-fields of the Orient was calling to her even then. What if——

Matazino began to talk again, and Esmond followed with half attention, the other half straying after the memory of an elm-shaped street, where a boy, ardent, passionately in earnest, was walking, and at his side a girl like the new-blown lilies in his mother's garden.

Continued on next page

Startling 30 Day Offer ON "Ideal" FIRELESS COOKERS

20% DISCOUNT COUPON GOOD FOR 30 DAYS

Toledo Cooker Co., Dept. C. H. Toledo, Ohio.

Send free copy of The Ideal Fireless Catalog and reserve three Cookers, which two friends and I can order within 30 days at a discount of 20 per cent from the regular retail prices. This does not obligate me, but simply reserves cookers, allowing time to form a club of three.

Name _____

Address _____

NOTE—This offer is good only in towns where we have no dealer and is made solely as a means of introducing the Ideal. Absolutely only three cookers will be sold in each town at this remarkable reduction. Sign the coupon now. You'll never have another chance like this.

You've wanted a PERFECT Fireless Cook Stove—you intend to buy one. Get it now—get the best Fireless Cook Stove made—at a discount of 20%

THIS DISCOUNT is made solely to introduce "Ideal" Cookers. Where we sell one "Ideal" we soon sell several more. So, we're willing to sell a limited number at a 20 per cent. reduction, because of the extra sales that will follow.

How to Secure 20% Discount

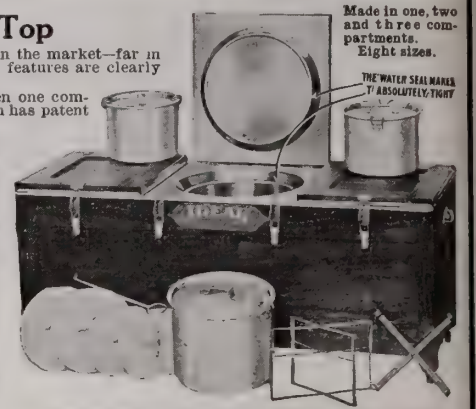
Mail the coupon. We'll send catalog. Then call on two friends. Explain that you can save 20 per cent. on the BEST Fireless Cooker made, if they will club with you on the Introductory Offer, made to only three people in a town; explain that all future sales will be made only through dealers at retail price.

Impress upon them what an exceptional offer this is—the most extraordinary ever made.

The "IDEAL" is absolutely guaranteed to satisfy. If not, money back. 30 days time is given to decide. We have been in business over 25 years, and have largest cooker factory in the world. Any bank in Toledo can assure you as to our responsibility.

The "Water Seal" Top

Makes the "Ideal" the BEST Fireless Cooker on the market—far in advance of all others. This and other exclusive features are clearly explained in the handsome catalog we send you.



Each compartment has separate lid. To open one compartment, you need not disturb the others. Each has patent lever lock and stop hinges.

Lined throughout with SOLID ALUMINUM—"Wear-Ever" the "Sterling" of Kitchenware. Will not rust or corrode—always bright and shiny—requires no scouring or scrubbing. Holds heat as no other metal can.

Vulcanized hard wood case, handsomely finished. Insulation our own formula evolved after years of experimenting.

You NEED an "Ideal" because of the food and fuel it saves—the more nutritious and palatable food it cooks—its convenience—the hours of leisure it makes possible. A modern necessity—not a luxury. Sign the coupon now. Begin now to take things easier—to have more time for yourself—your family and friends. You'll have a Fireless Cooker sooner or later—

Buy now, save 20 per cent. on your purchase and 80 per cent. of your FOOD and FUEL money all the year 'round.

Made in one, two and three compartments. Eight sizes.

THE TOLEDO COOKER CO.
1353 W. Bancroft St., TOLEDO, O

If you live in Cal., Ore., Wash., Idaho, Ariz., or Nevada, address 426 S. Broadway, Los Angeles, Cal.

5% On Small Sums For Short Periods

WHILE you hold money awaiting opportunity for investment, deposit it with this Company. It can be withdrawn upon short notice, and will receive earnings from the day deposited to the day withdrawn, and earnings are compounded semi-annually, or remitted by check, as desired.

Assets Over $2,300,000

In the eighteen years of its existence this Company has done business with careful investors all over the world, and has distributed over $1,000,000 in dividends upon deposits. This is a highly profitable, and yet thoroughly safe investment. Let us send you information.

INDUSTRIAL SAVINGS & LOAN CO. NEW YORK CITY

Industrial Savings & Loan Co.
2 Times Building,
Broadway and 42d St., New York

The Health Merry-Go-Round is a muscle and lung developer. Has four seats and is propelled by the feet and hands--it keeps children in the fresh air--it is fun as well as exercise--has a good organ that plays any tune, is ten feet across--can be set up anywhere--built of iron, steel and seasoned hardwood--can be had with or without canopy. If you have a sickly boy or girl get a Health Merry-Go-Round and watch the rapid development of the mind and body. Write today for details of 3 days' trial offer.

Health Merry-Go-Round Co., Dept. F-11 Quincy, Ill.

CORNS

Risky to cut corns—may cause blood-poisoning. Makes them grow faster, too. A-Corn Salve takes them out by the roots. 15 cents at druggists' or by mail.
GIANT CHEMICAL CO., Philadelphia.

PATENTS SECURED OR FEE RETURNED.
Free report as to Patentability. Illustrated Guide Book, and List of Inventions Wanted, sent free.
VICTOR J. EVANS & CO., Washington, D. C.

PLEASANT SUMMER VACATION in Jamaica, B.W.I. Manchester Ho., 120 Duke St., Kingston, Miss McLean. Neat, airy, near electrics. Reasonable charges. Refer to Rev. W. P. Alcott, Boxford, Mass.

CHRISTIAN HERALD PILGRIMAGE TO THE HOLY LAND

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD has perfected arrangements for conducting a grand Pilgrimage to the Holy Land. The splendid steamer Cretic, of the White Star Line, will leave New York at noon, Wednesday, September 20, for the Mediterranean, stopping en route in Italy, Greece, Turkey, Asia Minor, etc., and arriving back in New York about Nov. 21.

The itinerary will enable the members of The Christian Herald party to visit the Azores, Gibraltar, Naples, Rome, Athens, Smyrna, the site of ancient Ephesus, Constantinople and Palestine.

Jaffa, where the party will land, is the port of Jerusalem, and members of the party will proceed to the Holy City by train, for a comprehensive study of prominent features of Biblical interest.

Among the points of interest to be visited in the Holy Land will be the Tomb of the Saviour, Mosque of Omar, Mount Moriah, Mount Zion, Garden of Gethsemane, Mount of Olives, Bethany, River Jordan, Jericho, Dead Sea, Wilderness, Bethlehem, Temples of Solomon and Herod, Church of the Nativity, etc. An early booking will secure first choice of accommodations.

For complete information and illustrated booklet with itinerary, address:

CHRISTIAN HERALD PILGRIMAGE BUREAU,
BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK CITY

To the Gods of Toquay-to

Continued from preceding page

'Prime minister you would call it," tazino was saying when Esmond ne fully back to the present.

'Prime minister, yes?" Esmond re-ited, with vague questioning, when king's emphatic pause indicated pectation of some rejoinder.

But the king did not proceed at once. ien he did, the American sat up very aight, a look of amazement blazing idenly in his fine eyes.

'My kingdom needs such a vizier as i might make," Matazino was meas-ng it off studiedly. "A white man's nd can point a course well. That is t all. To render you secure in your gh place, steadfast-rooted in my ople's honor and fealty, I will pub-ly betroth you, at Moon of May, to e Princess Wiyuna, sole daughter of r royal house."

Under other circumstances, Esmond vering's very American thought uld have been: "Where did the old undrel learn this art?" But not w. His own strange plight absorbed ery other consideration. Unmindful court etiquette, he arose and strode ross to a casement giving on to the de, sunlit bay. Matazino, watching e foreigner, drew his beetling brows wn low.

At this moment of strain, a messen-r with tidings of deep moment was nounced, and speedily entered, abas-g himself at the royal feet.

"Good news, my Sovereign! We ve conquered Cruziamia. The larger ats follow, with the prisoners and ch spoils. There are white captives, so, a pair of them. The male will doubt prove a suitable oblation in e temple-rites soon to be, while his ate our king may bestow upon the worthy servant at his feet, if no her shall offer to relieve him of her."

Swept along by his desires, Aguerrio ad poured out too much for a first nnouncement. The king, pleased in e beginning, was scowling darkly hen the messenger ended. With a esture towards Levering, he dis-issed the victorious chief, with no gn of royal favor further than the rst gleam of the eye shown him. The oung man gazing from the casement ad been too wholly wrapped up in his wn thoughts to note the chief's jumble f news and petition.

. . .

In the Toquay-to year there is one nique celebration, a festival designated the language of the Isles as "Moon f May." The population of the whole ealm then pours into the capital, dorned with wondrous splendor. tately festivities fill the day; and by ight, with the May moon at full meri-ian, her flood of violet light illuminat-ng the palace, the great temple, and ven the meaner dwellings, there can e only joyance and gayety. When oon of the last day of the festival omes, a procession moves slowly to-ard the vast white temple, following flashing opaline casket, wherein re-oses the pride of all the Isles, "the loon of May," a wondrous jewel, ound ages ago, it is told, blazing plendidly from the shrine itself.

In the temple's front stands a dais f marble, and here on its pedestal the riests set down the casket, open, and et the peerless wonder laugh back at he sun, its unfeared rival. Around it ance the maids of the Isles, singing oyous pæans and strewing fragrant lossoms.

Grouped near were king and cour-iers, among them Esmond Levering. The American's gaze was first upon he mighty violet diamond, sole one of ts kind, he believed, in the world.

"What think you of it?"

"The stone?" asked Levering, his aze going back with pleasure to the adiant thing.

"Stone, if you will; gift of the gods; Moon of May?"

"It is positively a miracle of beauty and brilliance," responded the young man, "revealed, one might fancifully say, to defeat the arbitrary claim that no violet diamonds exist."

Again the king's eyes were fixed on him, with that dull yet incisive gaze. But the monarch only asked: "And how does it compare with other gems you have seen in the vast world you prate to me of?"

"In truth, I know none that would not pale or flaw beside it—and I have seen the Kohinoor."

"No other jewel exists, will ever exist, I trust," spoke a low voice at Esmond's side, "the tradition of whose splendid being binds a people to so terrible a rite as this of ours."

Levering started, turning sharply to gaze into the mournful eyes of the Princess Wiyuna.

"What tradition, what rite?" he demanded.

"Are you wholly unprepared, then?" asked she, lowering her tone yet more, and watching her royal sire, whom one of the priests was engaging momentarily. "Do you not understand that, to keep this marvelous effulgence at full flame, there must be every year a hideous oblation, demanding the blood of——"

Matazino was summoning Levering in harsh, imperious tones, to fall in at his left, the Princess on his right. The procession was forming anew, to move forward, up the flower-strewn steps, the deep aisles of the temple, and to the altar's foot.

Esmond's eyes, wide, excited now, kept on the Princess when he could see her, as they moved slowly forward to the dirge-like chanting. What could she mean? what was he to witness at this pagan celebration, after all?

"Those lambs and bullocks will be slain, of course," he told himself, with relief. "The Princess, who is intensely womanly, thank fortune, hates the sight and smell of blood; and no doubt is sufficiently enlightened to feel aversion for so absurd a superstition."

A slight shifting of position had brought his betrothed into full range of his vision. He thought no more of the Moon of May.

In the next minute, life changed suddenly, poignantly, for Esmond Levering. He roused from thought; they had halted near the altar. The dirge-like chant had modified, ceased, then risen again, this time as a wild incantation, of which he grasped but half the meaning. Yet—that gleaming blade swung with lusty good will by the strong-armed hierarch, here, within the shrine? He had held some vague notion that the slaughtering of the beasts was finished up outside, and only certain parts brought within as some kind of oblation.

The throng parted, the wild song rose higher, became a thrilling requiem; a pair of captives were led forward.

The man was bound hand and foot, with breast bared for the knife. The woman, young, slender, was struggling passionately to break her fetters and reach him.

With a mad surge the blood seemed to leave the heart of Levering, while it stood still. He had heard this captive husband and wife alluded to some days before, but thought them of Malay race, and secure of their lives if no more. In the stress of his own personal matters, he had not found time to think of them beyond that. But now, they were white, they were Americans, and the man at least was destined to immediate death.

Leaping from his station between the king and the Princess, whose face was covered from the monstrous sight, Levering broke into the ring of hierophants, so staying the unholy rite.

Continued on page 649

Backed by 38 Years of Experience

If there's a mistaken idea about Holeproof Hose, please let us correct it. "Holeproof" are soft, light-weight and cool—not bulky or coarse in the least. No better hose than "Holeproof" can be made. They are the long-sought result after 38 years of hose-making experience—the original guaranteed hose perfected. Don't judge "Holeproof" by vastly inferior makes—hose created and made just to compete in stores with "Holeproof." No other hosiery ever attempted to compete with "Holeproof" on the foot, for that's where the difference appears. You must wear genuine "Holeproof" to know this—so don't accept imitation makes with a name like "Holeproof's" and the same guarantee.

FAMOUS Holeproof Hosiery FOR MEN WOMEN AND CHILDREN

All the Newest Summer Colors Now on Show

Our yarn costs an average of 70c per pound. We could use 50c yarn, but the hose wouldn't be soft and attractive like "Holeproof."

We spend $55,000 a year merely for inspection. So every pair is right.

Six pairs of plain and mercerized cotton "Holeproof," guaranteed for six months, cost $1.50 up to $3.00, according to finish and weight. The weights are the very lightest — made for the warmest summer's wear.

They are made for men, women and children. We make them in silk for men and women—three pairs guaranteed three months — for men $2.00, for women $3.00.

There are twelve colors, ten weights and five grades for men; seven colors, three weights and three grades for women, and two colors, two weights and three grades for children.

We don't know where you can get hose like these, though you pay more and ask for "Holeproof." Don't you want to try the real "Holeproof"?

Carl Freschl, Pres.

That signature and the "Holeproof" trade mark appear on the toe of the genuine. Look for them and you can't make a mistake.

The genuine "Holeproof" are sold in your town. We'll tell you the dealer's name on request, or ship direct where we have no dealer, charges prepaid on receipt of remittance.

Write for free book, "How to Make Your Feet Happy."

Reg. U. S. Pat. Office, 1906

Holeproof Hosiery Co., 890 Fourth Street, Milwaukee, Wis.

Holeproof Hosiery Co. of Canada, Ltd., London, Can., Distributors for Canada
Tampico News Co., S. A., City of Mexico, Agents for Mexican Republic

Are Your Hose Insured?

Carl Freschl, Pres.

(188)

USE MAPLEINE

The "Flavor de Luxe" For Summer Desserts

Its irresistibly delicious flavor will be a revelation to you in making ice cream, ices, custards, jellies, whipped cream, etc., and you will miss a real dessert treat if you don't try it.

Mapleine is not an imitation of anything, but an original flavor—better than maple. It makes a smacking good syrup by dissolving white sugar in boiling water and adding the Mapleine.

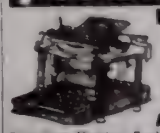
Write for our book of "Mapleine Dainties"

It tells you how to use Mapleine to add zest and a smack of goodness to everything that calls for a flavoring.

Grocers sell Mapleine—35c. (Canada 50c.) for a 2-oz. bottle. If not, send direct to Dept F.

Crescent Mfg. Co.
Seattle, Wash.

REVERSIBLE "Linene" COLLARS



Try a Linene Collar

That's the only way to prove our statement that you can get more comfort and convenience for the money in a Linene collar than in any other.

Price at the stores, 25c per box of 10, or by mail 30c in U.S. stamps. Sample by mail for 6c. State size and style.

Reversible Collar Co.
Dept. T, Boston, Mass.

TYPEWRITERS ALL MAKES VISIBLE WRITERS
or otherwise

L. C. SMITHS, OLIVERS, UNDERWOODS, Etc.
¼ to ½ M'F'RS PRICES
Shipped ANYWHERE for Free Trial, or RENTED allowing Rent to APPLY
PRICES $15.00 UP
First-class Machines Fresh from the Mfrs.—Write for Illustrated Catalog 71
Typewriter Emporium. (EST. 1892) 92-94 LAKE ST., CHICAGO

ORNAMENTAL FENCE
25 Designs—All Steel
Handsome, cost less than wood, more durable. Don't buy [illegible] until you get our Free Catalog and Special Prices.
We can save you money.
Kokomo Fence Machine Co.
409 North St., Kokomo, Ind.

STAMPS 100 all different Albums and Hinges, only 12c. 50 Assorted Stamps 15c. 200 all different stamps 25c. 20 different Foreign coins 25c. We buy stamps and Coins. Buying lists, 10c. each. TOLEDO STAMP CO., Toledo, O.

ZOBO THE MUSICAL WONDER.
YOU CAN PLAY IT Without Learning
Sing into the mouthpiece. Zobo plays the part. For Home, Church and Sunday School Entertainments. Full information FREE on request.
STRAUSS MFG. CO., 355 Broadway, Dept. 19, New York

Safety and 5%

$500 First Mortgage Real Estate Notes

Secured by a Deed of Trust on a specific parcel of high grade improved Real Estate.

We own and offer, subject to prior sale, the unsold portion of the following issues:

Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary

Fort Worth, Texas. Total mortgage, $60,000; valuation of security, $150,000. Notes payable serially, one to five years.

First Presbyterian Church

Spokane, Wash. Total mortgage, $40,000; valuation of security, $146,000. Notes payable serially, one to five years.

Right Rev. John B. Morris

Little Rock, Ark. Total mortgage, $70,000; valuation of security, $190,000. Notes payable serially, one to ten years.

Broadway Baptist Church

Fort Worth, Texas. Total mortgage, $20,000; valuation of security, $70,000. Notes payable serially, one to five years.

Corner Realty Company

St. Louis, Mo. Total mortgage, $425,000; valuation of security, $700,000. Notes payable May 1, 1916.

The above are only a few of the many First Mortgage Real Estate Notes we have to offer. On request, complete detail circulars of all issues will be sent you, giving full description of properties, amount of insurance and the maturities available. All interest payable semi-annually, evidenced by interest coupons.

A most convenient form of investment with absolute security.

Price any maturity to yield 5%.

Real Estate Loan Department

Mercantile Trust Co.

SAINT LOUIS, MO.

Capital and Surplus:
Nine and One-half Million Dollars

In answering, mention The Christian Herald

The Guaranty Trust Company of New York, 28 Nassau Street, will be pleased to furnish upon request a new circular describing a selected list of railroad and industrial bonds yielding from 4¼% to 6%. Ask for circular D-142.

Thrift's Common School

WHEN the Franco-Prussian War closed in the spring of 1871, the successful Germans imposed on the defeated French an indemnity of $1,000,000,000. Before six months France had paid off every cent of this enormous assessment. Any other European country would have been forced to raise a loan through the world's great banking houses, but not so France. To be sure, as the war had exhausted the State treasury, she had to borrow, but not from the stranger. She turned to her own people and told them of her pressing needs. No, the people to whom she appealed were not titled nobles with great landed estates, nor great capitalists and bankers; they were the peasant farmer and small shop-keeper, though it should be said in justice to the patriots of France, that in this time of the motherland's stress, neither the high nor the lowly held back, but nine-tenths of the whole amount was contributed by the toilers, who having learned to save in Thrift's Common School, now showed that their sense of duty and their love for their country had not been deadened by the long years of hard toil and close saving.

A Land of Effort

In proportion to her population and natural resources France is to-day the richest country in the world. Her money is invested in great enterprises in every land. Governments in distress, as Russia was recently, go to the French bankers for loans, and they usually get them, and invariably pay heavily for the privilege. "But where do the bankers get all these vast sums of money?" you ask. Why, from the French toilers, who always have money to loan to a good customer and at a good price. "But where do the French people get all this money?" The reply is: First, they earn it by producing, through hard work, things that some one else is always eager to buy; and, second, they save the money they receive in return.

Yes; the French toiler has always been thrifty. Being an honest, well-balanced man, he cannot dissipate, through sinful extravagance, a substance representing the patient toil and the self-denying thrift of years. He was formerly a loyalist wearing out his life in the furrow, or yielding it on the battlefield for a monarch whom he could neither love nor respect; now, he coins his effort into things his own, for he has come to understand in his wider republican liberty that, in the sight of God, the sweat that glistens on the brow of labor is more beautiful than the jewels that flash on the crown of a king.

Years ago, and before the French people had reached even the kindergarten stage of thrift—a stage that insures some returns from savings—they hid their money, as so many of our good people still do over here, in stockings, or mattresses, or any other place that to them meant safety and concealment. After this came a kindergarten training in the use of money, a time when the very smallest increase to their hoardings was regarded as a gift from heaven, for it took no toll of toil, and having inherited the saving habit they gave no thought to the thrift, that, before the world spoke for itself.

Thrift in France

To-day the French workman has advanced in education to Thrift's Common School. Savings banks, through private enterprise but under strict government supervision, have been established in all the cities, towns, and larger villages; and to give something like equal opportunities to those not so favorably placed, postal savings banks have been made accessible to the fisherman by the shore and to the mountaineer cultivating his bit of vineyard, or raising his few sheep far up the rocky mountain side.

And now the French peasant, having learned the earning power of money and its wonderful way of increasing through the prompt reinvestment of interest, is growing richer and mentally more alert. If a railroad is to be built, a canal dug, or a promising factory erected within reach, he and his associates are ready to provide the money, if satisfied as to the returns and the security; and so it is too if a municipality or their own or another country needs money; they are ready to give it under the same conditions as to safety.

Systematic Safety

My reasons for dwelling on the example the French workmen have set their fellow toilers throughout the world are too obvious to need explanation. Many of our own workers in this country have not yet entered the kindergarten school for financial training. They are dwellers in a new, rich land where nature is most lavish of her bounties and where the cold grip of hunger is but seldom felt; but with the vanishing of our frontier to the West, the struggle for existence has become more acute and the necessity for systematic saving is agitating the minds of men with families to care for and an eye to the unproductive days of old age, as never before.

The opportunities still being afforded the workingman in this country are not surpassed, not even equaled, by those of any other land. Wages are higher here than elsewhere, and the cost of living lower, while the living is very much better. To be sure, rents are high, and this because tenement investments demand large returns. Our wisest farmers and our industrious mechanics, though never rewarded to the full, are still in a position not only to keep out of debt, but also to show a balance for investment. We can no longer give a thought to the stocking or the mattress when considering the savings of Americans with a good public school education and some knowledge gained in Thrift's Common School.

A Dollar a Week

"It is mighty hard," said an unfortunate workingman some time ago to the writer, "to save up a thousand dollars by laying aside a dollar or two a week and then to take it out of the savings bank and lose it to a get-rich-quick swindler, as I have just done." This poor fellow could work and save, but he had not had even a kindergarten education in finance, else his story would have been different. He had never given a thought to interest, and so was absolutely ignorant of growth through compound interest, and of course had never heard of that wonderful process of accumulation known as "progressive compound interest."

One dollar deposited in a savings bank that pays four per cent. will amount to $2.19 in twenty years. This is simple compound interest. Now if you deposit one dollar every year for twenty years, or $20 in all, the sum to your credit will have grown to $30.97. Any man or other wage-earner can put by one dollar a week. That money deposited in a savings bank for twenty years will have increased to $1,612. A deposit of five dollars a week will have grown to $8,000, and this at four per cent. will be $320 a year. There is no secret, no mystery about this. It is clear as the cloudless sun and the method is just as clean and honest.

The savings bank is in the essential primary grade in the common school of finance, and this applies equally to the private bank and to the now omnipresent postal savings institution, though I have purposely placed the latter in the kindergarten department of financial education. However, when

Continued on page 647

For Investing July Dividends

6% BONDS OR TO COMMENCE SYSTEMATIC SAVING

THESE two forms in which the 6% Gold Bonds of the American Real Estate Company are issued—

6% Coupon Bonds
For those who wish to invest $100 or more

6% Accumulative Bonds
For those who wish to save $25 or more a year —offer to careful investors a time-tried and conservative plan to increase their income, or to place their savings where they will secure the greatest safety, pay the highest interest return consistent with safety, and include the privilege of cash convertibility.

¶ A-R-E 6% Gold Bonds are safe, because, being the direct contract obligations of this Company, they are backed by its surplus of nearly $2,000,000, and Assets of over $23,000,000 invested in New York realty, to which business it is restricted by charter and policy.

¶ A-R-E 6% Gold Bonds have paid 6% for 23 years—every dollar of interest paid on due date; every Bond matured at par and on time—more than $7,000,000 in principal and interest.

¶ A-R-E 6% Gold bonds answer completely the requirements of both the large and the small investor—the Coupon Bonds being purchasable outright, and yielding interest semi-annually; the Accumulative Bonds being purchasable by quarterly, semi-annual or annual instalments, with interest compounded annually to maturity.

¶ Booklet describing Bonds and properties on which they are based, map of New York City showing location, and financial statement sent on request.

American Real Estate Company

Capital and Surplus, $2,011,247.80

Assets $23,026,889.67 Founded 1888

A-R-E SIX'S

Room 534 527 Fifth Avenue New York

6% NET INTEREST

and the best security in the world!

Principal and interest secured by select Mortgages on Pittsburg Preferred Real Estate

Amounts of any size ($25, $50, $100, $200 or multiples) can be invested, temporarily or permanently. Your money available when wanted. Endorsed by highest financial authorities everywhere.

Our Booklet explains how 6% Interest is possible on such preferred securities.

If your Savings, or any other money, is drawing less than 6%, read our booklet. Copy free on request.

A. C. LESLIE CO.

Suite 117, Bakewell Law Building, PITTSBURG, PA.

6% $100. DEPOSITS

WE PAY YOU 6% interest on $100 certificates of Deposit and 5% on smaller sums. Safety assured by the Citizens-Southern Bank, Trustee, holding $2,750,000 approved First Mortgages together with $750,000 Capital, Surplus and Stock-holder individual liability as security. No depositor has lost a dollar in past 20 years. The "Sulky Dollar" book explains plan operation. Georgia State Savings Ass'n, 176 York St., Savannah, Ga.

5% SMALLER SUMS

The Business of Public Utility Corporations

among the most substantial of the coun-y's industries by reason of the necessity or their products, the tendency to growth f communities served, natural freedom from ompetition and the economies effected hrough consolidation.

Bonds of such properties constitute a afe investment, providing they conform to ertain stringent requirements. They yield ore liberally than Municipal and Railroad onds of equal security.

But it is important that purchases of onds of any class be made on the recom-nendation of investment bankers whose udgment, based on ample experience nd the result of thorough investigation, as been demonstrated to be sound over period of years.

uccessful Investment is Dependent Upon Accurate Information

Our two pamphlets mailed to investors n application.

"THE MOST SATISFACTORY BONDS" covers e growth in popularity of Public Utility bonds, the under-ying cause, their salability, and the influence of the Public ervice Commissions. It also explains the responsibility of the vestment banker and describes the searching investigations receding the purchase of these bonds. Illustrated graphically.

"READY REFERENCE MANUAL" contains 230 ages of condensed statistical data concerning the more im-ortant Public Utility Corporations. The completeness and ccuracy of the information and the systematic arrangement ombines to make a useful little volume for ready reference.

Ask for above pamphlets and July Investment Circular No. B-69

N. W. Halsey & Co.
BANKERS

EW YORK 49 Wall St. | PHILADELPHIA 1421 Chestnut St. | CHICAGO 125 W. Monroe St. | SAN FRANCISCO 424 Californian

Do You Want Your Money to Earn 5%

To be amply secured at all times from possibility of loss—

And to be where you can get it on demand any time you may need it?

You can open an account with this Company with any amount from $25 to $5000. You can add to it at your convenience or withdraw as you wish.

It will earn 5 per cent. for every day that it is in our hands.

It will be amply protected by first mortgages on improved real estate and will be in the hands of an institution that in sixteen years has never been a day late in the payment of either principal or interest.

Ask for the booklet telling all about it.

The Calvert Mortgage & Deposit Co.
1046 Calvert Building, Baltimore, Md.

GUARANTEED MORTGAGES
for Large and Small Investors

You can now invest small sums in first-class mortgage bonds. You can have the same advantages which for hundreds of years capitalists alone have enjoyed. Whether you have $10 or $10,000 to invest, you can have the same security and the same returns. Send for our booklet on yielding 5% to 5½%, with the guarantee of this Company and the big ret class New York and Suburban Real Estate back of them. The safest, surest, most profitable investment for earnings consistent with absolute security.

FIRST MORTGAGE TRUST BONDS

Under Supervision of New York Banking Department

Write for Booklet.

NEW YORK MORTGAGE CO.
Dept. D, 1475 Broadway, New York City

The Baptist World Alliance

ONE of the most notable gatherings of Christian men and women from every quarter of the globe, will be held in Philadelphia, beginning June 19 and closing on Lord's Day, June 25. Five years ago (1906) the first of these World Alliances of Baptist gatherings was held in the city of London, England. The originator of the idea is said to be the Rev. J. H. Shakespeare, M.A. of London, the honored secretary of the Baptist Union of Great Britain.

It is only during the last six years that religious liberty has been enjoyed by the people of the Russian Empire. Now one hundred ministers, pastors of Baptist churches in Russia, are being brought over to these meetings, their expenses being paid by Christian people in America. It is reported that fifty-seven of these men who were sent to the mines in Siberia for preaching the Gospel since the proclamation of the edict of 1905, have returned to their parishes. A well-informed friend of the writer said recently: "Baptist churches are springing up all over Russia. It will not be many years before there will be more Baptist churches in Russia than in the United States."

Finland, Sweden, Norway, Denmark, Holland, Austria, Hungary, Bulgaria, Greece, Italy, France, Germany, and Great Britain will be represented by hundreds of delegates. Dr. John Clifford of London, "the uncrowned king of the Free Churches" of Great Britain, F. B. Meyer, D.D., Dr. Newton H. Marshall of London, the brilliant preacher and friend of the oppressed, will be among the leading speakers. The eloquent and brilliant Dr. Forbes of Glasgow, Rev. T. Phillips (a Welshman), and Rev. J. E. Reid, president of the Baptist Union of Ireland, will attend. Canada and all the British colonies will be represented, Australia, Africa, the Islands of the sea, New Zealand, India, also China and Japan. There will be no politics and no sectarianism. The absorbing topic will be how to extend the kingdom of Jesus Christ in the hearts of men the world over. Those who cannot attend the meetings in Philadelphia will have opportunity to hear several of these distinguished ministers in the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, New York City, where Dr. N. H. Marshall, Dr. T. Phillips, Rev. J. H. Shakespeare, Dr. Forbes of Scotland, and Dr. Reid of Ireland will speak.

Baptist congregations are requested to pray the great Head of the Church to bless the coming of these brethren to our shores. Nearly every evangelical church in Philadelphia will open its pulpit to these visiting Baptists from beyond the sea. The meetings of the Baptist World Alliance will be held in the Baptist Temple, Rev. Dr. Conwell's church, on Broad Street, Philadelphia.

HERVEY WOOD.

. . .

Among the passengers arriving from Bremen on the steamer Kaiser Wilhelm II. was Mr. John Henry Shakespeare. Mr. Shakespeare is a lineal descendant of the grandfather of William Shakespeare, the poet. During his stay in America he will lecture at Harvard University as well as preach in some of the larger cities of the East. Mrs. Russell James, who arrived on the same ship to attend the Alliance meeting in Philadelphia, will deliver a series of lectures in this country on "Woman's Work in English Churches."

VACATION BIBLE SCHOOLS

THE Daily Vacation Bible School Association, with headquarters at 21 Bible House, New York, and its branches in Philadelphia, Pittsburg, Chicago, Boston, Albany, Cleveland, Jersey City and eight other cities, will open on July 10 over one hundred daily vacation Bible schools in as many church buildings to gather in and care for children who otherwise would spend the summer on the street. Each school will be equipped with a group of four earnest students—one man and three women—and one hour will be devoted daily to Bible stories and music, and one hour to manual work and play. The schools will continue in session for six weeks, and will enroll approximately 30,000 of the most neglected boys and girls of the crowded cities in cool rooms and under Christian influence. Hammock-making is the feature that attracts the boys, who require to be present during the Bible hour. Last summer they used about 3,600 pounds of twine in making 1,800 full-sized hammocks. This summer 5,000 pounds of No. 32 soft sieve hammock twine will be needed, along with large quantities of raffia and reed. The association appeals to all friends of Christian social service to the young, to provide this material. The cost of the material will be about $2,000.

The association has obtained a special price on twine, and $15 contributed will supply one school with sufficient for the summer. Any contribution will help.

The association consists of one hundred clergymen, college presidents and professors, denominational secretaries and prominent laymen through the country. Rev. Dr. Leighton Parks of St. Bartholomew's, New York, is president.

Donations of twine of the sort described should be addressed to Rev. Robert G. Boville, National Director, 21 Bible House, New York City, and contributions should be made out to J. Adams Brown, President of the New Netherland Bank, New York, and addressed to 21 Bible House.

Answered Prayers

J. J., Midland, O. "I was enabled to overcome a bad habit."

E. and S. B., Gloversville, N. Y. "Thank God for the opportunity to labor."

Reader, San Leandro, Calif. "I thank God for a direct answer to my prayer."

T. E. N., Weymouth, N. S., Can. "I give God the glory for recovered health."

A. M., Honey Brook, Pa. "I am very grateful to my Master for answered prayers."

B. D. S., Lancaster, Wis., thanks God for answer to prayer when in great difficulty.

T. J. S., Dexter, N. Y. "I have recently had assurance that God hears and answers prayer."

J. C. W., Jamestown, Kan., thanks God for very special answer to prayer for a loved one.

Subscriber, Missouri. "God has recently answered my prayers in a very special manner."

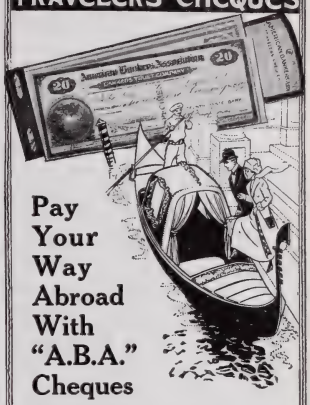
L. J. A., Caldwell, Idaho. "My heavenly father has wonderfully answered my prayers."

M. M., Gibbs, Mo. "I wish to acknowledge the Father's goodness in answering my prayers."

M. W. J., Wysox, Pa. "I thank God for relieving me of a great burden in answer to prayer."

Subscriber, Great Barrington, Mass., acknowledges God's goodness in answering prayer."

Reader, Yale, Mich. "I wish to acknowledge through your paper, God's answer to my prayer."



Mrs. R. S., Bay City, Mich. "I wish to acknowledge God's goodness in answering prayers."

B. B. S., Georgetown, S. C. "God has heard and answered a prayer which seemed almost miraculous."

J. M. H., Watterboro, S. C. "The Lord has answered me in a special way in restoring a loved one to health."

Mrs. W. T., Princeton, Minn. "I thank God for the restoration of a loved one and for my own delivery from illness."

AMERICAN BANKERS ASSOCIATION TRAVELERS' CHEQUES

Pay Your Way Abroad With "A.B.A." Cheques

These cheques are so well and favorably known in all countries as to be accepted not only by hotels and banks, but also by numerous other classes who contribute to the comfort and pleasure of tourists.

Wherever you travel, you can "pay your way" with "A. B. A." Cheques and at the same time avoid the risk and inconvenience of carrying actual money. These cheques make easy dealings with strangers, by identifying you. They are sold in handy wallets made up of $10, $20, $50 and $100 cheques in amounts to suit.

Write to Bankers Trust Company, 7 Wall Street, New York, for information as to where you can obtain the cheques in your vicinity and a copy of interesting booklet, "THE SAFEST CHEQUE" and information as to where you can obtain the cheques in your vicinity.

BUY THEM FROM YOUR OWN BANKER OR IF HE CANNOT SUPPLY THEM APPLY TO BANKERS TRUST COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY.

FREE Murray Style Book

Save $30

Before you buy, it will pay you to get this money-saving book; 178 pages and 251 illustrations of Vehicle and Harness bargains. Murray Highest Award Carriages direct from our factory; 4 weeks' road trial, 3 years' guarantee. Send for Big Free Book.

The W. H. Murray Mfg. Co 322 E. 5th St., Cincinnati, O.

From Factory To Horse

LADIES EASE YOUR FEET

A customer writes, "You could not have fitted me better. For the first time in years my feet are comfortable. The soft glove-like feel of is simply charming."

PILLOW SHOES

$3.00 Post-paid in U. S. A.

Soft, easy, durable, neat, stylish; genuine hand-turned shoes at Vici Kid. No lining to wrinkle and chafe; no breaking in necessary. Absolute comfort and fit guaranteed or money refunded. Price includes rubber heels. All styles. Write for free catalog and self-measure blank. Customers everywhere.

PILLOW SHOE COMPANY
184 Summer St., Dept. 3, Boston, Mass.

10 CENTS A DAY

buys the Pittsburgh Visible Typewriter. Made in our own factory at Kittanning, Pa. $50 now—later the price will be $100. The best typewriter in the world, far excels any $100 machine made. Entire line visible. Back spacer, tabulator, two color ribbon, universal keyboard, etc. Agents wanted everywhere. One Pittsburgh Visible Machine Free for a very small service. No selling necessary.

To Get One Free and to learn of our easy terms and full particulars regarding this unprecedented offer, say to us in a letter, "Mail your FREE OFFER."

The Pittsburgh Visible Typewriter Co.
Dept. 30, Union Bank Bldg., Pittsburgh, Pa.

PATENTS: For facts about Prize and Reward offers and Inventions that will bring from $5000 to 10 Million Dollars, and for books of Intense Interest to Inventors, send 8c postage to Pubs. Patent Sense, Dept. 36 Barrister Bldg., Washington, D.C.

HOW PRAYER HELPS*

Sunday School Lesson by Dr. and Mrs. Wilbur F. Crafts

KING HEZEKIAH was in dire extremity, for Sennacherib, king of Assyria, had already captured forty-six cities of his kingdom and was planning soon to take Jerusalem. His great army of one hundred and eighty-five thousand men was encamped at Lachish, only a few miles from Jerusalem, in command of Rabshakeh, an Assyrian officer. His slanderous and vile tongue was the first weapon which he drew forth. He also made an appeal to Hezekiah's soldiers as they stood upon the wall of Jerusalem, offering them great advantages if they would come over to the standard of Sennacherib; but they were loyal to their king, and with signs of grief—rent clothes—they came and told Hezekiah all that Rabshakeh had said. King Hezekiah, with a sorrowful heart, went into the temple to commune with God. Rabshakeh went to his kin and told him that he could not induce the men of Jerusalem to desert their king, and then Sennacherib wrote a fierce letter to Hezekiah telling him how many kings he had conquered and put to death, and that the Lord his God would not be able to save him. When this terrible letter was brought to King Hezekiah, he went into the temple, and spread out the letter in God's sight, and began to pray to God about it: "O Lord God, save us from his hand, that all the kingdoms of the earth may know that thou art the Lord, even thou only."

The Ever-Present Help

God looked down and saw the letter, saw King Hezekiah, and heard the words of his prayer. Then God sent some one, not an angel from heaven, but the good old prophet Isaiah, to tell King Hezekiah that his prayer had been heard, and that God would send help, and that Sennacherib should not come into Jerusalem, nor even shoot an arrow against it, neither should his army be brought against the city. When Isaiah told God's message, King Hezekiah was comforted, and he was no longer afraid. But he did not know how God was going to stop the army of Sennacherib. King Hezekiah and his soldiers lay down in peace and slept that night; they trusted in God and feared nothing. In the morning when they awoke, there was not an Assyrian soldier standing outside the walls of Jerusalem, and all was strangely quiet, and they went out to see what had happened. A wonderful sight they beheld: all of Sennacherib's soldiers were lying dead upon the ground! God had sent his angel of death to them in the night. We must think that Rabshakeh was dead, because we are not told anything about him afterwards. Sennacherib would have died with the others if he had been there. Sennacherib was a very proud king, and it was his great pleasure to have pictures cut on great slabs of stone of battles that he had fought, and of kings and their people whom he had taken prisoners, but he had no pictures made of those one hundred and eighty-five thousand soldiers slain by the Lord God in one night. But he had made a picture cut in stone of that great army resting at Lachish, waiting to go up and fight against King Hezekiah! About the middle of the nineteenth century (1842) these bas reliefs were excavated.

What lessons do we learn from this story?

1. That to pray is the right thing to do when we are in trouble.

2. That God hears and answers prayers, and therefore he should be our refuge.

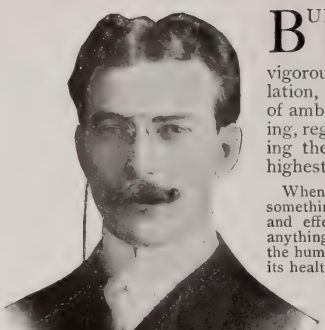
Prayer Before Battle

The Fourth of July is near at hand, and it will be most interesting to recall the fact that General George Washington prayed when a battle was near. A clergyman who not long since was making a pastoral visit to a very elderly lady named Mother Waters relates: "Her father, Noah Hatch, when a boy had been a servant of George Washington. One night, Noah Hatch had been wakened out of his sleep by the sound of a voice. He thought that his master was talking with some guest, and he was curious to know who it might be, so he peeped through the keyhole, and saw Washington alone. He was engaged in reading the Scriptures, and in prayer, which he continued for the most part of the night. Early in the morning he mounted his horse and rode away at full speed. He had not ridden far before his hat was pierced with a bullet and carried away. Of this he seemed to take little notice, but rode on like one fully confident of divine protection. On that day a great and important battle was fought, and Washington and his army obtained a complete triumph.—(Related by Rev. A. B. Russell.)

President Lincoln told General Sickles that before the battle of Gettysburg, while he was on his knees, laying before God in agonized entreaty the cause of the Union, there came to his soul the sweet assurance of the victory that followed.

> We doubt the word that tells us: Ask,
> And ye shall have your prayer:
> We turn our thoughts as to a task
> With will constrained and rare.
>
> And yet we have these scanty prayers
> Yield gold without alloy;
> O God, but he who trusts and dares
> Must have a boundless joy.
>
> GEORGE MACDONALD.

Let us hope that in these times, when "a sane Fourth of July" is coming into vogue, our thoughts, being turned away from firecrackers and pistols, may be held into the ways of noble patriotism, rejoicing in the peace which the first Fourth of July made possible. While we are writing this lesson the peace pact between the United States and Great Britain is about to be transmitted to the British Government. Would that the completion of that compact might be the occasion for our next Fourth of July celebration! In case it should be, the Fourth of July should be observed as a day of thanksgiving and prayer. In this connection there is something for THE CHRISTIAN HERALD Peace Circles to do: let them pray that such a consummation may be reached.



Why Prayer Is Good

Most people have a greater or less interest and belief in prayer. A street boy said: "Most of us think it's kind o' lucky to say something to God before we go to sleep in the boxes at night." We will not say that we quite agree with the boy, but Dr. Theodore B. Hyslop, a distinguished specialist in neurology, says: "As one whose whole life has been concerned with the sufferings of the mind, I would state that of all hygienic measures to counteract disturbed sleep, depressed spirits, and all the miserable sequels of a distressed mind, I would undoubtedly give the first place to the simple habit of prayer." Dr. Hyslop advises or prescribes as follows: "Let there be a habit of nightly communication, not as a mendicant repeater of words more adapted to the tongue of a sage, but as a humble individual who submerges or asserts his individuality as an integral part of a greater whole. Such a

Continued on next page

* The International Sunday School Lesson for July 2, 1911. Isaiah's Prophecy Concerning Sennacherib. Isa. 37:14-38. GOLDEN TEXT: "God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble." Ps. 46:1.

The Swoboda Physiological Exercise Without Apparatus or Drugs

BUILDS vigorous brains, superb energetic bodies, developing grea nervous force, strong muscles vigorous heart, creating a perfect circu lation, overcoming general debility, lacl of ambition, lack of vitality by revitaliz ing, regenerating, rebuilding and develop ing the body, brain and nerves to thei highest power.

When I say that I give something different something new, more scientific, more rationa and effective and immeasurably superior t anything ever before devised for the uplifting o the human body to a higher plane and restorin its health, I am only repeating what thousand of prominent men and women of ever country on the face of the earth, wh have profited by my treatment, ar saying for me voluntarily.

MY PHYSIOLOGICAL TREAT MENT is based upon definite laws heretofore almost universally ignored It is based upon absolutely correc scientific facts which when applied t the physical organism lead to th inevitable possession of a vigorous mind, strong and well developed body, hig vitality, great endurance, powerful nervous force and priceless regularity of al the functions.

If you will follow my treatment for a few weeks, I will guarantee you such a immediate return to body and brain vigor as to convince you that no matter in wha branch of industry you may be active, whether indoors or outdoors, ill or well whether engaged in mental or physical labor, the SWOBODA TREATMENT solves the problem of disease resistance and full attainment of brain and body powe and development.

DRUGS OFTEN DECREASE THE CAPACITY OF THE BODY TO MAINTAIN ITSELF IN HEALTH AND STRENGTH

To be well and strong, you must have greater nervous force, more and better blood. No pupils o mine needs to digest his food with pepsin, or assist Nature with a dose of physic, nor take tonics t excite enfeebled and disorganized nerves, causing thereby deficient nervous force.

I will give you a vigorous appetite, and a healthy and capable digestive system to obey it, fill you arteries with rich blood, develop sound lungs to keep it rich, a strong heart to regulate your circulatio and a liver that will work as Nature designed it should, and a healthy nervous system which will suppl you with ideal physical and mental energy.

When the average person's health fails he invariably seeks at once for a magic cure in drug Temporary relief often deceives him into the belief that a cure is effected, but with each succeeding dos the effect of the drug is lessened until eventually it loses its effect entirely, and the body and nervou force have been considerably weakened.

THE SWOBODA TREATMENT strengthens the brain, nerves and all the internal organs of th body, therefore increasing the blood, as well as developing the nervous force. It increases the capacit for mental as well as physical labor, neutralizing the effect of excesses, improving the memory, give clear and quicker perception and makes your daily work and life a pleasure instead of a drudgery.

SWOBODA TREATMENT A PROVEN ONE

My treatment is no experiment. I have been giving it successfully to pupils all over the world for th past seventeen years. It has become the standard of the world. I have among my pupils hundreds o doctors, judges, senators, congressmen, members of cabinet, ambassadors, governors, thousands o business men, farmers, mechanics and laborers, and almost an equal number of women.

WHAT OTHERS HAVE TO SAY:

"Restored from nervous prostration in 90 days."

"Stomach and bowels benefited remarkably."

"Chest measurement increased 5½ inches in 60 days."

"All your promises have been fulfilled."

"Muscles developed to a remarkable degree."

"Indigestion and constipation for 25 years eliminated in few weeks' time."

"Gained 20 pounds in weight."

"Thought it impossible to get such results."

"Stomach and bowels improved remarkably in 30 days."

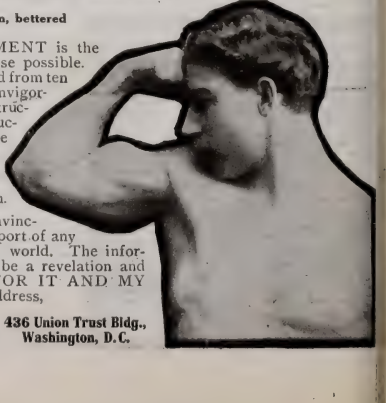
"Your system is a recreation."

"All run down; built up in a month."

"Worth more than a thousand dollars to me in increased mental and physical capacity."

"It reduced my weight 29 pounds, increased my chest expansion 5 inches, reduced my waist 6 inches."

"It has eliminated my constipation, bettered my digestion, improved assimilation and circul ation, made me stouter, stronger, healthier an happier."



"Your system develops the will as much a the muscles."

"Was troubled a great deal with indigestio and malaria. Since taking your treatment I hav not had the slightest trouble from either, an never in my life have I enjoyed such health."

"I believe it will do all you claim for it. It ha certainly made me feel ten years younger."

"My nervous system was in that condition could scarcely write my name, but the old has be come new and I am in better health than ever."

"Your treatment has done me a world o good. Feel 100 per cent. better. I am workin again and that is more than medicine did for me Everyone remarks how much better I seem t be. Before I started your course three week ago my chest measurement was 33½ in. Toda I measure 38 in. I sleep better and eat like a hungry man."

The SWOBODA TREATMENT is the most condensed form of exercise possible. The Physiological effect obtained from ten minutes of its use is startling, invigorating and satisfying. The instruction is given with complete success by mail, accordingly as the individual condition requires and demands. My pupils range in age from fourteen to eighty-six and include both men and women.

I have to offer you the most convincing evidence ever offered in support of any treatment in the history of the world. The information which I send free will be a revelation and education to you. WRITE FOR IT AND MY GUARANTEE TODAY. Address, Alois P. Swoboda, 436 Union Trust Bldg., Washington, D.C.

Sunday School Lesson

Continued from preceding page

abit does more to clean the spirit and trengthen the soul, to overcome mere ncidental emotionalism, than any ther therapeutic agent known to me." o medical science becomes a new ally o religion! "Pray without ceasing" omes thus to have a new significance, ecause if an occasional, even a daily, rayer is good for health of mind and ody, surely it is desirable that it hould be more frequent.

A story is told of a man who had een a drunkard for forty years, and vas then converted to Christ and beame a sober man. A friend gave him ticket for a bed in a "home." As he vas lying down to sleep he heard some ne utter an oath. He got up, went ut on the street and tore up his ticket, nd walked all night in the piercing old. A person to whom he told the ncident asked him if he prayed. "Why, an," he replied, "I was a walking rayer; that is how I kept myself live."

Science and Prayer

Dr. J. W. Dawson, a scientist of nother type from Dr. Hyslop, says: 'The efficiency of prayer is one of the ast things that a scientific naturalist hould question. The young ravens, we are told, cry to God, and so they literally do; and their cry is answered; or the parent ravens, cruel and voracious, under the impulse of a God-given instinct, range over land and water and exhaust every energy that they may satisfy that cry. The mother who hears the cry of her child, crushed under some weighty thing, will never pause to consider that it is the law of gravitation which has caused the accident. She will defy the law of gravitation, and if necessary will pray any one who is near to help her. . . . If, then, irrational animals can overcome the forces of nature in answer to prayer; if man himself, in answer to the cry of distress, can do things in ordinary circumstances almost impossible, how foolish is it to suppose that this link cannot subsist between God and his rational offspring?—Principal J. W. Dawson.

There is another thought suggested by the same scientist, in reference to the fact that the cry of one species of animal awakens no response in another of a different kind, and so there is a prayer which never reaches God, which is even an abomination (Prov. 28: 9) to him—the prayer of the ungodly. "Prayer to God must be in the Spirit of God."

"God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble." It is our Golden Text, and it is the gem verse in the forty-sixth Psalm. The whole of the Psalm should be read. It would be well indeed to commit it to memory. It is supposed to have been written in memory of the destruction of Sennacherib's army by the power of God.

"A Mighty Fortress Is Our God"

Sancta Sophia—Church of the Divine Wisdom—in Constantinople is now a Mohammedan temple of worship, but it was built as a Christian church. Justinian, when he entered it upon its completion, is said to have exclaimed: "Solomon, I have surpassed thee!" Away up in the vault of the apse is a mosaic figure of Christ with outstretched arms. The Christian builders of the church put it there, but the Moslems have again and again covered it with gold leaf, endeavoring to efface it. But it will not stay covered, and it has been given the name of the Waiting Christ. There is also an inscription in Sancta Sophia which is of great interest to the Christian: "God is our refuge and strength,"—the opening words of our Golden Text. These words are the basis of Luther's grand hymn, "Ein feste Burg ist unser Gott"—"A mighty fortress is our God." It is said that when Martin Luther was downcast, he would say to his friend and co-worker Melanchthon, "Come, Philip, let us sing the forty-sixth Psalm." And they would sing: "Ein feste Burg ist unser Gott."

This grand hymn has been for centuries the solace of despairing hearts. It has also been the great battle hymn of the German nation for more than three hundred years.

With God for our refuge we have nothing to fear and all things to hope for.

Thrift's Common School

Continued from page 644

a man, and of course this applies to the equally deserving woman, has accumulated say $1,000, it is time for promotion, and the holder of that important sum is qualified to enter the grammar grade.

The difference between $1,000 at four and at five per cent. is just ten dollars. The saver's hardest time was in gathering and keeping intact his first ten dollars, and at the time it was a fortune to him. The question arises: If he can safely add another ten dollars to his money earnings, why should he not do so? Well, he can so add it, and this we will consider in discussing the more advanced departments of the financial education.

Joys of a Shut-in

I wish to thank you for the portrait of Dr. Klopsch, and for the slip of paper enclosed, which assured me, a shut-in temporarily, of your prayers and good wishes. It did me a world of good, that good thought of yours, and I wish you to know it. The picture hangs in my sunny sick-room and cheers many a lonely hour. "Let the redeemed of the Lord say so!" If only more disinterested kindness like that of the wish and prayers were shown among us, his blundering children, how much good might be accomplished. E. S. H.

Milford, Conn.

Peacemaker Time

PEACEMAKER Time beheld the feud
'Twixt tribe and envious tribe of old,
First dwellers of the primal wood;
He waved his magic wand; behold,
Their mingling dust no anger knows;
No strife disturbs their long repose!

Ye say that Time brought many wars?
Nay, hade he many wars to cease.
Not bloody strife his visage mars
But labor in the ways of peace,
For all the hosts of martial birth
He buries in the kindly earth.

For the old earth prepares the bed
Of warriors red with victory;
Likewise she bears the myriad dead
Who perish thus beneath the sky;
They perish, all, the weak, the strong,
The great, the small, the right, the wrong.

Before a thousand wars, the sky
Serenely smiled upon the world;
A thousand wars have ravaged by,
A thousand battle-flags are furled,
And lo! serenely smiles the light
Of virgin day and starry night.

A thousand quarrels jangle forth;
For thus we waste our feeble breath,
Nor think how little shall be worth
A thousand quarrels hushed in death.
Time brews the magic of the years;
The world's old anger disappears.

Is thy contention just? behold,
So have there been in ages past;
But millions just, or else, of old
Have found lethean tombs at last;
Oh! give thee peace, for Time shall hide
Thy wound, ere many years betide.

Savannah, Va. BENJAMIN C. MOOMAW.

FOR JULY INVESTMENT

We offer the unsold portion of

$1,500,000 United Coal Company

6% Bond Secured Coupon Notes

TAX FREE IN PENNSYLVANIA

Dated December 31, 1909. Denomination $1000

Due Jan. 1, 1916, 1917, 1918, 1919, and 1925
Safe Deposit & Trust Company, of Pittsburgh, Pa., Trustee

The notes we are offering are part of an issue of which $750,000 have been sold and are in the hands of banks, institutions and private investors.

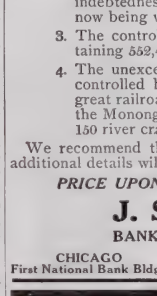
The United Coal Company has recently acquired control of the Merchants Coal Company. These combined properties have been recently appraised at over $19,000,000, while the combined bonded debts of the Companies aggregate but $11,481,000.

The United Coal Company now stands third in the amount of coal mined annually in the Pennsylvania field. Its properties are located in the famous Pittsburgh District and in the Johnstown Basin, Pennsylvania.

The properties of the Merchants Coal Company are located in the Johnstown Basin and in Preston County, West Virginia. The total area of thick coal contained in the Johnstown Basin is less than 20,000 acres, of which the Merchants Coal Company owns 14,000 acres and the United Coal Company 4,000 acres. This Basin contains all of the thick, high grade coal of the "Upper Kittanning" or "C" Prime seam in the County.

We call attention to the following points, which contribute to the attractiveness of this investment—

1. The large equity in excess of the bonded debt, amounting to nearly 70% in the property controlled and operated.
2. The ample sinking funds, by the provisions of which the bonded indebtedness will be retired before one-half of the coal in the seam now being worked is mined.
3. The control of more than 35,500 acres of valuable coal lands, containing 552,400,000 tons of coal.
4. The unexcelled shipping facilities—each of the ten mines owned and controlled by the Company, is located on at least one of the three great railroad systems, three of the mines in addition being located on the Monongahela River. The Company also owns 1010 steel cars and 150 river craft.



We recommend these notes for conservative investment. Special circulars and additional details will be furnished upon request.

PRICE UPON APPLICATION Write to department V,

J. S. & W. S. KUHN, Inc.

BANK FOR SAVINGS BUILDING, PITTSBURGH, PA.

CHICAGO First National Bank Bldg. | PHILADELPHIA Real Est. Trust Bldg. | NEW YORK 37 Wall Street | BOSTON Kuhn, Fisher & Co., Inc.

10 DAYS FREE TRIAL We will ship you a "RANGER" BICYCLE on approval, freight prepaid to any place in the United States without a cent deposit in advance, and allow ten days free trial from the day you receive it. If it does not suit you in every way and is not all or more than we claim for it and a better bicycle than you can get anywhere else regardless of price, or if for any reason whatever you do not wish to keep it, ship it back to us at our expense for freight and you will not be out one cent.

LOW FACTORY PRICES We sell the highest grade bicycles direct from factory to rider at lower prices than any other house. We save you $10 to $25 middlemen's profit on every bicycle. Highest grade models with Puncture-Proof tires, Imported Roller chains, pedals, etc., at prices no higher than cheap mail order bicycles; also reliable medium grade models at unheard of low prices.

RIDER AGENTS WANTED in each town and district to ride and exhibit a sample 1912 "Ranger" Bicycle furnished by us. You will be astonished at the wonderfully low prices and the liberal propositions and special offer we will give on the first 1912 sample going to your town. Write at once for our special offer.

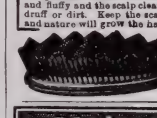
DO NOT BUY a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone at any price until you receive our catalogue and learn our low prices and liberal terms. BICYCLE DEALERS, you can sell our bicycles under your own name plate at double our prices. Orders filled the day received.

SECOND HAND BICYCLES—a limited number taken in trade by our Chicago retail stores will be closed out at once, at $3 to $8 each. Descriptive bargain list mailed free.

TIRES, COASTER BRAKE rear wheels, inner tubes, lamps, cyclometers, parts, repairs and everything in the bicycle line at half usual prices, interesting matter and useful information. It only costs a postal to get everything. Write it now.

DO NOT WAIT but write today for our Large Catalogue beautifully illustrated and containing a great fund of

MEAD CYCLE CO. Dept. L71, CHICAGO, ILL.



I TRUST YOU TEN DAYS. SEND NO MONEY.
$2 Hair Switch Sent on Approval. Choice of Natural wavy or straight hair. Send a lock of your hair, and we will mail a 22 inch short stem fine human hair switch to match. If you find it a big bargain, remit $2 in ten days, or send 3 and GET YOUR SWITCH FREE. Extra shades a little more. Inclose 6c postage.
Free beauty book showing latest style of hair dressing—also high grade switches, pompadours, wigs, puffs, etc. Women wanted to sell our hair goods. ANNA AYERS,
Dep. A159 22 Quincy Street, Chicago

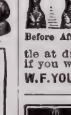
THIS NEW HAIR BRUSH COMBS AND BRUSHES THE HAIR AND MASSAGES THE SCALP.
The greatest modern invention for keeping the hair beautiful and fluffy and the scalp clean, healthful and free from dandruff or dirt. Keep the scalp clean and properly massaged and nature will grow the hair. Write for free circular.
AGENTS WANTED.
DR. GEORGE LYMAN,
217 Bill St., Peoria, Ill.

Make money in spare time
Selling stewarts Iron Fence, Vases, Settees, etc. Liberal proposition to right persons.
THE STEWART IRON WORKS CO., Cincinnati, Ohio
169 Page Catalog FREE.



You Can't Cut Out A BOG SPAVIN, PUFF or THOROUGHPIN, but ABSORBINE

Before After

will clean them off permanently, and you work the horse same time. Does not blister or remove the hair. $2.00 per bottle, delivered. Book 4 E free.
ABSORBINE, JR., liniment for mankind, reduces Varicose Veins, Ruptured Muscles or Ligaments, Enlarged Glands, Goitres, Wens, Cysts. Allays pain quickly. Price $1.00 and $2.00 a bottle at druggists or delivered. Will tell you more if you write. Manufactured only by W.F. YOUNG, P.D.F., 5 Temple St., Springfield, Mass.

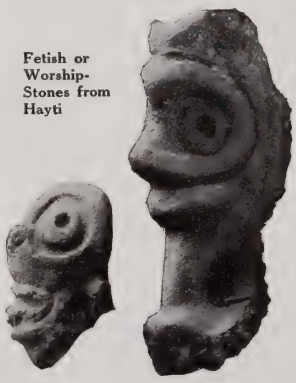
THE "BEST" LIGHT
Makes and burns its own gas. Costs 2c. per week. Gives 500 candle power light and casts no shadow. No dirt, grease, nor odor. Unequaled for Homes, Stores, Hotels, Churches, Public Halls, etc. Over 200 styles. Every lamp warranted. Agents wanted. Write for catalog.
THE BEST LIGHT CO.
3-70 E. 5th St., - Canton, O

BLYMYER CHURCH BELLS. UNLIKE OTHER BELLS SWEETER, MORE DURABLE, LOWER PRICE. OUR FREE CATALOGUE TELLS WHY.
Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

Hayti Sends a Pastor



REV. C. JEAN-JACQUES, a native pastor of the Union Church of Cape Hayti and Port-de-Paix, is now visiting this country in the interest of Gospel work in his own land. Fourteen years ago, after having spent four years at the Newton Theological Seminary and two at the Boston School of Medicine, he left the United States to begin pastoral work in Hayti. Since that time he has labored faithfully in a hard yet hopeful field, as missionary pastor and school teacher. His purpose is to try and raise, among the friends of the negro race in this country, the necessary funds to rebuild the little church at Port-de-Paix, which was destroyed by the fire of February, 1902, which swept away almost the entire town. He also hopes to be able to build a small schoolhouse in Cape Hayti, and, to rebuild the mission house of the Cape Hayti church.

Condillac Jean-Jacques

Since the opening of Hayti to American capital and influence which are employed in the building of railways and the cultivation of banana plantations, the ties that bind the two nations have become closer. Now in all of the large cities as well as in the small country places, development is being pushed with extraordinary vigor. Pastor Jean-Jacques holds that, on account of this new interest, the education and Christianization of the country people has become an urgent necessity.

"The more the men you come into contact with are educated and Christianized," he says, "the better the relationship will be. The benefit then is decidedly mutual. Our educational and religious work in the island is bright and promising. Yet means to develop it and to establish new schools are sadly lacking. We believe in a Gospel of work as well as of grace, and that religion and education are the two great levers of civilization. We will gladly welcome American help in our work, which is both spiritual and educative. Ours is a small but heroic nation, and our people will respond splendidly to the efforts in their behalf if the means for carrying out the work can be supplied." Pastor Jean-Jacques may be addressed in the care of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD. He will speak in churches, etc., if invited.

Fetish or Worship-Stones from Hayti

The Infidel and the Preacher

A WELL-KNOWN minister delivered a series of discourses against atheism in a town some of whose citizens were known to be atheists, or unbelievers in the supernatural origin of the doctrines taught in the Bible. A few days afterward he took passage in a steamer ascending the Mississippi River. On this boat were several of the citizens of the town in which he had delivered the discourse against atheism, among whom was a notorious infidel. So soon as this man saw the clergyman he began to talk boisterously against the Christian religion, and perceiving the minister reading at one of the tables, he proposed to his companions to go with him to the opposite side of the table and listen to some stories that he had to tell about religion and professors of religion, which he said would "stir up" the old preacher. Several drew near to hear his vulgar stories and anecdotes, all of which were pointed against the Bible and its ministers. The preacher did not raise his eyes from his book nor appear to be the least troubled by the rabble.

At length the infidel walked up to him, and, rudely slapping him on the shoulder, said: "Old fellow, what do you think of these things?"

The clergyman calmly pointed toward the land, and said: "Do you see that beautiful landscape spread out in such quiet loveliness before you?"

"Yes."

"It has a variety of flowers, plants and shrubs that are calculated to fill the beholder with delight."

"Yes."

"Well, if you were to send out a dove, it would pass over that scene and see in it all that was beautiful and lovely, and delight itself in gazing at and admiring it; but if you were to send out a buzzard over precisely the same scene, it would see in it nothing to fix its attention unless it could find some rotten carcass that would be loathsome to all other animals. It would alight and gloat upon that with exquisite pleasure."

"Do you mean to compare me to a buzzard, sir?" said the infidel, coloring deeply.

"I made no allusion to you, sir," said the clergyman, very quietly. The infidel walked off in confusion, and went by the name of "The Buzzard" during the remainder of the passage.—New York Christian Advocate.

A Brand from the Burning

"I was a prisoner at Huntsville Prison for over seven years. I was released last September. I am pardoned and restored to full citizenship. I wish to thank THE CHRISTIAN HERALD for the many blessings I received in my imprisonment through its columns. I never before knew such a paper was published and after reading a few copies I became a subscriber and I don't see how I could do without it now. I would not have one of my old papers destroyed. I give them to the men at the jail that they may do some one the good they did me."

This American Flag—FREE

WOULDN'T you like to own a large American Flag—like the one shown in the illustration on this page of The Christian Herald—if you could get it without paying one cent?

Compare Size of Flag With Height of Children

Not a little hand flag, understand, but a man-size "Old Glory," 6 feet long by 4 feet wide—bigger than the top of your dining-room table.

Not a pitiful wisp of color, mind you, but real red, white and blue, right from the factory of the Government flag-maker. A stanch bit of fabric that will not run or shrink in wet weather.

Here is an opportunity to keep faith with your patriotism, for you will have use for a flag, not only on every holiday for many years to come, but you can also use it constantly for decorative purposes in public and private sociables, in the schoolhouse, in the church and in the home. Imagine being able to celebrate Fourth of July with a flag as big as this! Wouldn't it be better than firecrackers for the children? You may have it without paying one cent.

THIS OFFER IS LIMITED

We have on hand but a limited number of these flags. They are going fast and we would advise you to Act at Once—Before it is Too Late.

How?

At this time of the year The Christian Herald usually puts forth an extraordinary effort to increase the number of members of the great Christian Herald Family. We can only do this with the help of the present members. You are one of these and we know you will help us. But we have no right to accept your good offices for nothing so we make the following proposition:

The regular annual subscription price of The Christian Herald, as you know, is $1.50. Isn't there some one among your relatives, friends or acquaintances who you know would be benefited by reading The Christian Herald? You can probably think of several in a few minutes, and it would be comparatively easy for you to get them to subscribe for a short trial period, say eight months.

Get one of your friends to subscribe for The Christian Herald for eight months; send us $1.00 for this subscription, and The Christian Herald will be mailed to any address in the United States or Canada, and in return for your trouble we will send, absolutely without cost to you, this beautiful American Flag.

And in addition to this we will also send you a life-size fac-simile of the Declaration of Independence, 26x31 inches, an exact duplicate in every way of the priceless document which hangs framed on the walls of the old State House in Philadelphia. This document should be in every patriotic home, and it may be in yours, free of charge, if you take advantage of our offer.

Don't Miss This Offer!

Simply get a friend to take The Christian Herald for eight months, send us $1.00, and we will mail to you, postpaid, the large American Flag (4x6 feet) and the Declaration of Independence, without cost to you. Address: THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, 615 Bible House, New York City.

Get One NOW for the Fourth of July

To the Gods of Toquay-to

Continued from page 643

The chant became broken, confused; a wild murmur surged up from the throng beyond. The captive wife turned her agonized face towards her compatriot—it was the face of Theodora Latham!

Dazed, maddened, yet struggling to keep that hold on his reeling senses which alone could save her, Levering, seeing but that face and the descending knife beyond it, gave a great cry, half inarticulate, half resembling the Malay word, "Halt!" and springing forward, grasped the priest's arm. The blade glanced, and blood gushed from Esmond's wrist; but the bound man's bosom was unscathed.

A tense hush fell momentarily upon the multitude, the chant broke off, the priests scattered backward, one only rigid in his place, held in the grasp of a pale, stern man, over whose clothes blood was flecked and still dripping.

"By what right?" at last the hierarch hissed.

Levering looked towards the king, praying that the answer might come from him, and be as it should. But Matazino stood unhelpful as some scowling brown statue.

"By what right?" challenged the priest yet more defiantly.

"By the right of an American to defend his countrymen," Levering answered boldly.

But when the multitude began to hiss and seethe, like some vast, dark coil of serpents, he lifted his voice, proclaiming imperiously:

"By the right, too, of one who is betrothed to the daughter of your king."

But certain courtiers and others, leaders in the throng behind, read something in their sovereign's dark face.

"Down with the stranger!" they shouted, "the alien who would dominate us. His is the hostile blood. Let him have the knife in his bosom, too—intruder and traitor!"

Emboldened by these cries and the king's impassivity, the hierarch wrenched an arm loose and aimed his weapon well at Levering, who, however, proved again too quick for him, and in another moment had the sacrificial blade in his own possession.

But the ring of the priests and acolytes began now to regather and close quickly around the three Americans; and the wilder spirits in the massed throng, pushing aside the inert courtiers and officials, were pressing forward to support the priests.

Esmond had a full minute in which to realize that he had staked and lost all; that, in his effort to save the unknown husband of the woman he loved, he had brought death to himself and her. But with that knife in his hand, he would sell their three lives dearly as might be.

He did not see the Princess as she clung to the king, imploring some boon at his hands. But, after a veritable age of torture, he heard the great smooth voice of Matazino break out above the rabble's mutterings.

. . .

"Let the Americans be conducted to the east wing of the palace. For this Moon of May there are other prisoners, alien and hostile blood enough."

It was a week later when Levering received in his closely guarded apartments a messenger from the Princess, and opened a letter which ran:

"I have read in your eyes, which lie not, that you love her. I have learned from her lips, which are true, that long ago, in a far country where you and she were young together, she loved you, but denied her love, because she mistakenly deemed your purposes unstable, your life unsure of aim.

"It is not her husband but her brother whom you saved from sacrifice, and whom I have now prepared to send away with you and her.

"The king, my sire, is perturbed, irritated, suspicious. You do not know him in this mood. I shall say only that I am not willing to risk you three another day within the palace.

"Go, I pray you. Follow my trusty messenger, who leads you, the guards think, to me for an interview. But move speedily after him past my portals, where the others will join you. When my envoy leaves you on the boat, with the picked and faithful crew of mine, take what the departing one gives you from me. It serves no good end here, but entails a cruel annual rite, a dark curse upon my people. To you it may bring the power to do good and be happy. Am I selfish in feeling, also, that it will be like a part of me keeping with you in the great world I am not to know in this existence.

"Go, take her, be safe, be happy. If you have thought that I loved you, forget it, and ask not if there came to me an hour's temptation to let her be sacrificed and save you for myself.

"Other things than love await me. Better? The gods of Toquay-to can tell. At least, there is work for our realm, and for my young Fedriquez.

"Forget our green isle and blue seas, as you will not be forgotten by

"PRINCESS WIYUNA."

. . .

They were well at sea and beyond danger of pursuit before Esmond came to comprehend one thing in that letter, and hastening to open the forgotten package, found the great blazing diamond in his hands.

That was a year or more ago. But Levering and his happy wife, under their quiet American roof, are still at times busy devising some way of restoring this awkward possession to its rightful habitat. None of their schemes has yet worked to a successful issue, but they refuse to despair. If they may not send back the marvelous stone during the reign of Matazino, at least they feel sure of achieving its restoration when the son of Wiyuna shall hold the sceptre, inaugurating, they must needs believe, a better era and nobler worship, in place of that offered through dead centuries to those old gods of Toquay-to.

Among the Workers

—REV. DR. ARTHUR T. PIERSON, for twenty-three years editor of the Missionary Review, and a leader in missionary work, died in Brooklyn, N. Y., on June 3. He was born in New York in 1837, educated at Union Theological Seminary, ordained a Presbyterian minister in 1860, and has held several important pastorates. He was long prominent as a writer and lecturer on religious topics.

—"THE OLD TENT Evangel Committee of New York" will open the thirty-second season of the well-known Tent Evangel on June 18, at 4 and 8 P.M., on West One Hundred and Twenty-fourth Street, between Morningside and Amsterdam Avenues. Among the noted speakers to be heard at the opening services will be Rev. Cortland Myers, D.D., pastor of Tremont Temple, Boston, Mass. This is the ninth season of the Tent Evangel under the auspices of its present union committee, of which Rev. G. W. McPherson is the superintendent and Mr. F. T. Hopkins, the treasurer. During these nine seasons 1,350,000 persons have been gathered for religious instruction. This season a spacious new canvas tabernacle has been erected on a large plot of ground and its material outfit is most complete. Following are some of the speakers who have promised to assist in the work: Rev. Cortland Myers, D.D., Boston; Mrs. E. M. Whittemore, New York; Rev. J. Wilbur Chapman, D.D.; Rev. J. C. Massee, Chattanooga; Rev. A. C. Gaebelien, editor Our Hope; Alexander McNicholl, M.D., recent Prohibition candidate for governor; Rev. Henry Ostrom, D.D., Indiana; Rev. L. W. Munhall, D.D., Germantown, Pa.; Rev. H. M. Wharton, D.D., Baltimore; Rev. Samuel McBride, D.D., Brooklyn; Rev. Len G. Broughton, D.D., Atlanta, and various city pastors.

New Style Socks

The very newest is "Shawknit Satinette"—long, soft fibre Egyptian Cotton, over which a film of exquisitely fine silk gives the fashionable changeable effect.

Ask your dealer for them. It is easy for him to get "Shawknit Socks"—either from our warehouse nearest him, or direct from our factory. He should have them for you. If he has not—and will not get them—remit $1.00 direct to us for each three pairs of "Shawknit Satinette" you wish.

"Shawknit Satinette" come in all regular sizes and seven colors—Black, Navy Blue, Ox Blood Red, Reseda Green, Brown, Light Tan, Dark Tan. Packed three pairs of any color in a box.

Guaranteed Without Limit

You determine the amount of wear which "Shawknit Socks" should give you. If they do not give the satisfaction in wear, fit, style, and comfort which you demand of them—we will replace them with new ones, without question or cost to you. You merely have to send us the Guarantee ticket which is on each pair.

We make many lines of "Shawknit Socks"—all told about in our little book "Stylish Socks." Write for it—we mail it FREE and postpaid on request. Ask to-day. Address, Shaw Stocking Co., 206 Shaw Street, Lowell, Mass.

Look for Stores That Sell—

Shawknit

REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.

TRADE MARK.

Socks

PATENTS That Protect and Pay Advice and Books FREE. Rates Reasonable. Highest References. Best Services. WATSON E. COLEMAN, Patent Lawyer, WASHINGTON, D.C.

YOU CAN WRITE A SHORT STORY Beginners learn the one right way under our perfect method many sell their stories before completing the course. We help those who want to sell their stories. Write for particulars. School of Short-Story Writing, Dept. 44, Page Bldg., Chicago

CAPE-NIT. The cure that cures Cape, Rubber, and Wind. never fails. Sc., 25c., 50c. and $1.00, postpaid. Booklet and testimonials FREE. PEERLESS CAPE-NIT CO., ALLENTOWN, PA.

WANTED TO SLEEP

Curious That a Tired Preacher Should Have Such Desire

A minister speaks of the curious effect of Grape-Nuts food on him and how it has relieved him.

"You will doubtless undertand how the suffering from indigestions with which I used to be troubled made my work an almost unendurable burden; and why it was that after my Sabbath duties had been performed, sleep was a stranger to my pillow till nearly daylight.

"I had to be very careful as to what I ate, and even with all my care I experienced poignant physical distress after meals, and my food never satisfied me.

"Since I began to use Grape-Nuts the benefits I have derived from it are very definite. I no longer suffer from indigestion, and I began to improve from the time Grape-Nuts appeared on our table.

"I find that by eating a dish of this food after my Sabbath work is done, (and I always do so now) my nerves are quieted and rest and refreshing sleep are ensured me.

"I feel that I could not possibly do without Grape-Nuts food, now that I know its value. It is invariably on our table—we feel that we need it to make the meal complete—and our children will eat Grape-Nuts when they cannot be persuaded to touch anything else." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Michigan.

Read the famous booklet, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

$25 to $75 Saved Or No Sale 30 Days' Free Road Test—2 Years' Guarantee—125 styles to choose from.

Highest Grade Made Split Hickory Vehicles

Don't you want Phelps' Big Book for 1911? It's Free—and he pays the postage. It tells all about Made-to-Order Vehicles—sold direct from factory. Best Buggy Book ever written—more Vehicles to choose from than you could find in 25 dealers' stores or in 10 Big Towns. Write for the book today

H. C. Phelps, President, THE OHIO CARRIAGE MFG. COMPANY, Station 236, Columbus, O. Largest Factory in the World Selling Vehicles Direct

THE DEAF CAN HEAR

If you are deaf or hard of hearing, do not fail to send your name and address today and get our Electrophone on

30 DAYS HOME TRIAL

It is a tiny but powerful electrical device, a truly wonderful little instrument, perfected to such a degree that many deaf people can now hear the faintest sound and enjoy all the pleasures of church, public speaking or ordinary conversation. It magnifies sound—restores aided hearing power, renders makeshift drums, etc., useless, makes you hear and gradually restores your hearing. Almost invisible—carries in the clothing and leaves both hands free. Over 10,000 in use. Enthusiastic testimonials from responsible people.

The Electrophone is used—almost invisible.

What They Say About It

"I think the Electrophone is the best device for people that are hard of hearing that there is on the market, as I have tried everything that I ever saw advertised." W. A. HAGGIN, Union, Iowa.

"If it could not be replaced nothing short of a load of lead would compel me to part with it. Enclose self addressed envelope and stamp and I will cheerfully give anyone information within my knowledge." R. T. Roberts, Sidnaw, Mich. Roycroft Farm.

Get an Electrophone on 30 days' home trial and experience for yourself how easily it will make you hear—anywhere—without strain or effort. Send coupon now for our offer and long list of satisfied users.

Stolz Electrophone Co., 691 Kesner Bldg., Chicago

Fill In—Tear Out & Mail

STOLZ ELECTROPHONE CO., 691 Kesner Bldg., Chicago

Please send me, without obligation on my part, full particulars of your thirty days' home trial offer

Name .....

Address .....

Our Comfort Corner

By MARGARET E. SANGSTER

Motherly Vexations

TRIALS do not come by chance. Whether sorrows come to us suddenly as the thunder storm sweeps up in a clear sky, or approach us imperceptibly, they come by the will of God. The only way in which to meet trouble, let it be what it may, is to accept it as God's gracious gift. Perhaps among the minor trials of life none is quite so hard to bear as that of being laid aside from our usual tasks. A mother accustomed to activity in her home finds it extremely trying to patience to be shelved, as it were, by a lingering illness at a moment when she is needed by the multiform demands of the changing season. "I meant," said one such sufferer the other day, "to have my spring sewing entirely done before hot weather. I had planned a number of changes in the house. There were rooms to be repapered; the carpet in John's den was worn in the middle and I meant to rip it apart and bring the breadths that were unworn into the centre of the room and put the thread-bare ones where they would not show. Louise requires a new outfit; she has entirely outgrown her clothing, poor child! Jack is going away from home to enter on a business position in town, and here am I, the wife and mother, obliged to lie indefinitely in bed, perfectly helpless, while I cannot be sure how things are going on out of my sight." Every woman knows that this situation is one that demands the greatest faith and fortitude and the very deepest and truest strength of mind, to meet. Accept it, dear friend, if it happen to be your portion, simply as the will of your loving heavenly Father. In this enforced pause he may be giving you a rest cure, and in the end your home may reap the benefit of what to-day seems to you a mysterious dispensation.

. . .

Standing Aside

A BUSY man accustomed throughout life to undertake strenuous enterprises and carry them forward masterfully, does not easily submit to the physician's dictum that he must be contented to stand aside and let others work. When the oculist in his quiet tones tells you that the price of keeping the sight you have is using it with the strictest economy and depending on the eyes of others, you must summon up your reserves of courage and good cheer if you are to obey his directions with a smiling face.

When you realize that the vacant chair in your home is not again to be filled by the familiar dear one, that she has not gone away on a visit from which she will soon return, but has crossed the boundary into the unseen and enduring world where you will meet her again, but to which you must go in the Lord's good time, again there is no consolation like serene acceptance of the Divine will.

. . .

When the Baby Dies

THE heartache that follows the death of an infant is one of the sharpest and most poignant ever felt by a mourner. So many possibilities go with a baby. It is not only the little form that has been so precious that must be laid away in the earth, it is too the hope of the coming days that was blown out like a candle with the little one's last breath. Little children change so rapidly that almost from day to day the mother sees some new beauty in the child, catches some new note in the little voice and watches with pride some new development in the child's mentality. When the little one is gone the only comfort is found in the thought that the Good Shepherd has carried the lambkin to the upper fold.

Comfort one another,
For the way is growing dreary.
The feet are often weary,
And the heart is very sad.
There is heavy burden bearing,
When it seems that none are caring,
And we half forget that ever we were glad.

Comfort one another
With the hand-clasp close and tender,
With the gifts that love can render
And the glance of friendly eyes;
Do not wait with grace unspoken
While life's daily bread is broken;
Gentle speech is oft like manna from the skies.

. . .

Going to Bed

WHEN one thinks of it, the nightly business of going to bed is a serious affair. The Psalmist said ages ago, "I laid me down and slept. I awaked, for the Lord sustained me." Launched on the tide of sleep the king and the beggar alike are unconscious of what is going on in the world; are for the time unable to help themselves in an emergency, and are thrown upon the loving vigilance of the invisible powers for safety from peril. How can one be an unbeliever in divine providence if he considers the meaning of the constantly repeated experience of falling asleep at night? Not to moralize on this aspect of our nightly slumbers, but to speak of the homelier matter of preparing for bed, is the object of this bit of talk.

In the same family there are varieties in the manner of getting ready at night. One daughter steps out of her clothes and leaves them in a heap upon the floor. Another, sitting on the edge of the bed, scatters hers in promiscuous fashion about the room, stockings in one corner, shoes in another, waist and skirts anywhere they happen to fall. As a rule, boys are more orderly than girls, and men than women, in the arranging of garments over night. An important part of a child's education is neglected if the child is not taught to be systematic and orderly in preparing for bed. Not one of us can be sure when lying down that we may not be suddenly aroused by fire, illness or midnight alarm, when to save time will be the essential thing. If our clothing is in order where we can put our hands upon it without delay we are sure to be better off than if compelled to search for it in frantic haste. Chairs, stools and small tables should be set against the wall and not left to litter a clear pathway to door and window in the night. The number of people who stumble over rocking chairs in the night and are hurt in consequence is enough to show the need for this caution.

No one should go to bed without having close by matches and a candle. Money and valuables should never be kept in the house while there are safe deposit banks to protect them. As business is now carried on, there is not the former necessity to keep sums of money for the temptation of thieves. Most people would sleep more safely if somewhere in the house there were a light burning, so that in the view of predatory prowlers it would appear a risk to enter. The best protection a house or shop can have in the night is lights on the ground floor.

A word of advice may be pardoned in reference to medicines. Some years ago a widely known publisher, having by his bedside in the dark a tonic ordered for him by his family doctor, and a powder purchased to poison the tramp cats that made night hideous, reached his hand out in the dark and took the latter by mistake. He lived only long enough to tell his sister that his death was not due to suicide. No one should ever take medicine of any sort whatever in the dark, and if it be anticipated before going to bed that at a certain hour a pill or powder or potion is to be taken, let there be on the table beside it the means for a light.

Going to bed, one sees, is a serious business.

. . .

A Word from a Housekeeper

SOUP forms a most agreeable and wholesome dish with which to start a dinner. There are housekeepers who consider it a useless added trouble and expense. In reality it is an economy. A friend whose early life was active brought a good appetite to his meals. In middle life when his business became sedentary he still continued to be hungry at meals, but suffered the pangs of indigestion. A physician prescribed for him soup as the first course of dinner, and it proved to be precisely what he needed.

Growing boys will be the better for beginning their dinner with a plate of soup. It is nourishing for those who are delicate and as the repast of an invalid. I send two tried recipes:

Tomato Soup

"Three tomatoes cut up fine, one pint of boiling water, one-half teaspoonful of soda, one-half pint sweet milk, salt, pepper, a little butter, and four crackers rolled fine. This is enough for four persons.

Pea Soup

"Pour two quarts of cold water on two quarts of clean and tender peapods and boil one-half hour. Strain the water, add to it one-half of a grated onion, or one teaspoonful of powdered bay leaf, two tablespoonfuls of flour rubbed into the same quantity of butter, one quart of milk, two level teaspoonfuls of salt, pepper to taste. Boil five minutes and serve, adding parsley or a little chopped mint, if you like it. If you have plenty of peas, boil one gill of the shelled ones in a separate saucepan, and add to the soup as it is dished. F. W."

. . .

About School Books

IN a number of States the children in the public schools are supplied with text-books without cost to themselves. They are expected to keep their books clean and whole, so that they may later be used by other pupils. As children pass from one class to another they require new text-books. Parents are saved no little expense when this method obtains in a community. At the same time it is almost a pity that students are compelled to give up books with which they have grown familiar and which continue to be useful by way of reference during the higher grades. A school text-book in history, geography or science, however elementary, is a compendium of condensed information and is a valuable addition to any household library. There are made in some parts of the country regrettable distinctions in this matter. Parents who cannot afford to buy books sign a letter stating the fact, and their children are then supplied without charge. This is humiliating to a child, and no wonder. It would seem that Boards of Education should arrive at a uniform system so far as furnishing students with needful books is concerned.

Midsummer Specials

YOU can WEAR the pretty things yo want in a day or two—if you write NOW

This Waist $1.25

No. 801

All-over Swiss Embroidery front and back. A waist of splendid style and durability. We pay postage or express everywhere.

An extra waist or two a skirt or wash dress t provide variety or t tide over until wash-day will increase your com fort, and this SPECIA CATALOG is just th easiest and cheapest wa to get the right thing quickly.

This Catalogue shows th latest Embroidered Waist Skirts and Dresses; also th Imported Swiss Embroideries by the yard in hundreds o designs, Latest Neckwea Novelties, Embroidered Handkerchiefs, and many other dainty things to per fect your summer costumes

Here is a wealth of choice not offered at even the big gest stores, and at prices s low you cannot match them

Think over the little things you really need. No othe way is so easy to get them A post card brings you this absorbing book. Sit on the piazza and select just t your taste. No novel wil interest you more keenly than the beautiful illustrations and wonderful prices i this timely Mid-Summer Specials Catalog. Send for it now

Embroidery Specialty Co.
323 Fourth Avenue, New York City

Prevents False Teeth From Dropping

Sprinkle a little

NUCHOSE

A Harmless Antiseptic Preparation, on the surface of your plate, and it will help to keep it from falling when in public or when talking.

Nuchose is absolutely harmless to your gums, to your system or to your plate in any way.

Send 2c Stamp for Free Trial Sample and see if your plate does not hold better.

Regular Price 50c. per package.

Mailed with nothing on wrapper to show what the package contains.

QUALITY DENTAL SUPPLY CO.
464 W. 145th St., New York City

A WAY TO MAKE MONEY

IF YOU desire to increase your income so that you can earn more, have more, and save more, you will most likely be interested in our Plan.

It isn't a plan that will start you up in business and immediately produce large profits. These opportunities are still as scarce as ever. It is, however, a straightforward opportunity that is worth looking into. It isn't a "something for nothing" scheme. But it has splendid possibilities. There is no catch about it; it is plain, simple and easy. There is something to sell and some talking to do. But it's good work—fine, glorious work! You'll enjoy it! And you'll be making money every time you take an order. We don't want to tell you all about the Plan in this advertisement; we prefer to make it a personal arrangement between us.

Just write your name and address on a postal card, and say, "Send me the Plan for those who want to make money." Particulars will be sent to you gladly without cost. Do it now.

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD AGENCY DEPT.,
Bible House, New York City

Amazing Profits
MADE IN MUSHROOMS

Easily grown entire year in cellars, sheds, barns, boxes, etc., in spare time. I furnish cash buyers who pay you highest prices at all times. Write today for Free Illus. Instruction Booklet.

HIRAM BARTON
326 West 48th St., New York

MEMORY the BASIS of All Knowledge

You are no greater intellectually than your memory. Send today for my free book "How to Remember"—Faces, Names, Studies, Develops Will, Concentration, Self-Confidence, Conversation, Public Speaking. Address

DICKSON MEMORY SCHOOL, 701 Aud't'm Bldg., Chicago

DAISY FLY KILLER placed anywhere, attracts and kills all flies. Neat, clean, ornamental, convenient, cheap. Lasts all season. Made of metal, cannot spill or tip over, will not soil or injure anything. Guaranteed effective. Of all dealers or sent prepaid for 20 cents.

HAROLD SOMERS
156 DeKalb Ave.
Brooklyn, N. Y.

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD
BOND BOOK

WE have received so many requests for copies of the financial articles which have been appearing in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, that we thought it wise to preserve them in pamphlet form. Any reader may secure a copy of this useful booklet without charge by forwarding 4 cents in stamps to cover postage. Address

The Christian Herald, Dept. 96, Bible House, New York

Young People's Societies

Serving Our Nation*

THERE was never a more wicked and misleading distinction than that which has been often made between the so-called "secular" and the so-called "religious." We used to be told that politics and religion had nothing to do with each other; that business and religion, that art and religion, science and religion, had nothing to do with each other. But the world is slowly realizing that unless the secular and religious are blended and made one, the fullest life is impossible.

The old idea, widely cherished, that one must be religious on Sunday, but that on Monday one may drop his piety and go in for a straightaway race toward some coveted goal of politics, business, science or art, and never mind what becomes of the hindmost—this pernicious theory is at the bottom of most of the moral disease among us. We have learned that politics, business, science and art are so closely associated with religion that they are really a part of it; and that we are not truly religious unless we infuse our religion plentifully into whatever we may happen to be doing during every minute of the seven days of every week.

Especially to the assistance of our patriotism must we summon all of our religion. Many of us are exerting every power in the cause of peace. We feel that the highest service we can render to our country is to place it at the head of the nations which demand that all difficulties between nations be settled not by the sword, but by the reason of the best minds.

But though the physical sword may be forever sheathed, the Son of God must still go forth to war, and we his children must "follow in his train." It is no easy war of mere flesh and blood, but a war "against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places."

It is a fierce fight, but unless it is waged to a finish of conquest, we may lose our country. One great man, seeing the ravages wrought among our bravest and best by the foul fiend Alcohol, has said that drunkenness is going to destroy our nation. Another declares that the more subtle enemy, tobacco, is not less poisonous, and that it is degenerating the native stock, drugging the will and the conscience of our youth, and giving us children of lessened vitality and inferior intellectual endowments. A third feels that the centralization of capital, with its debauching of legislatures, its oppression of the poor, and its pitiless crushing of competition, is the monster before which our citadel must crumble; while a fourth sees in unbridled socialism our worst and deadliest foe.

It is hard to tell which of these enemies is really the most dangerous—or whether others, which there is not room to mention here, may not unite with them to tear down the fair fabric which our fathers builded for us with blood and tears. In any case, we can see that the war is on, and that a courage and skill are needed for the combat beside which the outfit required for the fleshly war is as fustian and tinsel.

In order to engage in this holy crusade for the salvation of the most splendid country that the world has yet produced, our young people must see to it that their bodies are kept strong and healthy; their minds furnished with all the learning they can get; their souls made pure and prayerful and brave. May God help us all on this coming July Fourth, our country's natal day!

*Christian Endeavor Topic for Sunday, July 2. TEXT: Esther 4 : 1-17.

An Appeal to Patriotism*

MANY wrongly consider that the recent exposures of shocking corruption in the government of our towns and cities, indicate that we have sunk as a nation to an almost irrecoverable depth of shame and sin. We have. In so far, these discouraged ones are right. But the mere facts that the wrong-doing has been dragged into the light, and that in many cases the wrong-doers are being punished, shows the tremendous resiliency of the American character.

Public opinion among us is sound. We are, on the whole, an honest nation. Men promise and they pay. You buy goods of almost any established house, and they prove to be as represented. Your trains and boats start and arrive on schedule time. The over-sharp lawyer is expelled from the bar associations; the immoral minister is dismissed from the ministry. The unsound teacher finds no place. Clean lives, thorough workmanship, the keeping of pledges, these are demanded in the professions and in business, and are far more general, we believe, than the average pessimist would have us think.

God knows that there is sin enough behind it all. None of us may fall asleep at our post, under the illusion that everything is well, and there is no hard public work left for us to do; but our standards and ideals are sound. Gradually in business and in the professions men are approaching those standards. More gradually men are shaping their private lives to meet them, and, slow though the great mills grind, still they do grind, and the race forges onward.

One of our great Catholic bishops lately in a noble address reminded his hearers that it was a part of God's purpose, as clearly revealed in his Word and in history, that until the millennium should dawn, the moral muscles of men should be exercised to the utmost.

"Not only must we work to stamp out sin," he declared, "but we must work early and late, and to the limit of our strength. No sooner have we reached one summit, than another looms before us to be conquered. And the good citizen must sacrifice something of his private interest every day, if he would render true patriotic service to his country, in searching out and helping to punish official neglect and crime."

Mrs. Humphrey Ward thus pictures the conflict: "All these centuries the human animal has fought with the human soul, and step by step the soul has registered her victories. She has won them only by feeling for the law and finding it—bringing into light the firm rocks beneath her feet, and on these rocks she rears her landmarks—marriage, the family, the State, the church. Neglect them, and you sink into the quagmire from which the soul of the race has been for generations struggling to save you. Dispute them—overthrow them, if you can. You have about as much chance with them as you have with the other facts and laws amid which you live—physical, or chemical, or biological."

This means simply that God's statutes are the final arbiters. We believe that liberty, equality and fraternity are his will for mankind. Upon them our beloved republic is founded. It cannot be that he will doom them to failure; but he wisely leaves largely to humanity the accomplishment of his will. Let us prove to him that we are worthy of the great trust and let us "play the man for our people, and for the cities of our God." The welfare of our country is in our hands. God will help us if only we, every one, great and small, do our patriotic duty.

*Topic of the Epworth League for Sunday, July 2. TEXT: II. Sam. 10 : 12.

LEARN MUSIC AT HOME

Without Paying One Cent for Instruction

BY SPECIAL arrangement The Christian Herald is able to offer a Music Simplifier which will enable its readers to play the piano or organ without a teacher and without any outlay of money.

It consists of a series of simple lessons in music in the form of twenty-four charts bound in a book and showing a complete set of chords in all keys, both major and minor.

These charts are so simple that by placing them above the keys of the piano or organ you may begin to produce harmony from the keys at once, and in a short time, if you are willing to devote a reasonable amount of time to practice, you may confidently expect to play melodies.

Highest Authorities Approve This Method

This Music Simplifier has been approved by some of the highest musical authorities in the country, as shown by the testimonials printed below.

The course treats each key and its relative minor key in one lesson, making twelve lessons in all, comprising all of the different scales. The charts show a complete series of chords in all keys, and the method of using them is so simple and clear that the thorough learning of each lesson will, when the series is ended, give the student a good knowledge of the instrument.

The charts are marked with the forms of each key on the piano, and all that is necessary is to place each lesson directly above the keyboard of the instrument. Everything is then ready at your finger ends, and you will be surprised when you learn how easy it is to play.

So Simple Anybody May Learn

You do not, in the beginning, need to know one note or letter from another. As you are playing that feature is all the time before you. You soon learn the letters designating the notes, and you wonder how it all came to you so easily.

After the twelfth lesson your further advancement will depend upon your individual effort, but the foundation will have been laid, provided you have studied the lessons carefully. Of course, one cannot hope to master the art of playing without effort and much practice, but by following this method your energy is conserved, and unnecessary drudgery met with in other systems may be eliminated.

READ THESE TESTIMONIALS BY FAMOUS MUSICIANS:

JOSEF HOFMANN, the world renowned Pianist, says: "I consider the Music Simplifier a very useful implement in piano-teaching."

DR. HORATIO W. PARKER, Theory of Music, Yale University, New Haven, Conn., says: "This Music Simplifier seems to me an excellent adjunct to first lessons in the rudiments of music."

MR. GEORGE E. WHITING, of the Boston Conservatory of Music, Boston, Mass., says: "I have carefully examined your Music Simplifier, and heartily recommend it to the teaching profession and also pupils."

DR. HUGH A. CLARKE, Professor Music, University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, Pa., says: "I heartily commend the Music Simplifier as an aid to both teacher and pupil."

W. S. STERLING, Dean College of Music, Cincinnati, O., says: "The Music Simplifier, on examination, should prove a valuable and quick way of familiarizing the student with the triads and their practical application on the keyboard."

DR. DANIEL PROTHEROE, the Eminent Composer, Director and Teacher of Chicago, says: "I have examined this Music Simplifier and find it will help any person desirous of obtaining musical honors who carefully studies its contents."

WILSON G. SMITH, the well-known composer of Cleveland, O., says: "Careful examination of this Simplifier has convinced me that it is an important adjunct to teaching and studying both the piano and the rudiments theory. I recommend it without reservation to the profession and also to musical public."

THE FOLLOWING DIRECTORS OF LEADING CONSERVATORIES HAVE ALSO ENDORSED THE MUSIC SIMPLIFIER:

GEORGE PARKER, Dean of Syracuse University, Syracuse, N. Y.

G. W. CHADWICK, Director of New England Conservatory of Music, Boston, Mass.

ANTONIA KOERNER, President Norfolk Conservatory of Music, Norfolk, Va.

AUG. WALTHER, Director College of Music, Toledo, O.

OLIVER WILLARD PIERCE, Director Metropolitan School of Music, Indianapolis, Ind.

LEO. J. MEHRTENS, Director of Savannah Conservatory of Music, Savannah, Ga.

MRS. D. McMILLE DEXTER, Directress National Conservatory of Music, Washington, D. C.

BURT LORENTZEN, Principal Piano Department, Cortland, N. Y.

DAVENPORT KERRISON, Director of Southern Conservatory of Music, Jacksonville, Fla.

H. HAAN, Director Detroit Conservatory of Music, Detroit, Mich.

GILBERT RAYMOND COMBS, Director Girard Street Conservatory of Music, Philadelphia, Pa.

DR. JOSEPH PARRY, University College, Cardiff, South Wales.

How to Obtain these Lessons Without Charge to You

Get one of your friends who is not now a reader of The Christian Herald to subscribe for The Christian Herald for eight months for $1.00. Send us the subscription, together with the dollar, and we will send you by mail, postpaid, the twelve lessons contained in the Music Simplifier, without cost to you.

If you have no desire to learn music, you can probably think of some friend who would be glad to have twelve lessons, and you will therefore be doing that friend a good turn by bringing our offer to his or her attention. You will find these lessons very useful, and we hope you will take advantage of this opportunity to get them without cost for your own use.

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, Bible House, New York City

Rexall

"93" HAIR TONIC

Two Sizes, 50c. and $1.00

Keeps scalp and hair clean - promotes hair health

Your Money Back if it Doesn't

Sold and guaranteed by only one Druggist in a place. Look for The Rexall Stores

They are the Druggists in nearly 4000 towns and cities in the United States and Canada

UNITED DRUG CO., BOSTON, MASS. CHICAGO, ILL. TORONTO, CANADA

COPYRIGHT, 1910, UNITED DRUG COMPANY

Christian Herald

SUBSCRIPTION, $1.50 PER ANNUM
PUBLISHED 52 TIMES A YEAR

COPYRIGHT, 1911, BY THE CHRISTIAN HERALD

NEW YORK, JUNE 28, 1911

VOL. 34—NO. 26. PRICE 5 CENTS
OFFICES: BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK

"Saluting the Flag" at Mont-Lawn

Our Mail-Bag

Questions and Answers

Mrs. W. H., Ramdon, Can. Tell us the date when our days of twenty-four hours began.

The division of days into twenty-four hours as a civil standard of time goes back to remote antiquity. The Babylonians reckoned from sunrise to sunrise—a day; the Umbrians from noon to noon; the Romans, midnight to midnight; Hebrews and others, sunset to sunset. See Lev. 23: 32, in which the injunction was given to celebrate the Sabbath from even to even. See also Gen. 1: 5.

E. A. S., Provincetown, Mass. 1. Does the word "generation" in Mark 13: 30 mean "race"? 2. Explain Eph. 4: 30?

1. No, it does not mean "race." Commentators hold that it meant that the generation then existing would not pass away without seeing the beginning of the fulfilment of these predictions. But even if it meant that all the predictions in question would be fulfilled within the limits of the current generation, this can be regarded as accomplished in the destruction done by Titus and the dispersion of the Jews under Adrian. 2. It might be more accurately translated "in whom ye were sealed once for all, and kept safely against the day of redemption," that is, the completion of redemption in the deliverance of the body as well as the soul. See Luke 21: 28; Rom. 8: 23.

Mrs. D. B., Gresham, Ore. 1. Please explain how leprosy could stay and even spread in a garment or in a wall as described in Lev. 13th and 14th chapters. 2. Why have the translators given us the word "let" in II. Thess. 2: 7, and "hindered" in I. Thess. 2: 18, when they seem to mean the same thing?

1. Under the general name of leprosy, various forms of contagious skin diseases were included. Medical authorities are divided as to whether leprosy proper is communicable, although agreeing as to the desirability of segregation. The common or non-contagious form is described in Lev. 13: 13, showing the Israelites were doubtless familiar with the different varieties of skin diseases. 2. "Let" is an archaic expression (now obsolete), which formerly meant to "hinder." The R. V. translates it "restraineth," which gives the clearer meaning.

Mrs. S. H. D., Tyler, Tex. Please explain the Commission form of government for cities and towns.

Certain cities, finding that their transportation, lighting, telephone, and other companies, using new facilities and employing new methods, were imposing on the public, and seemed to be outside of existing statutes, have appointed Public Service or other "Commissions" (a form of the word "Committee") to regulate the actions of such companies. These Commissions are supposed to be made of the most honorable and intelligent men that can be found, and the salaries are high in proportion. They are legally empowered to fix rates, compel the using of proper machinery, regulate competition, prevent extortion and abuse of power, etc. The Governor of a State usually appoints the Commissioners.

H. L., Hillsboro, O. 1. What was the state of civilization of the children of Israel about the time of the building of Solomon's temple, as compared with what we to-day call civilization? 2. What is a Jew? When did the name originate, and who were the first people that could be called Jews?

1. There is every reason to believe that the civilization of the Jewish people at the time of the building of Solomon's temple was of a high order for that period. They had as models the more ancient civilizations of Egypt, Assyria, and Babylonia, which countries led the world in the ancient arts and sciences. Architecture, sculpture, music, philosophy, law, the mechanical arts and trades, were all in a comparatively high state of development, and it is reasonable to suppose that the young Israelitish nation had learned much, since their emancipation from Egyptian slavery. Rawlinson gives us inner glimpses of the intellectual and industrial status of the Egyptians, and their civilization was in many respects not inferior to that of the great nations that came after them. There is not a proper basis of comparison with our modern civilization, with its great advances in science and mechanism. We have a thousand valuable adjuncts to daily life which none of the ancients enjoyed or dreamed of. 2. The name "Jew" was formed from that of the patriarch Judah, and applied in its first use to one belonging to the tribe and country of Judah, and later to the subjects of the kingdom of Judah. During the Captivity, according to Josephus, the [illegible] seems to have been extended to all people of the Hebrew race and language.

W. P. S., Orange, N. J. What is the interpretation of John 14: 2?

Christ in these and the accompanying passages was comforting his disciples in view of his approaching departure. To their minds he seemed about to be removed to a cheerless distance, but he explained to them that it was simply to his Father's house he was going, and that they also would go there in due season, and he meanwhile would make preparation for their

Continued on last column

LEARN MUSIC AT HOME

Without Paying One Cent for Instruction

BY SPECIAL arrangement The Christian Herald is able to offer a Music Simplifier which will enable its readers to play the piano or organ without a teacher and without any outlay of money.

It consists of a series of simple lessons in music in the form of twenty-four charts bound in a book and showing a complete set of chords in all keys, both major and minor.

These charts are so simple that by placing them above the keys of the piano or organ you may begin to produce harmony from the keys at once, and in a short time, if you are willing to devote a reasonable amount of time to practice, you may confidently expect to play melodies.

Highest Authorities Approve This Method

This Music Simplifier has been approved by some of the highest musical authorities in the country, as shown by the testimonials printed below.

The course treats each key and its relative minor key in one lesson, making twelve lessons in all, comprising all of the different scales. The charts show a complete series of chords in all keys, and the method of using them is so simple and clear that the thorough learning of each lesson will, when the series is ended, give the student a good knowledge of the instrument.

The charts are marked with the forms of each key on the piano, and all that is necessary is to place each lesson directly above the keyboard of the instrument. Everything is then ready at your finger ends, and you will be surprised when you learn how easy it is to play.

So Simple Anybody May Learn

You do not, in the beginning, need to know one note or letter from another. As you are playing that feature is all the time before you. You soon learn the letters designating the notes, and you wonder how it all came to you so easily.

After the twelfth lesson your further advancement will depend upon your individual effort, but the foundation will have been laid, provided you have studied the lessons carefully. Of course, one cannot hope to master the art of playing without effort and much practice, but by following this method your energy is conserved, and unnecessary drudgery met with in other systems may be eliminated.

READ THESE TESTIMONIALS BY FAMOUS MUSICIANS:

JOSEF HOFMANN, the world renowned Pianist, says: "I consider the Music Simplifier a very useful improvement in piano-teaching."

DR. HORATIO W. PARKER, Theory of Music, Yale University, New Haven, Conn., says: "This Music Simplifier seems to me an excellent adjunct to first lessons in the rudiments of music."

MR. GEORGE E. WHITING, of the Boston Conservatory of Music, Boston, Mass., says: "I have carefully examined your Music Simplifier, and heartily recommend it to the teaching profession and also to pupils."

DR. HUGH A. CLARKE, Professor Music, University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, Pa., says: "I heartily commend the Music Simplifier as an aid to both teacher and pupil."

W. S. STERLING, Dean College of Music, Cincinnati, O., says: "The Music Simplifier, on examination, should prove a valuable and quick way of familiarizing the student with the triads and their practical application to the keyboard."

DR. DANIEL PROTHEROE, the Eminent Composer, Director and Teacher of Chicago, Ill., says: "I have examined this Music Simplifier and find it of help any person desirous of obtaining musical honors who carefully studies its contents."

WILSON G. SMITH, the well-known composer of Cleveland, O., says: "A careful examination of this Simplifier has convinced me that it is an important adjunct to teaching and studying both the piano and the rudiments theory. I recommend it without reservation to the profession and also the musical public."

THE FOLLOWING DIRECTORS OF LEADING CONSERVATORIES HAVE ALSO ENDORSED THE MUSIC SIMPLIFIER:

GEORGE V. PARKER, Dean of Syracuse University, Syracuse, N. Y.

G. W. CHADWICK, Director New England Conservatory of Music, Boston, Mass.

ANTON F. KOERNER, President Norfolk Conservatory of Music, Norfolk, Va.

AUG. WALTHER, Director College of Music, Toledo, O.

OLIVER WILLARD PIERCE, Director Metropolitan School of Music, Indianapolis, Ind.

LEO V. MEHRTENS, Director of Savannah Conservatory of Music, Savannah, Ga.

MISS D. MERRILLE DEXTER, Directress National Conservatory of Music, Washington, D. C.

BURT HUBENTHAL, Principal Piano Department, Portland, N. Y.

DAVENPORT KERRISON, Director of Southern Conservatory of Music, Jacksonville, Fla.

H. HAHN, Director Detroit Conservatory of Music, Detroit, Mich.

GILBERT RAYNOLDS COMBS, Director Broad Street Conservatory of Music, Philadelphia, Pa.

DR. JOSEPH PARRY, University College, Cardiff, South Wales.

How to Obtain these Lessons Without Charge to You

Get one of your friends who is not now a reader of The Christian Herald to subscribe for The Christian Herald for eight months for $1.00. Send us the subscription, together with the dollar, and we will send you by mail, postpaid, the twelve lessons contained in the Music Simplifier, without cost to you.

If you have no desire to learn music, you can probably think of some friend who would be glad to have twelve lessons, and you will therefore be doing that friend a good turn by bringing our offer to his or her attention. You will find these lessons very useful, and we hope you will take advantage of this opportunity to get them without cost for your own use.

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, Bible House, New York City

Our Mail-Bag

Continued from first column

coming. There were "many mansions" there and room enough for all, and there they will be with him again. He assures them of all of this in the simplest and most direct language. He would not only prepare for their coming but he himself would come again and conduct them, that so they might all be together at last in the heavenly home. Speculate as we may on the character and location of heaven we have here the Saviour's assurance that it is a place, and that it will be large enough for all of God's people. His coming again is interpreted to mean his second coming to receive his people to himself.

M. D. J., Monroe, Neb. Kindly tell me if the fifth commandment applies to present-day conditions of life, and if so, on what ground a person can reasonably expect the reward it offers.

All the commandments apply, notwithstanding that conditions may have changed since patriarchal days. Honor and obedience to parents is as much a duty to-day as when the decalogue was given. This commandment holds a high place in the rank of social duties, coming next in order after the Sabbath law. The clause "that thy days may be long in the land" implies that dutiful, loving, obedient children will inherit their parents' possessions and will be disposed to a pious and righteous life, such as God approves and blesses both here and hereafter.

Old Subscriber, Paterson, N. J. Please publish in the MAIL-BAG the different purposes for which money can be left to the Children's Home at Mont-Lawn, and how a bequest in a will should be worded. Also state who has charge, and expends the moneys, now that Dr. Klopsch has passed away?

Our Children's Home is an incorporated institution under the laws of New York State. It is managed by a Board of Directors, the President of which is the present editor of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD. This Board has a Finance Committee which regulates and approves all ordinary expenditures, any unusual expenditure being directed by the full Board. Money may be bequeathed to the Home either for general endowment, or, specifically, for the endowment of cots. The cost of permanently endowing a cot is $500. Each cot serves for seven children in succession during the season, and the endowing patron's name is in a framed card over the cot. The form of bequest is as follows:

> "I give and bequeath to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD Children's Home, Nyack, N. Y., a corporation created by and existing under the laws of the State of New York, the sum of ..... dollars, to be applied to the uses of said corporation."

Miscellaneous

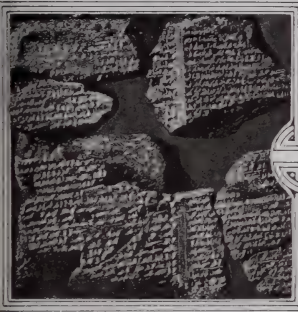
Inquirer, South Bend, Ind. We have no personal knowledge concerning the belief and teachings of the organization in question or of the pastor who leads them.

A. U. S., Potomac, Ill. The Unitarians believe in one God, not in the Trinity. They do not accept the divinity of Christ, though they regard him as a great teacher.

H. C. N., Clyde, N. Y. 1. If there are no other means of getting to church except by using the electric cars, owing to the distance, it becomes a necessity and one is justified in using them. 2. Any person who finds himself in a position where Sunday work is demanded should take the first opportunity to change his occupation.

L. L., Eskridge, Kan. Religion is no bar to political advancement in our country, yet it is a fact that no Catholic has ever become president. What may happen in the future is purely a matter of conjecture. The contingency mentioned in your second question is a very remote one, from present appearances.

W. L. N., Oklahoma. The Sunday School is the nursery of the church and the source from which it draws the largest percentage of its future members. Where both parents are believers, the children naturally come into the church through the Sunday School. There are no data for recording the percentages of the children of unbelievers who come through the Sunday School to church membership.



G. T. B., Victoria, B. C. 1. "Reverend" is simply a title of courtesy, prefixed to the name of any clergyman, and is indicative of respect for the sacred office, not necessarily for the person who fills it. It has been in use so long that, like Mr., it has now become a fixed custom. 2. We cannot agree with your observations regarding the cross. The crucifixion, death and resurrection are central facts in the Christian faith. The cross is the symbol of the great sacrifice for the sins of the world. See Mark 8: 34; 10: 21, and similar passages in the Gospels. Also I. Cor. 1: 17, 18; Gal. 6: 14; Eph. 2: 16; Phil. 3: 18; Col. 1: 20; I. Cor. 1: 23, etc. 3. It would be superfluous to give human titles to the Son of God. The evangelists are already titled as saints by some churches, including the Catholic, but it has never seemed necessary to us.

NEW YORK, JUNE 28, 1911

THE · CHRISTIAN · HERALD

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED NEWSPAPER FOR THE HOME

The Assyrian "Deluge Tablets"

The Ruins of Capernaum

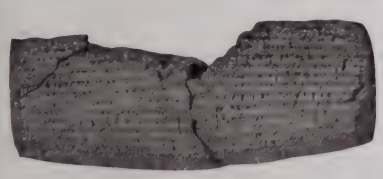
Tablet from Tel el-Amarna

CHANCE DISCOVERIES IN BIBLE LANDS

By Prof. Edgar J. Banks

WHO shall say that the sculptured monuments and inscribed records buried in the ruins of Bible lands and cities have not been preserved there by Providence, who is revealing them in our day as the faith of man wanes and his doubts increase? Strange is it that when there arises some great Biblical controversy, which seemingly can never be settled save by some word from the ancients themselves, a record or a monument rises from the ruins to supply the needed information. Equally strange is it that most of the records, so necessary to the understanding of the obscure portions of the Bible, have not been found by the trained archæologist, but accidentally by children, or by peasants, or by Bedouin women, or by the traveler, and at just the moment when they were most needed.

It was about a generation ago when Sunday School scholars all over the land were asking their teachers if Moses could write. They had been reading the books of the critics, who said that during the days of Moses no man could write; that civilization had not yet so far progressed; that no part of the first of the Biblical books could have been written by him, for then writing did not exist. This belief was about to be thrust on the people, when, in 1887, a wandering Bedouin woman of Egypt suddenly brought it to an end. This Arab woman, longing for a new necklace, went to the ruined city of Tel el-Amarna on the Nile, to search among the ruins for stone beads which frequently appear on the surface after a heavy rainfall. Instead of beads, she found something of far greater value; yet she did not know it. She picked up a piece of baked clay, all covered with wedge-shaped marks. Thinking that it might be of some value as a curiosity, she took it to an Englishman, who recognized it. Immediately search was made in the ruins, and three hundred and twenty large clay tablets, covered with the writing of Babylonia, were discovered. When the inscriptions were read, an entirely new chapter was added to Biblical history, for many of the tablets were letters written in Palestine before the age of Moses. There were letters from Jerusalem, from Tyre, from Sidon, and from Askelon; they told of the ancient cities, of the people, of the customs and wars, and our knowledge of Palestine of the days before the Israelites, which till then had been confined to a few Bible verses, now fills large volumes. Naturally the tablets do not tell us if Moses wrote any of the Biblical books, but the controversy as to whether writing was known in his time ceased at once; it almost seems as if these letters rose from the ground to end it.

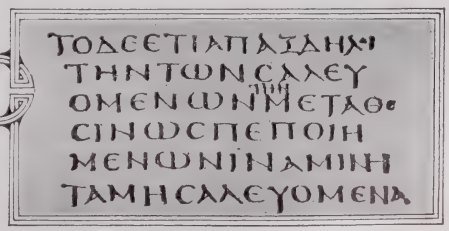


"Belshazzar is a mythical character, the hero of a legend." So asserted the German critics of a few decades ago. Never was there such a king of Babylon, they said; never a Belshazzar who saw the writing of the hand on the wall, for Belshazzar lived only in the imagination of the author of the book of Daniel. In the year 1853, their theories came to a sudden end. Mr. Taylor, an English government official, who was at the time in southern Babylonia on a mission connected with the Turkish boundary, was exploring about a mound called Mugheir. He found a small barrel-shaped object of clay covered with Babylonian writing. The archæologists who read its inscription found that it ended with the prayer of Nabonidus, the last king of Babylon; and the closing words of the prayer were these:

May reverence for thy great divinity dwell in the heart of Belshazzar, my first-born favorite son; may he commit no sin, and with the fulness of life may he be satisfied.

Belshazzar was no longer a mythical character; even the critic acknowledged that he lived, and that if not the king, he was at least crown prince. Since 1853 his name has appeared in several inscriptions, and now the doubting Thomas may see in the British Museum the leases of the houses in which the once supposed mythical Belshazzar used to live.

As great as any of the difficulties to be met by the explorer in Bible lands, is to determine the location of the ancient cities. Even now it is not quite certain just where Capernaum stood, or where Nain was, and the men who have made our maps of ancient Palestine have always employed considerable imagination when marking the sites of the towns and villages of Bible history. Over beyond the Jordan, near the base of Mount Nebo, is the little village of Madeba. A few years ago the modern Greeks occupying the village wished to build a church, and they sought their building stones not in the quarries, but among the ancient ruins. In Madeba were the ruins of an ancient church, which they used as a quarry. Had they been trained archæologists

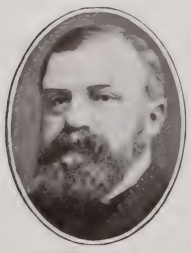


Continued on page 668

The Cylinder of Cyrus Which Tells of His Capture of Babylon, Now in the British Museum

Desert Traveling in Eastern Lands

Part of a Page from the Sinaitic Codex or Manuscript of the Bible



Have You Been Born Again?

An Unpublished Sermon by DWIGHT L. MOODY, America's Greatest Evangelist*

TEXT: John 3:3—"Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God."

The fourteenth of twenty remarkable sermons by Moody, never before published, and the existence of which was disclosed only a few months ago. The absolute authenticity of the sermons is vouched for by the evangelist's son, Wm. R. Moody, who cordially approves their publication in this paper. The sermons are the exclusive property of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD. One will appear each month.

DID Jesus Christ teach the truth while here on earth? If he did teach the truth, as we believe, then this is the question I want to ask: Have you (I don't mean the general audience, but the auditor personally) have you been born again? As the Holy Ghost explains it, "born again," "born of the Spirit," "born from above." Now if you haven't, Jesus Christ taught very clearly that you cannot see the kingdom, much less inhabit it. "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God."

Dwight L. Moody

Now, we can afford to be deceived about ten thousand things rather than about this one thing. I firmly believe it would have been far better had I never come into this world and come to years of understanding, than that I should die without being born again—without being born from above. Christ taught that to Nicodemus, who was a ruler of the Jews. He taught it over and over again; he insisted on the New Birth. He taught that a man could not buy his way into heaven; that he could not work his way in; that he could not educate himself in; that he could not force his way in; and that there is only one way, and that is to be born again. It is a solemn question.

The Natural Man

I was told some years ago, while preaching in a New England town, that the New Birth would do for the slums of Boston, New York, and Philadelphia, but not for intelligent people like those they have in New England. But there is no difference. Culture is all right in its place, but that isn't the New Birth. A man may be a moral man and not a Christian, I will admit; but no man can be a Christian without being a moral man. You want to keep that in mind. The longer I live and the more I mingle with men, I am the more shaky about there being so many men and women who are naturally so good. I will venture to say that if a man could invent something to take a photograph of the heart, and bring out everything in the heart—bring to the light all our secret sins, and everything—I don't believe he'd find a customer anywhere. There's not a man or woman who could be hired to have their heart photographed. We men arrange our toilet, go off and get shaved, cut off our hair, put on our best clothes, and go to the artist, and in our best clothes have our pictures, or rather our faces, taken; and if the artist flatters, and makes us ten years younger than we are, we say, "You are the first man to take us as we are." You pay $25 for the pictures and you say, "It's correct." But if he should take the human heart, you'd break the plate right before the artist. You wouldn't send that around.

Take another illustration: Take the natural man—never forgiven of his sins; if his secret thoughts were to-day stamped on his forehead, there wouldn't be room enough for the record. And if there were, he'd sneak out of sight pretty quick. It is one thing for a man to talk about natural goodness. I have had foolish wives come to me saying, "I wish you would pray for my husband. He is as good as he can be." That's the one thing—he's bad; he's not good. If I get angry and knock a man down, that hand isn't to blame. The trouble isn't with the hand or feet. People wish they could get control of their tongue, and of their temper. The seat of the trouble is in the heart. "The heart is deceitful and desperately wicked." Where does the whole army of drunkards come from? Sixty thousand drunkards every year! And the rum traffic says, "Give me sixty thousand of your children, your promising boys, to keep up this army of mine." Where do they come from? They come from hearts deceived. They don't start in to be drunkards, but their hearts deceive them. There's nothing more deceitful than the human heart!

In the seventh chapter of Mark, Christ gives a description of the heart. "For from within, out of the heart of man, proceed evil thoughts, adulteries, fornications, murders, thefts, covetousness, wickedness, deceit, lasciviousness, an evil eye, blasphemy, pride, foolishness—all these evil things come from within, and defile the man." Now, you'll never make a man right as long as his heart is wrong. No outward revolution will make your heart right. You'll never get a pure stream as long as you have a bad fountain. Make the fountain good and the stream will be good. You make the tree good and the fruit will be good. Make the heart right, and you make the eye right; you make the hand right; you make the thought right. The whole body will be full of light if the heart is right.

The Natural Mind

A man wrote me a most abusive letter because I made the statement that we wouldn't have any hard times if it wasn't for sin. I want to state that again. The statement I did make was that if men would give up tobacco and whisky we would have plenty of money. That's where the trouble is. Hard times are brought upon us on account of our sins and our iniquities. Let us turn back to God and we will have good times. Do you doubt it? We have turned away. When the prodigal turned away, he hungered; and when a man turns away from God, there's a hunger in his soul. And you'll never be satisfied till you turn back. What took the prodigal away? His heart had deceived him. He thought he would be better away from his father's house and home. He was deceived; men are under the power of delusion, because their heart is disloyal and wrong. Romans 8: 5—"For they that are after the flesh do mind the things of the flesh; but they that are after the Spirit, the things of the Spirit. For to be carnally minded is death, but to be spiritually minded is life and peace." Listen: "Because the carnal mind is enmity against God; for it is not subject to the law of God, neither can be."

Now, the best part of a man is his mind. If that is against God, then the best part of him is against Him. The carnal mind is enmity itself. It is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be. A man cannot serve God until he is born of God. "That which is born of the flesh is flesh, and that which is born of the Spirit is spirit." I have had mothers come to me, and say, "Isn't it strange that my boy doesn't like spiritual things?" No, of course not, until he has been born of the Spirit. The worldly man likes worldly things and the spiritual man likes spiritual things. Therefore you see the necessity of being born of the Spirit. When I was born of my parents I got their fleshly nature, and when I was born of God I got God's nature—another nature. One is distinct and separate from the other.

What It Means to Be "Born Again"

I. Cor. 2: 14—"The natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God: for they are foolishness unto him: neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned." Don't you hear people say that we are fools because we come out here to-day? Hundreds of men think we are a little daft because we are interested in these things. They don't understand how we can listen to songs and psalms and Scripture from day to day. They don't understand it. Why? Because they don't have a spiritual nature. But the moment they are born of the Spirit, they get a nature that reaches out to these things, and then they understand it. Keep it in mind—the necessity.

That which is born of the flesh will be flesh; it is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be. A man said this was foolishness. He said, "I don't understand it." And then I quoted what Paul says about the natural man. "The natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God, for they are foolishness unto him." He said, "Does Paul say that?" "Yes, they are foolishness." That's what they are. But they are not foolishness to the man born of God. The greatest joy I have had in this world was when I could not see anything. You can not convey that idea to a natural man. That's the trouble. Godly wives do not understand how their unconverted husbands cannot bear to go to church, and cannot bear prayer-meetings and praise meetings. If you will pray that God may convert them, and have faith born from above, they will look at these things differently.

I think some ministers would be amazed and astonished if they should catechize some of their members on the subject of the New Birth—what it is to be born again. I have asked people sometimes who have been in the Church for years: "What makes you think you have been born from above?" "Well, because I go to church regularly." Satan goes to church as regularly as any one. He is there before it is dedicated; and if I am faithful in preaching the Word of God, Satan will be very busy here and will catch away the seed if possible, so that it cannot remain in your heart. The idea is a mistake that he is only down in the gambling hells and evil resorts. If there is any danger of your getting out of his kingdom, he will try to get somebody to whisper in your thought and heart that you are not a Christian. Why, if it was merely going to church that's going to make Christians, we would manage to get them there somehow. A man may be a deep-dyed villain and go to church to cover up his villainy. I do not say, however, "Except ye go to church, ye cannot see the kingdom of God."

Another man says, "I do Christian deeds." I met a man who said he thought he would go to heaven if anybody did, for his daughter played the organ in church and he entertained the minister. A woman said to me, "My brother is an archdeacon." I said, "I don't know anything about your brother." But she thought because her brother was an archdeacon that she was all right for heaven—that it sort of ticketed her through—because her brother was an archdeacon. Well, you smile at that. What's your idea? What makes you think you are a Christian?

I've had lots of people tell me that they were born in this country, and this is a Christian country. That's their hope of heaven. And some say, "I not only go to church but I am a church member. I have been baptized, or confirmed, and united with the church." My friend, do you not know that you may be all that and not be born again? Did not Judas go from that holy scene and sell himself for thirty pieces of silver? I don't know but he had partaken of the bread under this New Dispensation, but he went right out and sold his Master. A man may go from the communion table and do the darkest deeds. That's not conversion. Why, if you could baptize them into the kingdom of God, all you would have to do would be to pass a law that all children should be baptized. Get them into the kingdom that way. But you know that is not being "born of God," or "from above," or "again."

A Personal Experience

Nor is it coming to meetings and having your feelings wrought upon and "turning over a new leaf," as you call it, and making good resolutions. If it meant all the resolutions made by any audience, it would take fourteen horses to draw them. I used to go to Boston when a young man, and I said I would turn over a new leaf; and on Monday night that leaf was as blue as on Saturday. I went so far once as to draw my blood out of my veins and sign the resolution with my own blood. It didn't stay! And it isn't the death of some friend. You go to some funeral and make promises and vows and tell the minister that you are going to lead a different life. There's not a minister who has not had that kind of converts. But that's not the New Birth.

You ask, "Won't you tell us what it is?" Listen: "He came unto his own" (that Jewish nation), "and his own received him not; but as many as received him, to them gave he power, or privilege, or authority, to become the children of God; who were born, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of men, but of God." Born of God! When I was born of my parents, I got a life from them, and when I was born of God, I got a life from God. That's the teaching of Scripture. When one has that new life, he is a new man. It is regeneration by the power of the Holy Ghost that this nature wants. Then we know we are born of the Spirit. "The words I speak unto you, they are Spirit, and they are life." There is life in his Word. I take his Word into my heart. Man lost life by not believing the Word of God; man will get it again by believing the Word of God. "The word that I speak unto you is Spirit and life." Peter was sent from Joppa to Cesarea to tell how Cornelius and his house should be saved. Peter calls it the "incorruptible seed," the Word of God. If I should take my watch and plant it, I wouldn't get little watches, would I? Why? Because the germ of life isn't there. You might take barrels of gravel and plant them, and

Continued on next page

*This sermon, never before published, was preached by Mr. Moody in Tremont Temple, Boston, Mass., January 21, 1897.

Have You Been Born Again?

Continued from preceding page

ou wouldn't get more gravel, would ou? Why? Because the germ of ife isn't in that stone. But take a arrel of grain, and let the rain and ew and snow fall upon it, and see if omething doesn't start from it.

Peter says the "incorruptible seed" s the Word of God. There's life in is Word. Take his Word down into our heart and lay hold of it. Believe t! Believe it! I don't ask you to eel it. "Verily, verily, I say unto ou." Put your own name in there. esus Christ speaks to you as if you were the only man in the world. "He hat believeth on him that sent me hath verlasting life." He doesn't say you hall have it. But "and shall not come nto condemnation; but has passed rom death unto life." God's remedy or sin is Jesus Christ in the heart. He that hath the Son hath life, and he that hath not the Son hath not life." f you haven't got him, receive him now. Peter says we become partakers of the divine nature. God has showered blessings upon me. My lines have fallen in very pleasant places; but here's one blessing high above them all. It took place one night in 1855, when it pleased God to reveal his Son to me, and I became a partaker of the divine nature. I went up by Tremont Temple the next morning, and it seemed as if the sun were shining brighter than ever before. I walked through Boston Common, and it seemed as if the birds were singing for my benefit. It seemed as if those old elms clapped their hands for joy, and all nature was at peace. And I didn't know myself. It took some time to get acquainted with the new man. The old man had passed away. I love to tell people that they can get something better than this old life. You can be a free man in Christ, if you will.

In India the swan is considered a great bird. There is a legend that an old crane was looking out for snails and the swan came down and alighted near that crane, and stretched out its neck. The old crane said, "Where did you come from?" The swan said, "I came from heaven." "Heaven? I never heard of that," said the crane. "Is it far away?" "Yes; it's far away." "Is it a good country?" "Oh, yes." "Is it as good as this?" "Oh, yes, far better." And the swan told about the lakes and the rivers and the fountains and the climate, and the crane stood there, listening. And the crane said, "Have they got any snails there?" And the swan drew itself up, and said, with indignation, "No, they wouldn't have vile things there." And the crane said, "You may have your heaven; I want snails."

There's a mighty truth wrapped up in that. Did you ever see a young man who has a mother and father, and whose mother loved him with all her soul? Her home is as beautiful as a bit of paradise let down in this world. Lovely father and brothers and sisters! And the boy will go down into the slums, down, down, lower and lower, and he will hunt around, and at last will clean out the spittoons for drunkards. Tell him how his mother wants him to come home, how she loves and yearns for him; tell him that if he will only return what a welcome he will get. He will tell you that he can't go back, for he wants whisky. He will give up his mother and his young wife and beautiful children—his old white-haired father, and reputation and character, and his soul, his life and heaven—if you will only give him whisky! What's the trouble? He has got the crane nature. Put into him the swan nature, and he gets up and goes out. Get the swan nature into the drunkards and they will get away from the whisky. It's the new nature they want. They want to become partakers of the divine nature. You let the 30,000 churches of America go to preaching this day and night, and we'll have a mighty success.

The Cure for Sorrow

By EUGENE THWING

SHIPWRECKED souls drifting on the sea of trouble cry to us out of the darkness for help. What shall we do? How can we best reach them with our love and sympathy? How can we guide their weak, groping hands until they rest in the strong, tender hand which "is not shortened that it cannot save"? How can we help them to see that troubles may indeed be cured, but not by nursing; that happiness may truly be found, but not by searching?

Here is a little parable for those who cry out bitterly with the Prophet Jeremiah, "Is it nothing to you, all ye that pass by? Behold, and see if there be any sorrow like unto my sorrow."

. . .

A VERY wise man once announced that he was prepared to cure all the cases of heartache and sorrow which might be brought to him. Each applicant was taken into a small dark closet and placed before a peculiar four-sided mirror enclosed in a case. The front of the case was open, and the mirror could be turned around, but could not be taken out. A hidden light illumined the glass, but left the closet dark. "Sit for an hour looking into that mirror, then go home," said the wise man. "Return at the same time to-morrow, and do likewise daily until cured."

The wondering sufferer looked into the bright surface of the mirror, but could see nothing. Touching the handle, he turned the mirror until the corner, or edge, between two of the surfaces was exactly opposite him; then suddenly he saw reflections in both of these, not of his own face, but of other scenes. He seemed to be looking into two homes where bitter sorrow held its sway. Startled, he gazed a while, then turned the mirror again. As each one of the four sides came opposite him and he looked for his own visage he saw nothing, but directly two of the sides rested at the same angle to the front of the case he saw in them the troubles of his neighbors. In anger and perplexity he tried to escape from the closet, but the door was locked. He called and struck upon the door without result until he remembered the wise man's prescription of one hour. At the end of the hour the door sprang open.

During the remainder of the day and through the night his strange experience haunted him, and reversing his own decision not to return, the next day he spent another hour alone with the magic mirror. The mysterious pictures all were changed. Trouble was in them, but the persons were different. The mute appeal began to take hold of him, and when at the end of the hour the door sprang open he hastened to the relief of two cases of distress which were within his power to relieve. He was surprised at the results both in the delight and gratitude of those to whom he ministered and in the joy and comfort the ministry brought to his own soul.

The third day he was eager to return to the magic mirror. As he sat there alone, yearning over the sadness and pain of those others who cried to him silently from the mysterious glass, he felt a strange thing taking place in his own sorrowing heart. In the warm glow which sprang into life all his own bitter suffering seemed to melt and to be transmuted into love and sympathy with others and an eagerness to do something for them. He stole away quietly from the wonderful mirror, determined thereafter to hunt out for himself its sad pictures and change them so far as he might into pictures of joy.

. . .

SELF-INDULGENCE in pain is scarcely less dangerous than self-indulgence in pleasure; both destroy one's usefulness. Self-examination, that fetish of so many of the old philosophers, becomes, very often, self-torture without profit. "I study myself more than any other subject," declared Montaigne—a most unsafe example for many of us to-day to follow. Honest self-examination to a reasonable extent, in order that we may put ourselves into a right attitude toward God and our fellow-man, is a duty, but, as Ritchie said, "There is such a thing as looking into self until despair fills the heart." Introspection as a habit results in hopeless melancholy and doubt. It causes many persons to sympathize too much with themselves. They make the most of their sorrows, and seem to find a certain gratification in giving way to them.

. . .

HEAVEN is not our home—yet. We look forward to it hopefully, but before we go there we want to succeed as abundantly as possible in two things: first, in making heaven right here on earth for ourselves and for all whose lives we can manage to bless; second, in gathering and laying up in advance as great a store of treasure as we can in the heaven to which we expect to go when our time expires in the heaven we make here. In John's Revelation some of the wonders and glories of that future heaven are described in language hard to grasp and necessarily inadequate, although there are some things in John's description that touch us very closely; for example, the white-robed throng around the throne are "they which came out of great tribulation." Those who suffer bravely here are qualifying for that glory; "and God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes." So we will make the most of the present life, taking up the beautiful work left to us by Him who set us the example, and "go about doing good," finding some opportunity every day "to bind up the broken-hearted, . . . to comfort all that mourn, . . . to give unto them beauty for ashes, the oil of joy for mourning, the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness."

. . .

HAPPINESS eludes every searcher for it, but comes quickly and abundantly to the one who seeks to bestow it upon some one else. The searcher for happiness may get wealth, and power, and fame, but none of these advantages will avail anything in getting happiness. Even from friends it cannot be gotten, for happiness comes from what is given out rather than from that which is gathered in. Loving, unselfish service, the persistent, enthusiastic effort day by day to bring sweetness, light, comfort, and goodness into the lives of others, will surely bring happiness into the life of any man, woman, or child. No sorrow of heart, no doubt of the future, no restlessness or aimlessness of the present, no loneliness or bitterness of soul, but will yield and be resolved into joy and peace and purpose as soon as the days are filled with labors of love—as soon as the eagerness to get happiness is replaced by an eagerness to give it to others.

ADIEU

WE bid our friends adieu,
For we to God commend them,
To comfort and befriend them,
Their earthly journey through.

We bid our friends adieu;
The worldling little dreameth
How deep this one word seemeth
To Christian hearts and true.

We bid our friends adieu;
Be God Himself their keeper;
The little word goes deeper
Than heaven's unfathomed blue.

We bid our friends adieu;
May God with them be biding
Even till their feet are gliding
The pearly portals through.

Bedford, N. Y. —AMELIA HOYT.

Among the Workers

—THE FIRST M. E. CHURCH and Sunday School of Brazil, Ind., lays claim to the extraordinary total of 4,897 members in its different departments. Its cradle roll is 818, primary 473, beginners 169, juniors 339, intermediate, senior, and adults 2,381, home 599, officers and teachers 118.

—THE WORLD'S STUDENT Conference in Constantinople in April was largely attended. Mr. John Mott gave several addresses which created a deep interest. At the closing meeting about one hundred students made a public signed profession of belief in Christianity. The power of the Holy Spirit was manifested at many of the meetings.

—DR. GUSTAVUS LELACHEUR, for twenty-four years vice-president and secretary of the Brooklyn City Mission and Tract Society, passed away lately in that city. The directors of the Mission at a memorial meeting adopted resolutions expressive of their high esteem of Dr. Le Lacheur and of the work accomplished during the years of his administration.

—PASTOR NICOLAS ZAMORA, the well known Filipino preacher, writes to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD that the house in which he lived in Tondo, Bulacan, P. I., was burned to the ground on February 25. All of Pastor Zamora's books, furniture, clothing and general effects were destroyed. At the time of the fire he was attending a Conference of the Native Methodist Church in Malolos. Although he is now reduced to poverty, he still continues bravely in his pastoral work.

—THE FIFTH SUMMER SESSION of the Federate School of Missions will be held at Mount Hermon, in the Santa Cruz Mountains, California, July 13 to 20. Mrs. Wells will conduct the study classes in both the new text-books. It is expected that Mrs. L. E. Troyer, Baptist missionary from Puebla, Mexico, will be present and speak. The new missions building will be finished, and all who have been at beautiful Mount Hermon before will wish to be present again for this week of missionary study and renewal of friendship with the workers of different denominations. M. E. B.

—PASTOR CHARLES M. SHELDON, author of In His Steps, has this to say of the confessional: "I do not in the least advocate the doctrine of the forgiveness of sins, but it seems to me that the minister in order to fulfil his full duty to the church and to his flock ought to make himself so useful that the members would feel free to confide in him about anything that concerns them. The Baptist Emanuel Church of Boston is carrying out this idea now. I have been working along this line for many years. The confessional is not entirely a spiritual matter. It is a place where people can carry their troubles of whatever kind or nature, business, spiritual and religious, family affairs and purely personal matters. It is the working out of the plan to give more help to the congregation."

Anvil Sparks

..SPIRITUAL progress is the only true progress.

..THERE'S much in heredity, but more in integrity.

..IT IS hard on an honest eye to conceal a dishonest heart.

..AN OPOSSUM'S tail, a dog's nose, and a formal Christian are always cold.

..SOME people have such a world-wide vision that it misses the world altogether.

..A PREACHER should not expect a higher salary just because he has begun to preach a higher life.

..INSTEAD of complimenting the sermon, it would be more fitting if some of the congregation would apologize for not listening better.

..MAKE heaven within and about you all through your life, and you will not need an introduction when you reach there at last.

Famine Orphans Now China's Problem

SOME OF THE BENEFICIARIES OF THE CHRISTIAN HERALD FAMINE FUND—OVER 1,000 CHILDREN ARE FED DAILY

NOW that the great famine in China is subsiding—although there are many places where the missionaries and the authorities are still dispensing relief—the same problem has arisen which has confronted the relief workers in previous famines, viz.: the orphan children. Thousands of fathers and mothers who have perished in the long months of hardship and suffering have left behind them helpless and destitute little ones. Many of these are being cared for by the missionaries, but the number is so great that to shelter and feed all would be impossible under present conditions. The photograph on this page shows a group of several hundred orphans—beneficiaries of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD Relief Fund—who are being cared for by the missionaries of the American Southern Presbyterian Mission at Hsuchowfu. There are a thousand children at this mission who have been receiving CHRISTIAN HERALD relief. These conditions are duplicated elsewhere.

Chairman Ferguson of the Central Famine Relief Committee in Shanghai writes to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD: "We are now nearing the end of our famine distribution work, and have purchased foodstuffs up to the limit of the money which we have on hand. We have arranged to finish the distribution work during the month of May, and after that, whatever is distributed will be only peas and beans, which will be used as seed grain.

"We had, during the last ten days, an urgent appeal from Bishop White, of Honan Province, for relief at Yung-cheng. This is a place which is in the region where the crops were destroyed by water. It is a tongue protrusion from the north into Anhui Province, and is almost surrounded by the Province of Anhui. We proposed to distribute relief there a long time ago, but the Governor of Honan did not wish us to do so. Bishop White has made a study of the situation there and decided that help was urgently needed and arranged with the Governor. We are sending 4,000 piculs of kaoliang, though the trans-shipment will be somewhat difficult, because it must be carried for thirty miles on wheelbarrows."

Rt. Rev. Wm. C. White, Anglican Bishop in Honan province (west of Anhui and Kiang-su, and outside of the area of our Relief Committees' operations) writes telling of a tour. The people are beginning to travel back to their homes by hundreds, only to find, most of them, that their land is again under water through the recent prolonged rains. He adds:

"Kweiteh being the prefectural city of the affected districts it was natural that the refugees should flock there, and some 6,000 of these destitute people are in Kweiteh city itself. This has brought the cost of living up very high, so that the poorer people of Kweiteh are now in just as destitute circumstances as the refugees, and are leaving their homes to beg. In Kweiteh, the officials are doing practically nothing, and the district magistrate has just been dismissed from office, some say on account of his incompetence in dealing with the famine problem. The gentry in Kweiteh had collected a little money for relief, which they attempted to give, but lacking organization and method the multitude simply stormed the relief centre, so that after a second day this plan was abandoned. They then adopted the plan of buying grain and selling i cheaply; but the prices were only ten per cent cheaper than the famine prices holding in the shops while ninety per cent. cheaper would be no help t the thousands who had not a "cash" to buy. Finally I agreed to be responsible for the furnishing o cooked food daily to 3,000 women and children, pro vided the authorities supplied the buildings an gave the necessary oversight. This they were onl too willing to do, and will also give what contribu tions they can for this purpose. This work is unde way, and will be kept up until the middle of June when the wheat harvest ought to relieve the situa tion. We have started an orphanage for boys in on of the city temples put at our disposal for the pur pose, and another for girls in our mission premises We shall have at least a couple of hundred. Al the girls brought to our orphanage are under fiv years of age. Scores of people have brought thei daughters to us and offered them for a string o more of "cash"; but as we cannot buy them, this being nominally illegal, they turn to the ready market offered by traffickers. The Chinese officials say tha one fifth of the population of Yung-cheng have suc cumbed to the famine. If this is so, and if the census of this district taken last January is approx imately correct, it means that the appalling numbe of over 200,000 have died of starvation."

Father Perrin, a Catholic missionary at Meng chen, died of typhus, contracted while doing relie work. Dr. Samuel Cochran and Rev. Mr. Morris o the Presbyterian Mission were also attacked by the same disease but recovered. Father Perrin was a faithful worker and died at his post.

A MODEL HOME FOR SOLDIERS

NEW JERSEY is justly proud of its State Home for Aged Soldiers at Vineland. A reader of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD sends this interesting description of the institution, which is a model of its kind:

"It is strictly a State Home, owned, controlled, and maintained by the State, for disabled soldiers, sailors, or marines and their wives or widows. It is situated just outside of the borough limits of Vineland, on the road from Philadelphia to Cape May City, 34 miles south of Philadelphia. There is a fine lawn of trees and shrubbery extending about two hundred feet in front of the home. The building is 320 feet in length and 43 feet wide. It has 230 rooms, large halls, fine porches, a hospital, a laundry, a dormitory for widowers, reception room, ladies' parlor, and two large dining-rooms, with archway between. The officers of the home are: John Shields, commandant; E. P. Southwick, adjutant; Mrs. Emma Southwick, matron; Dr. John S. Halsey, surgeon, and a staff of nurses. There are in all 293 occupants, and 25 employees. Twenty acres of land surround the home. The inmates are made very comfortable. There is a good library, and the days are diversified with entertainments, etc."

The State Home for Aged Soldiers at Vineland, N. J.

BUDDHISM'S AGGRESSIVE BATTLE

IT IS FORCING THE FIGHT AGAINST CHRISTIANITY IN JAPAN

BY A MISSIONARY CORRESPONDENT

THE week ending April 15, 1911, saw a celebration in Tokyo, Japan, which is of serious import to all the Christian influences in the Empire. This was the seven hundredth anniversary of Genku, founder of the Jodo sect of Buddhism. It occurred at the Zojoji temples in the Shiba ward, famous as the burial place of many of the great Tokugawa line of Shoguns.

Genku was a priest of the twelfth century, styled by Dr. Arthur Lloyd "the St. Francis of Japan." His early education and training fell under the control of the Tendai sect of Buddhism, which was at that time very powerful but rapidly becoming more worldly. Genku, or Honen Shonin, as he is better known, early began teaching doctrines which were looked upon with considerable doubt by the orthodox Tendai sect, and which resulted in the foundation of the Jodo sect in 1174 A.D. To the Westerner, unused to the subtleties of the Easterner's theology, the change of doctrines which Honen Shonin advocated were difficult to grasp. That the new doctrine was destined to be successful at last, is axiomatic. It is an attitude which has an appeal to a sincere man, and the Jodo sect numbers about 10,000,000 to-day.

Part of the Great Crowd in the Temple Grounds

But Honen Shonin is to be remembered more especially for his influence upon the life of his great disciple, Shinran. With the large majority of his followers, Honen could not carry his doctrine to its ideal and logical conclusions, but in Shinran he found a choice spirit, and through him attained his aim of perfect and complete faith in the name of Buddha and in his vow for the salvation of men; a faith which has become crystallized in the prayer of the Jodo and related sects—Namu Amida Butsu. This same reformer persuaded Shinran to marry the daughter of Kanesane, thus establishing firmly the principle that the priesthood is not sacred apart from the world, but sacred in the world. The new sect which sprang from these radical changes, the Shinshu, numbers to-day some 15,000,000 souls. In Honen Shonin we see the spiritual father of some twenty-five million Buddists.

Apart from the fame and reverence in which the name of the founder of the sect is held, these temples serve to draw great crowds, for here, besides the tombs of the Tokugawas, are many relics of the great family—armor, swords, walking-sticks, and even one old kettle which belonged to Taiko Hideyoshi, the Napoleon of Japan. This is also the resting-place of one of the great artistic masterpieces of Japan, the Go-hyaku-rakan, a series of one hundred scroll paintings, which occupy a place in the Japanese artistic life like that of the Stanzas of Raphael or the familiar "Stages of the Cross" in Western thought. These draw pilgrims in crowds.

The great gate of the temple was a scene of confusion on the festival days, but the foreigner found guides ready to take him about, explain things in English, smooth his path, assist him to secure pictures and enjoy himself to his heart's content. Streams of visitors, largely from the country districts, passed through the gate, spending fifty sen apiece for badges—an amount which is to them what a dollar or two would be to our small farmers or laborers. Within, the visitor passed between long lines of stalls where were sold many things, not altogether pertaining to the temple worship. Directly ahead stood the temporary building erected to replace the beautiful structure which was destroyed by fire three years ago. A permanent building is soon to take its place, costing $500,000. Before this building a sloping platform led down to the nobudai, or dancing stage. On either side of the enclosure were placed the preaching tents. At the end of the temporary structure a room had been prepared where the pilgrims were fed by the thousands each day. Around at the rear was a new shrine where incense burned from morning till eventide and where priests beat upon gongs and groaned continually their Namu Amida Butsu.

In the preaching tents, from morning till dark, men preached to crowded, attentive audiences of two hundred or more. What could they have been preaching in this religion which we have been told so often is dying? They were preaching earnestly, passionately, logically the powerful doctrine of faith, faith in the Great Vow of Amida. Truly it seems incorrect to call Buddhism dead. She is aggressive. She is copying the methods of the Christian churches in this land, in the fight. The church has its Sunday School, but on each Sunday the children of Buddhist homes are likewise gathered for religious instruction. Buddhist street preaching, unknown till the advent of Christianity, or at least much despised, is now steadily employed. We have our Children's Day; so does the Buddhist. On December 25 we celebrate Christmas; Buddha's birthday is March 8. Where goes the Young Men's Christian Association, there goes the Young Men's Buddhist Association. Our hymns, with words adapted, are being used in Buddhist services, and in a few years the priests will tell their people that the Christians have borrowed them from the Buddhists—and the people will believe it. The printing press is being used to mighty advantage and Buddhist newspapers and Buddhist books are being carried to all the land. Most effective of all, the Buddhists have a great school system, taking young men through college and theological work and equipping them to go out and preach a doctrine in which they are showing the marvelous ability of the Japanese to borrow, this time Western philosophy, and make it appear as just a copy of the Buddhist. An effort is even being made to attract that shallow-minded class of tourists from the great Christian countries, and these are made to believe all that the subtle priests tell them about the beauties of the Buddhist faith and the sufficiency of it for the land and people, which they have no chance and make no attempt to investigate.

Watching the Religious Dances at the Temple

Buddhism is not dead; far from it. It is alive and militant, and pushing the fight into the Christian camp, and Christian reinforcements are a necessity in this land, if the battle is not to be lost or victory delayed many decades.

Friday was the greatest day of the celebration, and into the little enclosure crowded some 10,000 people. For three hours they stood watching the sacred dance, as group after group of men marched on the stage in the old costumes, performed certain strange motions called dancing, and marched off. And one could not but remember that this was Good Friday, and that our Lord had died for these very men and women in the swaying, jostling mass. And with the Great One he would almost wonder, "What went ye out for to see? A reed shaken in the wind? For behold, they have eyes and they see not, ears have they and they hear not, neither do they understand."

General Notes

—THE CHICAGO Council of Grain Exchanges is meeting with encouraging success in its movement for the organization of a National Crop Improvement Committee with branches throughout the country. There are hundreds of local Crop Improvement Committees already in active operation.

—AMONG THOSE WHO HAVE arrived recently on the trans-Atlantic steamers was Professor C. C. Uhlenbeck, who holds the chair of languages in the University of Leyden, Holland's greatest college. Mr. Uhlenbeck comes to America to study the American Indian. He and his wife are going out to the Blackfoot reservation in Montana, where they will spend five months. He has learned their language. They expect to live with the Indians, and especially to study the sun dance. The Indians, he said, are suspicious of Americans, and fearful that they will be used for commercial purposes.

—IT IS LEARNED that the proposed continent-wide evangelistic campaign of the "Forward Movement," under the leadership of Rev. Frederick B. Smith, prominent in Y. M. C. A. work in New York City, will be a remarkable one in several respects. It is strongly officered and the list of active aids will include a very large proportion of the ablest Y. M. C. A. and evangelistic workers in the country. Meetings will be held in seventy-six American cities and fourteen in Canada. Reno, Nev., the centre of the divorce business, will receive special attention, and $600,000 in cash will be at the disposal of the movement to cover necessary expenses.

OUR EDITORIAL FORUM

OTTO KOENIG, President GEO. H. SANDISON, Managing Editor THEODORE WATERS, Secretary

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD is published weekly by "The Christian Herald," at the Bible House, Fourth Avenue, 8th and 9th Sts., New York City. The officers are: Otto Koenig, President and Treasurer, Bible House, N. Y. City; Geo. H. Sandison, Vice-President, Bible House, N. Y. City; Theodore Waters, Secretary, Bible House, N. Y. City.

Subscription Price, $1.50 a year, in advance.
Remittances should always be made in the safest manner available to the remitter. Register cash remittances.
Foreign Postage.—For each copy to be mailed outside the United States, Canada, and Mexico, add one dollar a year.

Change of Date.—It takes at least two weeks to change the date, after your subscription is renewed.
Expiration of Subscription.—The date on the wrapper indicates when your subscription ends.
Change of Address.—It requires three weeks' time to make the change. Give both old and new address.

Subscriptions may commence with any issue.
Letters should be addressed, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, Bible House, New York.

Entered at Post Office, New York, as Second-class Matter
Entered as Second-class Matter at the Post Office Department, Ottawa

Loyalty in the Pulpit

FOR some time past, Presbyterianism has been a sort of mild theological storm centre. Greatly to the regret of many in the old denomination, the impression was created that the church's attitude regarding certain points of doctrine was fluctuating and indeterminate. In the pulpit there was often lacking that vital clearness on essentials which the members had a right to expect, and there was a corresponding lack of confidence on the part of the pew. Too much latitude at last produced open discords, and when these became a subject of discussion in the General Assembly, Presbyterians naturally looked for some declarative action. That this was due and timely seems to have been the opinion of the New York Presbytery, which, at a meeting held on June 11, took a step which has an important significance. It was in the form of a statement defining the Presbytery's attitude toward the General Assembly and the church at large. This statement, which seems to have originated with the Rev. Dr. J. H. Jowett and Rev. Dr. D. G. Wylie, two of the leading New York pastors, was read and adopted without a single dissenting voice. It described the New York Presbytery as > the centre of a great community where seas meet, and where men from different parts of our country and of the world, with a great variety of temperament and training, are brought into close personal and ecclesiastical relations. This being so, it is quite natural that, as in the Apostolic Church, some differences of opinion should arise between earnest men, and this has been the case in this Presbytery.

It then proceeds to explain that "outside the essentials of evangelical Christianity there is abundant room for our theological differences, but within the limits of evangelical Christianity there should be unity, and we are confident that in this Presbytery such is the case." The statement closes with a reassuring pledge that the New York Presbytery puts itself on record "as being in complete harmony with the doctrines of the Presbyterian Church—and we have been and shall continue to be loyal and true to the best traditions of our Church." It expresses the hope that in future the threshing out of theological differences would be done outside the zone of theological work. In other words, that pastors and others should stand loyally by the essentials, however they might disagree on trivial points, or else take their quarrels elsewhere. What is needed and radically needed in many churches—and not Presbyterian alone—is a clearer vision, a deeper personal spiritual experience in the pulpit. This does not lie in scholarship or eloquence. One of the chief causes of pulpit inefficiency is unsound seminary training. Our theological training schools are frequently responsible for sending out men to be pastors and shepherds who are not well grounded in Christian doctrine. Such teaching cannot inspire men to preach the fundamental truths of Christianity, nor lead to the saving of sinners. Those good Presbyterian pastors who are making a worthy effort to put the old denomination back safely upon the rails of orthodoxy, could easily have put their fingers upon the sore spot of the trouble. In almost every case it is to be found, not in any new development or conviction on the part of the ministers who are out of tune with the Gospel, but in the loose teaching of the theological classroom.

The Church in Social Service

ON DIFFERENT occasions in the past, the Rev. Washington Gladden, the distinguished Congregational sociologist, has succeeded in quickening the public conscience by his writings and his platform utterances concerning the social mission of the Christian ministry. Speaking before the National Conference of Charities and Correction in Boston lately, he sounded a new note of social service for the Church at large. In addition to preaching the Gospel, its function, he urged, should be to inspire, interpret, guide and administer social work. And it should begin by making itself acquainted with the new field it does not now occupy. It is not the sole duty of the Church to prepare people for another and a better world; it should show them how to better the world we now live in. There are many ways in which Mr. Gladden's advice may be interpreted. Christ's command to go out into the highways and byways was meant to include all who had not had the Gospel preached to them. This in our day should include the careless and indifferent, the stay-at-homes, the idlers and even the tramps—those waifs of humanity who are tossed about by the storms of adversity like driftwood on the tide. With the exception of the Salvation Army, the Bowery Mission and a few organizations of the same class, we know of no serious effort that is being made to reach the tramp and the outcast. For one church that does such work, there are a hundred churches that will not touch it. These heathen at home are neglected, submerged, hopeless, while the heathen abroad are being spiritually sought out and evangelized with unflagging zeal. Here, surely, is a duty as important and imperative as any the church now undertakes. And the pastor who, following the Master's example, goes down to the lowest and neediest, will never know what it is to have empty pews and unresponsive, immovable audiences.

The Peace Circles Growing

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD sends greetings to the Peace Circles already formed in response to the widespread demand for a general organization through the civilized world. It also sends a word of warm encouragement to those Circles now in process of formation. England, Germany, France, Italy, Austria, Switzerland, Scandinavia, Denmark, Holland and Canada have formed within themselves vast and influential associations, whose object is to bring the Peace Movement directly into the hearts and homes of the people and gradually, through the commanding pressure of public opinion, to move all classes of governments to submit their differences in the future to an International Court of Justice and Arbitration. Clearly we are no longer before the closed gates of the new era of Peace. These gates are wide open for us, and the throngs are already pouring through.

We look forward confidently to the heartiest co-operation of our people in this great work for the advancement of Christ's kingdom and the betterment of the world. Let every one who can do so have a share in this Peace campaign and thus become a factor in the noblest work that could be undertaken to promote human happiness.

Are You Going to Palestine?

THAT this is a query uppermost in the minds of many readers of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD at the present time is evident from the large and increasing number of letters we are receiving from friends who are deeply interested in our Palestine Tour. We are suppiying them with all the necessary information, and many are now being booked for the tour.

Some philosopher of bygone days who had traveled much, in recording his impressions, likened the world to "a great book, whereof they that stay at home read only a single page." Travel broadens and informs the mind; it helps us to view the world and its peoples in the right perspective; it is a sovereign cure for prejudice and narrowness and it brings us into closer fraternal relations with the whole human family. And these benefits are emphasized and greatly multiplied when, as in the present case, the traveler has for a goal the land which above all others is hallowed by sacred associations—the land where the world's Redeemer spent the days of his earthly pilgrimage, the land of the patriarchs, prophets, apostles, martyrs—Palestine!

Our CHRISTIAN HERALD pilgrims will set sail from New York on September 20 in the splendid steamer Cretic (13,517 tons) of the White Star Line Mediterranean Service. She possesses every equipment for comfort and convenience. A few days on the Atlantic will bring us to the Azores and in three days more Gibraltar is reached. Thence by a short run to Naples and then several days of sightseeing in Rome, "the Eternal City." The next landing is at Piræus, the port of Athens, which latter city will be visited. Next we proceed to Smyrna, where a brief visit will be made to Ephesus, and then we steam onward to Constantinople, another visiting point of central interest. Resuming our journey, we next land at Beyrout and on the following day at Jaffa. Then two glorious, delightful weeks in the Holy Land, during which all the sacred and historic places will be visited.

As the tour will be personally conducted by th editor, we are looking forward in pleasant anticip tion to meeting many of our readers and thei friends on this pilgrimage and to spending in thei company two happy and inspiring months, the re membrance of which will sweeten the whole of ou after lives. We would urge all who contemplat joining the pilgrimage to write to us for full par ticulars and the complete itinerary, without delay.

The Great June Storm

ELEMENTAL forces were let loose with un wonted energy in a series of thunderstorm which swept over a large part of the Eastern an Middle States from June 9 to 13. These storm did extensive damage, flooding many cities alon the Atlantic coast and causing terror by the vivid ness of the lightning and the fury of the gale Buildings were struck by thunderbolts in variou places, church spires demolished, large areas flooded and telegraphic communication seriously interfered with. A large amount of live stock perished in th storm. Sea-going craft of all descriptions were delayed; fallen trees blocked the railroads and there were many washouts. The storm spread over a wide area, including a large part of New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Massachusetts and New Hampshire, and as far north as Nova Scotia. Fortunately, the loss of human life was small in proportion to the violence and extent of the disturbance, though damage to property will reach into the millions. The visitation, however, was not wholly without its compensation. Owing to the long drought, many localities were facing a water famine, which the heavy rains relieved. New York's water supply had run dangerously low and the extraordinary precipitation saved the metropolis from a serious famine, adding nine days' supply to its depleted reservoirs. It was the heaviest rainfall in years.

Antiquity of the Race

LITTLE by little the scientific world is getting new light on the antiquity of the human race. When traces of man, as he was believed to have existed during the glacial age, were found at Neanderthal in South Germany, some fifty years ago, it was believed the limit of discovery had been reached; but in recent years other remarkable finds have been made in southwest France, in Belgium, in Croatia and in the Island of Jersey which confirm the evidence that the early human type did not vary in physical essentials from the modern man. As it becomes more and more apparent that the human frame, and even the skull, has undergone little change since those remote centuries—reckoned by the scientists to be from 200,000 to 500,000 years ago—the overthrow of the outworn "evolution" theory, once so confidently promulgated, becomes complete. Up to the present time, all discoveries dealing with man's antiquity have disclosed nothing of the brute. As far as science has been able to teach, man has always been man—rude, primitive, strong, but—man, as the old Bible says he came from the hand of the Creator.

Contents of this Number

Wednesday, June 28, 1911

	PAGE
Our Mail-Bag	654
Chance Discoveries in Bible Lands (Illustrated) By Prof. Edgar J. Banks	655, 668
Have You Been Born Again? Sermon By Dwight L. Moody	656, 657
The Cure for Sorrow. By Eugene Thwing	657
Famine Orphans Now China's Problem (Illustrated)	658
A Model Home for Soldiers (Illustrated)	658
Buddhism's Aggressive Battle (Illustrated)	659
OUR EDITORIAL FORUM	660
THE BIBLE AND NEWSPAPER (Illustrated)	661
The Motto Over the Gate (Illustrated) By Agnes M. Nott	662, 669, 671
Dedicating Wisconsin's Memorial (Illustrated)	668
New Guiding Hands in Mexico (Portraits)	669
Our Boys and Girls (Illustrated) By Miss Janet Porter	670
The Atonement Sunday School Lesson, by Dr. and Mrs. W. F. Crafts	672, 673
Many Peace Circles Forming	674
Young People's Societies	675

THE BIBLE AND NEWSPAPER

Conducted by FERDINAND C. IGLEHART, D.D.

Raising of the "Maine"

THE Maine, whose explosion startled the nation and precipitated the war with Spain, is being raised, and the eyes of the world are turned toward the vessel. Too long the ship remained a wreck in the harbor of Havana, a danger to commerce and a disgrace to the nation. At last Congress undertook the Herculean task of raising the battleship, which promises to be successful. Two weeks ago some predicted that the caissons forming the dam would burst, that they would blow out at the bottom, that they would not stand the pressure of the 1,300 tons of water each. These fears were not well founded, for everything is working beautifully, and the unwatering of the ship will be pushed from this on with the greatest vigor to success. Major H. B. Ferguson of the Army Engineering Corps has charge of the work. There is the deepest interest in the uncovering of the vessel; the harbor is filled with launches and skiffs carrying parties around the big coffer dam, and when the wreck is actually revealed it is expected that multitudes will be on hand to view the tangled mass of metal which hides eighty-eight sailors' bodies of the two hundred and sixty-six precious lives that went out in the explosion. The naval collier Leonidas is standing near by to take charge of any bodies which may be recovered, as well as sections of the armor, instruments, personal effects of the dead sailors, which will pass into the custody of the Navy Department. The compasses, chronometers, sextants and other navigating instruments that have been recovered thus far have been turned over to the Leonidas for safe-keeping. The suggestion has been made that if it be possible to float the Maine she should be taken directly to New York Harbor and placed on exhibition there. She could then be taken to Boston, Philadelphia, New Orleans and then to Panama to be the first vessel to pass through the Canal and be one of the attractions at the San Francisco exhibition; but the present plan, unless Congress should order otherwise, is to take from her all valuables, carry the hulk out to sea and send her to the bottom forever. Brigadier General William H. Bixby, chief of the engineers of the army, accompanied by Colonel William M. Black, U. S. A., has already left Washington to be present at the unwatering of the Maine, and the naval board of inspection will be present at the completion of the work to report its findings to the Navy Department. Of course the great question of the nation and the world—was the shipwreck from the outside by a Spanish mine, or from the inside by an accidental explosion?—will soon be answered. The waters of Havana Harbor, which for thirteen years have held the secret of the tragedy, are now compelled to give it up. The great law that the mysteries of all the tragedies of life are to be revealed is expressed in these words:

For God shall bring every work into judgment, with every secret thing, whether it be good, or whether it be evil. (Eccles. 12: 14.)

The Barnacled Hulk of the "Maine" Appearing as the Water is Lowered in the Cofferdam

Storm-Swept

For three successive nights following beautiful sunshiny days terrific electrical storms swept over the middle New England and some of the Southern States. The vivid lightning was followed by fearful thunder, torrents of rain fell, terrific winds blew and a number of lives and millions of dollars of property were destroyed. Telegraph men say that at no time since the great storm of 1909, at the time of Taft's inauguration, has there been such a tearing down of poles and wires as by the present storm. The damage of the storm, however, is only the possible evil that attends positive blessings. Without that electrical disturbance and fierce wind the stagnant atmosphere would have been very unhealthy, and without the rain there would have been in many places, including New York City, a water famine, and on the farms shortage of crops. There is health and growth in the agitation of elements in the social and religious as well as the material world. There are very few blessings in life that do not find some danger lurking near. Lightning, thunder, wind, rain and damage of the storm call to mind the prophet's vivid description of such a disturbance of elements:

Thou shalt be visited by the Lord of Hosts with thunder, and with earthquake, and great noise, with storm and tempest, and with flame of devouring fire. (Isa. 29:6.)

Pisa's Tower in Danger

The campanile or "Leaning Tower" of Pisa, which for nearly six centuries has been one of the wonders and prides of Italy, stands in danger some day, in the not remote future, of falling to the ground. Some have thought that the plans of the architects, Bonnano and William of Innsbruck, provided for the leaning of the tower, but it is most likely that their plans were for an upright tower and that some way, while the work was in progress, it tilted at quite an angle. The authorities have ordered that the bells in the tower shall not be rung, as it is thought their vibration might hasten the collapse of the structure. The edifice is about 180 feet high, with walls of marble, rising to eight different stories. The foundations are said to be not more than ten feet deep. There would be as fearful a wreckage as there is a beautiful pile, if the Tower of Pisa were to fall. Before such a catastrophe should occur the government should condemn it and take it down. The first deflections from the perpendicular of rectitude are likely to be small, and by slow degrees they increase, until there is a threat of fall and ruin. The perilous leanings of the towers of virtue and piety are often caused by an unsubstantial foundation.

And every one that heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them not, shall be likened unto a foolish man, which built his house upon the sand; and the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house: and it fell; and great was the fall of it. (Matt. 7: 26, 27.)

From Poverty to Wealth

Eighteen years ago a Mr. Ingersoll, living in New York and in hard luck, went West in search of fortune. He did not succeed, and he and his family lost track of each other. About two years ago he made an enormously successful investment and returned to New York a millionaire in search of his family. He learned that his daughter Margaret only was left, but he could not find her, although he employed a detective agency to aid him. He became ill, and when he felt he was near death, he drew up his will, leaving everything to his daughter, and made Joseph Choate, former United States Ambassador to England, his executor. The day she was found, having been employed as a cashier in a restaurant in Atlanta, Ga., $1,009,000 was the amount she was said to have received from her father's estate. In all her travels, temptations and struggles for self support she had maintained her integrity, and was really rich without her father's fortune. She can now have increased instruments of development, happiness and usefulness. In this world and country of mutation the rich are becoming poor and the poor are becoming rich almost in a day. There is mention of this mutation in the providence of God:

The Lord maketh poor, and maketh rich; he bringeth low, and lifteth up. (I. Sam. 2:7.)

Bellboy Professor in College

Those who noticed a Japanese bellboy in a Boston hotel waiting the call of "front" were not aware that the good-looking, well-behaved young man had received the degree of Master of Arts from Harvard University, having previously obtained his bachelor degree in Minneapolis. This young man sailed on the Romanic the other day on his return to Japan, where he will occupy the chair of philosophy in the University of Kioto. Professor Yoshio Tanikawa has made a careful study of sociology as well as philosophy and will busy himself in the promotion of public charities as well as the cause of a higher education in his home land. Whether he became the bellboy in the hotel because he needed money for a temporal support or for his passage on the steamship or whether to study human nature in the great school of a modern hotel, he certainly manifested that modesty and humility which are becoming true greatness and which are the promise of promotion. Christ emphasized this grace in these words:

But he that is greatest among you shall be your servant. And he that shall humble himself shall be exalted. (Matt. 23:11, 12.)

Invaluable Woodpecker

The woodpecker has the most beautiful plumage, but his industry is more tireless and his service to man is more generous than his feathers are attractive. A small boy that tries to knock him off the dead tree with a stone, or the bad boy who fells him with the gun, do not realize that there are few creatures in nature that render such valuable service as he. Secretary Wilson of the Agricultural Department says that in this age of wicked timber waste man has no greater single aid in the preservation of lumber than the woodpecker. The Secretary estimates that insects destroy at least $100,000,000 worth of timber each year and the forty-five species of woodpeckers are the most deadly enemies these tree insects have. With unerring accuracy they locate their prey and drive their tongues through the hard timber after him and his family. The Department scientists have examined the stomachs of more than 3,000 of these birds and found that their food consists of the bodies and eggs of these insects and destroyers of trees. The Creator has provided the woodpecker with a carnivorous appetite and apparatus and furnishes him his food, but he is required to hammer hard and bore deep to secure the free board that is furnished him. We are well assured that God, who has made such ample provision for food supply for the birds, will take abundant care of us. We have Christ's statement for the certainty of this fact.

Behold the fowls of the air; for they sow not, neither do they reap, nor gather into barns; yet your heavenly Father feedeth them. Are ye not much better than they? (Matt. 6:26.)

THE MOTTO OVER THE GATE

By AGNES M. NOTT

"MUVVER, can't I? Please be sayin' Yes, muvver—please?"

The small boy ran his grimy fingers nervously through a shock of yellow hair, as he stood pleadingly by his mother's side.

"Davy, I can't, 'tain't a good thing to do. I'm willin', y' know, for you to go where you c'd get food, but not there, Davy. No, Davy, he's a drinkin' man; we must get along jest as we have."

Davy's mother sat a little nearer the edge of her chair as she spoke; in nervous haste she plied the needle in her hands, only taking a second occasionally to glance at a puny baby tossing in a restless sleep on a bed in the corner.

" 'Twould help, muvver, and I wouldn't touch the drink," he urged once more.

Slowly big tears rolled down the mother's thin cheeks, as she bit off her thread and hurriedly took a new one. "I can't, Davy," she cried. " 'Tain't no use. We need it bad enough. I'm discouraged quite, God knows; but that!" and with a shudder she broke into sobs.

But there was no time for Davy's mother to give way to tears. Hastily she wiped her eyes and took up her needle again.

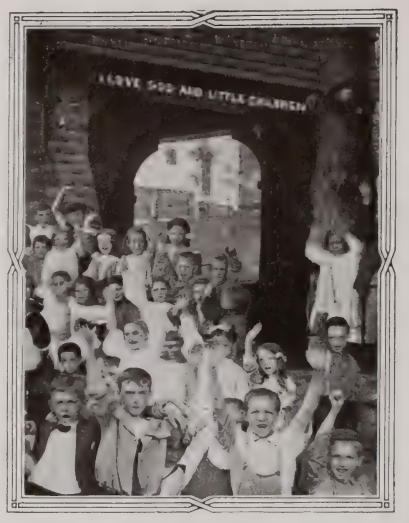
Davy twisted himself uneasily around. He was only nine years old, but his big brown eyes took on a troubled expression as he watched his mother's face. Child as he was, he saw how thin and white she looked, and somehow he realized that if there were more food to eat she might be different, and for himself the temptation was almost too great. One big meal a day, and every day in the week, was almost too jolly to be refused, and only errands to do in return!

"'Mebbe a million,' Debby exclaimed"

With quick glances Davy's mother watched him. It was a temptation to her, too. Davy was growing fast, and with all her steady sewing she could barely pay the rent, and buy enough food to keep the children from starving; but her needle flew faster and her thin lips closed tighter as she muttered fiercely: "No, Davy, it ain't any use. I can't; he's such a drinkin' man."

The child in the corner began to cry piteously, and Davy moved over towards the bed.

"Give him that bit of milk, Davy. I wish 'twas more."



"Maybe I kin run errands for old Mrs. Bray, and maybe she'll give me jest a little bit of her milk! I wisht she would," he added, as the sick baby hastily drank the bit of milk, and cried for more.

"Mebbe she will. You go see, for there ain't any money till this work's finished. Debby's gone to pick up some sticks so we can have a mite of fire," explained his mother.

Almost as gently as his mother, Davy soothed the little one, then took his cap and ran down the stairs.

But Mrs. Bray didn't have any errands, and Davy's steps were slow as he came up from the basement in which she lived. How could he go back? There was a tender little heart under the rags, and Davy wandered aimlessly along thinking of the tired mother, the sick baby, and no food till the sewing was done. So absorbed he was that he walked several blocks, and then suddenly remembered the milk he had hoped to get, and also discovered that he was in an entirely strange neighborhood.

It was a dejected little fellow who dropped down on the nearest doorstep to think, just as an automobile stopped at the roadside.

The Entrance to the "Children's Paradise"

"My, but she's a beauty!" Davy exclaimed, as a young woman stepped lightly to the sidewalk.

Davy meant the automobile, but as Mrs. Dearing came directly towards him and looked with kindly eyes into his face, he thought she was the most beautiful lady in the world.

"What is the matter, little one?" she asked.

"My muvver's discurridged quite," was Davy's simple answer.

It was such a big word from such a small boy that the shadow of a smile passed over Mrs. Dearing's face as she said, "That is too bad. Why is she so discouraged?" But she grew very serious as she listened to Davy's story, told in such evident distress there was no doubt about its truth. As he told of the hope of earning a bit of milk for the sick baby, she took the dirty hand into her own. "Come with me," she said.

If Davy had been spellbound by the beautiful lady, his wonder knew no bounds as she led him inside her home. It was not elegant, nor was Mrs. Dearing wealthy; but to Davy it was like a glimpse of fairyland. Such chairs, and tables, and mirrors, and carpets it had never been Davy's lot to look upon before.

"I wisht my muvver had one!" he whispered as he touched carefully the shiny leather of the chair in which Mrs. Dearing had seated him.

Before him was a cheery gas grate which gave Davy most strange sensations. There was no coal, and no wood to be seen, but the pretty flames danced up and down and made his bare feet toasty warm this chilly June day.

"Does the fire feel good?" asked Mrs. Dearing, who just then returned from the kitchen carrying a big basket.

Davy drew a long deep breath, and then exclaimed: "Oh, I wisht my muvver had one!"

And Mrs. Dearing wished so too. She had never wished anything more. "Supposing it was my Theodore," she thought; "just Davy's age, and has never had a reasonable wish ungratified, never known the need of a bit of milk, or any other food." The thought was too startling. She dropped into a chair near Davy, and, drawing him close to her side, she said: "You must be a brave little man, and do all you can to help, and tell mother you have found a friend who will come and see her in a few days."

"And won't she be discurridged quite any more?" asked Davy.

"I pray not. At least here is milk and meat and bread, and a few other things that you may take her," was the kind reply. And then occurred the event of Davy's life. For Mrs. Dearing took Davy out, and put him into that wonderful auto, and told the chauffeur to take him home.

"Was ever boy so lucky?" Davy wondered, as they spun along the streets. His small body swelled with pride and joy. The ambition of his life was being realized. He, Davy McDonald, was riding in a real automobile, and a basket of real food close by his side.

That every one was envying him he knew, for they showed it in their faces, he was sure. "If it only was a hundred thousand miles home!" he thought. But all too soon they turned a corner, and the old tenement house stood plainly in sight.

There was, however, a crowning glory to this ride. Debby, his seven-year-old sister, was on the sidewalk when the car stopped. She, with wide-open mouth and eyes, witnessed his triumphant descent from the machine, and plied him with questions as together they lugged the heavy basket up three flights of stairs.

"'I wisht I knew,' said Davy"

Could any pen describe the hour that followed? In the excitement of Davy's return and wonderful story, the tired mother dropped her needle. What did it matter if the sewing must wait till morning to be delivered? Here was food! Food that by planning would last them all next day, and be a luxury at that. It was as if a gleam of sunshine had pierced the dingy one window of the room, and so made its way into her heart that she almost for the moment believed God had not forsaken her.

The sick baby was satisfied, and they all for the first time in untold months ate of good, substantial food. Davy meanwhile told over and over about Mrs. Dearing and her wonderful possessions. Once his mind took a practical turn, for he said: "And her hair, muvver, is all fixy, and big round her face. I wisht yours was too."

"I know, Davy; I know my hair don't look like other people's, all plastered down tight; but it takes time and other things to fix yourself that way, and I'm neat anyway."

"Yes, course, muvver, you're beautiful, too, but sometimes I wisht y'd have time for her way! Anyway, she said: 'I'm coming to see your muvver in a few days.' A few days! How much is a few days, muvver?"

Davy's mother couldn't say. It might be three, it might be more; and—this very slowly—"It may be never."

But Davy was optimistic; and yet as one, two, three, even four days passed, his bright hopes grew dim. "Anyway, she said 'in a few days,' " he repeated

Continued on page 669

Mont-Lawn and Its Charms Are an Ever-Present Joy to the Children Who Are Taken There for a Ten Days' Outing

Contributions for Our China Famine Fund

NOT PREVIOUSLY ACKNOWLEDGED

Aasgaard, Peter. 2 00
Abbas, John..... 5 00
Abbott, Eug. W. 3 50
Ackerman, Mrs B 1 00
Adair, T L..... 2 00
Adams, H M... 1 00
Adams, Mrs M A & Hardy, MissLC 2 00
Adams, M J.... 1 00
Adams, M V.... 2 00
Adey, Benjman.. 5 00
Aglionby, J O.10 00
Alexander, MrsJB 1 00
Alexander, MrsR 1 00
Alexander, Sr.Mrs W E 1 00
Alexander, Mrs W R 1 00
Allen, Edw...... 2 00
Allen, MrsFrancis 5 00
Allen, H P.... 2 00
Allen, Wm...... 1 00
Allendorp, L H 1 00
Ames, Mrs.PD.. 1 00
Anderson, Andrew1 00
Anderson, Mrs A 1 00
Anderson, Mr A M 2 00
Anderson, Agnes. 3 00
Anderson, A T 1 00
Andre, LumberCo10 00
Anderson, A J.. 2 00
Anske, Miss H.. 1 00
Armstrong, MrsC 1 00
Ash, Alice...... 1 50
Ashcroft, JW.. 2 00
Asklund, FrankL 2 00
Atkinson, Mrs EJ 1 00
Atkinson, John 3 00
Augsbury, MrsEJ 1 00
Augustine, David 1 00
Aupperle, Mrs Jos and Miss Leah.10 00
Austin, Geo W. 3 00
Austin,J S ... 1 50
Abbott, M A... 5 00
Abelein, Mrs G. 1 00
Abernethy, MrsM 3 00
Adams, A C.... 5 00
Adams, Mrs A P 1 00
Adams, Mrs F J and G W E.. 1 25
Adams, Mrs G D 1 00
Adams, Mrs J W and S S Class. 1 00
Adams, Mrs N. 5 00
Adams, S P.... 1 00
Adams, Sophia.. 1 00
Adams, Veve M. 1 00
Adkisson, MrsGE 1 00
Aikman, Mrs M. 5 00
Airth, H A..... 2 00
Aitman, A L... 1 00
Albertson Family 5 00
Alford, Mrs K. 1 00
Allan, Mrs, M.. 1 00
Allen, Abr G... 2 00
Allen, E F..... 1 00
Allen, Earl F.. 1 00
Allen, Mrs J... 4 50
Allen, Mrs M V 5 00
Allensworth, Mrs J F.......... 1 00
Allison, Mrs M. 5 00
Alvord, H L.... 1 00
Ames, Mary E.. 5 00
Anderson, Mrs A 1 00
Anderson, A S.. 1 00
Anderson, C C.. 1 00
Anderson, J.... 5 10
Anderson, MrsOJ 5 00
Anderson, S R.. 1 00
Anderson, V.... 1 00
Anderson, Mrs W 1 00
Anderson, Mrs Z T.......... 2 00
Andrews, MrsSD 1 00
Appleby, Mrs DR 1 00
Arends, Mrs.... 1 00
Arithson, Mrs M 1 00
Armitage, Alfred and wife..... 5 00
Armstrong, Chas 3 00
Armstrong, Mrs F J.......... 2 00
Arnold, Mrs N C 1 00
Arnold, Mrs W W 1 00
Ash, Rev A M.. 1 00
Ashburn, J O & family 5 00
Ashcraft, Mr & Mrs H S..... 2 00
Ashley, L L.... 5 00
Askew, Mrs J E 1 00
Atchison, T A..14 15
Atkins, W R... 1 00
Auld, J M..... 1 00
Aull, James.... 2 00
Avery, Doane L. 1 00
Avery, Jas..... 1 00
Ayer, E H..... 1 00
Babbitt, C R... 3 00
Badger, Mrs N.10 00
Baille, Geo A.. 1 00
Bailey, A S.... 3 00
Bailey, Mrs J M 10 00
Bain, Mr & Mrs H P......... 1 00
Bain, Ida...... 1 00
Baird, Anne E.. 1 00
Baker, Ellen A.. 1 00
Baker, Mrs E J 1 00
Baker, Frank A 1 00
Baker, F U.... 2 00
Baldwin, Mrs PM 1 00
Ballard, Evelyn. 8 00
Ballou, G & V.. 2 00
Bancroft, Jos S 2 00
Barber, Mr & Mrs D D......... 2 00
Barkalow, Miss E W.........1 00
Barnes, Delia T 1 00
Barnes, Mrs J.. 2 00
Barnett, Preston 1 00
Barr, Mrs E J. 5 00
Barrett, Mrs E C 1 00
Barrett, Samuel. 1 00
Barry, Alice L. 1 00
Bartlette, MrsMS 5 00
Barton, Mrs L L 1 00
Batchelder, C H. 3 50
Batchelder, E A 1 00
Battles, Mr and Mrs Grant.... 2 00
Baum, Thos H & family 1 50
Baxter, H N... 1 00
Beard, Mrs E L 2 00
Beck, Chas F 2 00
Belcher, Mrs T L and friends . 5 00
Bell, Mrs J D & Vincent, Miss Rosa 1 00
Beck, John..... 1 00
Beebe, Wm..... 5 00
Benham, Miss T M 5 00
Bennett, Mrs, Reed, W G... 1 50
Bennett, EmmaE 1 00
Bennett, Mrs Florence 1 00
Bennett, W C.. 2 50
Benson, H N .. 2 00
Benson, Mrs. J. 2 00
Bent, Mr & Mrs L H 1 00
Berkheiser, Miss Bessie and Caroline Berkheiser 1 50
Berry, Alice C.. 1 00
Bessey, Mrs Reb. 2 00
Beuglsdorf, Mrs. A 1 00
Bienvenu, E Q.. 1 00
Biggs, E F..... 2 00
The Binzie Family, Corinth... 2 50
Bird, Margaret.. 1 00
Bishop, Mrs J W 2 00
Bixel, Elias.... 1 00
Blanchard, Ralph 5 00
Blank, V....... 2 00
Bliss, Richard.. 2 00
Bliss, Mrs. W H 2 00
Blitch, Mrs C C and Husband.. 3 00
Blymer, Mrs C W 2 00
Bodley, C E... 2 00
Boeke, Tillie.... 1 00
Boethian Class, Mullins 2 00
Bolander, Mrs M R 5 00
Bolander, Mrs P A 10 00
Bond, Mrs. J A 1 00
Bond, Wm F... 2 00
Bone, Mrs W L 1 00
Bonham, H N.. 1 00
Borge, M 6 02
Borge, Rev M.. 1 15
Borrendaine, Mrs O 5 00
Boslon, Ida ... 2 00
Bostick, C J & Friends 15 78
Bottome, Mrs. E 1 00
Botts, Mrs 1 00
Botts, Mrs. J N 1 00
Bouldin, J W.. 5 00
Bower, Mr & Mrs A B.... 10 00
Boyd, Alex ... 5 00
Boyd, Effie E.. 1 00
Boyd, Maud .. 1 00
Boyer, Mr & Mrs L D 2 00
Boys, Mrs P... 1 00
Bradford, A .. 2 00
Brainard, Mrs S L, Miss Nellie, Miss Cora ... 3 00
Braley, H S... 2 00
Brand, Mrs L M 5 00
Branson, S E... 2 00
Breeden, Mrs.. 1 00
Bridenbecker, Anchors 2 00
Briggs, F J.... 2 00
Brink, Mrs Dell 1 00
Brockelbank, J Oscar 1 00
Brooks, Mrs F H 1 00
Brooks, Mr Thos 3 00
Brose, C F..... 5 00
Brown, Mrs B F 1 00
Brown, Mrs C... 1 00
C A Brown & Bros 2 00
Brown, Mrs E N 1 00
Brown, Mrs Florence 1 00
Brown, Jackson. 2 00
Brown, Jennie .. 5 00
Brown, Mrs J M 1 00
Brown, Mrs. Sarah A 5 00
Brubaker, Mrs Frank 1 00
Bruce, Mrs. L A 1 00
Brugler, P S... 10 00
Bucher, Mrs. Mary 5 00
Buck, E M...... 1 00
Buckman, Mrs C 10 00
Bugbee, Anna & Edith 1 00
Bumbaugh, Mrs. E 1 00
Bupp, Wm H... 1 00
Burdick, Mrs Jesse J....... 2 00
Burdick, Mrs N T 1 00
Burford, Martha 1 00
Burgess Mrs R E 1 00
Burney, Fannie. 5 00
Burnham, Mrs J E 1 00
Burns, Ella..... 1 50
Burns, S F 1 00
Burroughs, Geo. 5 00
Burrour, Miss Anna 1 00
Bushnell, C E.. 1 00
Button, Mrs. Chas S 1 00
Bain, Mr & Mrs Ernest F..... 1 00
Bain, Mrs Wm D 1 00
Barron, A P.... 2 50
Barron, Chas R 5 00
Barrows, Mary A 2 00
Barry, RevDRP 11 50
Beebe, Miss I E 2 50
Beebe, Rev J L. 1 00
Beebe,Mr&MrsOA 5 00
Beebe, Mrs Wm. 2 50
Beebee, Fred F. 5 00
Bain, Grace.... 1 50
Bain, Helen ... 1 50
Bain, Ada B .. 5 00
Bain, John H..10 00
Bahler, Mr&MrsL 5 00
Baker, E....... 1 00
Baker, Geo A.. 5 00
Baker, Rev H V 2 50
Barbe, Mrs M J 5 00
Barker, B & J. 1 00
Barnes, A...... 1 00
Barnes, Miss F A 1 00
Barns, Mrs JW 2 00
Barrett, LauraA 1 00
Bartholomew, Wm M 1 50
Bartlett, MrsAH 7 00
Bartlette, Mr C 1 00
Batchelor, Mrs J 1 00
Batten, A L ... 2 00
Bauer, Philip...15 00
Baum, Mr&MrsJ 5 00
Baumgartner, Mr& Mrs G....... 3 00
Baxter, Mary.. 5 00
Beach, B E.... 1 00
Beach, Cocy.... 2 00
Beach, Mildred, Fred & Ruth 2 00
Beaver, C V...10 00
Bee, A L....... 5 00
Beers, MrsDavid 3 00
Bell, Lemuel... 1 00
Bell, Mrs S T. 1 00
Benner, J G.... 5 00
Bennett, MrsE.. 2 00
Berg, Mrs Fred 1 20
Berglund, A G.. 1 00
Berry, Martha L 1 00
Betyemann, Marg20 00
Bigart, MrsJohn 1 00
Bigley, George.. 1 00
Birckelbau, Mrs A and Sons..... 4 50
Bishop, FrancesE11 00
Bissell, Mrs CW 1 00
Biyer, John .. 1 00
Blacet, Ed 1 00
Blair, John .. 5 00
Bliss, E E..... 5 00
Bliss, M & W.. 1 00
Blume, Theo C .. 2 00
Boardman, Mrs C 1 00
Boggs, Mrs WF 1 00
Bogue, Mrs A S 2 50
Bogue, MissAnnie 2 50
Boicourt, E G... 1 00
Boiseth, MrsJJ.. 5 00
Boppert, Mrs.... 2 00
Boquist,Mrs T.. 2 00
Boss, C S 2 00
Boston, John ... 1 00
Bovard, Charles. 3 00
Bower, Mrs A... 1 05
Bower, G W.... 2 00
Bower, Amanda. 2 00
Bowles, Daniel M 1 00
Bowels, Mrs S M 1 00
Boyd, M A 7 50
Boyd, M E.... 2 00
Bradshaw, MrWE 1 00
Braasch, E H.. 2 00
Bradshaw, MrsWE 1 00
Brand, Miss B.. 2 00
Brand, C 2 00
Brand, Isaac ... 5 00
Braninger, AliceM 1 00
Brinkmeyer, Herman & wife .. 5 00
Brinton, MrsGW 5 00
Brooks, Eli 2 00
Brooks, Mrs Eliza and friends ...1 00
Brooks, Georgia. 1 00
Brooks, Mrs Wm 2 00
Brown, Mrs A J 5 00
Brown, E R .. 5 00
Brown, Geo G..50 00
Brown, MrsJW.. 3 00
Brown, John C 3 00
Brown, M H ... 2 00
Brown, MrsOlive 1 00
Brown, T B .. 1 00
Brown, W B ... 2 00
Browse, Winifred10 00
Bruce, Joseph R 1 00
Bruce, Mrs Mary 1 00
Bruce, W B 1 00
Brush, A L 5 00
Brush, Mrs Ida 1 00
Buck, A C 20 00
Buckbee, Martha 3 00
Burton, M J .. 2 00
Butler, J R .. 1 00
Butts, M A 3 00
Burdick, Dr A F 5 00
Burdick, I N 10 00
Burgess, Mrs S.. 1 00
Buler, A H 5 00
Burns, J W 1 00
Burr, H J 1 00
Burter, Miss L A 2 00
Bushnell, Fannie 2 00
Butler, J F 15 00
Butler, Thos ..10 00
Button, Mrs I M 1 00
Byers, Lemon... 5 00
Byron, Mary E 2 00
Cains, James .. 1 50
Callet, Miss C.. 1 00
Calvert, L R .. 2 50
Camp, E 5 00
Camp, Wilbur L 5 00
Campbell, James 3 00
Campbell, Mrs K 5 00
Campbell, MrsLC 5 00
Canen, Sr. J W 5 00
Cann, Mrs Geo B 5 00
Cannon, J H 2 00
Carey, W H ... 2 00
Carlson, A W ... 1 00
Carlson, N C 2 00
Carmean, Char'te10 00
Carson, J M 1 00
Carter, Asa 1 00
Carter, F M 5 25
Carter, Mrs G T 1 00
Carter, Martha . 1 00
Carter, MissME. 1 00
Casterton, MrsS 1 00
Cave, E L 5 00
Chadenyne, MissL 1 00
Chaffee, Orr H. 1 00
Chamberlain, MrsA3 00
Chapman, EllenA 3 00
Chapman, MrsJC 1 00
Chapman, Mr JC 1 00
Chase, Geo M ..10 00
Chattaway, Mrs. 5 00
Chittenden, Mrs M F 5 00
Chonch, Rev SE 1 00
Church, Mrs CM. 1 00
Clark, Ellen A.. 2 00
Clark, Miss MA 1 00
Clark, J S 2 00
Clark, L G & Mrs J P 2 00
Clark, MrsPhilip 1 00
Clayton, F V .. 1 00
Cleland, A L.. 2 00
Clemons, Clinton M and family 2 00
Clemons, MrsLA. 1 00
Clough, MrsJohn 2 00
Coates, Thos 1 00
Coghill, Sr J W 1 00
Colborn, W S ..10 00
Colburn, MrsFG 2 00
Cole, Mrs Clark 3 00
Collins, AnnieH 1 00
Collins, Mrs L.. 1 00
Collins, RevLewis 1 00
Collough, S M .. 1 50
Comfort, Mrs ML 1 00
Connell, A 1 00
Connelly, Mr & Mrs T F 5 00
Conner, Mrs R A & Conner, M J 5 00
Conrad, Mrs S .. 1 00
Conway, Alice .. 5 00
Cook, Miss Edna 1 00
Cook, J S 1 00
Copeland, L H .. 1 00
Copeland, W E M 1 00
Cornell, Mrs GW 2 00
Carrigan, Mrs J. 1 00
Corskie, Mrs J F 5 00
Costin, Mrs S J 1 00
Cowie, Mrs C A 5 00
Courtney, Mrs E 2 00
Coutts, Jennie .. 1 00
Covey, Frank F 2 00
Cowdrey, Geo W 5 00
Cox, Mr&MrsMat10 00
Cox, R E 2 00
Cox, W E & class 2 30
Crabs, Mrs R M 1 00
Craig, Mrs F C. 2 00
Crawford, E L .. 1 00
Crin, Geo W ... 5 00
Creverton, Mr & Mrs M 2 00
Cromack, C L ... 1 50
Cross, James F . 3 50
Cross, Thos 2 00
Culpepper, Rev J B 15 00
Culver, Mrs E... 1 00
Curl, Vera 10 00
Cushing, Mrs L.. 2 00
Cuthen, Mr &Mrs 5 00
Cutler, Geo W.. 3 00
Calderwood, Mrs J B 1 00
Calkins, H V... 1 00
Callan, J T 1 00
Callan, Mrs J T 1 00
Camp, B I & J G Glenn.... 8 25
Campbell, Mrs Jno D 1 00
Campbell, Mrs J R 1 00
Campbell, Mr & Mrs Samuel... 5 00
Cannon, L M .. 3 00
Caples, Miss Frances 10 00
Card, Mrs C G.. 1 00
Cardwell, Miss L C 2 66
Carlson, Mrs .. 10 00
Carlson, Mr & Mrs D H... 10 00
Carlson, G A .. 8 50
Carpenter, Aaron 8 00
Carroll Bapt Ch. 8 00
Carter, Miss Nannie M 1 00
Carver, Mrs R S 1 00
Cass, M A..... 1 00
Chambers, Mrs R C 2 00
Chambers, Mrs Wm & Wm, Jr 1 25
Chapman Cowie. 1 00
Chapman, Mr & Mrs C E...... 5 00
Chapman, Mrs R W 5 76
Charles, Caroline 1 00
Charles, George. 5 00
Chase, H H 5 00
Chastney, Mrs Jas 5 00
Chilton, L L... 1 00
Chmelar, Geo... 1 00
Christian, G F.. 1 00
Christian, Mrs Jos A 1 00
Christianson, A. 3 50
Christianson, Mrs A 2 00
Clark, Mr E T. 1 00
Clark, Mrs G W 3 00
Clark, John 1 00
Clark, Mrs Y... 2 00
Clarke, Ellen A. 2 00
Clausewitz, F... 2 50
Clegg, Mrs Ruth 1 00
Clelland, James & Mrs Martha 15 00
Clements, Julia. 1 00
Clingan, Mr & Mrs J H 5 00
Clynick, Ira and H Benton 1 25
Cobb, Miss Lucy 1 00
Coburn, Mrs W. 2 00
Cole, C A...... 5 00
Cole, John S.... 1 50
Coleman, Mrs .. 1 00
Collin, E M.... 1 00
Conover, Mrs W I 5 00
Cook, Lila A....10 00
Coons, Mary E. 10 00
Colvin, Susan R. 3 00
Comstock, Mrs C M & Others...20 65
Congdon, Mrs M A 1 00
Conley, Sullie.. 2 00
Conover, Mr & Mrs J M 2 00
Conrad, Mrs S. 1 00
Cook, Lois 1 00
Cooke, Mrs J W 3 00
Cooke, Louisa .. 2 00
Cooney, Mrs G P 1 00
Coop, E L..... 1 00
Copeland, Mrs A J 1 00
Corbett, J S ... 5 00
Cornelius, Mrs M 5 00
Cornelius, Mrs J In memory of dear husband.. 1 02
Cornell, Mr & Mrs 2 50
Cornett, Mrs P H 5 00
Cornings, D.... 2 00
Cornish, A L.... 2 00
Cornwell, Mr & Mrs Ed 2 00
Corrin, Mrs J B 1 00
Cossins, R 2 00
Cotten, Mrs M B 1 00
Cotton, Mrs N.. 1 00
Countermine, Mrs D M 2 00
Cowles, A E.... 1 00
Cox, Flora J.... 1 00
Cox, Mrs Jennie 1 00
Cox, Mrs W W.. 2 00
Craft, Mrs M S. 2 00
Crall, Anna ... 10 00
Crane, Mrs A... 1 00
Crary, Marian A 2 00
Craven, Julius.. 1 00
Crawford, Mrs D C 1 00
Crawford, F E and family.... 5 00
Crawford, Mary. 1 00
Crawford, Mrs W W 1 00
Crecelias, Amelia M 5 00
Crecelius, W C.. 1 00
Crippen, Mrs F. 1 00
Crocker, Cora P. 1 00
Croft, Mrs J S.. 1 00
Cromer, Miss Florence 2 00
Crosby, E A... 10 00
Crosby, Emma M 2 00
Crumley, Mrs D 1 00
Crumpacker, S.. 8 00
Cunningham, C H and C 2 00
Curry, Mr & Mrs W E & Miss Ora 3 50
Curtis, Mrs J.. 1 00
Cutler, Mrs M L 1 00
Cutler, S J..... 2 00
Dailey, B D & Wife 2 00
Dailey, Harriet. 1 00
Daniel, Mrs Geo M 5 00
Darcus, Mrs J A 1 00
Darnell, Mr & Mrs W J 2 30
Darr, Mrs S E. 1 00
Davis, Chas W Mr & Mrs 5 00
Davis, Emma C B 1 00
Davis, Mrs Given 1 00
Davis, J J ... 5 00
Davis, Mrs L C. 1 00
Dean, Mrs Myron 2 00
Deck, Mrs A W. 5 00
De Groot, Mr & Mrs Jas E... 5 00
De Lay, Kittie C & M B....... 1 25
De Loach, Miss Mary 1 50
Demaree, Rev Victor B 1 50
Denny, Geo & family 1 00
Dewey, H B ... 1 00
Dicken, Ann S.. 1 00
Dickerson, Ira L 5 00
Dickinson, Mr H P 1 00
Dickinson, Mrs J W 2 00
Dickson, R G.. 1 00
Dikeman, Mabel L 2 00
Dillingham, F C 1 00
Dillistin, MrsBA 1 00
Dillon, Mrs A.. 1 00
Dingman, A B.. 1 00
Dingman, Edwin 3 50
Ditzler, Mrs R. 1 00
Dixon, C R.... 5 50
Dockray, Mrs P M 1 00
Doner, Lizzie ... 2 00
Doriety, Mrs .. 1 00
Dorsey, Miss A. 1 00
Dotson, Mr & Mrs R M 2 00
Doty, D H 2 00
Douglass, C W.. 1 00
Douglass, J B.. 5 00
Douglas, Mrs M. 5 00
Douglass, H E.. 2 00
Drake, Mrs G W 1 00
Drawbaugh, J O 2 00
Driesback, Mrs L 1 00
Dudley, Mrs C F 1 50
Du Laney, Lucy G 1 00
Dundor, Mrs Amanda, Class No 10. Good Samaritan SS at Womelsdorf 2 00
Dunlap, Ethel .. 5 00
Dunlap, Mrs MH 7 50
Dunwoody, Mrs W H 100 00
Dyche, Miss L B 1 00
Dahl, Rose 7 00
Danniels, E W . 1 00
Dallas, Elliot S& Blanche V 2 00
Darbonnies, L... 1 00
Datesman, E F.. 3 00
Datson, R 2 00
Davenport, A A 5 00
Davis, Almira.. 2 00
Davis, Mr&MrsD 2 00
Davis, E D 1 00
Davis, MrsEliz'th 1 00
Davis, Rev J. J 5 00
Davidson, Carrie 10 00
Davidson, W D .. 1 00
Davidson, J A & wife 2 00
Deakyne, C T .. 1 00
Decker, J J.... 1 00
Dee, Chester F.. 2 00
Deeds, Geo W ..10 00
DeMass, MrsWm 1 00
Dempster, A .. 50 00
Denning, MissCM 1 00
Dent, H H, ..10 00
Deyer, D 1 00
Dickinson, AliceC 1 00
Deikinson, I L .. 5 00
Dillon, Tristram. 3 00
Dingley, EllaL 5 00
Dingman, Lewis 2 00
Doremus, Mrs SF 2 00
Dorman, L P ... 5 00
Dornblaser, DrTF 1 00
Dornblaser, MrsTF1 00
Dort, Andrew J.. 1 00
Douglass, Robert 1 00
Downing, John R 5 00
Drain, Wm L .. 1 00
Drake, Mildred . 4 00
Drumheller, Mrs B E 1 00
Ducklin, M E ... 2 00
Duncan, MrsAnnie 3 00
Duncan, Mrs JD 5 00
Duncan, Mrs RM 1 00
Dunman, CarrieW 2 00
Dunn, Jacob 2 00
Dunn, M H 3 00
Dyer, Art 5 00
Earl, James 1 00
Eaton, ElizabethW5 00
Eaton, Geo W .. 5 00
Eberhart, Mrs V. 1 00
Eby, N K 3 00
Edron, Miss F M 1 00
Edwards, Mrs Ed& her three boys Clarence Fleming and Donald .. 1 02
Egbert, Mr & Mrs J H 2 00
Eklund, J A .. 1 50
Elemons, Wm A. 1 00
Ellett, Mrs A J. 2 00
Elliot, Mrs John 1 00
Elliot, Miss M .. 5 00
Elmaker, Mrs. Hattie Copeland, & Mrs Emma 1 50
Ellsworth, Mrs W 1 00
Emde, Mrs W .. 5 00
English, W T .. 1 00
Erb, Mrs WmN 1 00
Errington, F C & mother 7 00
Ertz, Mrs Albert 5 00
Eschleman, Anna. 5 00
Ewing, O M, Hancock, C F 1 00
Evans, Mrs Wm. 1 50
Exinn, Mrs C E 2 00
Epworth League Chapter of M E Church at Benton Centre....13 00
Epworth League of M E Church of Cheney 5 00
Epworth League, Elizabeth 3 50
Epworth League, Franklin 6 00
Epworth League of M E Church, Harrison 6 00
Epworth League of Howard.... 3 00
Epworth League, Nekomis 2 00
Epworth League, Smithfield 8 65
Epworth League of the German M E Church, Red Wing..... 4 30
Epworth League of Mt Zion Ch, Steelton 5 00
Epworth League, Sycamore . 3 65
Epworth League and a Friend of Jesseville M E Ch, Ironwood..13 00
Excelsior Epw'th League of Mica 4 85
Earhart, C B... 1 00
Earhart, M L .. 1 00
Ebeling, Albert. 2 00
Eckles, W H.... 1 00
Ehlers, Mrs R E 1 00
Ekin, Rebecca.. 1 00
Elderkin, Miss M B 5 00
Eldred, Mrs F & Spahr, Mrs F T 1 50
Eldridge, C D.. 1 50
Eldridge, L 5 00
Ellis, Mildred P 1 00
Elwood, Jessie.. 1 00
Embree, Mrs M & friend 8 75
Emerson, Mrs R G 1 00
Emmetts, Mr & Mrs & Lowery L 1 00
Emmett, Mrs Lydia H 1 00
Enderly, Eliz M 2 00
Engle, J B .. 10 00
English, J F ... 2 00
Engstrom, Anna. 1 00
Estabrook, A T. 2 00
Euler, L....... 5 00
Evans, Miss EA 3 00
Evans, M A... 1 00
Ewalt, Mr & Mrs W B 5 00
Ewan, Mr & Mrs H A & daughter Dorothy 2 00
Ewart, H W ... 1 00
Ewing, Samuel. 2 00
Ewing, Mrs S & Daughter 2 00
Falconer, F R .. 5 00
Fales, Mrs C J 5 00
Farnell, Clara M 5 00
Farnell, E J & S S Cl...... 1 00
Farrington, Mrs A H 1 00
Fant, C L 1 00
Fay, Mrs R E & Brother-in-law 2 00
Fellers, Miss I.. 1 00
Fellows, MissNE 1 00
Fenn, A J 5 00
Fenstermacher, Mrs M 1 00
Ferch, Miss Ona 3 00
Ferguson, H E.. 5 00
Ferreilra, Mr & Mrs J L 2 00
Field, Geo G.. 13 00
Finch, Edw A.. 2 00
Finch, Laura ... 3 00
Fischer, Mrs O. 1 00
Fisher, Willard O10 00
Fleming, JamesH 2 00
Fleming, Lucy . 10 00
Fletcher, J B .. 1 00
Fletchinger, Geo T 2 00
Flutot, A H ... 5 00
Fonda, J W ... 1 00
Forbes, J P ... 5 00
Ford, Mrs Mary 1 00
Ford, Mrs W O 1 00
Foreman, Mrs E R 1 00
Forrest, Mrs A. 1 00
Foster, Mrs D E 2 00
Foster, L...... 1 00
Fowler, Mrs G S 1 00
Fraley, Mrs L B 5 00
Frank, Mrs C E. 6 00
Frazier, S H... 1 00
Frech, W N ... 2 00
French, Mrs.... 1 00
French, M E... 2 50
Frescoin, G E.. 2 02
Frey, Mrs S M 4 00
Frick, Anna .. 3 00
Fried, Mrs J ... 2 00
Fry, Mrs J W 25 00
Fryar, Mr & Mrs R H 2 00
Fryer, Mrs M... 1 00
Fuller, Mrs D D 2 00
Furguson, Mrs F M 1 00
Fargo Y P S C E10 63
Fairfield Ladies' Aid, Cedar Falls 5 00
Faithful Circle of King's D'hters, Orangeburg ...10 02
Farmersville Public Sch, Califon 2 00
Field Force Pump Co, Elmira....23 00
1st Bapt S S, Branford 4 50
Foreign Mis Soc of the M E Ch, Alhambra 2 00
4th & one Section 5th Grade, Cl B, Morganton G School 1 50
Freedom Charge M E Ch South, Ballston 12 00
Friendship Club, Normal 5 00
Friends Meeting and Sun School, Chappaqua 40 50
Friends' Meeting at Highland Ch, Salem 18 55
Faasen, Mrs J .. 2 00
Fagan, Mrs P ... 1 50
Faley, P J & Co 1 00
Farnsworth, Mrs M and LaBar Mrs Harriet 2 00
Farrar, Mrs B J 1 00
Fearing, MrsZenas 1 00
Feeney, T L .. 2 10
Fillebrown, E P 1 00
Felton, B A 2 00
Felter, L W....10 00
Fenstermacher, Mrs E 2 00
Ferguson, Mrs & Mr W 5 00
Fierter, May ... 1 00
Filer, Mary M...10 00
Finch, S E 2 00
Fisher, Hattie P. 1 00
Fischer, J M 5 00
Fleming, Mrs & Mrs A 5 00
Fletcher, W N .. 2 00
Forbes, Abbie J10 00
Ford, Mrs Ellen.5 00
Forrest, A T .. 5 00
Foss, H M 1 00
Fox, Francis F.. 1 00
Fraim, E E..... 3 00
Franckle, E..... 5 00
Fraser, Margaret 1 00
Fredericks, Mrs. 2 00
Freeman, Mrs J. 5 00
Freeman, L L .. 1 00
Fritts, Mrs C W 1 00
Frost, Sarah ... 1 00
Frye, N A 2 00
Fuller, G E 2 00
Fulton, Mr&Mrs 5 00
Garfield Farmer Associat'n, Clay Center 7 05
Gasport Woman's Christ Temperance Union, Albany 5 00
Girls' Comfort Circle, Albany. 3 00
Girls' Guild, Con Ch of Glenolden 5 00
Girls' Improve'nt Club in W'tern H'se of Refuge, Albion 4 00
Girls' Mis Band of Dunbar..... 1 00
Gleaners of Absecon M E S S, Absecon 1 50
Glenwood C En Society 7 00
Good Cheer Cl's, Brussels 4 75
Good Will Council, No. 178, Jr. A U A M, Guadenhutten.. 2 50
Gage, Mr W H.. 1 00
Gano, MrsMartha 1 00
Gartrel, Mrs E.. 5 00
Gates, J A 1 00
Gaunt, Mrs Cora 1 00
Gebhart, G J .. 5 02
Geer, Jewett H 1 00
Gelser, Mr & Mrs10 00
George, Melda... 1 00
Gibbs, MissJuliaS 1 00
Gibby, Mrs H B. 5 00
Gibson, Mrs M H 1 00
Gietzen, MrsLH. 1 00
Gilbaugh, Mr .. 1 00
Gilkey, Mrs T M 1 00
Gilmore, H 1 00
Gindlesperger, Mrs1 00
Given, Mrs A M 1 00
Glass, MrsLewis 3 00
Gleason, E E... 1 00
Gleason, JO&wfe 1 00
Gloze, Mrs Ella. 1 00
Gloze, MrsElenor 1 00
Goddard, K M .. 3 00
Goldie, MissAnnie 1 00
Goodall, A W .. 5 00
Goode, Mary E.. 1 50
Goodin, A S 5 00
Goodloe, Mrs S H 5 00
Goodsell, AlfredT 2 00
Gordon, Mrs M . 5 00
Gorcuch, Mrs M20 00
Gould, Miss G V 4 00
Gould, Jane 1 00
Gnugel, Bertha L 2 00
Grady, Sr.Mr&Mrs 5 00
Graham, ElizaG. 1 00
Grant, A F 2 00
Green, Eloise B 5 00
Green, Mr&Mrs L 3 00
Griffith, Thos W10 00
Griggs, M E..... 1 00
Grimm, F H 1 00
Grove, Mrs A R. 1 00
Grove, Mr D 1 00
Gruenwald, C .. 1 00
Guild, Mrs M R.. 1 00
Guiser, Sarah ... 1 00
Gumb, MrsThos. 1 00
Gunn, E 10 00
Gurnee, Fllyd C. 2 00
Guthrie, Mrs GW 1 00
Gainer, Mrs WH 1 01
Gale, Geo H.... 1 00
Gammell, A 1 00
Garber, J W... 5 00
Gardiner, Mrs A A 10 00
Gardiner, Mrs E B 1 00
Gardner, C W .. 2 00
Gardner, Mr G.. 3 00
Garnett, Mrs W. 1 50
Gay, Mrs Geo .. 1 00
Gay, Mrs Wm D 1 00
Gaylord, Rev & Mrs E W 3 00
Gearn, G C 5 00
Gebhard, Mrs L W 1 00
Geiger, Mrs L B 1 50
Geitz, J C 5 00
Gerner, Miss S 2 00
Gestring, Anna . 1 00
Gestring, R L... 1 00
Gibbs, S A ... 5 00
Gibson, Mrs J D 1 00
Gibson, W J... 5 00
Gilbert, H Cor. 10 00
Gill, Mrs S M... 1 00
Gillette, Dorsey. 5 00
Gilmer, Lucy .. 1 00
Gilmore, Mrs J Q 2 00
Ginn, W E & Friends 5 90
Gloriville, Mrs A E 1 00
Goldsworthy, W 10 00
Gonde, C 10 00
Goode, S D 1 00
Goodrich, Morris 2 50
Goodwill, Mrs P D 5 00
Gordon (M D), D C 1 00
Gordon, W W... 1 00
Gore, F S 2 00
Gorman, W L .. 2 00
Goudy, Stephens, Abel, Lou and Clark, Henry 1 75
Gould, Anna L. 2 00
Gragg, Mrs T G 1 00
Graham, DavidH 1 00
Graham, Mrs E M 5 00
Graham, G G... 3 00
Graham, G H.. 2 00
Graham, H 3 00
Graham, Lou A. 1 00
Graham, M E. 1 00
Grand, Yules... 5 00
Grant, R L 7 00
Graver, J O ... 5 00
Graham, Geo O. 1 00
Gray, H G & friend 2 00
Gray, Miss M .. 1 00
Greeley, Mary E 3 00
Green, Mrs G M 15 00
Green, W M.... 1 00
Greene, Edw M. 2 50
Greene, Grandma & friends 8 75
Gregory, Mrs J P 2 00
Gregory, Mrs T. 1 00
Gressley, John . 4 00
Gressly, Sam'l.. 5 00
Griffin, Mrs A L 3 00
Griffith, Mrs C.. 1 00
Griffith, Ethel E 5 00
Grist, Mrs A M. 2 35
Groene, Emma.. 1 00
Grundy, Mrs C.. 1 00
Guengerich, J P. 3 00
Guilford, M E, M E Abrams.. 2 00
Gustus, Mrs J.. 1 00
Gwya, E L 5 00
Greathearts Q'cy School Band of Mercy, Hancock 10 33
Greenwich Cong'l Church Ladies' Home Mis Soc 3 00
Haard, E C .. 10 00
Hagaman, C A 30 00
Hagstrom, Lydia 1 00
Haines, Mary L 1 00
Halbert, Alice D 3 50
Hall, Mrs Benj.. 5 00
Hall, Mrs D C. 1 00
Hall, Mrs D H. 10 00
Hall, Mrs Flake. 2 00
Hall, Mrs Sam . 1 00
Hall, W S 3 00
Hallgren, Mrs E 1 00
Ham, F E & F E 2 00
Hamblin, A H.. 1 00
Hamil, Mrs E J. 2 00
Hamilton, Hattie L 2 00
Hamilton, Mrs H A 1 50
Hamilton, Mrs H R 1 00
Hamilton, Mrs R H 1 00
Hamilton, Robert 1 00
Hammett, Mrs C W 2 00
Hammond, D .. 2 00
Hanchett, Helen & Lyle 1 00
Hanks, Mrs R L 1 00
Hanna, E I ... 1 00
Hanson, P 1 50
Hanson, S 1 00
Hardman, O W O 5 00
Hardwick, W H 2 00
Hardy, Grace P. 1 00
Harold, Annie... 1 00
Harper, Mrs C H 1 00
Harris, Chas E S 1 00
Harris, C L 1 00
Harris, Cora ... 5 00
Harris, Mrs J., 1 00
Harris, Mrs WA 10 00
Harris, Mrs WH 1 00
Harrte, Mrs O H 1 00
Hart, Mrs & Miss 1 00
Hart, H P 5 00
Hart, Mrs Rosa. 1 00
Hartje, Wm ... 5 00
Hartman, Wm.. 1 00
Hartman, Wm .. 1 02
Harwood, MrsAP 9 00
Haskell, L P... 5 00
Hasstedt, M H.. 1 00
Hawes, Mr & Mrs Edw 1 00
Hawkins, LydiaE 1 00
Hawks, L A, Aaron Stalker. 1 00
Hays, Sarah K 1 00
Hayward, A R.. 2 00
Heckman, Mrs E M 5 00
Hedrick, W E .. 1 00
Heede, Mrs H .. 2 00
Heiberger, IdiaJ 10 00
Heinle, Carrie, Gert Heinle....2 00
Heit, Wm E.... 2 00
Henderson, Mrs F G A....... 2 00
The Hemingway Family 3 00
Henderson, Elsa 10 00
Henderson, Geo . 5 00
Henderson, M.. 10 00
Henderson, Mr & Mrs R A 2 00
Henrikson, O... 1 00
Henry, J L 1 00
Hetherington, Mr E 3 00
Hiatt, Mattie M 1 00
Hibbard, H M.. 2 00
Hickok, Mrs W. 1 00
Hibbs, Eliz L... 3 00
Hickman, MrsTJ 1 00
Hicks, Mrs Cora 1 00
Higgins, D L... 2 00
Highsmith, J H& wife 1 50
Hill, John M... 5 00
Hill, Mrs M ... 1 00
Hilton, Mr T L 2 00
Hinderliter, M.. 2 00
Hitt, Sam'l F... 5 00
Hively, Mr & Mrs M M ... 2 00
Hobart, M A .. 1 00
Hoff, OK & K W 4 00
Hoffert, Levi ... 1 50
Hoffmann, A C. 1 00
Hoffmann, Clara. 1 50
Holden, S J... 1 00
Hollinshead, Mrs G W 3 00
Holmes, L H ... 1 00
Holmes, Robert & wife 2 00
Holton, Wm ... 2 00
Hoover, Mr & Mrs Henry A. 5 00
Hope, Miss Belle 5 00
Horne, Mrs H... 5 00
Horner, Mrs M A 1 00
Horswell, Rich. 2 00
Horton, Mrs D.. 2 00
Houghton, A F.. 1 25
Hover, Miss K.. 3 00
Hovenden, C... 25 00
Howe, J B 2 50
Howe, M E ... 4 00
Howell, Mrs WH 1 00
Howland, Mrs .. 1 00
Howard, Mrs C W 1 00
Howser, John H 12 00
Hoy, Jeanie ... 10 00
Hubbs, Leonora 1 00
Huffard, MrsCE. 2 00
Huffman, MrsSJ. 5 00
Hughes, Marg.. 5 00
Hughes, Mrs SG 10 00
Hulswit, F.... 10 00
Hulbert, MrsHB 1 00
Hull, Mrs 5 00
Hume, Mrs Wm. 2 00
Humphrey, E... 2 00
Hunt, J A 1 00
Hunt, Mrs J .. 4 00
Hunter, L B.... 1 00
Hunter, Mr & Mrs T 1 00
Hunter, Wm.... 5 00
Hurst, Mrs and children 4 00
Huston, Alvira.. 3 00
Hutto, Edwin A 1 00
Hutto, Mrs WD 2 00
Huyette, Chas.A 2 50
Hyde, Mrs 1 00
Hyde, James.... 2 00
Haines Institute, Augusta 1 35
Happy Home Mis Band, Chester Basin 2 00
Hazard Jr League, Hazard 5 00
Hazeldean C E Soc, Coatstone. 5 00
Helen Moyes Mis Band, S Byfield 5 00
Helpers from Cerro Gordo 8 00
Helping Hand So (Church of the Brethren, Lansdale, Pa).....10 00
Helping Hand So Ripton 20 00
Helping Hands, Old Concord... 8 00
Peterson, Mrs L S 1 15
Watkins, Mrs J T 2 00

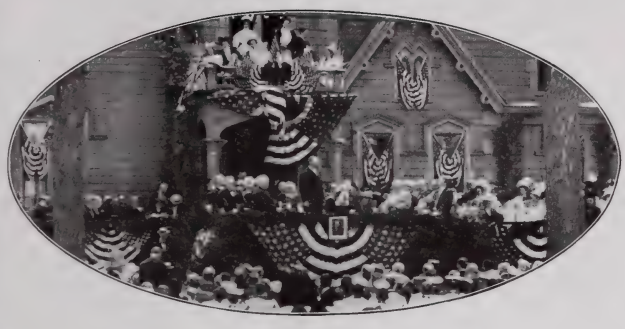
Contributions for Our China Famine Fund

Helping Hand Band of Tabor Presby Church, Phila 10 00
Highwater Ladies' Aid Society, Lamberton 5 00
Hinckley Soc of Christian Endeavor, Hinckley 11 00
Holmes Mis Soc at Cape 6 62
Holton Mis Soc, Dodge City 7 00
Home & Foreign Mis Soc of Presbyterian Church, La Grangeville 5 00
Home Cross of King's Daughters and Sons Home of 5 00
Home & Foreign Missy Soc 1st Bapt Church of Rockford 2 50
Home & Foreign Missy Soc of Mt Pleasant Presby Ch, Mills Granville 5 00
Hedley, Walter B 1 00
Hazenmo, K A 5 00
Hagelman, E A ..10 00
Haggarty, Mrs Mc S S Class 2 00
Hallett, Asa E. 1 00
Hall, Mrs Hannah 1 00
Hall, Lester 5 00
Hall, Sadie 1 00
Hamilton, M Ha Runyan H M.. 2 00
Hamilton, Mrs C 2 50
Hammerly, Mr & Mrs W C H .. 5 00
Hancock, Mrs W 1 00
Hancock, Mrs Wm 1 00
Hane, F A 3 00
Hardesty, M J .. 2 00
Harington, MrsSJ 1 00
Haris, Mrs C.. 5 00
Harris, C L .. 2 00
Harris, K W .. 2 00
Harrison, Belle. 1 00
Hart, Mrs A I .. 2 00
Hart, G M 5 00
Hart, Mrs HH C 1 00
Harvey, C O 1 00
Hathaway, C F .10 00
Hausen, Mrs E.. 3 00
Hawk, J E 1 00
Hawk, R 5 00
Hawkins, C L.. 2 00
Hawkins, D W.. 5 00
Hays, A Y 1 00
Hazen, EA&fam 5 00
Hazen, Miss G .. 2 00
Hazen, H & fam 50 00
Head, E L 3 00
Heal, F W 1 00
Heal, W P 1 50
Hearne, Miss A. 10 00
Heatwole, Mrs JB 2 00
Heatwole, V P.. 1 00
Heckman, D P.. 1 00
Hedges, Mrs L. 1 00
Heiber, J S 1 00
Heiberger, Ida J 5 00
Helges, Chas H 2 00
Hellsigh, MrsL 1 00
Hellyer, MrsF O 1 00
Hemingway M&E 2 00
Hendrycon, C S & family 10 00
Henderson, J S .. 5 00
Hendice, Mrs E Cl 00
Henion, Mrs M .. 4 00
Henry, MrsS D 1 00
Hepburn, O W .. 1 00
Herman, Mrs J 2 00
Herrin, J Pkwife 5 00
Herrick, Ghas ..1 00
Hewett, Mrs Sid .. 5 00
Heyl, Aug A ..1 00
Hicks, Mrs A .. 1 00
Higbie, MrcLucie 1 00
Hilbert, MissMary & Hilbert Curtis 2 00
Hildebren, Mr C. 1 00
Hill, G B 6 00
Hill, Oliver B.. 5 00
Hinde, Dr H K.. 5 00
Hindshaw, Mrs Julia M 5 00
Hoag, Wm H ... 1 00
Hochstetler, Fred 1 50
Hoge, Mrs S 1 00
Hogge, Mosby .. 3 00
Hollenbeck C R 1 00
Holliker, John .. 5 00
Holliker, F J .. 5 00
Holmes, G W .. 1 00
Holmes, J W .. 1 00
Holmes, Laura E 5 00
Holzinger, M D & Allen, Edna J .. 5 00
Hoage, R F 1 00
Hooker, MrsR M 1 00
Hooker, Sally A. 1 00
Hooper, John .. 1 00
Horrisberger, Mr & Mrs 1 00
Horrisberger, MrsC 1 00
Horton, F M 1 00
Hotte, A S 10 00
Hoyt, HM&family and C E Boise and family 11 00
Hudson, Mrs J B 2 00
Huck, Robt L.. 1 00
Huff, Mrs M .. 2 00
Hughes, John .. 3 1 00
Hughes, Lewis J 1 00
Hunicerford, MissA 1 00
Hunt, R L 2 00
Hunter, James S .. 1 00
Huntley, Mary .. 5 00
Hunting, Olive .. 10 00
Huntington, G C. 3 00
Hurd, Mrs F E.. 1 00
Hurley, Horace.. 1 00
HursshofMrs E 1 00
Hoester, Mary Wl 00
Hutton, Mrs M .. 1 00
Ickler, Mrs P.. 2 00
Ide, Mrs Mary.. 1 00
Igue, John 5 00
Ingersoll R P.. 10 00
Ingram, L M.... 2 00
Ingram, R E.... 2 00
Ingraham, W D.. 1 00
Irish, Mrs S C.. 1 00
Irwin, A M 1 00
Improvement Soc of Ft Guilford 36 65
Industrial Home, Cardenas 1 00

I O O F Lodge 5 00
Infant Cl, Boys, School, Delmane 9 25
Infant Class of Young Peoples Class of Mason Mem Ch of United Brethren in Christ, Eugene. 2 00
Intermed Grade of Delmane Graded School, Delmane 1 50
Intermed League of the 1st M E Ch of Colo City 5 00
Intermed Christian Endr Soc'ty of Salisbury Pres Church 2 00
Iroquois Woman's Christian Temperance Union 5 00
Isle, Mrs Wm .. 1 00
Isley, Annie J.. 5 00
Ishg, Elmer 1 50
Ishg, Sr, Mrs F 2 00
Ishg, Mrs M.... 1 00
Ives, William .. 1 00
Ivey, George ... 1 00
Jackson, Mr & Mrs Jackson, Mr & Mrs 5 00
Jacobs, John P .. 1 00
Jacobson, Mrs N 2 00
James, C 1 00
James, M H 1 00
Jamison, Mrs C .. 2 00
Juniors of the Central Baptist Church, Spokane. 1 25
Juniors of the Westport Bapt Ch, Westport.. 2 00
Junior Missionary Union of the Congre Church, Jamestown 2 00
Juniors of the Central Baptist Church, Spokane. 1 25
Juniors of the Westport Bapt Ch, Westport.. 2 00
Klein, A G 1 00
Kindworth, W A 3 00
Klock, Noah 1 00
Knabb, MrsMF. 3 00
Knapp, Jacob .. 2 00
Knorl, Ida M .. 6 00
Knott, Mrs E .. 1 00
Kriebel, R S 1 00
Kruger, Miss LM 1 00
Kuhne, Sarah C 1 00
Kullman, Fred .. 1 00
Kupper, MrsEA 1 00
Laban, Wm 2 00
Lake, Linnie 1 00
Lake, Elis. A.. 1 00
Lalbot, Sr. Mrs C H 10 00
Lampman, Mrs H M 1 00
Lange, Mattie C 3 00
Larkin, Mrs A.. 4 00
Layman, F B 1 00
Lean, Christopher 1 00
Leander 1 00
Lee, Mrs M T.. 2 00
Lee, T A 1 35
Lee, Jackson .. 1 00
Leech, Mrs J H 1 00
Lefebore, J J.... 1 00
Lentmeyer, Annie 5 00
Lewis, Mrs 1 00
Lewis, Mrs H G. 1 50
Lewis, Levy 3 00
Lightner, Helen. 2 00
Lindsey, Mrs A 3 00
Linden, Mrs Chas 1 00
Linden, Mrs A. 1 00
Linder, Geo A.... 2 00
Lindley, M A 10 00
Lindquist, Mable 3 00
Lindsey, Ada K.. 1 00
Linn, Mrs 1 00
Lintz, Mrs W M.. 1 00
Lockhart, Mrs A.. 2 35
Logan, Hester .. 1 00
Long, Jos 1 00
Loop, Fannie J.. 1 00
Lovell, Mrs E S 1 00
Lowry, Elia 1 00
Lowry, Mrs John 2 00
Lupton, WS&fam 5 00
Luther, Mary J.. 2 00
Lyman, J D 5 00
Lyon, Mrs E 1 00
Lyons, J A 1 00
Lyons, J W 1 00
Lyons, Mrs JW 2 00
M A & W Society of Christ Ref'd Ch, Orrville..25 00
M S & C Ar-cadia Pres Ch.. 1 00
Ladies' Aid Soc of Trapp Ch..... 13 50
Ladies' Aid of the Baptist Ch, Adamsville 5 50
Ladies' Aid Soc of Union Congre Tabernacle of Atlanta, Ga.... 2 00
Ladies' Aid Soc of Congre Ch, Barkhamsted .. 7 50
Ladies Dorcas Soc of 1st Reformed Church, Galion 10 00
Ladies Guild of College Ave Methodist Ch'ch Woodstock ..10 00
Ladies Guild Presbyterian Ch'ch, Winfield 10 00
Ladies Home and Foreign Missionary Society of the Montvale Presbyterian Ch, Montvale 2 00
Ladies Missionary Union of Oberlin Church, Oberlin 6 00
Ladies Missionary Society, Cumberland Presbyterian U S A Ch, Stuart 1 00
Ladies Missionary Society of the M E Church, Driftwood 10 00
Ladies Miss Soc, Shawtown 2 00
Ladies, Missionary Society of the Welsh Church of Minneapolis. ..10 00
Ladies Missionary Society of Reformed Presbyterian Church, Olivia 15 00
Ladies Missionary So of the W Zion Ch, Moundridge 10 35
Ladies Missionary Society of the Waynesboro Presby Church.. 3 00
Ladies of the Blackburn Miss Society 8 50
Ladies Sewing So of the Parnell Ch, Cummings. 5 00
Ladies from No Easton..... 5 00
Lake Side Reading Club, KingFerry 3 10
La Mesa W. C T U, La Mesa 20 00
Lenda Wand So, Scotch Plains. 3 00
Liberty Union, Ladies Aid So, White City.... 8 00
Liberty Women's Helping Hand Society, Kiowa 10 00
Light Bearers of Evang S S, Tell City 1 00
Local Evangelical Ass'n, Ladies Aid Society, Memonnie 4 00
Longspaugh, Jump W O W, Silverstreet 3 65
Loyal Temperance and Teachers, La Mesa..... 10 00
Loyal Workers So, Kennebunkport 2 00
Loyal Workers So and S S of Advent Christian Ch of Auburn. 5 00
Lutheran Ladies' So, Paterson.. 5 00
Lyons C E So..16 00
Macy, Mrs W Jr & S S Class, Dalhart 2 50
Lady, Clyde H 25 00
Laidlaw, Mrs S H 1 00
Lair, E F 2 00
Lamb, Jr, Mrs Chas 1 00
Landry, Mrs WH 1 00
Larew, Eva M.. 1 00
Lash, Mrs H A 2 00
Law, Margaret 5 00
Lawrence, MissA 5 00
Lawrence, Miss I 5 00
Lawson, Mrs L.. 1 00
Lawson, Mrs 1 00
Lawson, Miss Ola 1 00
Leavitt, Emma... 5 00
Lee, Mrs E..... 6 00
Lee, John C.... 1 50
Lee, Mrs E.... 2 00
Leidigh, J B.... 2 00
Leinbach, MrsEH 1 00
Leiter, O M.... 10 00
Lemmon, Mrs 5 00
Lemmon, L..... 2 25
Lena, Etta P, Manuscript 3 00
Lester, Mrs M.. 1 00
Lester, Thos.... 3 00
Letson, Mrs P.. 1 00
Levy, Mrs W J .. 2 00
Lichtl, Otto.... 1 00
Liehr, Wm & wife 2 00
Lindaling, G B.. 1 00
Linden, ... 1 00
Linderman, B F. 1 00
Lindgren, A T.. 5 00
Lindley, Mr & Mrs E 2 00
Lindsley, K W.. 5 00
Lister, A, A Keller, R W Crone 1 50
Little, Mrs A B 1 50
Lockbuff, C A.. 5 00
Lockwood, Mrs H 1 00
Logan, Mrs H M. 1 50
Logan, W J and wife 2 00
Long, F D..... 2 00
Long, Mrs H R. 5 00
Long, J A..... 4 00
Longbottom, A V 10 00
Loomis, Mrs R & friend 2 00
Mohler, Daniel .. 7 00
Mollenkopf, Mrs E A & SS Cl.. 3 00
Monfort, J T.... 6 00
Monnichman, J W 1 00
Monroe, Mrs Elenor.. 1 00
Moore, Frona.. 3 00
Moore, Mrs J A 10 00
Moore, Mrs R W 2 50
Moore, Mrs S A 1 00
Moss Brown.... 3 60
Lowry, Wm Ss.... 5 00
Loy, J A..... 2 00
Lowrie, H C & others 2 50
Lawson, J W.... 2 00
Lawson, J W.... 1 00
Lawson, J W.... 1 00
League, Mrs C K 7 00
Lee, Mrs N E.... 50
Lee, T M..... 4 60
Leonard, W B.. 5 00
McArthur, MrsMJ 13 00
McBryde, Jas... 4 00
McClellan, Mrs.. 5 00
McClellan, Mrs.. 5 00
McCulloch, J F.85 35
McCullough, MrsF 2 00
McCullough, MrsF 1 25
McCune, Mrs T J 3 00
McAnutty, Mrs F 1 00
McAuley, Mrs E. 2 00
McBride, MrsAC. 2 00
McBride, Mrs ... 1 00
McCall, Miss P.. 2 00
MacCart, Mrs A.. 2 00
McCausland, C.. 2 00
McCleary, Mrs .. 2 00
McClellan, MrsMJ 5 00
McCombe, Mrs S. 1 00
McConnell, Mary 1 00
McConnells, Mrs A & S S Cl.... 6 25
McConkey, Mrs & Loe 1 00
McCracken, Mrs J 2 00
McCree, A K... 2 00
McCulloch, J F.. 2 00
McCurdy, MrsJF 1 00
McDonald, MrsA 2 00
McDonald, Cora, Mrs S Kumra.. 6 00
MacDonald, F R. 10 00
McElvain, Mrs R 1 00
McElwee, Susie.. 2 00
McEwen, F C.... 2 00
McFarland, Mrs A J..... 3 00
McFarlane, MrsE 2 00
McFarlane, M S.. 1 00
McGee, F H.... 5 00
McGill, A L.... 1 00
McGirk, 'M D,' & Mrs 10 00
McGrauor, MrsA 1 00
McHenry, MrsRE 3 00
McHugh, Mrs L.. 1 00
McIlrath, ... 1 00
McIntyre, Mrs T 1 00
McKee, Mrs J C 2 00
McKenzie, MrsR 1 00
McKnight, Mrs R S 5 00
McKoon, MrsAC 1 00
McLachlan, Mrs S S Class.... 2 00
McLaren, J.... 1 00
McLaughlin, Mrs J B 1 00
McMahon, Mrs A G 2 00
McMillan, MrsIG 2 00
McMillan, S A.. 2 00
McMillan, Wm.. 5 00
McQuiston, H A. 2 00
Maben, Mrs Ida.. 1 00
Macke, ... 1 00
Mackay, John C 1 50
MacLean, M C.. 2 50
MacNichols, Mrs F J & Mrs D Williams 1 00
Mahoney, Mrs G 1 00
Maine, A D.... 1 00
Malins, Mrs Ann 1 00
Mallett, MrsAH 1 00
Mandeville, L C 10 00
Mangold, Mrs K 1 00
Manna, Mrs 6 50
Ministerial Ass'n, Holdrege 15 00
Mission Circle of the Baptist Ch, Hancock 2 00
Miss So Ch Advent of New Haven 13 00
Mission Society of Our Savior's Lutheran Ch'ch, York Harbor.. 25 00
Missionary So of the Presby Ch, Burr Oak..... 1 50
Missionary Society of Heidelberg Ref'd Ch, New Tripoli 7 50
Mission Band of Railroad 35 00
Mission Band, Vestal Center.. 3 00
Mission Band of the First Ref'd Ch'ch, Zeeland 25 00
Miss'n' Band Meth S S, Paducah..10 00
Mission Circle of the First Cong Ch, Woodbury.. 5 00
Mission Circle of Union Church, Garden City....20 00
Missionary Social Union, Frankfort 19 19
Miss Committee of the Y P S C E of Ogden M E Church 12 50
Missionary Gardener Band, Elkhorn 6 00
Moore, Mrs A J.. 1 00
Christ Ref'd Ch, Alexandria ...12 00
Missionary So of Presby Church, Livermore 5 00
Miss Society of Presby Church, Pavia 25 00
Monona Congregational Ch'ch, Mohonk Lake 5 00
M P Church Aid, Columbia Center 5 00
Mt Andrew Woman's Home Missionary Society Olatha Circuit S O Conference, Dillon 13 18
Mt Zion Church, Jamestown 3 25
Mt Zion Y P Society C E..... 4 25
Mubesberat Soc, Keeland..10 00
Munhall Bible Club, Saginaw. 6 00
Mackey, Mary S. 1 00
Macmillen, Ruth S 5 00
Madsen, H 2 00
Magnuson, Mr .. 4 50
Mahanna, Wm J.. 4 50
Mann, Mrs E N.. 5 00
Manning, W H..10 00
Manock, Wm 1 50
Manisfield, Mrs J 1 00
Mansfield, Leroy 5 00
Mansweiler, MrsJ 1 00
Mantz, F W..... 3 00
Marquet, M 1 00
Marsh, Mrs E E 1 00
Marsh, Mrs R.. 1 00
Marshall, Thos .. 1 00
Martin, Mrs J.. 2 00
Martin, Marg.... 1 00
Martin, Mary W 1 00
Marty, MrsDHL 1 00
Mary, Mrs & daughter 1 00
Maynard, W H 20 00
Meadows, W C.. 3 00
Meadsher, MrsMrs 1 00
Meeker, MrsJ F. 2 00
Mellor, Robert .. 1 00
Menzie, Mrs A.. 5 00
Merrifield, MrsMD 1 00
Merrill, Mrs J A 2 00
Merryman, Dr&Mrs T JJ 1 00
Meyer, Mrs Aug.. 1 00
Mickle, Jr., Joe J 1 00
Milburn, Mrs M E 10 00
Miles, Thos S & A B 5 10
Miller, Amanda.. 2 00
Miller, Aug 1 00
Miller, A Jr.... 1 00
Mills, Mrs M E.. 1 00
Milton, A&Class 1 75
Mitchell, Mrs Jas 1 00
Moffatt, Mrs Jas 1 00
Mohr, Mrs Chas 5 00
Monday, Mrs 3 00
Mooney, Mrs 15 00
Monroe, MrsMary 1 00
Moody, Elmer .. 1 00
Mooney, Mrs A.. 1 00
Mooney, A S.... 1 00
Moore, Mrs A 1 00
Moore, Mr & Mrs Geo W 2 00
Moore, Mrs H P. 2 00
Moore, Mrs J.... 5 00
Moore, Mrs Mary 1 00
Moore, P K 5 00
Morgan, Mrs A.. 1 00
Morgan, Annie O 1 00
Morris, Mrs C .. 1 00
Morris, Marie E. 1 00
Morris, S C.... 2 00
Morris, Mrs R.. 5 00
Morrison, Mr &Mrs Andrew 1 50
Morrison, Mrs .. 3 00
Morrison, James.. 1 00
Morse, Judson H 1 00
Morton, Mrs 1 00
Mosely, Miss EM 5 00
Morton, G F.... 1 00
Moseley, Miss L. 3 50
Moser, Mrs 1 00
Moyer, Henry M 1 00
Muir, R V 1 00
Mullen, Harry .. 1 00
Munn, Miss Cath. 2 00
Murphy, MissMB 2 00
Murray L..... 2 00
Musgrove, Mrs .. 1 50
Musser, Mrs D M 1 00
McAleer, Mrs W 2 00
McBreardy, Agnes 1 00
McCandless, MrsG 6 00
McCandless, Geo18 00
McClain, J R.... 2 00
McClure, Miss D 1 00
McCoach, Flora.. 1 00
McCollough, R Z 5 00
McCollum, E & E. 1 50
McConnell, Mary 1 00
McCormick, Mr & Mrs 1 00
McCoy, R H 10 00
McCullough, M & Mrs J B 5 00
McCurdy, Mrs G. 5 00
McCutcheon, Mrs 1 00
McDonald, Rev RA & Friends .. 30 00
McGwen, Mrs I & Family 2 00
McIntosh, Annie. 1 00
McKinney, Mrs J 1 00
McKinster, Jas.. 1 00
McLucas, Margt 1 00
McMechan, John.10 00
McMillan, Mrs R. 1 00
McPhail, Laura.. 1 00
McPhee, L..... 2 00
McRay, Ida S.. 2 00
Nardmore, Mrs V 1 00
Neely, Mrs Jas.. 1 00
Neeby, Master Jno & Wimbert .. 2 00
Nelson, Chas 1 05
Newhouse, Jno W 1 00
Newman, MrsE.. 1 00
Nigg, Mrs Emma 1 00
Nill, Mrs T A.. 5 00
Nilson, Mrs 1 00
Nitzsche, F E .. 5 00
North, F W 1 00
Noyce, J W 5 00
Norton, Mr & Mrs 2 00
Nearer & Farther Lights of Camp Crook Baptist Church 5 00
Nedlaw Improvement Society, Walden 2 20
New Garden Friends' Monthly Meeting 5 80
Newport Presbyterian Miss Society, Newport. 8 00
New York Chinese Students' Club, N Y C..... 17 15
Nile W C T U, Friendship 8 00
North Side So of Farnam 5 00
North Parma Ladies' Aid.... 5 00
Nye, Mr & Mrs J Spaulding... 1 00
Nagle, Alice O.. 1 00
Neal, Mrs C J.. 1 00
Neal, Mrs S A..10 00
Needham, H O..10 00
Neilson, John.... 5 00
New, Mrs P F.. 1 00
Newlan, O E.... 5 00
Newman, Mrs M.10 00
Newkirk, E M 1 00
Newton, Mrs O 1 00
Nice, J T..... 1 00
Nichols Mrs Geo. 1 00
Nickerson, MrsR 10 00
Nichols, J O.... 1 00
Nichols, J D.... 2 00
Nickerson, C K.10 00
Niles, Mrs J H. 1 00
Noble, Mrs M A 1 00
Nolan, J E..... 1 00
North, Mrs G F.. 5 00
Northcutt, MrsFR 2 00
Northrop, Mrs A.. 1 00
Norton, Miss M.. 1 00
Nyhart, Mrs J G Mrs R RDankel 2 00
Off, Mrs M A.. 20 00
Ogden, Mrs B B. 1 00
Ogden, L O..... 1 00
Okerson, Mrs J A 2 00
Oliver, Mrs 1 00
Olson, C J & J Franks..... 1 50
Olson, John..... 5 00
O'Neill, Mrs J .. 1 00
Onyett, J E..... 5 00

Contributions for Our China Famine Fund

Opherm, Severt.. 2 00
Orne, Miss L S. 5 00
Osborne, J A... 3 00
Oscar, G R.... 1 00
Overholt, M C.. 2 00
Overland, G.... 2 00
Owen, A A..... 1 00
Owens, Mrs P M 1 00
Owens, Mrs A W 1 00
Owens, Rev W W 2 00
Ocean Grove Association Chinese Sunday School, N Y C..... 27 00
Odell Union Christian Endeavor So, Hood River 5 00
Olivet Auxiliary of the C W B M of Boone Co, Columbia 4 00
Otterbein Christian Endeavor So, Philomath ... 6 60
Overcomers Class Baptist Church, Martinsville ... 1 50
Oliver King's Daughters 1 40
Olsen, H Emily.. 1 00
Olsen, Miss C.... 1 00
Onan, Mr&MrsCJ 5 00
O'Neal, F C..... 1 00
Ooley, Miss Lillie 5 00
Osborn, C W..... 3 00
Osborn, H C..... 3 50
Osborn, H D..... 1 00
Osborn, J H..... 5 00
Osborn, Mrs MaryE. &Memillan, MrsA 2 50
Oscar, G C..... 2 00
Othiner, Mrs A .. 2 00
Otto, Mrs Peter, M R W & W F A 3 00
Overstreet, Sam.. 1 00
Owen, Emilie B.. 1 00
Owens, H M..... 2 00
Oyler, B F &Fam 3 50
Palmer, Miss C D. & Miss HB, Sadler, Jessie A. & Savage, Mrs 5 50
Parker, A J..... 1 00
Parker, Mrs HE.. 1 00
Parker, H..... 1 00
Parker, Rosula .. 5 00
Parmer, Mrs BF .. 5 00
Parson, E A..... 5 00
Pates, Mrs E..... 1 00
Paulsen, John T 3 00
Pates, Rev A E.. 1 00
Patterson & Vincent 1 00
Patton, T B..... 25 00
Paxton, Frank.. 2 50
Payne, Mrs Edu.. 1 00
Pagnette, Geo F.... 2 00
Pearson, E G..... 1 00
Pease, Mr&MrsA 10 00
Pegram, WH&wf 2 00
Pelton, Miss M.. 1 00
Pelton, Mrs W.... 1 00
Pennington, MrsA 1 00
Pennsylvania, MrsB 1 00
Perry, Miss E.... 1 00
Peterson, Benj J.. 3 00
Peterson, Mrs B.. 1 00
Peterson, Mrs G.. 1 00
Peterson, Nelson.. 4 95
Peterson, Mrs SE 1 00
Phelps, A S J.. 5 00
Phelps, Miss M.. 1 00
Phillips, MrsEW 4 00
Pike, Mrs Carrie 1 00
Pim, Emily..... 5 00
Pontier, Rev J H 1 00
Ponnar, Mrs Eug.. 1 00
Poole, C H..... 2 00
Post, Mrs C A.. 2 00
Porchwell, Mac.. 1 00
Postlethwaite, EF 2 00
Porter, Mrs E E 1 00
Powell, W S..... 2 00
Powstree, MissE 1 00
Pratt, J P..... 1 00
Prentice, Mrs GH 2 00
Presgraves, F E.. 1 50
Price, Mrs Alex.. 1 00
Price, Eliz. W.... 5 00
Price, F..... 5 00
Price, Mrs J W.. 4 50
Prothero, Miss R 1 00
Puden, J H..... 1 00
Purdy, Emma..... 1 00
Purdy, Mrs Mary 1 00
Putnam, Mr & Mrs C W..... 5 00
Pusey Circle of Hope 5 00
Parish Prayer Circle of St Mary's Church, Shelton, Conn.. 5 00
Park Ave Epworth League, N Y C 5 00
Patton Memorial C'h, Baltimore.. 6 00
People of Burr Oaks, Burr Oak 38 00
Perry Auxiliary of Woman's Foreign Miss So, Perry 5 00
Phillips Camp, Milwaukee 1 30
Phillip's Church, Y P S C E, Watertown .. 10 00
Pine Bluff Miss. sion Band..... 2 75
Pleasant Valley Y P C E Society, Cambridge 2 50
Powell Class, Marion 1 00
Practical Workers Class, Leetsdale.. 6 00
Presby Christian Endeavor Soc of Albemarle .. 6 50
Presby Ladies' Aid Society, Ronley 10 00
Presby Missionary Soc, Bradenton 10 00
Presby Missionary Soc of De Soto 5 00
Presbyter Ladies' Miss Society of Dunbar 6 00
Presby Missionary Soc, Remington 5 00
Presby S S, Sunda 4 00
Primary Dept of Christ Temple Sab Sch, Pittsburg .. 5 00
Primrose Class, Presby Sab S, Dansville 2 00
Priscilla Phebe Soc of Wesley.. 21 75
Priscilla Sun Sch Class, Presby Church, Delta.. 10 00
Progress Circle (Adult) Bible Class of Salem's Evan Ch, Blue Earth.... 2 00
Providence Sunbeam Society, Providence 1 00
Pupils and Teachers of White-Priddy School, District No. 90, Montague .. 5 40
Pupils of School in Cerrseo..... 4 90
Pupils of a Private Day School in Williamsport .. 4 00
Paden, Mrs B H 1 00
Page, Mrs A F.. 1 00
Page, Mrs E..... 1 00
Palmer, Mrs A H 2 00
Palmer, W A..... 1 00
Parkham, Mrs.... 1 00
Parker, Mrs F M 1 00
Parker, G W..... 5 00
Parkhurst, MrsEE 1 00
Parris, J M..... 10 00
Parsell, Julia E.. 2 00
Parsons, J I.. 100 00
Parthemer, H.... 1 00
Pasichke, Mrs W F 1 00
Patterson, Helen 5 00
Patton, Mr & Mrs W C..... 2 00
Payne, Mrs T.... 1 00
Pearce, C A..... 5 00
Pearce, Mrs M F 3 00
Pearson, Miss H 2 00
Pearson, Mrs MA 2 00
Pence, Mrs..... 1 00
Peck, James E 10 00
Peck, Miranda.... 1 00
Pelton, Mrs J R 1 00
Penhallegon, Miss Susan 1 00
Penzel, George .. 3 50
Perkins, D C.... 5 00
Perkins, Mrs & Miss Kellogg.. 2 00
Perritt, J E..... 2 50
Perry, Mattie.... 3 10
Perry, Mrs M.... 1 00
Peterson, M J.... 1 00
Phelps, E..... 1 00
Phillips, Flora B 1 00
Pickard, Mrs M J 1 00
Pickop, Eliz W.. 5 00
Pier, Mrs C D.... 1 00
Pierce, Mrs F R 1 00
Pierce, Mrs E T 1 00
Piersall, Mrs M.. 1 00
Pierson, Miss P 2 50
Pierson, Eliza R.. 5 00
Pioffe, Mrs M.... 1 00
Pollack, Mrs M.. 5 00
Pomeroy, Thos T 2 00
Pomeroy, Mrs.... 1 00
Porter, M L..... 1 00
Potter, Mrs Mary 2 00
Potter, Twila, Mabel & Margaret 3 00
Pounds, Jno F.. 2 50
Powers, Eliza.... 1 00
Preston, Mrs JC 1 00
Preston, Mrs W.. 1 00
Price, Miss Ethel 1 00
Price, M A, Grace Hudnall, G G Noles 1 50
Prichard, Mrs A 2 00
Prichard, Mrs G 1 00
Prince, Mrs T.... 1 00
Pshea, Mrs G W 1 00
Puett, Mrs J C.. 1 00
Purdue, Mrs M.. 2 00
Pyche, Mrs H H 1 00
Quag, Mrs L D.. 1 00
Quenne, H G G.. 5 00
Quillen, Mrs A.. 1 00
Quivey, L E..... 1 00
Rackley, N E.... 1 00
Radley, Mary J.. 1 00
Radtke, Mrs W.. 5 00
Ramage, C M & Friends 4 00
Ramey, Anna R.. 5 00
Ramsey, Mrs J C 1 00
Ramsey, Miss J.. 1 00
Ramsie, Frank.. 1 00
Randi, L A..... 1 00
Rankin, Mrs M E 2 00
Ranney, Mary.. 30 00
Rathburn, Mr L, Amerson Mission Sidon .. 4 83
Rauner, Addie S 1 00
Rarn, Geo..... 1 00
Rawlings, Mrs A A 2 00
Reaver, J T..... 1 00
Reed, Mrs M A.. 3 00
Rees, Miss C.... 5 00
Reese, Mrs..... 1 00
Reid, Mrs G S.. 8 00
Relser, Mrs Kate 3 00
Remington, Mrs W A..... 5 00
Rentzel, P D.... 1 00
Renwick, Mrs Wm 5 00
Reppa, Rev A... 5 00
Reynolds, S L.... 1 00
Reynolds, Mrs S 1 00
Reynolds, Thos H 1 00
Rice, Mr & Mrs W A..... 5 00
Richard, Mrs M.. 2 25
Rhoades, Mrs E.. 1 00
Rhode, Mrs P W 1 00
Rice, Mrs H M.. 1 50
Richardson, Mrs R..... 1 00
Riedel, Mrs R.... 1 00
Ritch, Mrs E.... 1 00
Ritchie, M L.... 2 00
Clara Trala S, Yordyce 4 00
Roberts, Mr & Mrs C P..... 1 00
Roberts, Mrs Geo V..... 5 00
Roberts, L H.. 1 00
Robertson, Mrs A S..... 2 00
Robertson, E F 2 00
Robertson, H B & family 10 00
Robinson, M.... 1 00
Robinson, Mrs Lelia S..... 1 00
Rogers, Mrs D.. 1 00
Rogers, Miss E.. 1 00
Rogers, N H.... 5 00
Rollins, E A.... 5 00
Romig, Rev Otto 1 50
Roof, Jessie V.. 1 00
Roseberg, Mr N 8 00
Ross, L E..... 5 00
Roundville, J&R 1 00
Rouse, Mrs M.. 6 00
Rowan, Mr & Mrs J D..... 2 00
Rowden, M.... 1 00
Rucker, Mrs C.. 1 00
Ruckman, J B.. 5 00
Ruedy, J..... 1 45
Rueguitz, Mrs L 1 00
Ruegsegger, Mrs 1 00
Ruttcucutter, JF 2 00
Ryder, A M.... 1 00
Raymilton Miss Stebbins Soc of Mt Pleasant Presbyterian Ch'h.. 5 00
Quakerburn Friendly Needle Work Guild..... 5 00
R E Club, Scotch Grove 10 00
Readquarters of Mt Sunday School, Readstown 6 10
Red Creek Grange No. 926..... 15 00
Reformed Junior C E S, Alexandria 2 00
Rita Ladies Aid Soc, Santa Rita 5 00
Rose Dale School Children, Alto.. 5 00
Rosendale Chr Woman's Missionary Society, Rosendale..... 5 00
Royall Band of the M E Ch'h, South, New London 2 35
Ramseur, MrsP 850 00
Ramsey, David .. 1 00
Ramelis, Louise.. 5 00
Rasmussen, Miss. 3 00
Rayner, Geo B... 3 50
Rath, Mrs Albert 1 00
Reavis, MissLacie 1 00
Reeder, L B..... 5 00
Reeves, RevCecil 1 00
Refanacht, Mrs J 1 00
Reid, Miss Annie 2 00
Reuger, Rev A.. 5 00
Reuther, Mrs WR 1 00
Rendlack, Mrs M 3 50
Rexroth, Mrs D.. 5 00
Reynolds, Mrs C 15 00
Reynaud, J J & Family 2 00
Rhudy, Mrs W B. 1 00
Rice, Sadie..... 1 00
Richards, A K B 3 00
Richardson, E L. 1 00
Richardson, MissC 5 00
Richardson, Mrs.. 1 00
Ridlie, Mrs Chas. 1 00
Riggs, Mrs J M 1 00
Ritchie, W C.... 1 00
Ritchie, W M.... 1 00
Robb, C A (MD) 5 00
Robb, Mrs D L.. 1 00
Robbins, Mary E 5 00
Robertson, Ruth. 1 00
Robertston, A.... 1 00
Robertson, A L.. 1 00
Robinson, Mr JH 1 00
Robinson, John F 5 00
Roelp, Tido..... 1 00
Rogier, J L..... 2 00
Rollins, E L.... 5 00
Romig, M&Mrs H 2 00
Roybolt, Paul B 1 00
Seymour, Miss J 1 50
Seymour, Mrs W 1 00
Shaller, M M.. 2 00
Shaw, E A..... 1 00
Shaw, Mrs E M.. 1 00
Shaw, Mrs Jane.. 10 00
Sheen, Mrs M F 2 00
Sheldon, Mrs M.. 1 00
Shelton, Mrs AL 2 00
Shepherd, Mrs W 1 00
Shepherd, Thos & Mary A..... 2 00
Sherk, Mr & Mrs J..... 5 00
Sherk, Mrs S.... 3 00
Sherman, C F.... 1 00
Shewell, W R.... 1 00
Shewell, Mrs M.. 1 00
Shively, Mrs S.. 5 00
Shultz, Mrs L.. 1 00
The Simon Family, Schoolcraft .. 5 00
Simpson, Mrs M 1 00
Simpson, Mrs R 1 00
Sims, Mrs R.... 2 00
Sinclair, Mrs J.. 3 00
Silver, Mrs H S 5 00
Siverling, Miss A 1 00
Skinner, Addie.. 2 00
Skelly, Margaret 3 00
Smith, Mrs B F 2 00
Smith, Clara D. 10 00
Smith, C W.... 10 00
Smith, Dr A.... 5 00
Smith, Mrs D M. 2 00
Smith, Mrs E.... 2 00
Smith, Mrs F S.. 3 00
Smith, Eli H.... 5 00
Smith, Edna I.. 1 00
Smith, E J..... 2 00
Smith, Elizabeth 1 00
Smith, Hortense.. 1 00
Smith, H P..... 5 00
Smith, J B & wife 2 00
Smith, Mrs E S.. 3 00
Smith, Laura M.. 1 00
Smith, Mrs L W 2 00
Smith, Mrs M W 3 50
Smith, Mrs O.... 3 00
Smeltzer, MrsNF 2 00
Smith, Mrs Clara and children.. 1 00
Smith, Ella V.... 1 00
Smith, Geo A.. 2 00
Smith, James R.. 5 00
Smith, Mrs Jane.. 2 00
Smith Mrs Jane B Lathrop, Est. J 2 00
Smith, Phillip L 2 00
Smith, Richard.. 1 00
Smith, W C..... 2 00
Smith, W M.... 15 00
Snyder, Marg.... 1 00
Rogers, Miss E.. 1 00
Svore, Mrs & O R 2 00
Sorenson, Sam.. 7 00
Spaulding, HomerR 1 00
Spaulding, Mrs.... 1 00
Spencer, Mrs A.. 1 00
Sperry, Mrs A.... 1 00
Spining, C P.... 1 00
Spooner, A C.... 2 00
Spooner, Mrs A.. 2 00
Spoor, Mrs Mary 2 00
Spratt, J B..... 5 00
Stachle, Emil.... 2 50
Stafford, Emma... 1 00
Stairs, C M..... 5 00
Stamp, A M..... 1 50
Stanley, Mr & Mrs J..... 1 50
Stebbins, SarahK 1 00
Steele, Daniel .. 1 00
Steele, Mrs H R 1 00
Stebbins, Mrs D.. 1 00
Steinberg, H L .11 87
Stemple, Belle.... 1 00
Sterdwell Geo W.. 5 00
Stevens, Mrs Geo 1 00
Stevens, Mrs.... 2 00
Stevens, AB&wf 10 00
Stevens, L O.... 5 00
Stewart, Mrs HM 1 00
Stewart, Isabella 10 00
Stewart, Mr&Mrs W..... 5 00
Stifel, Mary A.... 2 00
Stoner, J J..... 2 00
St. John, Clinton 1 00
Stout, M & M.... 3 00
Strain, Mrs A S.. 2 00
Strain, Mrs MJ& Miss E L..... 2 00
Stratton, M..... 1 00
Streeter, Geo J.. 5 00
Stringer, Lizzie.. 1 00
Strongfellow, J E 1 00
Stuckey, Dr J G 1 00
Stuckey, Mrs Emma.. 1 00
Sturtevant, Mrs.. 1 00
Summy, Ben R & family 2 75
Sumner, Mrs C.. 1 00
Swanson, A J S 1 00
Swanson, J F.... 5 00
Sweetser, E H.. 10 00
Swenson, Mrs C.. 2 00
Switzer, Miss E.. 2 00
St Andrews, Jr. Mission Band, Peachburg 1 00
St Hans Ladies' Aid, Edmore.. 25 00
School No. 1, Brendrickson's District, Tunbridge 5 50
School Children of District No. 3 Gibbon.... 1 50
School District No. 17, Scott's Bluff 1 09
School District No. 86, Dustin.. 5 50
Scott Presby E Society, Philadelphia 2 00
Scott, Chief, Famine Fund, Maxton 177 50
Second and Third Grades of County School, Eton 1 57
Senior C E Soc Millard Avenue Congre Church, Chicago 7 15
Senior Epworth League, Petersburg 10 00
Seventh Day Adventists Ch, Littleton College, Littleton 10 00
Shady Hills Bible Cl, Blue Earth... 3 50
The Golden Rule Circle, Watson.. 3 30
Shiloh Presbyterian Missionary Society of Trinity Reformed Ch, Mercersburg .. 25 00
The Helping Hand, Bible Class, Stanton 1 00
The Helping Hand Class of Trinity Methodist Sunday School, Lexington 5 00
The Helping Hand Society of the Whaley U B Ch, Germantown 13 00
The House and Foreign Missionary Societies of First Junior Ch of Morristown 15 12
The Inner Circle, Jacksonville .. 1 50
The Jamestown Free Methodist Sunday School, Jamestown .. 10 00
The Jolly Workers & Their Friends, Remus Point.. 3 00
The Junior Athletean Club, Topeka 7 00
The Juniors Alliance of Blue Earth 2 00
The Junior C E, Blairsville 3 40
The Junior Endeavor Society of St John's Reformed Church 142 58
The King's Daughters Circle of the Brooklyn Presby Church, Oakland 25 00
The King's Daughters, Sturgeon Bay 5 00
Steady Streams Mission Soc of First Presbyterian Church of Lake Forest.... 3 70
Sunbeam Band of West Point Baptist Church. 2 75
Sunbeam Junior League, North Yelbon 1 25
Sunbeams, Spencer 1 00
Sunrise, Jr. Cir, White Deer 3 33
Sunshine Circle of the King's Daughters Club, Dansville 5 00
Sunshine Mission Circle, Chippewa Bay..... 3 00
Supt and Children of Dunlap Orphanage, Brighton 2 00
Sunshine Band, Atglen 1 00
Swedish Ladies' Aid, Govan 10 00
Swedish Aid Soc of Mt Grove.... 5 00
Swiss S S B P, Belle Plaine.... 8 00
The Ladies' Aid Society of the Presbyterian Church, Spring City.... 15 20
The Ladies' Aid So of Prairie Dell Church, Shannon 5 00
The Ladies' Aid Society of the Presbyterian Church and Friends, Elkton 4 00
The Ladies' Emporium, Greensboro 2 00
The Ladies' Foreign Missionary Society N B Ch, Mt Airy..... 6 50
The Ladies' Aid Society of the Reformed Presby Miss Society, Mathe 20 00
The Ladies' Aid Union of Zorro and Gartmore.. 10 00
The Latta Sunday School, Arches, Chestnut Hill, Phila 10 00
The Middlebury, Transcript Chinese Starvation Fund 66 10
The Star Class of the Presbyterian Church, Bradentown 15 00
The Mission Study Class of Oakland City College 2 00
The North American Valley Sunday School, Mutual 8 25
The Nassy Circle U B Sun School, Gladbrook 1 00
The Parsonville Epworth League, Glendale 5 00
The Philathea Cl of Epworth Ch'ch, N Y City. 5 00
The Philathea Cl of M E Ch So, Fairport 14 00
The Sunbeams of Second Pres Ch, Greenville 15 00
The Sun Class of Oakdale Baptist Sunday School, Marietta 1 00
The Social Band, Waterloo 5 00
The Sunbeams So, Presby Ch'ch of Morristown 5 00
The United Presby, Pittsburgh 16 50
The Union Workers' Circle of King's Daughters of Drumore 5 00
The Urban Sch, Cedarville 5 00
The W H and F M Soc Advent Christ Church, Dover 3 00
The Willing Hearts of Holyville 1 00
The Woman's Auxiliary Soc of Bright Heights Ref Ch. 12 00
The Women's Christian Temperance Union of Menominee 13 50
The Women's Miss Society of Crawford 9 45
The Woman's Missionary Soc, Fort Wayne 10 00
The Four K Klub, Ellensburg 10 00
The Young Crusaders of the Ref'd Church and friends, Wallaceton 28 00
Thilow Baracca Class, Riverton.. 2 00
Thimble Club, Elgin 1 00
30 Shut Ins in Home of the Friendless, St Louis 5 50
Thomas Creigh Mission Band of Mercersburg 1 00
True Blue Miss Band of First Presby Church, Lansingburgh 1 50
Tate, W C..... 5 00
Taylor, Miss Alice 1 00
Taylor, MrArthur 1 00
Taylor, Bushrod 3 75
Taylor, Mr Fred 1 00
Taylor, Mr Jasper 5 00
Taylor, John F.... 1 00
Taylor, Mrs Jos.. 1 00
Taylor, Rev R V 2 00
Taylor, Mrs S.. 2 00
Tedrick, Eliza.... 1 00
Tenbrook, Mrs JC 1 00
Terry, Samuel.. 1 00
Thom, Mis H M 1 00
Thomas, J 1 00
Thompson, L E.. 2 00
Thompson, R B.. 1 00
Thompson, Stella 1 00
Thompson, M L.. 6 00
Thorne, MrsRobt 5 00
Thorp, Mrs C S.. 2 00
Thorp, John E.... 5 00
Tisworth, MrsEP 2 00
Towsen, MrsMary 1 00
Townsend, Colwell 1 00
Trenton, Ella.... 1 00
Trexler, Frank M10 00
Trowbridge, D M.. 5 00
Tucker, Mrs G .. 1 00
Turner, Mrs M E 5 00
Tarbell, Mrs G.. 1 00
Taylor, Rev & Mrs Geo W..... 2 00
Taylor, Mr & Mrs R W..... 5 00
Taylor, Mr & Mrs W J..... 5 00
Templeton, J E.. 1 00
Templeton, MrsW 5 00
Ter Maat, Mrs H.. 1 00
Terrell, Dr G L.. 1 00
Thacker, M E.... 1 00
Thatcher, Miss A 1 00
Mrs Thomas' Mobile Class of 24 Presb Ch SS, Portsmouth.... 15 00
Thomas, Anna M.. 5 00
Thomas, Mrs A B 1 00
Thomas, Mrs D H 1 00
Thomas, Mrs D H & Mrs L H Cottrell 2 00
Thomas, Helen M 2 50
Thomas, Mr & Mrs John..... 5 00
Thomas, Mrs L C 3 00
Thomas, L M.. 2 50
Thomas, Mary.. 5 00
Thomas, Mrs ME 1 00
Thomas, S S.. 1 00
Thompson, Mrs F 2 00
Thompson, Mrs M F..... 1 00
Thomas, M L.. 1 00
Thompson, E 2 00
Thompson, Mrs S 5 00
Thompson, P A & friends 5 05
Thoroughman, W W..... 5 00
Thorstenson, Ras 1 50
Tibbetts, E B.. 3 00
Tibbetts, Mrs SE 5 00
Tiffany, Miss G.. 1 00
Tilner, Mrs Wm.. 1 00
Tilton, Mrs A M 1 00
Tingling, C I.. 5 00
Todd, Mrs M S.. 1 00
Tompkins, Mr E.. 1 00
Torbert, MrsGC 10 00
Townsend, Alex.. 1 00
Townsend, B G.. 1 00
Townsend, R G.. 1 00
Tozer, H H.... 5 00
Tripp, W J 1 20
Tritle, Alice A.. 1 00
Trolen, Mr A.. 1 00
Trotter, Mrs P D 1 00
Tucker, Mrs G W 1 00
Turner, Dexter .. 2 00
Turner, John and Mr 10 00
Turner, W P..... 1 00
Tuve, Merle 1 00
Tweedale, Mrs .. 1 80
Twichell, Ellen E 2 00
Twombly, Mrs P J 1 00
Tyndall, Mrs H M..... 3 00
Ulrich, Otto 1 00
Unger, F J..... 3 00
Uribe, T..... 10 00
Union Bible Asso Manchester 5 00
Union C E Soc of Hartleton.... 5 00
Union Ladies' Aid Society..... 5 00
Union Missionary Training Institute, Brooklyn.. 20 30
Union Observance Service, Kallspell 270 00
Upper Alton, Ill, Missionary Soc, Alton 3 00
Urbana Society of Evan Asso'lists.. 47 75
Umlauf, E Louise 2 00
Unruh, Mrs J Di 50
Valley Aid Soc, Weger's Cave.... 5 00
Van Buren Protective Circle.. 5 00
Veta Grande Epworth League, Scales Mound 8 00
Villers Chap and Mr Pleasant C's, Wilmington 5 35
Vance, Mrs G .. 5 00
Vance, Mrs W T 1 00
Vanderbilt, Mrs L..... 2 00
Vandemork, Mrs Susan 1 00
Van Sickle, Mrs W H..... 1 25
Veitch, Andrew J 1 00
Veitch, Anna 1 00
Ventris, Miss A 1 00
Vieth, Miss L.. 2 00
Vinton, Mrs..... 1 00
Virtue, H M.... 2 00
Volgt, Nellie 1 50
Vondrescher, Mrs India 1 50
Vanator, Mrs Jas 5 00
VanSickle, MrsAM1 00
Vaughn, Herb W 5 00
Vawter, E C.... 1 00
Vesser, Geo..... 1 00
Vestal, David .. 5 00
Viphum, Mrs C .. 1 00
Visscher, A D.. 1 00
Vorles, F H.... 5 00
Wade, Mrs R M 2 00
Walker, Miss A.. 2 00
Walker, Mrs B F 1 00
Walker, W m.... 1 00
Ward, Rev D..... 2 00
Ward, Emma..... 2 00
Warne, Mrs J G 2 00
Warman, W H.. 5 00
Warner, Mrs M.. 1 00
Warren, MrsMRS 1 00
Wasley, Dr HM10 00
Watkins, Harry.. 2 00
Watson, Geo W.. 1 00
Thompson, M M.. 6 00
Waugh, Mrs Robt 2 00
Weaver, F K.... 5 00
Weaver, Frank'n 1 00
Webster, M..... 5 00
Webster, Mrs N.. 1 00
Weckesser, Miss.. 5 00
Weeks, A A..... 5 00
Weems, Jr&wf 5 00
Welch, Clyde 5 00
Welles, Horace .. 1 00
Welles, Mrs M H 1 00
Wells, Mrs J 2 00
Wesley, B M.... 1 00
West, Mrs C.... 1 00
Westerman, ... 5 00
Wetzel, Jr&MrsJ 2 00
Wentrich, Mrs S.. 1 00
Wheeler, MrsGeo 1 00
Whitaker, Mrs S 1 00
Whitaker, Mrs A.. 2 50
White, B E..... 1 50
White, Mr&MrsE 1 00
White, Gertrude 1 00
White, J C..... 1 00
James & Caroline& Remington White 1 00
White, M S..... 2 10
White, M C..... 1 00
White, V M..... 1 00
Whitehead, RevR 5 00
Whitmeyre, Geo.. 5 00
Whittlesey, MrsE 3 00
Whitlock, MaryE 1 00
Wigney, Wm 2 00
Wilcox, O K.... 3 00
Wilde, Mrs C F 2 00
Wiley, H S..... 1 00
Wilkinson, H S.. 12 66
Williams, Cord'a 4 00
Williams, Geo C 1 00
Williams, R O.. 2 00
Williams, R T.. 1 00
Williams, Sam'lF 1 00
Williamson, Miss A J..... 1 00
Williamson, MrsG 3 00
Willison, ... 5 00
Wilson, MissJulia 5 00
Wilson, MissJulia 2 00
Wilson, Mrs L J10 00
Wilson, Mr & Mrs W H..... 5 00
Wilt, Mrs E F.. 4 00
Winslow, Mrs L.. 2 00
Winston, Mrs MT 5 00
Winter, John E.. 1 00
Wolfe, Miss C.. 1 00
Wolfe, Miss L.. 2 50
Woodbury, MrsA&C 1 00
Woodruff, Sr HW 2 00
Woodruff, H C.. 1 50
Woods, Jr. Dr E. 1 00
Wyant, Mrs A B. 2 00
Wyland, G W.... 1 00
Junior Christ'n Endeavor Soc, Rockbridge 2 00
Warren Ave Ch of Boston..... 25 02
Warrenton Hgh Sch Y C A, Warrenton 2 77
Washburn Mission Band..... 8 10
Watchful Circle of Kings Daughters, Orange... 2 00
Waxhaw Union, Waxhaw.. 5 00
W C T U, Baker.. 2 00
W C T U of Beaumont Locals.. 6 25
W C T U, Congaree 5 00
W C T U of Dickinson Ctr.. 2 00
W C T U, Fountain 9 50
W C T U, Hardinsburg 2 30
W C T U, Plattsville 3 62
W C T U, Waldo. 4 15
W F M Soc of Greenville 5 20
W F M S Aux, Tyrone 20 00
W F M S of the M E Church of Madison.... 21 50
Webster Christian All'nce of Webster 3 25
Wesley Hall S S, New Haven.. 4 50
Wesleyan Society of M E Church, Chesterville.... 5 50
Western Christ'n Advocate, Cincinnati 25 00
West Mineral Chap No. 22512, Epworth Lea... 2 00
Westminster Class of Bellefonte Presby Church.. 2 00
West Point Miss Soc and Ladies' Aid, Okle..... 10 00
White Plains M E Ch..... 3 75
Whitnauville and Snow App't, Grand Rapids.. 4 40
Wilbur Presby Soc, Hazleton.. 2 50
Willing Workers' Circle of the Kings Daughters, Charles City Co.... 3 00
Wilmington Workers' Mission Band of First Presby Ch, McDonald.. 3 25
Willing Workers of the Second Congre Church, Wilkes-Barre.... 5 00



Contributions for Our China Famine Fund

Willing Workers of the Con S S, Elencoe 6 30
Winnebago J'r's, First Pres Ch. Winnebago 1 00
Winona Ladies' Bible Class of Oxford 5 00
Woodbourne S S, Woodbourne ... 5 00
Woodlawn Bapt Philathea S S Class, Augusta.. 2 00
Woman's Aux, St Paul's Church, Hanover 2 50
Woman's Baptist Miss Society of Pierpont 10 00
Woman's Christ'n Temperance U, Somerville 10 00
Woman's Foreign Missionary Aux. Shelbyville 10 00
Woman's Foreign Mission Society, East Greenwich 2 00
Woman's Foreign Mission Soc of M E Church of Lisbon 6 50
Woman's Foreign Mission Soc of Free Meth Ch, Vienna 8 00
Woman's Foreign Mission Soc of Pleasant Grove Auxiliary, Richburg Ct....... 6 00
Woman's Home & Foreign Miss Soc of Broad St Methodist Ch'h, Hattiesburg ... 2 40
Woman's Home & Foreign Miss Soc of Presby Church, Salida..20 00
Woman's Mission Circle of the Mt Upton Bapt Ch, Mt Upton...... 5 00
Womens' Mission Soc of Con Ch, Benson 5 00
Woman's Mission Soc of Mt Carmel Presby Ch, Brookville 4 00
Woman's Mission Soc of the Delmar Ref'd Ch'h. 3 00
Woman's Mission Soc of the Pres Church, Punta Gorda 5 00
Women's A B C of Alamitos Park M E Ch, Long Beach... 5 50
Women's Ass'n of Beulah Chapel U B Church, Litchfield 5 00
Woman's Auxiliary St Paul's Ch'ch, Hanover 5 00
Woman's Club of East Sutton... 2 50
Woman's Missionary Society of Cong Church, Richmond 3 00
Woman's Missionary Society of Plymouth Ch'ch, Binghamton .. 5 00
Women's Christian Temperance Union, Hope.... 5 10
Women's Convention of the Alabama Dist Ass'n, Calhoun 3 56
Women's Home & Foreign Missionary So of Hope Chapel, Plainfield 2 00
Women's Literary Club of Gardiner 14 00
Women's M So, Ripon 5 00
Women's Miss So Carmel Church, Edge Hill..... 6 00
Women's Missionary Society of Evans City, United Presbyterian Church, Evans City ..10 00
Women's Missionary Soc of 1st Reformed Ch'ch of Galion ..10 00
Women's Miss So of Baptist Ch'ch at Oak Grove .4 50
Women's Missionary Society of Hurley .. 1 00
Women's Mission ary Soc. Piney Flats 6 00
Woman's Miss So of the Memphis Baptist Church, Memphis . 1 40
Women's Miss So, Presby Church 5 00
Woman's Missionary Society of the Presby Ch, Hamilton Sq.. 2 00
Women's Missionary Society of the Presbyterian Church, White Haven .. 8 00
Women's Miss So of Ref'd Church of Schodack 8 10
Woman's Miss So of Wesleyan Meth Ch. Fairmont 5 00
Woman Workers So of Highland Cong'l Church, Somerville .10 11
Waddell, Mr & Mrs R H . 2 00
Waddington, T B 5 00
Wade, Mrs R M. 1 00
Wade, Wm S... 1 00
Wagner, Philipp. 5 00
Wakefield, E F. 1 00
Waldren, Marg. 2 00
Walker, Mrs Ike 1 50
Walkup, L E... 1 00
Wallace, Jas ... 5 00
Wallace, R H .. 1 00
Walrath, Mrs E M 1 00
Walter, Miss A W 1 00
Walton, R 5 00
Wangerin, Mr H & S S Class.. 2 20
Warner, Mrs A. 1 00
Warner, E D... 3 00
Warner, Jno E.. 1 00
Warner, Lillian. 1 00
Warrenfeltz, N J 1 00
Washburn, Mr & Mrs E D.... 2 00
Washburn, M L. 5 00
Washington, V M 2 00
Watkins, Mrs J. 1 00
Watkins, Maude. 1 00
Watkinsen, Mrs A H......... 2 00
Watson, Mrs A. 1 00
Watson, Dr B S.16 00
Watson, Myrce.. 1 00
Watson, Mrs S E 1 00
Watt, Rev G H. 2 00
Watts, LF & SE 1 00
Watts, M & M.. 2 00
Waugh, Mrs W E 1 00
Way, A L...... 2 00
Weary, A G....10 00
Weaver, F K... 3 50
Weaver, Lester. 1 00
Weavers, Mrs G. 2 00
Webber, Mrs M O 2 00
Weber, Mrs..... 1 00
Webster, Mrs H A 1 00
Webster, J N... 1 00
Webster, Mrs MJ 1 00
Weed, S R.....10 00
Weggand, Mr A. 1 00
Wegner, Mrs J.. 3 00
Wehrung, Mrs E 1 00
Weikert, W G.. 1 00
Wellard, Mrs E.. 1 00
Wells, Dexter... 1 00
Wells, M C..... 1 00
Wells, Marion F. 5 00
Wentz, Walter A 1 00
Westmoreland,Mrs E, Mrs Bettie Westmoreland.. 1 25
Weston, Clarence 1 00
Wettlaufer,MrsH 2 00
Wheeler, N P..100 00
Whipple, John... 1 00
Whipple, Mrs LB 1 00
Whipple Mary E 4 00
White, Carrie A. 1 00
Whitney, A M..15 00
Whitehead, Mrs G B......... 1 00
Whistler, G F.. 1 00
White, Mrs Q B 2 00
Whitehead,MrsJS 1 00
Whitford,MrsEW 1 00
Whittey, MrsHM 5 00
Y P S C E of Kalama Cong'l Church 4 87
Young People's So, Silver City.11 00
Young People's So Swygert Baptist Ch'ch, Swygert 2 75
Y W C A of Albright College, Myerstown ... 6 00
Y W C A Littleton Female College 6 40
Y W C T U of Altoona 2 00
Young Ladies' Mis So, Medford... 1 00
Young Ladies' So, Earlville Cong'l Church 5 00
Young People's So of Hebron Bapt Ch'h, Hanover.. 4 00
Young People's So Christian Endeavor of 1st Cong'l Church, Guilford 5 00
Young People's C E Society of Ger Presb Church of Marion 15 00
Young People's So of Christian Endeavor of Mt Marion Church 8 25
Young People's So of Second German Presby Ch, Newark 5 00
Young People's So of Christian Endeavor of Trinity Lutheran Ch, Lemoyne 6 00
Y W C A of the Baptist Church at Toney Creek 5 00
Young Women's Christian Ass'n of Mt Holyoke College, South Hadley 50 00
W C T U of Bradner 2 00
Wellfleet Christian Endeavor So.. 5 00
Willing Workers of the East Jorden W B Sunday School, Polo... 5 00
Women's All Day Prayer Service of the Protestant Churches of Hamilton .. 2 95
Women's Missionary Association of United Brethren Ch'h. Riverdale 4 00
Woman's Home Missionary So Santa Clara 5 00
Women's Miss So, Black Walnut Bapt Church of Cluster Springs 9 20
Yoder J S . . 1 00
Young, Mrs Peter 2 00
Young, Wm 2 00
Zachman, R H.. 5 00
Zion Ch Ladies' Aid Society of Wahpeton 10 00
A Friend 1 00
A Friend 1 00
A Friend 3 00
Friend, —— 1 00
A Friend, Alma. 1 00
Friends of Good Work, Alexandria 10 00
A Friend, Anaheim 2 00
A Friend, Angelica 1 00
A Friend, Auld. 2 00
A Friend, Austinville 1 00
A Friend, Beardsley 3 00
A Friend, Bellefonte 1 00
A Friend, Bellefonte 10 00
A Friend, Belleville 2 00
A Friend, Belleville 1 00
A Friend to the Cause, Bloomington 1 00
A Friend & Reader, Booneville. 5 00
A Friend, Boulder 1 00
Friends, Bovena 3 00
A Friend, Boxford 2 00
A Friend, Bridgeport 5 00
Three Friends, Bruceville 1 35
A Friend, Calabogie 2 00
A Friend, Cameron 5 00
Friends, Campello 2 00
A Friend, Canard 1 00
A Friend,Canton. 1 00
Friends & Subscribers, Carthage 1 00
A Friend, Cedars 1 00
A Friend, Centreville 2 00
A Friend, Chappaqua 2 50
A Friend of the Cause, Charlotte 5 00
Chestrfd Friends, Chesterfield ... 8 00
A Friend, Chester Springs .. 2 00
A Friend, Chicago 2 00
A Friend, Chicago 5 00
A Friend, Chico 1 00
A Friend, Chicora 1 00
A Friend, Chino 1 00
A Sympathizing Friend, Clinton 2 00
A Friend, Clive. 1 00
From Friends, Codell 2 50
A Friend, Colfax10 00
A Friend of the Suffering, Corning 5 00
A Friend, Crete 5 00
A Friend, Danbury 1 00
A Friend, Darien 5 00
A Friend, Darlington 1 00
A Detroit Friend, Detroit 25 00
A Friend, Dover 2 00
A Friend, Dyersburg 3 00
A Friend, East Avon 2 00
A Friend, Eastham 1 00
A Friend, East Hartland 2 00
A Friend, East Pittston 10 00
A Friend, Eden. 2 00
A Friend, Edisto Island 1 00
A Friend, Elizabeth 1 00
A Friend, Eldorado 1 00
A Friend (Fairland), Ill 1 00
A Friend, Fairwater 2 00
A Friend, Fayette 1 00
A Friend, Finlayson 1 00
A Friend, Fishkill 2 00
A Friend, Fort Snelling 2 00
A Friend, Frederick 13 50
A Friend, Fredonia 1 00
A Friend, Fresno 5 00
A Friend, Forest City 5 00
A Friend, Framingham 3 00
Friends, Fullerton 4 00
A Friend, Glendale 1 00
Two Friends D & J, Gloversville 5 00
Two Friends, Gordonville ... 1 00
A Friend Green 1 00
Friends & school children, Grnsboro 2 95
A Friend, Grinnell 1 00
A Friend, Hillsdale 1 00
From Friend Hopkinton .. 2 00
A Friend Indianapolis 1 00
A Friend, Industry 5 00
A Friend Luxor 1 00
A Friend, Jersey City 1 00
A Friend, Kingston 1 00
A Friend, Key West 5 00
A Friend, Lake Linden 1 00
A Friend, La Mesa 2 00
A Friend, Lansing 1 00
A Friend, Lenoir 10 00
Two Friends, Liberty 5 00
A Friend, Litchfield 2 00
A Friend, Livonia, ...10 00
A Friend, Lynn. 1 00
A Friend of Suffering Humanity, Lyons ... 5 00
A Friend, McGraw 10 00
A Friend, Malta 1 00
A Friend, Manchace 2 00
A Friend, Manchester 1 50
A Friend, Mankato 5 00
A Friend in the Name of Jesus, Manly 1 00
A Friend, Marbletown 3 00
A Friend, Marcellas 2 00
Charitable Friend, Maryville 2 00
A Friend, Metal 1 00
A Friend, Metuchen 2 00
A Friend, J M L, Middlefield ... 1 00
A Friend, Millbrook 1 00
A Friend, Millersville 1 00
A Friend, Minneapolis 1 00
A Canadian Friend, Montreal 3 00
A Friend, Monument 1 00
A Friend, Mount Clare, Chicago. 1 00
A Friend, Newark 5 00
A Friend, Newberg 1 00
A Friend, Newburg 1 00
A Friend, Niagara Falls 1 00
A Friend, Nichibucto 1 00
A Few Friends, No Clarendon.. 2 50
A Friend, North Vancouver 1 00
A Friend, Notus 100 00
A Friend, Oakland 1 00
A Friend, Ogdensburg 2 00
A Friend, Old Orchard 3 00
A Friend in Need, Oneida . 1 00
A Friend, Oxford 1 00
A Friend, Passadumkeag 10 00
A Friend, Pattersonville 1 00
A Friend, Pembroke 1 00
A Friend, Peoria 2 00
Friends & Sympathizers of Pantego 3 44
A Friend, Perche 1 00
A Friend, Port Chester 2 00
A Friend, Port Clyde 1 00
Friend & Reader of the C H, Pt Pleasant .. 1 00
A Friend, Pueblo 1 00
A Friend of the Cause, Richfield Springs .. 1 00
A Friend, Ridgeville Corners .. 1 00
A Friend, Ripley 3 00
A Friend, Rockford 5 00
A Friend, Rochester 2 00
A Friend, Rohrerstown 1 00
Two Friends, Sabinal 5 00
A Friend, Sacketts Harbor .. 3 00
Two Friends, Sacramento ... 5 00
A Friend, Salunga 2 00
A Friend, San Francisco 5 00
A Friend, San Pablo 1 00
A Friend, Schenectady 2 00
A Friend, Schenectady 5 00
A Friend, Seattle 1 00
A Friend, Shreveport 8 00
A Friend, Sioux City 4 00
A Friend, Smicksburg 1 00
A Friend, Smithfield 1 00
A Friend, Solan 1 00
A Friend, Southern Pines ... 5 00
A Friend, South Hampton .. 5 00
Friends, Spgbrook 3 00
Friend, St Thomas 5 00
A Friend, Sterling 2 00
A Friend, Stockton 5 00
A Friend, Stowe 2 00
A Friend, Stratham 2 00
A Friend, Tribes Hill 2 50
A Friend, Taft.. 1 00
A Friend, Union 1 00
A Friend, Upper Sandusky 5 00
A Friend, Velva 1 00
A Friend, Vancouver 2 00
A Friend, Vermillion 1 00
A Friend, Vernfield 3 00
A Friend, Washington 5 00
A Friend, Waterbury 1 00
A Friend, Waukon 3 00
A Friend, Wauneta 1 00
A Friend, West Kingston 1 00
A Friend, West Somerville 1 00
A Friend from Winterset 2 00
A Friend, Wooster 1 00
A Friend, Worcester 2 00
A Friend, Yarmouth 1 00
A Friend, M.... 1 00
A Friend to the Cause, Altamont 1 00
A Womelsdorf Friend 1 00
Friends, Atkinson 5 00
Friends, —— ...10 02
A Friend of the Sufferers, Birmingham 1 00
Friends, Haskins 4 00
Friends, Huntersville 1 00
Friends, Kennebunk 5 00
Friends, Lancaster 1 50
Friends, New Ross 1 00
Friends, Westport 2 00
Two Friends 2 00
Two Friends of the Cause, Athol 10 00
Two Friends, Avilla 3 00
Two Friends, Dover 1 50
Two Friends, Elizabethtown 10 00
Two Friends, Hallowell 5 00
Two Friends, Hamlet 4 00
Two Friends, Jennings 1 75
Two Friends, Keene 3 00
Two Friends, Lititz 2 00
Two Friends with Love, St. Augustine 1 00
Two Friends, Uxbridge 3 00
Three Friends, Roanoke 5 00
In Christ's Name, Adams 5 00
In His Name, Amherst 10 00
In His Name, Annapolis Royal 2 00
In His Name, Bazaar 1 00
In His Name, Berohurberger 1 00
In His Name, Belmont 1 00
In His Name, Bethel 2 00
In His Name, Beverly 2 00
In His Name, Breemerville .. 1 00
In His Name, Bridgeport 2 00
In His Name, Denver 5 00
In His Name, Dover 5 00
In His Name, Geneva 1 00
In His Name, Gloversville .. 1 00
In His Name, Halifax Co ... 1 00
I H N, Henderson 10 00
I H N, Holliston 1 00
In His Name, Jersey City ... 1 00
In His Name Mascot 1 00
In His Name, Newark 5 00
In His Name, Monroe 1 00
In His Name, Monson 1 00
In His Name, Newark 5 00
In His Name, New Albany .. 3 00
I H N, New Yk City 3 00
In His Name, Orsville 1 00
In His Name, Perth 2 00
In His Name, Phillipsburg .. 5 00
In His Name, Santa Cruz ... 5 00
In His Name, Thorold 1 00
In His Name, Twisp 1 00
In His Name, Tyler 1 00
In His Name, Washington ... 1 00
In His Name, West Grove ... 1 00
In His Name, West Haven... 1 00
I H N, Lanark..10 00
In His Name, West Jicket... 1 00
In Jesus' Name, Irvington 2 00
In Jesus' Name, N Y City...... 5 00
In Jesus' Name, Short Creek .. 1 00
In the Name of Jesus, Tacoma. 2 50
In Jesus' Name, Windsor 1 00
In Memory of Mother, Laurens 1 00
In Memory of C J Crawford.... 2 00
In the name of F G Hogue, Millvale 5 00
In the name of a friend, Shiremanstown 1 00
A Reader 1 00
A C H Reader, Alburg 1 00
A C H Reader, Ballston Spa.. 1 00
A Reader of the Herald, Boone 3 00
A Reader, Boulder 3 00
A Christian Herald Reader, Fairmont 1 00
A Reader, Fort Crook 2 00
A Christian Herald Reader, Frankfort 2 00
A Christian Herald Reader, Lincoln, Neb.. 1 00
A Constant Reader of the Christian Herald, Littleton 1 00
A Reader, McMinnville 1 00
Reader, Maddock 1 00
A Reader, Manila 5 00
A Reader, Massillon 1 00
A Reader of C H, Menie 1 00
A Reader of the C H, Milford.... 1 00
A Member of the C H, Omaha.. 1 00
A C H Reader, Oskaloosa 1 00
A Reader, Portland 3 00
Two Readers of the C H, Shekameko 3 00
A C H Reader, Shelbyville ... 2 00
A Reader, Skippack 5 00
A Herald Reader, Spg Valley 1 00
A Reader of the C H, Winfield. 1 00
A Lover of the C H, Auburn.. 1 00
One of the C H Family, Chemung 1 00
In name of C H, Ellsworth 1 00
A Devotee to the C H, Lexington 2 00
Subscriber, ——.. 1 00
An Old Subscriber, Ashley 1 00
A Subscriber, Black Diamond 5 00
A Subscriber, Blanchard 3 00
A Subscriber and Daughter Chickasan 10 00
A Subscriber, E Orange 1 00
A Subscribr, Fredonia 5 00
A Subscriber, Hubbard 1 00
A Old Subscriber, Kinsman 6 00
Subscriber, Lampa 4 00
An Old Subscriber, Lexin.gton. 1 00
A Subscriber, Limestone 2 00
A Subscriber, Lodi 5 00
A Subscriber, Loup City 1 00
A Subscriber to the C H, Maysville 5 00
A Subscriber, Mt Vernon 1 00
A Subscriber, Morrisville 1 00
Subscriber, Newton 2 00
A Subscriber, Osceola 5 00
A Subscriber, Penn Yan 2 00
A Subscriber, Providence 2 00
A Subscriber, Rittman 3 00
A Subscriber, Tacoma 3 00
Subscriber Ezekiel, Wainwright 1 00
A Subscriber, Williamsport . 2 00
Columbus Sympathizers 386 80
A Sympathizer, Beverly 1 00
Sympathizers, Camden 5 00
Sympathizers, Cardwell 6 00
A Sympathizer, Carlisle 2 00
A Sympathizer, Cazenovia 2 00
A Sincere Sympathizer, Greenwood 1 00
A Sympathizer, Iron Mountain. 4 00
A Sympathizer, Los Angeles... 1 50
A Sympathizer, Parma 2 00
A Sympathizing Friend, Lexington 1 00
A Sympathizer, Penn Yan 5 00
Sympathizer, Philadelphia .. 1 00
One Who Sympathizes, Oakland 2 00
One Who Sympathizes, St Mry' 1 00
Sympathizer, W Manchester ... 1 00
Sympathy, Yorkhaven 1 00
An American, Brooklyn 25 00
An Old Lady, Charles City.. 2 00
A Believer, Kimball 1 00
A Believer, New Auburn 1 00
A Follower of Christ, Cincinnati 2 00
A Detroit Girl.. 3 00
A Lelandite, Leland 5 00
Aunt Mary, New York 1 00
A Sister, Parma. 2 00
A Widow & Subscriber, Mission City 2 00
A Lady, Auburn 5 00
A Muscatine Family 5 00
An Invalid, Harbourton 2 00
Anonymous, Minneapolis 8 00
Baldwin State Bank, Baldwin 2 00
A Widow, Goodes 2 00
Bank of Sully... 1 00
Citizens, Battle Lake 21 35
City Iron Foundry, Lowell 5 00
Children of Fairview Pl, Morristown 1 25
Deaconess, Kingston 2 00
Earnest, Rutherford 1 00
Finch Children, Chase City ... 1 25
Florida, Orlando 1 00
Four Methodists, Gardiner 12 00
Friend Emma, Narragansett River 3 00
Incognito, Corenna 2 00
In the Name of the Master, Cresaning 2 50
Lent to the Lord, Wamesit 12 00
Methodists, Edgefield 5 00
Mite Box, Buffalo 2 00
Mother & Daughter, Riverhead 6 00
Mother & Daughter, Zion City. 2 00
Mother & Dalghter, Xenia 2 00
Old Layman, Riverside 25 00
One of God's Children, Savannah 1 00
One of the C H family, Steathroy 2 00
One of Your Family, Pomeroy.. 1 00
One Who Is Sorry for Them, Hamilton 5 00
One who loves to help suffering humanity, Lewistown 1 00
One who loves to help suffering humanity, Lewistown 1 00
One Who Care,s Fords Mills ... 2 00
One who has relatives in Tientsen, San Juan. 5 00
Route 2, Leavenworth 5 00
Saints- of the Most High, Race Track ..16 00
Sinner, Barling.. 2 00
St Johnsville, St Johnsville .. 5 00
Two Babies, Bridgeport 2 00
Two Brothers, Campbell 20 00
Two Cousins, Minneapolis .. 2 00
——, Middletown 1 00
——, Minneapolis 1 00
——, Moncton .. 1 00
——, Mobile 1 00
——, Molino 13 00
——, Monroe ... 1 00
——, Montgomery Ctr 2 00
——, Morrison... 5 00
——, Nantonville 6 00
——, Newburgh . 1 00
——, Newbury... 2 00
——, Nw Freedm 4 00
——, N Y City.. 5 00
——, New London 5 00
——, No Hadlet. 2 00
——, Oakland .. 5 00
——, Oakland.... 1 00
——, Oneida 8 55
——, Orange 1 00
——, Oxford 3 00
——, Paducah... 5 00
——, Paterson .. 5 00
——, Phila 1 00
——, Portland, .. 3 05
——, Portsmouth 1 00
——, Poultney .. 1 50
——, Proctor ...10 00
——, Redlands .. 2 00
——, Richmond.. 1 00
——, Ripon 2 00
——, Rockfield .. 4 00
——, Salt Lake City 10 00
——, Saratoga ..55 00
——, Sandy Creek 5 00
——, San Jose.. 3 00
——, Seattle ... 1 00
——, Sherman .. 1 00
——, So Boston.. 1 00
——, So Hampton 3 00
——, Springville. 2 00
——, Stigler 1 00
——, Starr 1 50
——, St James.. 9 00
——, St Louis... 1 00
——, Sunbury ... 1 00
——, Torrington. 5 00
——, Tulsa 1 00
——, Urich 1 00
——, Vaiden 1 00
——, Vancouver.. 1 00
——, Victoria....10 00
——, Victoria .. 1 00
——, Warren ... 2 00
——, Warsaw .. 1 00
——, Waterloo .. 2 00
——, Watertown 1 00
——, W Concord. 1 00
——, West Grove. 5 00
——, West River. 5 00
——, Williamsprt 28
——, Williamstn 1 00
——, Wilmingtn.10 00
——, Woodwdvle. 1 00
"Cash," So Scituate 2 00
"Cash," Sully... 6 37
Cash, Wilmingtn 5 00
"Yours for Christ," Reynoldsville 1 00
For Jesus' Sake, Pittsburgh 1 00
Friend, Keene.. 1 00
"Friend," Montrose 1 00
Friend, Springfd 2 00
Anna L, Amsterdam 1 00
Elise, B., Amsterdam 1 00
Mrs Mary H 2 00
A B C, Richbow 1 00
A B K, Washington 2 00
Mrs A C, Farmington 5 00
Mrs A C B, Clear Lake 1 00
A E W, Prairie du Shien 5 00
A H C, Portland 1 00
A L C, Buffalo.. 1 00
A L S & H W S Long Island ... 1 00
A M, Romulus.. 5 00
A M Z, York 1 00
A P S, Ostrander 1 50
Mrs B, Baltimore 2 00
C, Louisburg 2 00
C D P, Newburgh 1 00
CDW, Manchester 5 00
C E D & M W R Camden 2 00
C E W, Wehrum 1 00
C F K, West Chicago 2 00
Mrs C NA, Knox City 1 00
C P, Lansdowne.1 00
Mrs C T, Bridgton 1 00
D B G, St. Johnsville 5 00
MrsDH, Paterson 2 00
D S, ... 2 00
E A C H, Providence 1 00
E C, Bridgewater 5 00
E C, Brockport.. 3 00
Mrs EDD, Salem 1 00
E F F, Newport. 1 00
E F Y, St.Joseph 1 00
E G T, Allentown25 00
E H, ... 2 00
E H M, Beechview 1 00
E K J, Lunenburg 1 00
E M B, Philadelphia 1 00
E S H, Baltimore 5 00
E S P, Littleton. 1 00
F N H, Lebanon. 1 25
F S, Louisa 1 00
G H C, Valley Junction 5 00
G K, Greenleaf.. 2 00
G L S, West Springfield .. 1 00
G M B, Stonewall 1 00
G S F, New Brighton 1 00
G S G, Mt. Pleasant 2 00
HFS, Los Angeles 1 00
H G, Rochester..10 00
Mrs H J G,..... 2 50
H K D,Frederick 2 00
H R, ... 2 00
Mrs H R G, Scranton 1 00
J E B, Orleans.10 00
Miss Jane H x-x& others interested x-x 10 00
J M & R MTuscola 6 00
J M E,Skaneateles 3 00
Mrs J S A, Janesville 2 00
J W D, Kingsland, ... 5 00
J Z L, Leaman Place 3 00
Mrs & Mrs K. Rochester 5 00
L C T, New Haven 2 00
L M S, Somerset10 00
L U, Ipswick .. 5 00
M, Muskegon ..10 00
M A T, Philadelphia 1 00
M B W, Portland 1 00
M C T, Belvidere 2 00
M E B, BattleCk 1 00
Mrs M E F, Little Falls 2 00
M F M, Hillsboro 1 00
M G C, Bellingham 5 00
Mrs M L D, Rushville 5 00
M M.Washington 5 00
M M K, Plainfield 2 00
M W D, Washington 5 00
M Y A, Boonville 5 00
Miss M ....
Mrs M, ...
Mrs N M, Orrvilla
N M C, Stewart.
Miss P C, Philadelphia 1
Mrs P K, Nifflingtown 1
P T B, Cedarville
Mrs R N R, Hackettstown 1
Mrs Sarah, Seppersonville 1
S B, Norwalk .. 1
Mrs S B, Brookfield 1
Mrs S D A,Girard
Mrs S E C, Hartford 1
Mrs S E S, Norwich 2
S H E, Catawba. 1
Mrs S J P, Camden Sta 1
T G M and Wife Lynchburg 1
V R C, Hillsdale 2
W, Pleasantville 2
W, Tidioute ... 2
W B, StarCave 6
Mr & Mrs W C B Siver Lake ...10
Mrs W D V, Hackettstown 1
W G G, Stillwater 1
Z Y, Poughkeepsie 1
——, Brooklyn .. 2
——, Clintondale. 1
——, Fairfax, .. 5
——, Farmington.35
——, Granton .. 1
——Hempstead . 1
——, KansasCity. 1
——, Karns City 2
——, Knoxville.. 2
——, Leavenworth Route 2 5
——, Lominster.. 1
——, Los Angeles 5
——, Marion 2
——, Mauricetown 1
——, Meriden .. 1
——, Millfield... 4
——, Minneapolis.7
——, Newark ... 1
——, Newton 5
——, Norfolk ... 2
——, Orange Park 2
——, Perry 10
——, Plantersville 2
——, Portland .. 2
——, PortRepublic 3
——, Rensselair 40
——, Rome 1
——, Rutland .. 2
——, Saskville .. 1
——, Smithshire 1
——, SterlingCity 1
——, St Louis .. 5
——, Sutttgar, .. 1
——, Sunnyside. 2
——, Unity 3
——, Upperoc .. 1
——, Valley Falls 2
——, WestChester 2
——, Wikes Barre 1
——, M E Church Gustine 5 4
Perryville, S S 3 0
Organized StarBible Class, Stanleyville 3 2
Orwell Union Sunday School 5 0
Young Ladies' Miss So of Ref'd Ch, Hingham 5 0
Young Ladies' So Tabea, Ref'd Ch, Forreston 15 0
Y M C A, Hastings 110 7
Young People's Branch W C T U, Adairville.. 5 00
Y P A of First Evangelical Ch, Grand Rapids. 9 9
Y P A of the Ger Evangelical Ass Ch'ch, Geneva 15 40
Young People's Alliance, No Yakima 5 00
Y P C Ass'n and Members of the Friends Ch'ch of Selma 8 00
Young People's So of Zion's Stone Church 5 00
Young People's So of the German M E Church of New Haven... 5 00
Young People's So Emmanuel Bapt Ch, Batavia... 2 20
Young People's Society, Booth. 2 42
Young People's Society, So Manchester 15 00
Young People's So of West Port.. 3 00
Y P S C E, Clermont 5 00
Y P S C E, Dakota 24 20
Y P S C E of the First Cong Ch, Dudley 5 00
Y P S C E of Dayspring Presbyterian Church, Yonkers 5 00
Y P S C E of 1st Cong'l Church, Springfield ...40 00
Y P S C E of 1st Presby Church, Altoona 8 00
Young People's So Christian Endeavor of First Lutheran Chu, Chambersburg. 5 00
Young People's So of Christian Endeavor of Westminister Presby Ch. Rochester. 5 00

And several hundred others to be acknowl'g'd later.

Grandmother's Independence Day

By MARGARET E. SANGSTER

THE Paxton family were seated at the breakfast table on the morning of July the first. July the ourth was three days in the distance id Johnnie and Jimmie, the twins, ed eleven, considered the three days be a period almost as long as three eeks. Evelyn, two years their senior, as still young enough to anticipate e Fourth with a species of rapture. ouise, a beautiful girl of twenty, re- ntly graduated from one of the most inent of co-educational universities, garded the coming Fourth with in- fference. She was equipped for a urney and a few hours later in the y would become one of a charming ouse party in a nearby suburb of the wn where the Paxton abode had en for three generations. Although e engagement had not been an- ounced, it was understood in the fam- y and among her intimate friends at her marriage would take place in ctober, her fiancé being a classmate ho had received his diploma and orne off academic honors at the recent mmencement.

Breakfast had passed the stages of uit and cereal, and was on the home retch of wheat cakes and maple rup when Mother Paxton from be- nd the coffee urn glanced at Father axton at the other end of the table, id remarked with an air of convic- on: "Jonathan, I intend that this ear shall mark a change in our pro- ramme. I mean to have a quiet ourth this year. No fire-works, no angerous explosives, none of those zzing things that run along the round and frighten elderly people, no rpedoes, and above all, no toy pistols; rtainly no giant crackers. If you appen to have given an order for any these wasteful, foolish and bar- arous things, I beg you to recall it, nd my mind is made up."

When Mother Paxton declared that er mind was made up the family knew at there was no more to be said. his morning the Paxton household as divided against itself—Father, Iother and Louise on the one side, velyn and the twins on the other. he twins frowned and Evie's eyes lled with tears. Their mother took o notice, but their father said, "On he whole, I agree with you, my dear, ut why introduce so sweeping a re- orm in so sudden a manner? Surely, few torpedoes and a dozen or so acks of fire-crackers will do no harm, nd as for the little boys and Evelyn, hey are looking a good deal disap- ointed. I agree with you that the merican custom of observing our reat national holiday has been some- hat crude and barbarous, to say noth- ng of its being expensive and at times menace to property, but I don't quite eel that these small people of ours hould have their cherished dreams emolished in an instant."

Mrs. Paxton looked severe. "You re generally in the right," she replied, but I am sure you have entirely for- otten that your dear mother is in this ouse, that she is over seventy and hat tranquillity is essential to her omfort; besides, Jonathan, you seem o have forgotten that you and I prom- sed a month ago to spend the Fourth f July this year with my Uncle Clarke. We shall both be away, Louise will not ave returned from her visit and randmother and the children will be ere quite by themselves, for Bridget loes not count. I repose no trust on he judgment of Bridget. I should ot have an easy moment in my ab- ence if I thought that the means of utting out their eyes or burning down he house had been left in the posses- ion of mere children, nor would it be air to their grandmother, who loves uiet, to leave her in the middle of a storm centre of reckless, childish folly. The children can enjoy what they may f the city fireworks and of the neigh- bors' Fourth of July. The matter is decided, so no more need be said."

In passing, it may be mentioned that as yet no legal enactments had prohibited or interfered with the old-fashioned methods of spending the Fourth of July. In Milltown people still did as they pleased, were indisposed to innovation and had heard little about the revolt against the celebration of Independence Day in booming of guns, firing of cannon and ascension of rockets, the good old celebration once eloquently advocated by the founders of the Republic. Although Mrs. Paxton was a Colonial Dame she was in the van when progressive ideas were in order, and as she fully meant in due course to change Milltown ways for the better, she thought it best to begin on her own door-step.

On the afternoon of July third Mr. and Mrs. Paxton said good-by to grandmother and the children and took the train for Centreville. As grandmother breakfasted in her room she had heard nothing of the discussion that had so ruthlessly upset the plans of the small boys and their sister. When she heard the whistle of the departing train and had assured herself that the travelers were really off, a proof of which was given by the fact that Evelyn standing at the edge of the walk had waved her handkerchief to her mother, who had waved hers from the carriage in turn, old Mrs. Paxton came briskly down the stairs.

"Now, children," she called in an eager, happy voice, her keen eyes flashing and her merry laugh summoning them like a toscin, "the coast is clear. It's only three o'clock and I mean to celebrate the Fourth precisely as I have done all my life, and you children are to help along. I understand that your father and mother forgot to order the fireworks, but I sent in my order yesterday and Irwin's man will deliver the goods an hour from now. Here, Jimmie, you run down town and buy a lot of torpedoes and twenty packs of firecrackers, but no toy pistol. Evelyn, you go to the kitchen and tell Bridget that I want to see her this very minute."

In common with far too many people, the younger Mrs. Paxton made the mistake of fancying that a woman must be laid on the shelf if she have reached her seventieth year. She constantly exasperated her husband's mother by surrounding her with a cloud of gentle tenderness, by arranging affairs for her and by irritating attentions that were altogether superfluous. The Paxton homestead was the property of the elder woman, and her son had brought his wife there when he married. Little by little, as the years had slipped by, the reins of household management had fallen into the capable hands of Jonathan's wife, and latterly more and more she had softly, yet firmly, pushed her mother-in-law into retirement. Mrs. Paxton, senior, conceded a great deal for the sake of peace, though it is doubtful whether had her son and his wife remained at home, she would have tamely submitted to what in her view was trampling upon patriotism and insulting Independence Day. The spirit of seventy-six was in her veins, and she could not without an effort agree to spend the Fourth in that peculiarly colorless way which had become the ideal of a number of her younger friends.

The children flew to do her bidding. The twins confided to one another that "grandmother was a brick," and said that they had thought all along that she would not like their mother's new commandment. "Grandmother is too sensible," said one little chap to the other, "even to want a quiet Fourth. Why, grandmother likes noise as much as I do. Mother just wears her out by waiting on her and making us hush when we pass her door. She opened it the other night and called out to me, 'You go on and have a pillow fight whenever you want to. I don't mind.' I believe grandmother likes pillow fights. Anyway she likes fun, and that's more than mother and Louise do."

Bridget appearing promptly on the scene with Evelyn close at her side, grandmother inquired what they were to have for supper. On being told, she proposed an addition in the way of hot biscuits, and told Bridget to prepare everything as quickly as possible as she was herself coming to the kitchen to make them. "I shall make cherry pies for to-morrow," she said, "and we shall have roast lamb, green peas, cherry pies and cheese straws for dinner to-morrow, and in the evening we shall all go to the roof to see the fireworks and when they are over we'll have ice-cream and go to bed. Bridget, while you are here run up to the attic and look in the brown trunk in the far corner by the south window. There are dozens of little flags there. Bring them down to me. I'm going to decorate. I think that my son left word with Luke Higgins to come round in the morning and hoist our large flag. I couldn't manage that very well myself."

The spirit of seventy-six animated old Mrs. Paxton and the children as the latter, never gayer and happier than at this hour, dashed upstairs and down, brought from hidden stores long streamers of bunting and worked like beavers until the Paxton windows blazed in a perfect glory of red, white and blue, with little flags sticking out everywhere. When the next morning broke the little boys were up at dawn and joined all the rest of the little boys in town in a jubilee of delight. Grandmother had slept well and was up early, her face radiant and her bearing high. She seemed, as she thought of the beautiful days of her youth, to have renewed it as the morning went on, each hour more splendid than the last. At eleven o'clock she and the children attended a meeting in the town hall and listened to a speech from the mayor and heard the Declaration read, while the audience joined in the "Star-Spangled Banner," and "Rally round the flag, boys, give it to the breeze."

The Presbyterian minister pronounced the benediction and every one came home in a mood of effervescence. Grandmother invited the minister to dine with them. He was a bachelor and lived in a boarding house, and he needed no urging. Dinner was well under way when the door opened, and who should walk in but Jonathan Paxton and his wife. They had for some reason of psychical insistence felt very uneasy lest grandmother should be ill in their absence or the twins have their eyes put out by the neighbors' firecrackers. Jonathan, too, had felt tugging at his heart the disappointment in Evelyn's blue eyes when she heard the dictum of her mother as to the quiet Fourth. As they walked up the street and saw their house adorned from garret to cellar, as they trod over a litter of spent torpedoes on the garden walk, and entering the dining-room saw grandmother presiding over the feast, their faces were full of astonishment. Grandmother was not in the least abashed. "Come right in," she said. "You are not too late for the lamb, and you shall have cherry pie. You make me think of the prodigal son, Jonathan, and Martha may take the place of the prodigal daughter, and Bridget shall bring you each a plate. This is my way of keeping the Fourth, and as long as I live I don't mean to have any other description of Independence Day in this dear old house."

The Coronation Flower

WHILE prosaic man goes on as ever grubbing away in the same old fashion, trying to get office, make a name, or a living for himself and family, if he chances to look up from his daily work he will probably be surprised to note that there is a perceptible flush of pink in woman's attire. The reason for this prevalence of pink is not difficult to comprehend. Rumor has whispered it on the spring breezes that the dainty pink carnation has been chosen by Queen Mary as the coronation flower. Also, Miss Helen Taft's preference for the same cheerful, vivid color had given the world of fashion a fancy for what is now known as "Helen pink." With the Queen of England and the daughter of the President of the United States both exhibiting a preference for pink, it is not surprising that the color has become vastly popular this spring. The reason assigned for Queen Mary's preference is regal in its kindliness and tact. Asked by a lady of the court who knows the Queen's fondness for violets why she came to choose the pink carnation as the coronation flower, Queen Mary replied: "Because it is within the reach of the common people. I want every loyal subject to wear the coronation flower as often as he can. Another reason for my choice is the gayety of the bright little flower."

The reasons do honor to the kingly impulses of the young Queen, whose name, also, has a familiar homelike sound that is very pleasant. It is, of course, a touch of sentiment, but without sentiment the coronation itself would be but a glittering show that would not appeal to the deeper instincts of human nature. The fact that both King George and Queen Mary seem to understand the higher feelings and deeper sentiments which dignify and give meaning to life is a hopeful augury for the happiness of their reign.

Dedicating Wisconsin's Memorial

UNDER the brilliant sun of a Southern May day, Governor Francis E. McGovern and a distinguished party of officials, veterans and many ladies from Wisconsin, at 10 o'clock on the morning of May 22, dedicated Wisconsin's beautiful State memorial in the Vicksburg National Military Park. The memorial, a towering shaft of granite, surrounded by rugged equestrian figures of bronze, is located on a prominent height in the park lines, just north of the imposing memorial of Illinois, and presents a lasting and impressive monument to departed soldiers of the great State in whose honor it was erected.

The Warren Light Artillery fired a salute as the Governor's party, which included James Frear, secretary of State; Adjutant General Bancroft, State Treasurer Dahl, Lieutenant-Governor Thomas Morris, State Senators Isaac T. Bishop and James James and Assemblyman Smith, assembled. Chairman H. P. Bird, of the Wisconsin Park Commission, called the gathering to order, and the invocation was then delivered by Rev. Thomas Harwood. "Tenting on the Old Camp Ground" was played by the band, after which Colonel A. G. Weissert, secretary of the Wisconsin Commission, delivered his interesting report. After music Mrs. Bird, wife of Chairman Bird, pulled the string, allowing the flags to fall from the imposing monument. In presenting the memorial to the people of the State and passing it over to the keeping of the United States, Governor McGovern spoke impressively and with deep feeling of the days of the Civil War and its heroism.

Major-General Fred D. Grant, U. S. A., accepted the memorial on the part of the United States in a fine speech, and after the band played "America," Governor E. F. Noel of Mississippi delivered an address, followed by "Dixie," and the dedicatory address by Rev. Jenkyn Lloyd Jones was then delivered. The entire gathering joined in singing the chorus of the "Star Spangled Banner," led by the band, and Rabbi Sol Kory delivered the benediction.

Unveiling the Wisconsin State Monument at Vicksburg, May 22

"A Man Without a Country"

A GREAT deal of excitement has recently been caused, not only in the shipping centres, but in a number of the national capitals of the world, by the report that Cipriano Castro, the discredited and exiled president of Venezuela, was engineering an attempt to return himself to the presidency of that republic by means of a revolution.

The movements of a steamer known as the Consul Grostuck, which was formerly the Italian Government cruiser Umbria, have been closely watched by the governments of several countries. This steamer was purchased by the Haytian Government and a partial payment had been made upon her. Great antagonism was of course aroused in Hayti by the assertion that this ship was likely to become the property of Castro. As she set sail from a German port, efforts were made to have her registered in such a way that she might fly the German merchant marine flag; but this right was not granted and the German Government has officially disclaimed all responsibility for the vessel, so that should her movements prove antagonistic to the Republic of Venezuela, she will immediately be declared a pirate and treated as such.

The United States Government has issued orders to the Secret Service forces to watch with added vigilance ports from which filibustering expeditions are likely to set out. Although a great number of rifles has been ordered in New York for shipment to some unknown South American point, it is declared that our government will take particular pains to see that they get no further than New Orleans.

Chance Discoveries In Bible Lands

Continued from page 655

instead of ignorant peasants, imagine their surprise and excitement when they cleared the floor of the ancient church to find it covered with a beautifully colored mosaic map of ancient Palestine. It was just such a map as the explorer in Bible lands most needed.

Students of the Hebrew and Greek Bible have always sought for older and older copies of the text, for before the days of printing every Bible was copied by hand, and the scribes whose business it was to make the new copies frequently made mistakes or omitted words. Thus in the course of many centuries errors crept into the text, and these errors, causing endless confusion and discussion, would thus be corrected. Early in the last century, Tischendorf, a young Russian scholar, was spending the night with the monks in the convent of St. Catherine on Mount Sinai. In the morning the air was so chilly that a monk brought a bundle of old papers to kindle a fire. The eyes of the young Russian caught sight of one of the papers on which appeared the familiar characters of the early Bible. Seizing it before it reached the fire, he found that it was a page from a manuscript older than any known to exist. He learned that there were other pages of the same book in the monastery, and when they were gathered they formed the nearly complete manuscript which is known as the Codex Sinaiticus. It is now in St. Petersburg, and it has been of inestimable value in correcting the errors of the Biblical text. The discovery was due to the chill morning air of the mountain.

In 1880, a little Arab boy who had run away from school, went down to the pool of Siloam in the Kedron valley, east of Jerusalem, to bathe. His foot slipped on a wet stone, and he fell into the deep water. As he came up with his eyes open, he thought he saw just beneath the surface some marks resembling writing. The story goes that when the boy went back to school and was about to be punished for running away, he told the teacher of the writing, thus hoping to escape punishment. Forgetting the boy, the teacher went down to the pool, and at the mouth of the aqueduct bringing the water from an upper pool, he saw an inscription in strange characters. The letters, half concealed with lime, were cleared and copied: it was the oldest Hebrew writing in the world—the pure Hebrew of the Biblical books of the Kings. In II. Kings 20: 20 we read that Hezekiah "made the pool and the conduit, and brought water into the city." The conduit at the mouth of which the inscription was found was the one King Hezekiah built. The inscription was later cut from the rock and is now preserved in the Constantinople Museum.

In 1842 the French Government stationed a consul in the little Arab town of Mosul on the upper Tigris River, with instructions to dig into the ancient mounds on the opposite shore, for there it was believed the city of Nineveh once stood. As the Frenchman was searching among the ruins, an Arab inquired of him what he was trying to find.

"Stones with pictures upon them," replied the consul.

"Come to Khorsabad, my native village in the north, and there you will find as many stones with pictures as you want," said the Arab.

After some hesitation, the consul accompanied the Arab to Khorsabad. He dug into the great mound beneath the village and found the wonderful palace of the Biblical king Sargon. The walls of its chambers were lined with sculptured slabs and with inscriptions of historical value. Later, when one of the inscriptions was read, the scholars were amazed to find these words:

"I besieged and occupied the town of Samaria, and I carried away as captives 27,280 of its inhabitants."

These people were the famous lost tribes of Israel, and the account of their captivity was written by the very man who took them captive. The curiosity of an idle Arab led to the discovery of this great palace and its many treasures which are now the pride of the Louvre Museum in Paris.

In 1871, at Deir eb-Bahri, in upper Egypt, an Arab discovered in a rocky cliff a hole which led far into the mountain. He followed the hole, and at its end he found himself in a cavern filled with mummies and treasures of untold value. In 1881, from the cavern there were brought down forty mummies of the ancient kings and queens of Egypt, and when they were unwrapped, one of them was found to be Rameses, the Pharaoh who oppressed the Israelites while they were in bondage in Egypt. Now in the Cairo Museum we may look upon the very face of the great king who, to many, has seemed more of a myth than a real king.

Thus it is not always the trained archæologist who finds the treasures which are buried among the ruins of Bible lands. More frequently it is the peasant or even the child who accidentally reveals them. And may it not be said that these long lost records have been preserved for us, and are revealed at the moment when we most need them?

TOPICS OF INTEREST THROUGHOUT THE WORLD

—ONE OF THE PRINCIPAL events in observance of Flag Day at Philadelphia was the unveiling of a tablet in memory of Betsy Ross, maker of the first American flag, by the Flag House Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution. The tablet was unveiled by Donaldson Beale Cooper, great-great-great-grandnephew of Betsy Ross.

—A FUND OF $2,000 to purchase a silver service to present to Mrs. Taft on her silver wedding anniversary at the White House on Monday, June 19, was subscribed by members of the House of Representatives. Each member contributed $5. The fund was collected so rapidly that a committee was enabled to take the afternoon train for New York, where a gift was selected. The present was supplemented by a magnificent silver service which the Senate presented to President and Mrs. Taft at the celebration.

—THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America recently authorized a call to be sent to the more than 100,000 ministers and pastors of churches in the fellowship of the council, asking them to consider on Sunday, July 2, questions of international arbitration and peace. The call suggests "that the fact that this Sunday is so close to the national holiday, July 4, makes it especially fitting that such themes should have the attention of the pulpits of this country on that day." This Council of Churches, representing the larger part of the Protestant Church membership of the United States, is pledged to do all in its power to advance the cause of international arbitration and peace.

—PREMIER CANALEJAS of Spain recently informed the Chamber of Deputies that Spain's projected military operations at El-Araish, Morocco, were not inconsistent with the treaty of Algeciras or other agreements. It was necessary, he said, for Spain to restore and preserve order in that part of Morocco. It is understood that the government plans the occupation of Tetuan, Morocco, because Spanish subjects have been killed or maltreated by rebellious tribesmen. In both the Tetuan and El-Araish regions Spanish interests are endangered. The French Government is endeavoring to dissuade Spain from these military movements. Official advices confirm previous reports that a French column entered Mekines recently after a stiff fight with Berber tribesmen, in which there were losses on both sides. Confirmation also is given to the report that Mulai-El-Zin, the Sultan's brother, who had been proclaimed Sultan by the rebels, was captured by the Frenchmen. The French Government is concerned over Spanish activities in Morocco, especially at a time when France, having obtained the relief of Fez, intends to withdraw her troops after reorganizing the Sultan's army and accomplishing the pacification of the country. It is believed in Paris that Spain is determined to extend her zone in Morocco, which is now limited to Melilla and Ceuta and their environs.

—THE ORIGINAL STAR-SPANGLED BANNER, the flag that inspired Francis Scott Key to write the anthem, is to be again unfurled over the ramparts of historic Fort McHenry on September 12, the anniversary of the battle of North Point. The old flag is in possession of Eben Appleton of New York, and is stored in a safe deposit vault in that city. Mr. Appleton is a descendant of Lieutenant-Colonel George Armstead, who commanded the garrison at Fort McHenry during the British bombardment. President Taft is to be asked to deliver an address at the patriotic celebration, and a request will be made of the British Government to send a warship as an evidence of the friendly spirit between the two nations. It is hoped to see the British warship salute the old banner at which British guns were fired.

NEW GUIDING HANDS IN MEXICO

A GENTLEMAN who but recently returned from Mexico, where he remained through the entire revolution and had the advantages of the closest contact with both supporters of the Diaz régime and the revolutionists, has written most informingly of the present situation in the war-worn republic. Of its future and the men who will guide it, at least up to the time of the elections planned for next fall, he says:

"A great many people seem to believe that Mexico is about to be stricken from the progressive class of Latin-American States led by Argentina and Chile and fall to the low level of Honduras and Nicaragua.

"There are certainly dark clouds on the Mexican horizon, but nothing as yet sufficiently sombre to justify these predictions. There is up to the present no sign of a reactionary spirit abroad, though that may come. In view of the great wealth of the score of gentlemen who have recently been dispossessed of a very lucrative position it would be extraordinary indeed if we did not hear, at least in the papers, of a wave of reaction sweeping over the country.

"Under the new régime the development of this country, which in reality is quite as rich as it was regarded to be in the fabulous days, will not be the exclusive privilege and perquisite of the foreigner. Mexicans will soon take the part, indeed, I think, a leading part, in that work which it is their right and duty to perform. With an open market and fair field Mexico cannot fail to become more prosperous and more peaceable, and from the geographical nature of things no government will profit by this more than ours, no people more than ours.

"Mexicans may well be proud of the membership of the Cabinet which, at the suggestion of Madero, the provisional president has called about him. Even the place of Limantour, the one able man in the Diaz Cabinet, will be amply filled by Ernesto Madero, who is regarded in commercial circles throughout the republic as the equal of Limantour in finance and perhaps his superior in business knowledge. The other men, Manuel Callero, the Vasquez Gomez brothers, and Rafael Hernandez, are all self-made men, who have reached distinction before middle age in their several walks of life. 'We will build roads and we will build schools. Every road will lead to a school. We have nothing to fear in Mexico but ignorance, and that we will annihilate,' were the words and the programme with which Vasquez Gomez greeted the hundred thousand people who come out to meet him upon his return to the capital he had left as a fugitive in the night."

General Madero with Some of Mexico's New Cabinet

STANDING, FROM LEFT TO RIGHT—Jose M. Pino Suarez, Minister of Justice; Dr. Vasquez Gomez, Minister of Foreign Affairs; Venuistano Carranza, Minister of War; F. Gonzalez Garza, Minister of the Interior; M. Bonilla, Director of Public Works.

THE MOTTO OVER THE GATE

Continued from page 662

seriously the fifth morning, as he emerged from the tenement stairway for one more lookout. Why! There she was, stepping out of the auto on to his sidewalk at that very minute. Davy turned hot and cold with excitement; for she carried a bundle, and the chauffeur was following with a basket, probably containing more food of the kind his mother couldn't buy.

With happy confidence he took Mrs. Dearing's hand to lead her upstairs: "Muvver, she's come!" he cried, as he pushed open the door of their room.

Mrs. Dearing took it in at a glance. Here was the home Davy's mother had been able to provide since her husband's death, and here was Davy's mother! Just a shadow of womanhood sitting nervously on the edge of her chair, ready to drop her needle any minute she was absolutely needed by the wasted child in the corner! The room was neat, oh, yes; Davy and Debby knew how to keep it so; but for air, and light, and comfort, alas! how could any of these be there?

With Christian kindliness the favored woman sat down by the side of the unfavored one, and began to open the bundle she had brought: "I was packing a missionary barrel," she said, "and it occurred to me that perhaps some of the garments might be useful here. I am sure this navy blue suit will do for Davy; this simple gown for you, and the little slips for baby."

Mrs. Dearing held up the different pieces one by one, as Davy's mother tried to express her gratitude, but Davy was wondering if Debby was to be left out. He had just decided that Debby should wear the coat of the suit and he the trousers, when Mrs. Dearing held up a blue gingham dress, just Debby's size, and almost at the same moment she said: "And now, Mrs. McDonald, I have an invitation for Davy and his little sister! It is to go for ten days to a beautiful summer home for children. Mont-Lawn it is called. They will go with other children by rail and then by boat across the Hudson River, and for ten long days they will have just the happiest time and best of care. Do you think they could start one week from to-day?"

"Oh, muvver, please! Please, muvver!" Davy was jumping up and down on his small feet pleading with all his might.

But Mrs. McDonald needed no urging. It was what she had craved for her children. Into the weary life a ray of hope was stealing. Some one was interested in her children, was giving them a chance, and as for Davy, he would have followed Mrs. Dearing to the ends of the earth if she had asked him. Always some grand surprise she offered, and this last; an invitation to go where it was all country, no tenement house anywhere in sight! It was certainly too good to believe. Davy curled up every night in the corner of the room on the floor to sleep, with a big fear in his heart that he would wake next morning to find it all a dream. Not until the tram ride was over and he and Debby were in all the whirl and excitement of standing on the deck of the boat with numberless other children, did it seem real.

The party of children were landed on the banks of the Hudson at Nyack, and were driven by stage up the long, winding path towards Mont-Lawn. Every child's heart beat fast for joy as they approached the entrance to the "Children's Paradise." These were the words over the gate and Davy read them aloud: "I LOVE GOD AND LITTLE CHILDREN." Who was I? "I wisht I knew," he confided to Debby, but the wish was forgotten as they passed through and were in full view of a row of white cottages and a big Temple, dining pavilion and out-door gymnasium, with great, velvety lawns speading everywhere.

The first event of that memorable arrival was to march to the dining pavilion in Fort Plenty. Rows upon rows of tables and chairs, piles of snowy bread and yellow butter, milk, and many other things that made the children's mouths water. Davy, so trim and neat in the little navy blue suit, was an interesting study as they entered the pavilion. His brown eyes sparkled as he whispered to Debby: "Ain't it jolly? Guess you c'd put a hundred thousand rooms like ours into this big one."

"Or mebbe a million!" was Debby's rejoinder.

"'Sides, you couldn't never get trees, and grass, and sky in our street," added Davy.

"No, never; 'twouldn't grow in stones. Ain't it sweet smellin'?" Debby sniffed as she spoke, and kept on sniffing as they were being seated at the tables. Such appetites! Would there be enough to feed such a crowd? Davy speculated a little upon that subject; but apparently there was no limit to the good things to eat. Every child might be satisfied, and none could decide whether the supper or the fun that came after was the more delightful.

Just to feel the soft green grass under foot, to run, jump, or even turn somersault on it at will! It was simply intoxicating, and Davy in his busy little brain began to wonder who made it all possible. At last, tired and sleepy, he was taken to one of the pretty white cottages. Each one was filled with snowy white beds. Davy was positively sure no such bed could be for him; he put his hand confidingly into that of the nurse in charge. "Please, missus," he said, "I'm 'fraid I'll spoil it."

"Spoil what, my little lad?" she asked pleasantly.

"That beyeutiful white bed. I c'd curl up on the floor like I do at muvver's."

There was a suspicious tremor in nurse's voice as she assured Davy it was meant for him. He might lie on the snowy pillows every night. He was at Mont-Lawn now. "So kneel down, Davy, and thank God for being so kind to you," she said.

Davy had a dim recollection of a little prayer in days gone by, when father was living; but that, with other things, had long ago disappeared. He was, however, an appreciative little lad, and if God was doing all this, he could surely say "thank you," so he knelt down, holding fast to the kind nurse's hand, and said earnestly: "Please, God, thank you for the beyewtiful white bed. I'll be awful careful not to spoil it."

The good times so far enjoyed grew suddenly more joyous, when, next afternoon, the "Children's Friend," Mont-Lawn's life-long benefactor, visited the Home and joined in the sports. Davy and Debby were in it all. Little suspecting that his yellow head had already attracted attention, Davy was surprised once to find his small brown hand suddenly clasped in that of the kind man, and hear the voice speaking directly to him! This was a wonderful opportunity, for a big thought had

Continued on page 671

Various Good Causes Helped by Christian Herald Readers

Contributions less than 1.00 for Various Good Causes.

A L H 15c. Portland 25c. Mrs J C 50c. W H D 50c. S T B 50c. A Friend 50c. Mrs H 75c. Mc L. G B 50c. T L 10c. A Subscriber 50c. G W K 15c. Mrs S H Mc 15c. Mrs E Z 30c. Mrs F W 15c. M F K 25c. R M S 60c. E L W 15c. R C McK 15c. Mrs W J 15c. Mrs W A D 15c. Mrs F M E 50c. Mrs L M G 15c. Mrs M A L 15c. Miss A S 15c. Mrs H T R 15c. Mrs J B 10c. S A M 15c. F B 15c. W B F 25c. M J H 15c. G H T 20c. Mrs J W 15c. M S K 65c. O T 15c. Mrs C R H 27c. Mrs J H C 15c. E S H 15c. L B G 15c. Mrs JEJ 15c. Mrs H J M 15c. Mr J W A 85c. H S K 25c. Miss A S 25c. Mrs M K N 50c. M C 35c. T B 15c. J N 10c. M 1164 50c. Mrs A D 40c. M H G 50c. Mrs W B 25c. Mrs C I P 50c. Mrs E C N 20c. M H G 50c. Mrs J BB 10c. Miss C I P 25c. B B 10c. Mrs L G B 50c. M H G 50c.

(Bible League of North America)

Ipswisch 1 00

(China Presby. Mission)

Farnsworth. H. 1 00

(China Inland Mission)

Elkins, W P ..1 50

(Christian Mission to Jews)

Daniels, E W.. 1 00
N Y City 5 00

(American Tract So.)

Cherry, Mrs JR .. 1 00
Friends in N J .50 00

(Any Good Cause)

Moore, Mrs C C. 1 00
——, Mayersville. 1 00
Cook, Marta Y. 1 50
McLellon, David..2 00

(Z Chas Reals)

A Friend Lexington 25 00

(Aged Father & Mother in Virginia)

Lauffer, Nettie. 1 00
Metzger, Mrs Chas 1 00
Ross, Jos F 1 02
Evansville, ...10 00
I H N, Newark.. 5 00
A Friend, Carlstadt 2 02

(Rev H Loomis)

—, Kans. 10 00

(Cremorne Mission)

Mottaz, A 5 00

(East Afr. Inland Mis)

Ralph, B H 1 00

(Door of Hope)

Lansing, H S ... 1 00

(Foreign Missions)

Gordon, Myra E. 10 00
Merchant, A H.. 1 00
A Friend, Van Wert 8 00
Union Valley SS
Payette 10 21
Mallekr, Chas ... 1 00
No. Caldwell Union SS, No. Caldwell 8 35
The Tabernacle CE
S Waukesha . 7 50

(Dr Grenfell)

Habbe, Edith .. 5 00
Habbe, Edwin .. 5 00
Habbe, Paul ... 5 00
Habbe, Richard 5 00
Habbe, Ruth ... 5 00
Willard, J F ... 1 25
Divine, Mrs R A 3 00
Williams, Etta.. 2 00

(Home Missions)

Merchant, A H . 1 00
No. Caldwell Union SS No. Caldwell 9 00
The Tabernacle C E, S Waukesha 7 50

(Int'l Sunshine Soc.)

Blair, Eliza A ... 1 00
Boenigh, Mrs C . 1 00
Broadwater, Mr & Mrs 10 00
Conner, Mr & Mrs 5 00
Garrison, Mrs S E 1 00
Hamilter, Miss R. 1 00
Leech, Mrs Minnie 1 00
Little, Miss Lula . 1 00
Maiden, Mrs HF. 1 00
Miller, Mary H. . 1 00
Robertson, Molly 5 00
Silverling, Miss J. 1 50
Watkins, Mrs LD 1 00
A C R 1 00
Mrs C G M Troupsburg ... 3 00
W D B, Haviland 5 00
Ellis, Richland . 1 00
Llewellyn, F H .. 5 02
W. Pleasantville 2 50
W. Tidioute ... 2 50

(Keswick Colony)

A Friend, Lexington 20 00
Leard, Jane 1 00
Stiefvater, C M.. 5 04

(H N Kinnear)

Howe, Miss E .. 2 06

(Rev Matthias Klein)

——, Kans 20 00

(Mayesville Inst.))

Van Horne, Mrs DC 2 00
A Friend, Lexington 10 00

(McAuley Water St. Mission)

Lindholm, Peter .2 00
Murray, Lizzie .. 1 50
Willis, Mrs C A 1 00
Yost, Mrs Henry. 5 00
A Friend, Baldwin 1 00
Dean, L H 1 00

(Rev W E Lampe)

——, Kans 20 00

(Missionary Work in Korea)

Wright, Mr A..25 00

(Miss'y T J Preston)

L N, Westerville 1 00

(Mary Reed Lepers)

Hawkins, Mrs E 1 00
Marden, Delia..30 00
G S, Milwaukee 3 00
A Sympathizer, Jerusalem 5 00

(Prison Gate Mission)

Lansing, H S ... 1 00
Taapken, Mrs JD 5 00

(Rev P de Schweinitz)

Huber, MasterCarl 1 00

(Christian Schmitt)

A Friend, Lexington 25 00
Divine, Mrs R A 2 00

(White Door)

Black, Mrs Chas 3 15
Merchant, A H... 2 85
Ray, Mrs C A.. 1 50
N. Bound Brook .10 00
——, McPherson. 1 00
I H N, Greenville 4 50
In God's Name Salem 5 00
Parents, Canandaigua 5 00
Holbrook, S H .. 2 00
Newcomb, Eliz.. 1 50
M T C, Idaho...15 00

Midsummer in the Cozy Corner

Shadows, seeming idle shapes,
Of little frisking elves and apes.

When children are playing alone on the green,
In comes the playmate that never was seen.

. . . .

He's sure to be present, abroad or at home.
When children are happy and playing alone.

ENTERTAINING THE FAIRIES

Do you believe in fairies? Robin Goodfellow, the oldest fairy of them all, says if you do, you are helping to keep the little fanciful folk alive. So whether we truly believe in them or not, for the sake of the little boys and girls who do, we would not like to have them die; and perhaps this is the only reason why at this midsummer season we are entertaining fairies in the Cozy Corner.

Who Are the Fairies?

WHO are fairies? Did some one ask? Well, Peter Pan, the boy who knows them best, says they are born when a baby laughs, and declares that we never can guess all the wonderful things that they do. Robert Louis Stevenson, a really very great man and a poet, says they are the unseen playmates of little children. But I believe there are fairies, fairies everywhere, in grownup people's lives as well as in the lives of the tiny wees.

Have You Ever Thought of This?

THE history of the world is largely written in fairy tales. Have you ever thought of that? Aladdin and his wonderful lamp, for example, is nothing less than the splendid prophecy of our wonderful modern mining machinery, which, by ways that are almost magic, bring the gold out of hidden places in the earth. Our inventors and discoverers are the real fairy princes who go forth to battle with the great giant forces of nature and conquer them. The monster turbines, hydraulic machines, irrigation plants, war balloons and swift steam engines hauling massive trains across continents, are the giants Wind, Fire and Water made to serve the world.

Greatest Truths in Fairy Tales

HOP O' MY THUMB and his Seven League Boots and the Ogre who spoke from the earth to the sun and from the sun to the moon, are clearly the fairyland beginnings of wireless telegraphy, and cables and telephones. Greatest truths are hidden in fairy tales, and little by little out of the golden deeds of fairy heroes, who always conquer, much of the progress of the world has gone on.

It is a mistake to get too far away from fairyland. If you find you are forgetting the fairies, go then and sit by the nursery fire, or on the side of the bed at twilight and listen all over again to the stories that mother is telling to the tiniest of you all; or some day when you have rocked the baby to sleep and have really been very quiet afterwards, and have taken extra care to wash your face and hands and fold the towel, and brush your shoes, and have tried in many other ways to help about the house, and dear busy mother has not noticed it, has even scolded, perhaps, just like the day before when you did not try it all, remember, it is the fairies that will tell her in the night while she lies asleep that her little girl was a great help that day, when she was too full of other thoughts to notice it.

O my little girls, little boys, keep your fairyland forever. You have only to be brave and patient and truthful and generous, and the fairies are sure to come and show you plenty of their wonderful secrets and ways. They are true little friends, and even though you should forget them for a while because of your being so occupied with the serious business of growing up, they have loyally kept your little girl and boyhood dreams and fancies in the Never, Never, Never Land safe from harm.

The Fairies of the Caldon Low

A Midsummer Legend

"And where have you been, my Mary,
And where have you been from me?'
"I've been to the top of the Caldon Low,
The midsummer night to see!"

"Oh tell me all, my Mary—
All, all that ever you know;
For you must have seen the fairies
Last night on the Caldon Low."

Pigwiggin on his beetle steed
Is off to Titania's wedding.

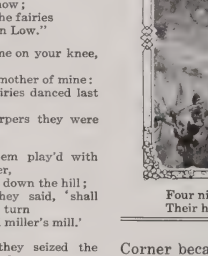
"Then take me on your knee, mother,
And listen, mother of mine:
A hundred fairies danced last night,
And the harpers they were nine;

"Some of them play'd with the water,
And roll'd it down the hill;
'And this,' they said, 'shall speedily turn
The poor old miller's mill.'

"And some they seized the little winds
That sounded over the hill;
'And each put a horn unto his mouth,
And blew both loud and shrill:

"'And there,' they said, 'the merry winds go
Away from every horn;
And they shall clear the mildew dank
From the blind old widow's corn.'

"And some they brought brown lint seed
And flung it down from the Low;
'And this,' they said, 'by sunrise,
In the weaver's croft shall grow.'



"'Oh! the poor lame weaver,
How he will laugh outright
When he sees his dwindling flax-field
All full of flowers by night.'

"And then outspoke a brownie,
With long beard on his chin:
'I have spun up all the tow,' said he,
'And I want some more to spin.

"'I've spun a piece of hempen cloth,
And I want to spin another;
A little sheet for Mary's bed,
And an apron for her mother.'

With that I could not help but laugh,
And I laugh'd out loud and free;
And then on the top of the Caldon Low
There was no one left but me.

"But coming down from the hill-top,
I heard afar below,
How busy the jolly miller was,
And how the wheel did go.

And the wedding was held
And the merry bells rang,
And all the good fairies they danced and they sang
And feasted and frolicked, I can't tell how long.

Hop and Mop and Trip and Skip "Clear the way! Titania's wedding car is coming."

"And I peep'd into the widow's field,
And, sure enough, were seen
The yellow ears of the mildew'd corn,
All standing stout and green.

"And down to the weaver's croft I stole,
To see if the flax were sprung;
And I met the weaver at his gate,
With the good news on his tongue."

—MARY HOWITT.

Such a Nice Letter

DEAR MISS PORTER: Of all the magazines that come to our house, and we take a lot, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD is the best. We all want it first because it is interesting to everybody. We younger folks like the Cozy

Four nimble gnats the horses were
Their harnesses of gossamer.

Corner because it is so cozy and keeps getting cozier all the time. I wish the editor would give us boys and girls more room. The prize contests are the best ever and the prizes are first-class. I know, you see, for I have been a winner. I received my Old Glory in good condition. It is all right, and I thank you for it. Please give us some more chances like that. If you can do it conveniently, will you give us boys some more articles on airshipping?

Yours forever,
JOHN ELDRIDGE KLEIN.

We thank you for your nice letter, John, and I am ever so glad that you have found your way into the Cozy Corner. It is for interested and enthusiastic boys like yourself that our Boys' and Girls' Department bubbles along full of nice things. I hope that we are going to be good friends now and always.

SPECIAL

Our Everybody's Party Leaflet was so popular with our boys and girls that we have ordered a new supply. Any one who has not already received it may write and ask for one. Please enclose a stamp for postage.

Good-Night Verse

"Our feet shall stand in thy gates, O Jerusalem. Peace be within thy walls, and right-eousness within thy palaces."

Lovingly and faithfully,
The Aunt in the Cozy Corner

This From a Ministe

Newtown, Pa., Oct. 21, 1910

Kerr Glass Mfg. Co., Gentlemen: I first used t "Economy Jar" some 6 or 7 years ago. We have us them every season since and have never had a failure. their use we have fresh vegetables from our own gard all through the winter months: asparagus, beets, lir beans, sweet corn, wax beans, tomatoes, etc. To r mind there is no other jar or method of preserving which vegetables come to the table tasting just as fre and sweet as though they had been freshly picked.

Respectfully yours,
T. J. ELMS, Pastor Presbyterian Churc

No Leaky Rubber Ring. No Glass Top to leak in Air. No Poisonous Zinc Cap.

The d has con when r knowin honeyw will n longer satisfie withany the scre top, gla top, an other o style an unsanita jars.

Jar Trademark

The Rubber Ring Jar is a Thing of the Pa

The public has decree that it is unsanitar and pure food commi sioners have denounce zinc caps as unhealth and dangerous to u for home canning.

The economy is t only jar in the worl that uses no rubber ring It has a patent airtigh composition gasket tasteless, odorless an sanitary, which seas AIRTIGHT, and as n other jar has ever bee sealed.

The Economy uses n zinc cap, or uneven leaky glass top, but i stead uses a gold enameled cap impervious to action of an food acid, with this patent airtight sanitary gasket, and i recommended and endorsed by all health authorities.

The Only Absolute Airtight, Sanitary Home Canning Jar is

The Economy JAR

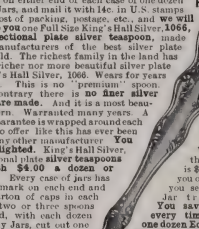
White Crystal Glass
Wide Mouth

Light or heat does not affect contents as air is excluded.

By using Economy Jars you can have on your table in the summertime with their rich, fresh, natural flavor roast turkey, sausage, venison, trout, etc., canned in the wintertime.

To advertise the Economy Jar we will give

Free To Buyers of Economy Jars



King's Hall Silver, 1066

Sectional Plate Silver Tea Spoons

Three Tea Spoons with every case of Economy Jars
One Tea Spoon with every dozen Economy Caps

You want a half-dozen or dozen of these spoons FREE

Cut out Jar trade-mark like above shown, appearing on either end of each case of one dozen Economy Jars, and mail it with 14c. in U.S. stamps to cover cost of packing, postage, etc., and we will present to you one Full Size King's Hall Silver, 1066, famous sectional plate silver teaspoon, made by the manufacturers of the best silver plate in the world. The richest family in the land has no finer, richer nor more beautiful silver plate than King's Hall Silver, 1066. Wears for years and years. This is no "premium" spoon. On the contrary there is no finer silver plated ware made. And it is a most beautiful pattern. Warranted many years. A printed guarantee is wrapped around each spoon. No offer like this has ever been made by any other manufacturer. You will be delighted. King's Hall Silver, 1066, sectional plate silver teaspoons are worth $4.00 a dozen or 30c each. Every case of jars has the trade-mark on each end and also on carton of caps in each case. If two or three spoons are desired, with each dozen of Economy Jars, cut out one trade-mark for each spoon desired, and send them to us with 14c (for packing, mailing, etc.) with each trade-mark you send. You may thus obtain three of beautiful teaspoons for 42c. with every dozen of Economy Jars. Value of the three teaspoons is $1. They cost you only 42c when you send Economy Jar trade-marks. You save 58 cents every time you buy one dozen Economy Jars.

Users of Economy Jars buying extra caps may cut out trade-mark from carton of caps and send it to us with 14c in U.S. stamps to cover cost of packing, mailing, etc., and receive one of these 30c silver teaspoons free. Buy two dozen jars and get complete set of six beautiful teaspoons. Get the jars now while this free offer is still in force. Buy four dozen jars and get one dozen spoons. The spoons are worth $4.00 of the cost.

Buy Economy Jars today from your dealer and start your set of free spoons. If you dealer is out of Economy Jars be sure to write us. We will refer you to a dealer who has a stock on hand and send you a booklet of valuable recipes free.

Kerr Glass Mfg. Co.

Home Office
1112 Hoyt Street
Portland, Oregon

Branch Offices
In Principal Cities throughout the U.S.

The Motto Over the Gate

Continued from page 669

ust come to Davy: Wasn't there some onnection between this "Children's riend" and the motto over the gate- ay? Anyway he would find out; so ith earnest voice he asked: "Please, ister, are you 'I'?"

For a moment the cheery face looked uzzled, and then he asked curiously: I?"

"Yes, mister, the 'I' over the gate!"

The kind face grew serious, the eart more tender. It was one of the any moments when its Founder new that Mont-Lawn was fulfilling its ission. Then in a shady nook, all by emselves, there followed an earnest ttle talk, which left Davy with the igger thought that life was for a pur- ose, and that the boy who enlisted in e service of the King of kings was e boy who would make the man most rong and helpful to those around im.

Sunday came, serenely bright and eautiful. All the Mont-Lawn world elt it. The river flowed more peace- ully, the leaves on the trees swayed ore gently in the breeze, the green of e velvet lawns took on a more rest- ul hue. The blue sky overhead, con- rasting harmoniously with it all, ooke with the mountains in the dis- ance a benediction on the little folks ho awoke that morning to a Sunday ull of content. To many a new life as opening, for few could resist the ve and kindness all around them. ll looked forward to the delightful xercises in the Children's Temple, and one sang more heartily than Davy nd Debby the sweet hymns learned ere.

On this particular day Davy lis- ned in astonishment to the story of avid the shepherd king, a king hav- ig his name, who from being a shep- erd boy grew to be a great and pow- rful ruler. He coaxed Debby off a ttle later to talk it over. "My very wn name he had, Debby."

"Mebbe he was our great-great- randfather!" suggested Debby.

"'Tain't likely, Debby McDonald, ain't one bit likely, cause he lived undreds and thousands of years ago. wisht he was; but anyway, if he c'd e a king, mebbe I can, some day!"

"Mebbe," agreed Debby, whose eyes ere fixed longingly on a group of ildren coming towards them. There as more real enjoyment for her just ow in the companionship of girls of er own age than in discussing the robability of Davy's being a king. nd yet Debby was finding ideals too, nd Davy was foremost in the good mes that each day offered through e week that followed.

Never-to-be-forgotten days, in each f which were three meals in the big ining pavilion. Never in their re- membrance had Davy and Debby seen tasted "such beyewtiful yellow ilk," so they said. Never had they reamed of such a world as they looked pon from morning till night, or reathed such an atmosphere of kind- ess, care, and plenty. Small wonder at their young hearts were full of egrets when the day came to leave it ll behind. What a big black cloud of moke there was over the city, as they eared New York! How hot and tired e streets looked, especially the one which was the room they called ome! Yet it was home, and there as mother and baby.

Besides, the home-coming was so ifferent. There was Mont-Lawn be- ind it, possibly Mont-Lawn ahead of , and Mont-Lawn always to talk bout. It was an ever-present joy. hen every Sunday after this would e different from other days, for they ad promised to spend a part of each here they would sing the hymns they ad learned, and also hear more ories from the Bible. They were go- g to Sunday School. Altogether the utlook was entirely changed, for with it all, Davy found work to do. His Sunday School teacher kept a little store a few blocks away, and would find Davy a great help, she said.

"Muvver," said Davy earnestly, when at the end of a week he brought home two dollars, besides having eaten a good dinner every day: "D'you think I'll ever be like him?"

"You can try, Davy, and trying's worth a good deal." Davy's mother knew about whom he was talking.

"I am tryin', muvver, and he said boys that tried always got there. Anyway, muvver, I b'lieve I'd rather be like him than be a king. Wouldn't you?"

"Yes, Davy. Kings are rich and wonderful, but they don't get down near to boys the way he does. Yes, I'd rather you'd be like him."

Davy was satisfied. The shepherd-boy king had made a deep impression, but he who loved little children and did so much to help them had made a greater; so Davy determined he would do all he could to "get there," and the two dollars were one more step up the ladder. At least it would buy milk and medicine for the sick baby.

. . .

Weeks lengthened into months, and months almost to another year—a year full of events for the little family in the tenement room. Baby, so kindly tended by mother, Davy and Debby, had been graciously taken by the Good Shepherd into the heavenly fold; but the heavenly home Davy and Debby had learned to know at Mont-Lawn grew suddenly nearer, and more their own.

Kind friends lent their aid, and later found for Mrs. McDonald sewing that would pay better. Thus it came to pass that early spring found the little family in a less crowded neighborhood, with three rooms all their own. Davy, now almost ten years old, was justly proud of this new home, for it was partly his own making, through his small earnings, and in it he foresaw a still better one some day. The little fellow was sticking fast to his determination to be in every sense a copy of the "I" over the gate. But alas! in the midst of their simple happiness, and all his hopes, came the news that he who loved little children had been called up higher. At first this was to Davy and Debby too crushing, too dreadful to be true. Would they never see his kind face again? Never hear his cheery voice so helpful? "Muvver, why did God take him?" was Davy's piteous cry. "Muvver, didn't we want him m st?"

"Seems so, Davy; seems as if he was just wanted everywhere; but 'tisn't for me to say."

Mrs. McDonald's voice was unsteady, for because of that noble life, her children, and, through them, she, had been lifted out of misery and almost despair, into comparative comfort. But she was slowly learning the lesson of trust, and so she added: "God knows best, anyway."

"Yes, muvver, but I was tryin' to be like him, and now he can't never tell me how any more."

There was no answer to this, for Davy's mother, like many other mothers, couldn't see how their children could possibly spare the founder of Mont-Lawn. Would there be any Mont-Lawn, anyway? Davy and Debby were afraid not, but with July came another invitation for them to spend ten days there, and once more they enjoyed the trip to the Home; once more Davy read over the gate "I love God and little children"; once more they shared the privileges and pleasures of the Children's Paradise, which had lost none of its natural charm. Trees and grass were quite as green and restful, the river flowed on as peacefully, the mountains were even grander and more majestic.

Continued on page 673

Reliable Gold-Filled

We show here a staple and popular style of watch case: it is known as an "engine-turned" design. Note the depth of the engraving. This is done with a diamond-pointed tool on machines costing three to four thousand dollars apiece. The deep, sharp, clear-cut work is possible because of the thickness of the gold.

The important thing for you to remember is that on ordinary filled cases the surface of gold is so thin that the design is not diamond-cut at all—it is merely burnished in. It soon wears smooth and the base metal shows through. But with Crescent or Jas. Boss gold-filled cases this work is done exactly as on our Keystone solid gold cases.

The marks shown at the top of this page insure absolute integrity in bullion value, in assay, and in the construction of your watch case. They are standard with the fine jewelry trade, and have been for fifty years.

The Keystone Watch Case Co.
Established 1853
Philadelphia

Ideal Folding BATH TUB
Pat. Pending
For houses without tubs, campers, sportsmen, cold water flats. Use in any room. Light, lasts years. Write for Low introductory offer.
N. O. Y. BATH MFG. CO.
103 Chambers St., N. Y.

Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

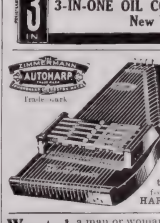
A good oil lamp needs a good chimney. A bad oil lamp needs it more.

Both need a Macbeth "Pearl Glass" lamp-chimney.

My lamp-chimneys establish an even draft on both sides of the flame — make the most of the light. I make a chimney to fit every style and size of lamp and burner.

Send for my free Index and find out what chimney to get for your lamp.

MACBETH
Macbeth-Evans Glass Co. Pittsburgh
CHICAGO: 178 East Lake Street
PHILADELPHIA: 42 South Eighth Street
NEW YORK: 19 West 30th Street



CLEAN-POLISH

3-IN-ONE oil immediately removes stains, spots and scars from piano cases and all fine furniture. It restores the original lustre and a bright lasting finish. Just a gentle rub with a rag moistened with 3-IN-ONE and any varnished or veneered surface will shine like new. Contains no grease or acid to soil or injure; has no disagreeable varnish odor. Try it at our expense.

FREE Write at once. Give name of your dealer. Get a sample bottle and "the new way" to polish pianos absolutely free. Library slip packed with every bottle.
3-IN-ONE OIL CO., 54 Broadway, New York City

Buy the Original
ZIMMERMANN "AUTOHARP"

"The Nation's Favorite" None genuine without our trade mark. Autoharp. A musical instrument adapted to all classes. Mail music. Sold direct from us. Easy to play. Easy to Buy." Send for Free catalog. THE PHONO-HARP CO., East Boston, Mass.

Wanted a man or woman to act as our information reporter. All or spare time. No experience necessary. Opportunity to earn big money. Nothing to sell. Send stamp for particulars. SALES ASSOCIATION, 661 Association Building, Indianapolis, Ind.

THE ATONEMENT*

Sunday School Lesson by Dr. and Mrs. Wilbur F. Crafts

THE fifty-third chapter of Isaiah is probably the grandest chapter in the Bible, because it so fully sets forth the atoning Saviour. It is the story of the mental crucifixion of Christ: of how he bore our griefs and carried our sorrows; how he was stricken, smitten and afflicted. Verily it was no easy matter for him to suffer for the sins of the whole world! Because of this chapter and the other references to Christ, Isaiah the writer was called by the old fathers of the Church "the evangelist." Among the prophets he has a place all his own. His wonderful sayings have staggered men, and some have said very unwise things in trying to account for him. Let us not take man's words as a commentary upon this fifty-third chapter, but rather let us consider what the Bible has to say about it.

In Acts 8: 26-38 we may read a wonderful story showing the power of this chapter. In short, by means of it the Gospel was first introduced into Africa. The story is as follows: The treasurer of Queen Candace of Ethiopia had made a journey of one thousand miles or more to the city of Jerusalem in search of truth. He learned something, but not all he wanted to know, and before starting on his return home, he purchased a book, even the prophecy of Isaiah. Being deeply interested, and a studious man, he opened the book, and read as he journeyed along in his almost royal chariot. God looked down from heaven and saw him; not only saw what he was doing, but what he was thinking—that he was indeed a seeker after truth, and that he was somewhat puzzled as he was reading this very fifty-third chapter. And God knew where to find a man who could be a helper for him. It was Philip, who had gone to Samaria to preach the Gospel. God spoke to Philip, telling him to go down to the road in which the treasurer would pass. And Philip ran to do God's bidding, and came so near to the chariot that he could hear the words of the Ethiopian. He heard him reading aloud this fifty-third chapter. And Philip asked: "Do you understand what you are reading?" He said he could not understand it unless some man should help him, and he invited Philip to come and sit beside him in the chariot. Then they read together about the servant of God, who should be led as a lamb to the slaughter (Isa. 53: 7). "Whom does the prophet mean by this?" asked the treasurer. Then Philip told him all about Jesus. At once he became a follower of Jesus, and wanted Philip to baptize him, which Philip did, because there was a river near by. Afterward Philip did not get into the chariot again, for God had another place for him to go, and the treasurer rode on in his chariot to his far-away home. I am sure he must have read about Jesus over and over again, and also all of the other words of Isaiah. All of this happened more than seven hundred years after Isaiah had written the book, and now it is more than two thousand six hundred years ago, and still people in every part of the world are reading Isaiah's wonderful words about Jesus and learning to be Christ's followers.

Once I heard a gentleman, who had been a bishop in Africa—the country whence that treasurer came—preach about this chapter. He said he had preached in Africa from this fifty-third chapter of Isaiah oftener than from any other part of the Bible; and that he always told the story of the queen's treasurer. There is nothing more in the Bible about the treasurer, but there are legends (stories which may be true) about how he told about Jesus himself after he returned home, and that more than a thousand people became the followers of Christ.

The Measurements of the Cross

In Isaiah's Gospel, as in the New Testament, the central pre-eminent fact is the Messiah's atoning death. Artists speak of Van Dyck's "Crucifixion," and Rubens' "Crucifixion." Both are wondrous pictures, but Isaiah's crucifixion—the word picture in the fifty-third chapter—is grandest of all. Not even John or Paul in the Bible books they have written set forth the atoning significance of the cross so fully in any one chapter.

What is the breadth of Christ's cross? It is as broad as the whole world; for he died for the whole world, as it is written, "He is the propitiation, not for our sins only, but for the sins of the whole world." And that is the breadth of Christ's cross.

What is the length of Christ's cross? The length thereof, says an old Father, signifies the time during which its virtues will last. How long then is the cross of Christ? Long enough to last through all time. As long as there is a sinner to be saved—as long as there is ignorance, sorrow, pain, death, or anything else which is contrary to God and hurtful to man in the universe of God—so long will Christ's cross last.

"As high as the highest heaven and the throne of God, and the bosom of the Father. When Christ died on the cross, heaven came down to earth, and earth ascended into heaven. And when he arose from the dead, he sealed the virtue of his death forever."—Charles Kingsley.

He Bore the Sins of Many

No intelligent person claims that guilt is transferred from the guilty to the innocent, or that punishment in the strict sense of the word is inflicted on any innocent person. But it is a matter of everyday occurrence that innocent persons voluntarily suffer in place of the guilty, and that this often softens the offender's heart, and maintains the honor of the law at the same time. It is an historical fact that the son of one of the Seleucidæ, king of Antioch, the prince royal, broke a law of the realm, the penalty of which was that the culprit's eyes should be put out. But the king's heart yearned for his son. The king could not bear to think of his own son as groping his way in total darkness. But what could he do? If he should say: "I cannot punish my son. I must remit the penalty, and let him go free," his subjects, from the nobles down to the meanest slaves, would have said: "Fie! Oh! for shame!" But the just king, to maintain the majesty of the law and the righteous administration of government, and yet exercise mercy to his rebellious son, submitted to have one of his own eyes put out, and thus saved one eye of his son. No doubt every subject said afterward: "Oh, what a dreadful thing it is to sin against the government! What a righteous sovereign! What a gracious father!" But the greater Sovereign, for our salvation from the results of disobedience to God's law, laid upon him who was dearer than his right eye—his only begotten Son—the iniquity of us all.

Still it is hard to understand how Jesus Christ could bear the accursed load and set us free. Perhaps the following incident will help to make it plain to us. There was a dissolute young man in the army in Russia. His father had put him in there hoping that the strict discipline would make a man of him. But he went on gambling and drinking, even worse than before. Finally, he had to meet his debts or go to jail. One night, just before going

Continued on page 673

*The International Sunday School Lesson for July 9, 1911. The Suffering Servant of Jehovah. Isa. 52: 13-53: 12. GOLDEN TEXT: "The Lord hath laid on him the iniquity of us all." Isa. 53: 6.

CHRISTIAN HERALD
Pilgrimage to the Holy Land including points in Palestine, Syria, Egypt, Dead Sea, The Jordan, Jerusalem, Jericho, Jaffa and other places connected with the life and death of our Lord.

White Star Liner Cretic leaves New York September 20, stopping en route in Italy, Greece, Turkey, Asia Minor, etc., returns Nov. 21.

For further information regarding this opportunity to visit scenes of events described in the Bible, address at once,

Christian Herald Pilgrimage Bureau
Bible House, New York City

I Was Deaf 25 Years
NOW I HEAR PLAINLY

with this artificial EAR DRUM in my ears. I never feel them—they are perfectly comfortable, and no one sees them. I will tell you the true story, how I got deaf, and how I made myself hear.

Medicated Ear Drum
Pat. July 15, 1908

ARTIFICIAL EAR DRUM COMPANY
2 ADELAIDE STREET DETROIT, MICH.

YOU CAN AFFORD to have a new Song Book in your Church or Sunday School, and one for every person when you can get "FAMILIAR SONGS OF THE GOSPEL" for $3 for 100. Words and music, 83 very best songs. Sample copy 5 Cents. E. A. K. Hackett, 100 North Wayne St., Fort Wayne, Ind.

10 CENTS A DAY buys the Pittsburgh Visible Typewriter. Made in our own factory at Kittanning, Pa. $65 now—later the price will be $100. The best typewriter in the world, far excels any $100 machine made. Entire line visible. Back spacer, tabulator, two color ribbon, universal keyboard, etc. Agents wanted everywhere. One Pittsburgh Visible Machine FREE for a very small service. No selling necessary.

To Get One FREE and to learn of our easy terms and full particulars regarding this unprecedented offer, say to us in a letter, "Mail your FREE OFFER."

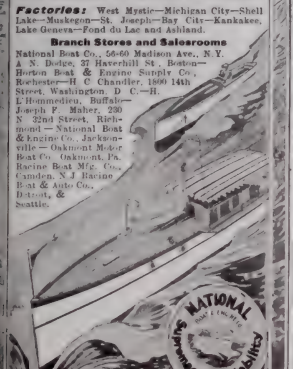
THE PITTSBURGH VISIBLE TYPEWRITER COMPANY
Dept. 30, Union Bank Building. Established 20 Years. PITTSBURGH, PA.

We Cover the Entire Field of Motor Boat Building

The National Boat & Engine Company is a combination of ten great boat manufacturing enterprises—to enable them to conduct their business better and more economically; to concentrate the ability and experience of each on the problem of the whole and thereby give the buying public a better and more standardized product at less cost

It was effected to keep pace with the enormous demand for more efficient, more dependable motor boats, and has increased our manufacturing facilities to such an extent that we turn out anything and everything in the way of motor craft—all built to one high standard and sold under one broad guarantee—cruisers, launches, row-boats, canoes, speed boats, palatial yachts, everything. The Government recognizes our superior facilities and economical methods and we are executing at the present time Government contracts for light-ships, light-house tenders, tugs, life-boats, etc.

The products of the individual plants of the National Boat and Engine Co., have always been the leaders in their respective lines and always the best of boat building experience. NOW you get the output of all plants standardized and perfected to a higher degree than ever before, and at much less cost.



Complete lines of motor boats, engines and accessories are on exhibition in our salesrooms. There, the man of moderate means can get a boat as low in price as $20, while the man of wealth can select his high-powered speed boat or palatial yacht. Write for information and specifications regarding any particular model you are interested in.

National Boat & Engine Co.
1212 Michigan Ave., Dept. M, Chicago.

Factories: West Mystic—Michigan City—Shell Lake—Muskegon—St. Joseph—Bay City—Kankakee, Lake Geneva—Fond du Lac and Ashland.

Branch Stores and Salesrooms

National Boat Co., 56-60 Madison Ave., N.Y.
A. N. Dodge, 37 Haverhill St., Boston—
Horton Boat & Engine Supply Co., Rochester—H. C. Chandler, 1800 14th Street, Washington, D. C.—H. L. Hommedieu, Buffalo—
Joseph P. Maher, 230 N. 22nd Street, Richmond—National Boat & Engine Co., Jacksonville—Oakmont Motor Boat Co., Oakmont, Pa.
Racine Boat Mfg. Co., Camden, N. J. Racine Boat & Auto Co., Detroit, & Seattle.

"DON'T SHOUT"

"I hear you. I can hear now as well as anybody. How?" Oh, something new—The MORLEY PHONE. I've a pair in my ears now, but they are invisible. I would not know I had them in, myself, only that I hear all right."

The MORLEY PHONE for the DEAF

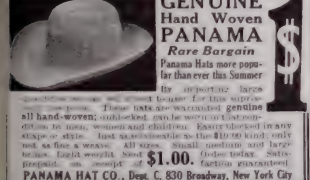
makes low sounds and whispers plainly heard. Invisible, comfortable. Anyone can adjust it. Over One Hundred Thousand Sold. Write for booklet and testimonials

Weightless and harmless. THE MORLEY CO., Dept. 754, Perry Building, Philadelphia



LASTING MEMORIALS

Over $90,000 worth of White Bronze memorials sold to readers of the Christian Herald. It is as enduring as the pyramids. Marble and granite gets moss-grown, chips, crumbles and decays. White Bronze is more artistic and less expensive. Write for FREE illustrations and prices. State approximate cost desired. Distance no obstacle, we deliver anywhere.

Good Agents Wanted—Liberal Pay.

THE MONUMENTAL BRONZE CO.
355-E Howard Ave., Bridgeport, Conn.

GENUINE Hand Woven PANAMA

Rare Bargain

Panama Hats more popular than ever this Summer

By importing large quantities direct to us we are able to offer you superior genuine all hand-woven, unblocked, can be worn or folded any style or size. Just as serviceable as the $10.00 kind, only not as fine a weave. All sizes. Small, medium and large inches. Light weight. Send $1.00. Order today. Satisfaction guaranteed. Parcels post prepaid on receipt of $1.00. Factory guaranteed

PANAMA HAT CO., Dept. C, 830 Broadway, New York City

Sunday School Lesson

Continued from page 672

to bed, he took a piece of paper and wrote down on it all of his debts. He wept as he looked at the large sum, and he wrote under it: "Who is to pay this great debt?" Then he fell asleep at his desk. That night the Czar passed through the barracks, and finding the young officer's lamp burning, took up the piece of paper and read it. He wrote under it "Nicholas," and then passed on. When the young man awoke, what was his surprise to find the signature of the Czar of all the Russias there. "What can it mean?" he said. "Who put it there?" He thought it too good to be true. But early in the morning the money came, and the debt was paid.

Justice requires that our debt of sin shall be paid, but justice is satisfied when Another, with his and our consent, pays the penalty. So the prophet Isaiah wrote with God's guiding hand: "The Lord hath laid on him the iniquity of us all." The doctrine of substitution as expressed in the Golden Text has special reference to the "scapegoat" in the Mosaic law. On the Day of Atonement, the high priest, having first by offerings purified himself, took two kids of the goats, and killed one as a sin offering to bear the punishment for the sins of the people as their substitute, a typical representation of Christ. This indicated justification, the people's acquittal from guilt by their representative. Then the removal of the guilt and love of sin was pictured when the high priest laid his hands upon the head of the living goat to represent the laying on of all the people's iniquities upon him, and sent him out into the uninhabited wilderness, "taking away their sins." So of Christ: On Calvary "the Lord laid upon him the iniquity of us all," and as our scapegoat he bore our sins into the wilderness of the tomb, and of course left them buried there, for he could not rise and ascend with sin upon him.

"As far as the east is from the west, so far hath he removed our transgressions from us."

A Hint for Teachers and Parents of Young Children

It is sometimes supposed that children under eight years of age cannot understand the Atonement, and so they are taught they "must be good to get to heaven." That is false doctrine that will be hard for them to unlearn by and by, and unlearn they must. Better teach the children from the first to say that they will reach heaven because Jesus is so good, and later they can be taught that Jesus forgives them and makes them good. Teach them that no one without Jesus can ever be good enough to enter heaven. The cross in churches and worn so frequently as an ornament prepares the way for the children to be early taught its significance.

The Motto Over the Gate

Continued from page 671

Just as before was there "beyewtiful yellow milk and butter," with other good things to satisfy hungry boys and girls at the dining pavilion, snowy white beds in the cottages, and fun at the out-door gymnasium. How could it be all so attractive when he who planned it was gone?

This question puzzled Davy somewhat, for he had expected the shadow in his life would spread over everything there. But that would not be the wish of the "Children's Friend," as Davy learned again and again those days. If he could not be with the children, so much more need for them to do more to make the children's summer Home a joy. He was not lost, he was only just over the river, and so long as Mont-Lawn should be, there would rest upon it the inspiration of his love for neglected little ones, and effort to give them a chance.

Thus it came to pass that after ten days of perfect happiness Davy returned home with a stronger determination than ever to be an exact copy of "the 'I' over the gate," because to love God and serve him faithfully not only made men most useful and helpful to others while they lived, but their influence lasted on and on when their lives on earth were ended.

This was the biggest thought so far impressed on his busy little brain. "What is inflooence, muvver?" he asked, as they were talking over the lovely visit the first evening he and Debby arrived home.

"Inflooence, Davy? Why—why—you do ask such strange questions. Why, it's a good thing to have, Davy."

"Yes, muvver, but what is it? I wisht I knew."

"Well, Davy," she said slowly, "it's a great thing. Sometimes it's good, and sometimes it's bad, 'cause you see what you do makes somebody else do the same, and that's your inflooence. That isn't all, either; I guess you'll have to ask somebody that can 'xplain it better. Anyway it's a good thing to have if it is good."

"Yes, muvver, 'twas the good kind he had, they said so."

There was a volume in Davy's answer. Unwritten most of it is, but the good influence at Mont-Lawn is going on just the same, uplifting boys and girls and homes. May it never end.

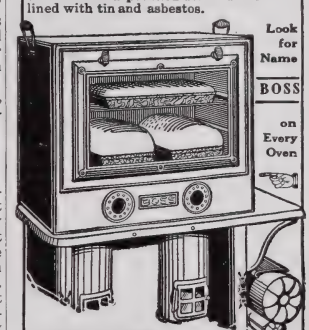
The Power of Advertising

IT HAS often been said that the advertising pages of the modern magazine are as interesting as the editorial pages. Certainly they seem to carry more conviction at times than the mere reading matter, if we are to judge by a recent instance which came to notice in New York.

One of the great enterprises in that city was considered to be of such public interest that advertising was not necessary. The owners reasoned that the newspapers would take sufficient notice of their enterprise, simply as a matter of news. Among other things it was desired to attract to this enterprise a number of minor business enterprises, the whole to be grouped together in one community. The newspapers were generous with free space, and yet these minor enterprises were not attracted, and it was not until a direct appeal was made through the advertising columns of the newspapers that the minor businesses were attracted, and the general enterprise became a success.

After all, there is something in advertising, beyond a mere heralding of the merits of merchandise. The modern advertiser is a serious man of business, who aims not only to carry honest conviction through his advertisements, but to warrant the continuance of faith in his projects by his attitude of continued honesty towards his customer.

Whenever any of our subscribers is defrauded by an advertiser in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD we will make good the claim, provided that the subscriber, who must be of record, has mentioned THE CHRISTIAN HERALD in writing to the advertiser, and provided the claim is made to us within two months of the date of the appearance of the advertisement. This guarantee does not apply to investment advertisements.



USE A PORTABLE

BOSS OVEN

With Patented GLASS DOOR

on your stove or range, either oil, gasoline, acetylene, alcohol or gas.

No more spoiled bakings or worry—No more wasted heat—No more jarring or chilling of oven. Housewives can see their baking without opening door. Economy and convenience both guaranteed in the BOSS—a polished blued steel oven lined with tin and asbestos.

Look for Name BOSS on Every Oven

GLASS in DOOR

is guaranteed not to break from heat because it is secured by our patented yielding pressure retaining strips, which permit expansion and contraction. Glass door fits snugly in one-piece beaded front, and is held tightly in place with two turnbuckles, preventing escape of heat.

Baking qualities and ventilation superior to any other oven or range. All heat goes right into the open bottom, and is perfectly distributed to all parts of the oven by means of our patented Heat Deflector. Flame always visible through small mica windows. With the BOSS a baking costs less than a cent. It will many times over pay for itself in saved bakings to say nothing of saved fuel.

Ask YOUR Dealer to show you the BOSS Glass Door Oven. INSIST upon seeing the name "BOSS" stamped in the front of Oven. Then you know that it is genuine and guaranteed.

FREE. Our valuable Recipe Book, containing many cookery helps and full description of BOSS Ovens sent FREE on receipt of postal, plainly written, giving your own and your dealer's names and addresses.

THE HUENEFELD CO. 2712 Spring Grove Ave. Cincinnati, O

Midsummer Specials

YOU can WEAR the pretty things you want in a day or two—if you write NOW.

This Waist $1.25

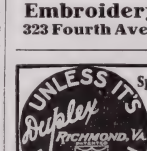
No. 801

All-over Swiss Embroidery front and back. A waist of splendid style and durability. We pay postage or express everywhere.



An extra waist or two, a skirt or wash dress to provide variety or to tide over until wash-day, will increase your comfort, and this SPECIAL CATALOG is just the easiest and cheapest way to get the right things quickly.

This Catalogue shows the latest Embroidered Waists, Skirts and Dresses; also the Imported Swiss Embroideries by the yard in hundreds of designs, Latest Neckwear Novelties, Embroidered Handkerchiefs, and many other dainty things to perfect your summer costumes.

Here is a wealth of choice not offered at even the biggest stores, and at prices so low you cannot match them.

Think over the little things you really need. No other way is so easy to get them. A post card brings you this absorbing book. Sit on the piazza and select just to your taste. No novel will interest you more keenly than the beautiful illustrations and wonderful prices in this timely Mid-Summer Specials Catalog. Send for it now.

Embroidery Specialty Co.
323 Fourth Avenue, New York City

Specify "Duplex-Richmond"

99 times out of 1000 when you hear the

Duplex Envelope System of Church Collections

commended, reference is made to the original 898-tem published solely by DUPLEX—Richmond, Va.

Costs little, no plumbing, little water. Weighs 15 pounds, folds into small roll. Fastidiously far better than tin tubs. Lasts for years. Write for special agents offer and description. ROBINSON BATH CABINET CO., 691 Jefferson Ave., Toledo, O.

New York, New York City Avenue A, 63d and 64th Sts.

Have You Chosen a Profession?

There are Opportunities in Medicine, especially Homeopathic Medicine. Send for Catalogue O. New York Homeopathic Medical College and Flower Hospital. Royal S. Copeland, A. M., M. D., Dean.

Many Peace Circles Forming

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD sends greetings to the Peace Circles already formed in response to the widespread demand for a general organization throughout the civilized world. Hundreds of Circles are now forming as the result of our published appeal.

England, Germany, France, Italy, Austria, Switzerland, Scandinavia, Denmark, Holland and Canada have formed within themselves vast and influential associations whose object is to bring the Peace movement directly into the hearts and homes of the people, and gradually, through the commanding pressure of public opinion, to move all classes of governments to submit their differences in the future to an International Court of Justice and Arbitration.

Clearly we are no longer before the closed gates of the new Era of Peace. The gates are wide open for us, and the throngs are pouring through.

Peace has come to stay, but there is a vast and important work to be done—the work of individuals; for while, beyond peradventure of doubt, the statesmen are already born who will formulate public opinion into the definite laws that shall relegate warfare into the limbo of savagery and idols, the Peace Spirit, finding its way into the hearts of the people whose opinions make our laws, and whose present mission it is to undo the false standards of a world armed against itself, is the great incentive of the thinking world to-day.

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD'S significant entrance into this greatest of all wars, the war against war, is in order to bring the Peace Movement, with all of its interests, its advantages, its blessings, within the range of each and every individual whom it can reach and influence.

Organize for Peace

Necessarily, the greater part of the first meeting must be devoted to the work of organization. For the convenience of those co-operating with us in this patriotic work, full instructions for organization will be sent free, on application by letter or postal. These instructions contain all the necessary information regarding temporary and permanent organization, adoption of Constitution and By-laws, duties of the various officers, the order of business for the conduct of the regular semi-monthly meetings, and special suggestions for concerts, receptions, stereopticon entertainments, appropriate historic tableaux, musical gatherings, monologues, recitations, etc., besides suggestions as to special Red-Letter Day programmes.

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD Peace League stands primarily for all that makes for good citizenship. Therefore a wide variety of topics will come within the range of its activities. Semi-monthly topics for all Circles alike will be regularly announced in these columns. All necessary literature, pamphlets, plans for entertainments and outlines of special features suited to the meetings, will be supplied to the secretaries without charge.

God works through his people, and it is the privilege of any one to organize a Peace Circle in his own village or town or in his church or home circle, and through its instrumentality to advocate Peace—Peace among the nations, Peace in our own land, Peace in our communities, and over and above all else, to instil into the hearts of young people the principles and truths of the heaven-born message, "PEACE ON EARTH, GOOD WILL TO MEN."

In extending this cordial invitation to our readers to organize Peace Circles we are prepared to heartily co-operate with you in your effort. You have only to send your own name and address and the names and addresses of those in your vicinity who you believe will be interested to our Secretary.

Appropriate and attractive plans and suggestions will immediately be forwarded to you; your Circle, no matter how small, will be registered in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD Peace League, and entitled to all the privileges and prerogatives of membership in the great movement which is now rapidly organizing throughout the country, and which commands the heartiest co-operative approval of the leading Peace advocates in our nation.

This first article being necessarily explanatory, the next article (which will be published on July 12) will inaugurate the regular working programme.

We suggest that all of our readers and their friends who are interested, should prepare to organize a Peace Circle without delay. Write us a postal for instructions and then send us all the facts concerning your organization, so that you may be in line when the work begins.

Address, "Secretary, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD Peace League," Bible House, New York City.

A Well-known Philanthropist Dead

MARY OGDEN AVERY, wife of the late Samuel Putnam Avery, of New York, passed away peacefully on April 29, after three days' illness of pneumonia, at her late residence, Woodland Street, Hartford, Conn. Mrs. Avery had long been identified with the interests of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, contributing generously to all of its many charities. Besides endowing a bed ($500) at Mont-Lawn, in memory of a loved child, Mrs. Avery had also endowed five other free beds in city hospitals. Mrs. Avery was gentle, refined, and lovable; an earnest Christian, cheerful under affliction, patient during her long years of invalidism, an inspiration to all who knew her. Her beautiful penmanship and encouraging letters found their way into many homes. She was a member of the Presbyterian Church for over sixty years, but her means helped the sick and homeless, and the ignorant, without regard to color or creed. Her charities could be numbered by hundreds.

BONDS

Secured by Selected

NEW YORK REAL ESTATE

Yield 6% Net Annually.

(Payable Semi-Annually)

An issue selected by careful investors, who for many years have recognized their unsurpassed combination of

SECURITY and INCOME

SEND FOR FREE BOOKLET 14.

15 YEARS' RESULTS:

Assets over $3,000,000
Surplus nearly . . . $1,000,000
Repaid Investors, over $1,000,000

New York Realty Owners

489 FIFTH AVENUE NEW YORK

BABY LAX

THE ONLY LAXATIVE PERFECT FOR BABIES OR CHILDREN

SURE, SAFE, MILD, PLEASANT. A doctor's formula perfected after years of study of babies needs. Delighted mothers praise it. Try it. Sent postpaid 25c. Address Dept. C THE BABYLAX CO., Franklin, Pa.

This American Flag—FREE

WOULDN'T you like to own a large American Flag—like the one shown in the illustration on this page of The Christian Herald—if you could get it without paying one cent?

Compare Size of Flag With Height of Children

Not a little hand flag, understand, but a man-size "Old Glory," 6 feet long by 4 feet wide—bigger than the top of your dining-room table.

Not a pitiful wisp of color, mind you, but real red, white and blue, right from the factory of the Government flag-maker. A stanch bit of fabric that will not run or shrink in wet weather.

Here is an opportunity to keep faith with your patriotism, for you will have use for a flag, not only on every holiday for many years to come, but you can also use it constantly for decorative purposes in public and private sociables, in the schoolhouse, in the church and in the home. Imagine being able to celebrate Fourth of July with a flag as big as this! Wouldn't it be better than firecrackers for the children? You may have it without paying one cent.

THIS OFFER IS LIMITED

We have on hand but a limited number of these flags. They are going fast and we would advise you to Act at Once—Before it is Too Late.

How?

At this time of the year The Christian Herald usually puts forth an extraordinary effort to increase the number of members of the great Christian Herald Family. We can only do this with the help of the present members. You are one of these and we know you will help us. But we have no right to accept your good offices for nothing, so we make the following proposition:

The regular annual subscription price of The Christian Herald, as you know, is $1.50. Isn't there some one among your relatives, friends or acquaintances who you know would be benefited by reading The Christian Herald? You can probably think of several in a few minutes, and it would be comparatively easy for you to get them to subscribe for a short trial period, say eight months.

Get one of your friends to subscribe for The Christian Herald for eight months; send us $1.00 for this subscription, and The Christian Herald will be mailed to any address in the United States or Canada, and in return for your trouble we will send, absolutely without cost to you, this beautiful American Flag.

And in addition to this we will also send you a life-size fac-simile of the Declaration of Independence, 26x31 inches, an exact duplicate in every way of the priceless document which hangs framed on the walls of the old State House in Philadelphia. This document should be in every patriotic home, and it may be in yours, free of charge, if you take advantage of our offer.

Don't Miss This Offer!

Simply get a friend to take The Christian Herald for eight months, send us $1.00, and we will mail to you, postpaid, the large American Flag (4x6 feet) and the Declaration of Independence, without cost to you. Address: THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, 615 Bible House, New York City.

Get One NOW for the Fourth of July

Young People's Societies

David *

IT IS conjectured by historians that one cause of the noble breadth of David's mind and sympathies was his distant Moabitish origin, through his ancestress Ruth. Her memory was doubtless greatly venerated in his family. He must have been, on account of his imaginative and poetic temperament, especially impressed with her romantic story and lovely personality, as preserved in the family traditions. Therefore it is not strange that when in peril he fled to Moab, and gave his aged parents into the care of its king.

One is reminded of the history of Joseph by that of David. Both were younger than most of their brethren, and both were so exceedingly beautiful, gifted, and dear to their parents that jealousy broke out in their families. David's brothers seemed to expend little affection upon him, and he naturally was not especially fond of them; though the children of his sisters Zeruiah and Abigail seemed to be ever dear to him. They were apparently of about his own age, and though not noted for the refinement and delicacy of feeling which marked David, were men of great sagacity and force.

David's initial appearance in the record fixes our interest at once. His father, when called upon to produce his sons for the inspection of Samuel, does not at first think it worth while to call the little boy who is away tending the sheep. But Samuel demands, "Are these all thy children?" and David is sent for.

We can imagine something of his appearance—a half-grown boy, "ruddy" of countenance and with bright eyes and flowing auburn hair. We can picture him also, as in the description in Ps. 18: "Swift and active as a wild gazelle, his feet like hart's feet, and his arms strong enough to break a bow of steel."

To these extraordinary gifts, he must, even at this early age, have added something of musical accomplishment. His noble and generous nature must also have revealed itself. It shone in many of his later acts, but especially in the incident of the cup of water (II. Sam. 23: 15-17).

The greatest fame of this great man centres, perhaps, about that remarkable incident of his boyhood, the killing of Goliath, with that childish implement, a sling. Psalm 144 is called the "Psalm against Goliath." But there is also in the Septuagint, at the end of the Psalter, a psalm which, though probably, as Dr. Strong says, a mere adaptation from the history, well sums up this period of David's life: "I was small among my brethren, and the youngest in my father's house. I was feeding my father's sheep. My hands made a harp, and my fingers fitted a psaltery. And who shall tell it to my Lord? He is the Lord. He heareth. He sent his messenger and took me from my father's flocks, and anointed me with the oil of his anointing. My brethren were beautiful and tall, but the Lord was not well pleased with them. I went out to meet the Philistine, and he cursed me by his idols. But I drew my own sword and beheaded him, and took away the reproach from the children of Israel."

The life of David was, perhaps, the most sensational in all history. Possessed of varied and brilliant talents; brought into the full glare of publicity in early boyhood, and living in it during most of his career; tempted in extraordinary ways and yielding again and again, but always repenting and humbly begging forgiveness; he stands forever in the world's temple of fame, as a warning against sin, and at the same time a prop to our faith.

* Christian Endeavor Topic for Sunday, July 9. TEXT I. Sam. 17: 32-51.

Overruling Evil for Good *

EVERY martyr to the cause of Christ has probably shared the glorious conviction of Paul, that "the things which happened to him," no matter how painful, even to the cleaving asunder of body and spirit, tended to "the furtherance of the Gospel." It has been this blessed conviction, the belief that God was using a present evil for a greater good, which has supported them through tortures unspeakable in all the ages.

The Greeks and the Latins by heroic struggles attained to a high degree of civilization. Thousands of their citizens, while those mighty empires were upbuilding, laid down their lives in order that great patriotic ends should be achieved. Through darkness, progress was made toward light. But with power came license and softness and sin. First, Greece lost her prestige. Then the mighty fabric of the Roman Empire tottered and fell.

For a while it seemed as though all progress were at an end. But through that terrible travail of Europe at last dawned light. Greece and Rome, in common with almost all the nations of antiquity, were strongholds of slavery. All of them were founded on the old principle that "he should seize who has the power—that he should keep who can."

But among the rude nations of the North, destitute though they were of the art and refinement which marked the Greeks and the Latins, had developed the spirit of freedom and the sane love of personal purity.

Kingsley, in his great work upon the Roman and the Teuton, analyzes thus this mighty movement: "It was not the mere muscle of the Teuton which enabled him to crush the decrepit and debauched slave nations. It had given him more—that purity of his. It had given him, as it may give you, gentlemen, a calm and steady brain and a free and loyal heart; the energy which springs from health; the self-respect which comes from self-restraint; and the spirit which shrinks from neither God nor man, and feels it light to die for wife and child, for people and for queen."

Thus, through the horrible ills and wrongs of slavery and its attendant evils, the great wicked empires fell. The world was dark—but as we look back over history, we can see that they fell only that liberty and a higher morality might come in.

Christ's great saying that he who would save his life must lose it, contains in a nutshell the whole philosophy of the matter. Through apparent evil to the individual or the nation, judging as man judgeth, the man or the country emerges into some crowning good.

"Instead of the sagacious maxims of self-interest," says Dr. Peabody, "there is heard to-day the call to the heroic, the self-forgetting, the larger good."

Therefore let us take new courage amid our toils and discouragements, counting all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus.

Our beloved poet, Helen Hunt Jackson, well expressed the attitude which we should take, when she wrote:

> Blindfolded and alone I wait,
> Loss seems too bitter, gain too late;
> Yet this one thing I learn to know
> Each day more surely as I go:
> That I am glad that good and ill,
> By changeless law are ordered still,
> Not as I will.

Proud of Her Flag

I wish to thank you for my flag, which came yesterday. I am very much pleased with it, and shall delight in displaying it on Memorial Day and all other days on which it can be appropriately done. M. L. B.
New Bedford, Mass.

* Topic of the Epworth League for Sunday, July 9. TEXTS: Rom. 8: 28; Phil. 1: 12, 19.

Civilization—from Signal Fire to Telephone

THE telephone gives the widest range to personal communication. Civilization has been extended by means of communication.

The measure of the progress of mankind is the difference between the signal fire of the Indian and the telephone service of to-day.

Each telephone user has a personal interest in the growth of the whole telephone system.

He is directly benefited by every extension of his own possibilities.

He is indirectly benefited by the extension of the same possibilities to others, just as he is benefited by the extension of the use of his own language.

Any increase in the number of telephones increases the usefulness of each telephone connected with this system.

The Bell System is designed to provide Universal service.

AMERICAN TELEPHONE AND TELEGRAPH COMPANY
AND ASSOCIATED COMPANIES

One Policy One System Universal Service

AGENTS! BRANDT AUTOMATIC RAZOR STROPPER

Retails at $2. Fully Guaranteed

Automatically sharpens any razor in the world, old style or safety. Every man wants one. Write for wholesale price and terms.
C. Brandt Cutlery Co., 84 W. Broadway, N.Y. City

In the Spring get close to nature by drinking that delightful beverage made from

Hires

Household Extract

whose composition is roots, bark, berries and flowers of the field. It quenches the thirst and stirs the blood to throw off all impurities. Besides, it is the most delightful of temperance drinks.

A package makes 5 gallons. Easy to make. Sold by dealers or sent by mail upon receipt of 25 cents.

THE CHARLES E. HIRES CO.
202 N. Broad St., Phila., Pa.

5% WITH THE SAFEST SECURITY 5%

WE PAY 5% on deposits and our assets are over $2,300,000. Deposits are secured by mortgages on the very best class of New York and suburban real estate. Our business is conducted conservatively in the strictest accordance with the stringent New York Banking Laws

Patrons All Over the World

Deposits with this Company represent a profitable investment, eliminating speculative features. Deposits may be withdrawn at any time, upon short notice. Earnings paid for every day and compounded semi-annually, or remitted by check, as desired.
Write for Booklet.

INDUSTRIAL SAVINGS & LOAN CO. NEW YORK CITY

Industrial Savings & Loan Co.
2 Times Bldg, B'way & 42d St., New York

MARVEL SOLDER

INSTANTLY MENDS ALL LEAKS

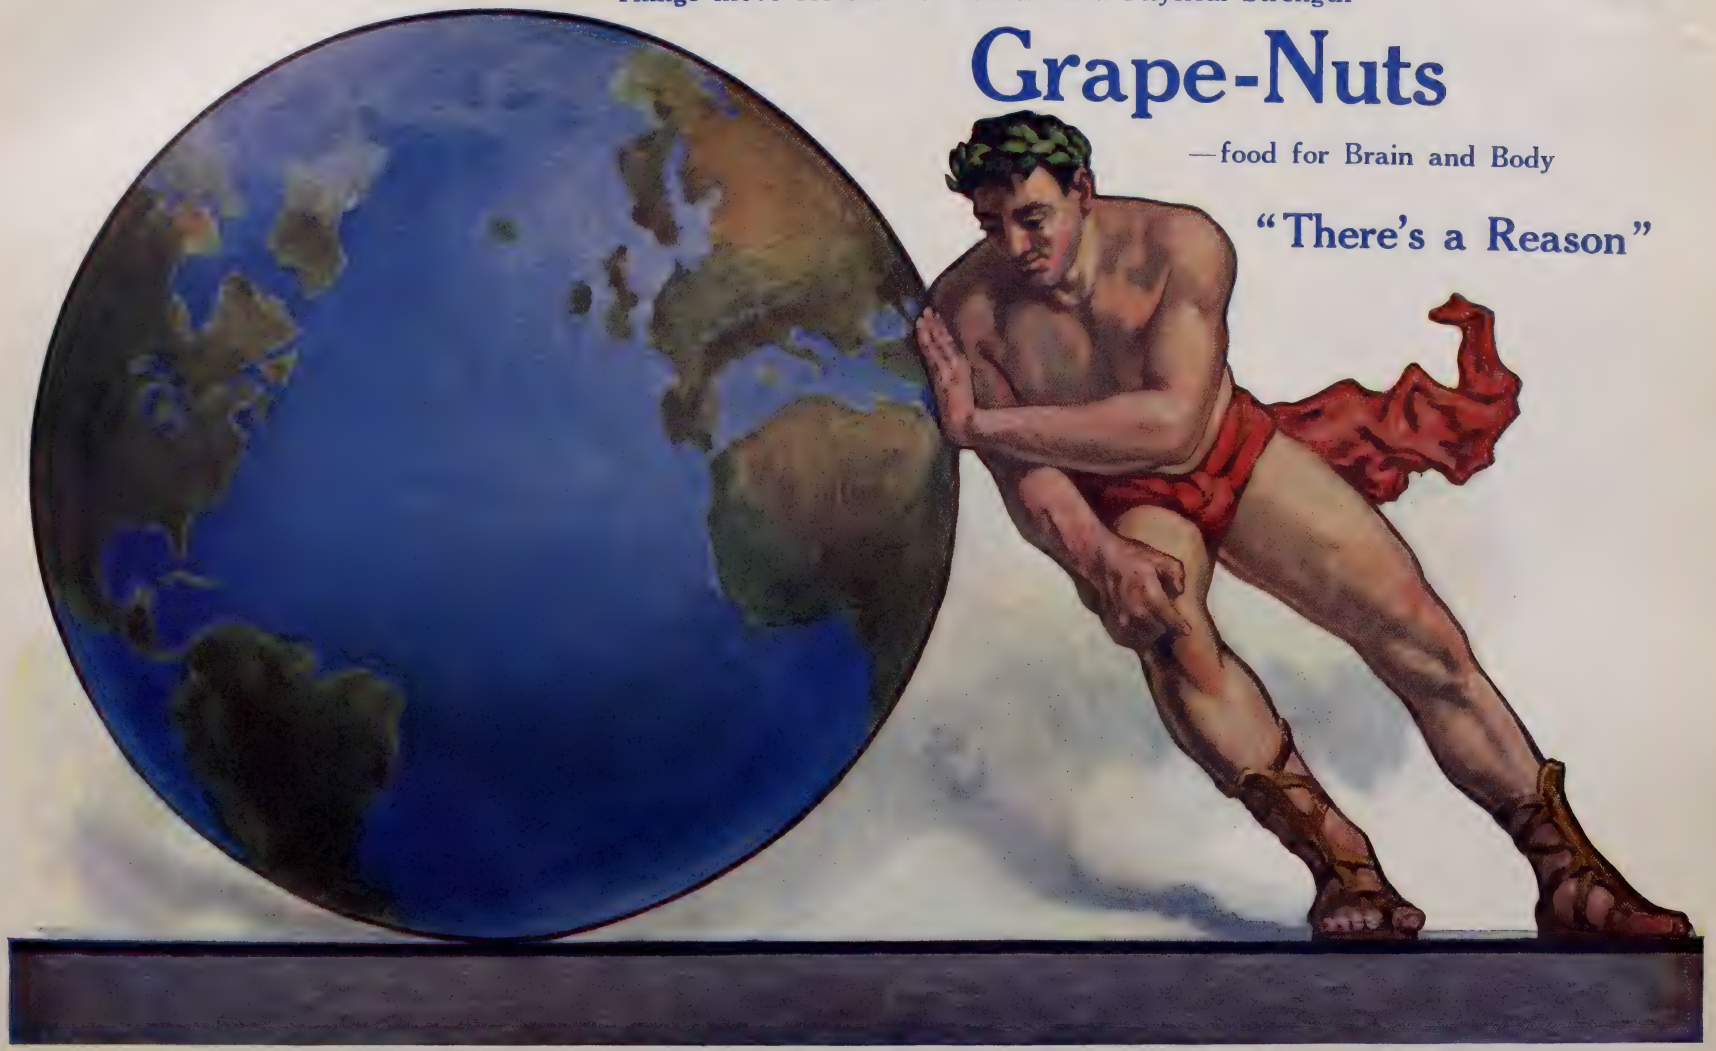
In all kinds of household utensils—enameled, tin, iron, copper, brass, etc. Solders Without Heat. Just squeeze from tube and spread over hole or crack with fingers. Hardening, it makes solid, smooth surface. Patches all mechinery. Fine for jewelers. Send 10c for trial tube. AGENTS WANTED.

MARVEL SOLDER CO.
1937 Broadway Dept. 8 New York

"RSCO" KITCHEN OUTFIT

Contains the Following 10 Useful Articles:

Meat cutter and tenderizer, cocoanut Knife, Meat fork, can and bottle Opener, measures for liquid and square cake, Cake lifter, Paring Knife, Masher, Spoon, Ice & Sharpener, Bench knife, Kitchen saw. Every article is carefully made with Warranted Balanced Handles by experienced workmen and thoroughly enameled to better resist heat, cold, moisture and corrosion. Price set complete, $2



Eastern Specialty Co., Dept E. 63 Barclay St., New York

Things move for men of Mental and Physical Strength

Grape-Nuts

—food for Brain and Body

"There's a Reason"

Christian Herald

SUBSCRIPTION, $1.50 PER ANNUM
PUBLISHED 52 TIMES A YEAR

COPYRIGHT, 1911, BY THE CHRISTIAN HERALD

NEW YORK, JULY 5, 1911

VOL. 34—NO. 27. PRICE 5 CENTS
OFFICES: BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK

OUR · MAIL · BAG

Questions and Answers

Miss Vera N., Rahway, N. J. 1. How shall I direct a package of clothing for The Children's Home? 2. What kind of clothing is most acceptable? 3. How should money be sent?

1. Care of the Matron, Children's Home, Nyack, N. Y. 2. Any clothing that children from four to twelve can wear. Many are needy and blouses, trousers, jackets, dresses, slips, shoes, stockings, hats and caps are very acceptable. 3. Contributions should be sent to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, Bible House, New York.

R. S. S., Cordell, Okla. What is the "Mizpah Benediction"?

This is found in Gen. 31:49. The word Mizpah upon rings and tokens of friendship bears this significance. Read the entire chapter to learn its origin.

C. C. D., Baltimore, Md. Kindly inform me if John the Baptist was imprisoned in the citadel near Herod's palace, and have both buildings been recently excavated?

The fortress of Machærus, in Perea, on the eastern side of Jordan, was built by Alexander Jannæus as a check to Arab marauders. It was on a lofty mountain spur, and is said to have been visible from Jerusalem. Its site was identified by Seetzen in 1806, among ruins on a rocky spur of Mount Attarus, overlooking a valley of hot springs, anciently known as Calirrhoe, where Herod went for medicinal treatment. It was a long way from Jericho. There is no doubt about its identification, but we have heard of no particularly recent excavations. John was imprisoned there.

B. Y. L., Pittsburg, Pa. Please tell me what year American missionaries first reached the shore of China and some details of it.

In 1829 the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions sent to Canton its first missionary to China, the Rev. E. C. Bridgman. Mr. Bridgman was accompanied by Dr. David Abeel, who had been sent out by the American Seamen's Friend Society, but who soon transferred his services to the American Board of Commissioners. They were received by Olyphant & Co., a New York mercantile house, and a printing press was sent out for their use by the church in New York of which Mr. Olyphant was a member. In 1833 S. Wells Williams, then in his twentieth year, was sent out to take charge of it, and it remained at Canton until 1835, when it was removed to Macao, where Mr. Williams might have the benefit of the types of the East India Company's presses.

J. B. S., Des Moines, Ia. What is the origin of the word "bugaboo"?

It is said to be derived from the old Cornish words bucca-dhu, meaning "god of darkness," who was supposed to be an evil deity whom it was necessary to propitiate by sacrifices. The name later was changed to bucca-bu, and so into the present form. It is used to describe anything terrifying in name only, though not in reality.

Mrs. M. E. S., Pittsburg, Pa. I love to read your answers to questions. I would like to have your opinion of recognition of friends in heaven. Do you think disembodied spirits will know each other there? I have lost a dear friend.

There is every reason to believe in heavenly recognition. Many passages in the Bible clearly point to it, including these: II. Sam. 12:23; Luke 16:23; Rev. 6:9, 10; I. Thes. 4:13-18; Heb. 13:17; Matt. 8:11; Eph. 3:15. These and other passages indicate the preservation of identity. We have no reason to doubt that the redeemed will know each other, that pure friendship begun on earth will there be perfected, that we shall know the saints and our own dear ones. Heaven is the Christian's fatherland, where we shall see our friends and know them.

G. H., New York, writes appropos of the reported discovery of the ark of the covenant: "The Hebrews, I believe, are quite correct in saying that it, the ark, would remain unrevealed until the coming of the Messiah. Consider what the ark was given for. Constructed of wood and gold (humanity covered over with Deity), it was a beautiful type of the Lord Jesus himself, who came as man to this earth and yet God manifest in flesh. He is to us 'the brightness of glory, the expression of his substance.' He has brought us to know the Father, the law which we could never keep (tables of stone) has been fulfilled in him. He has, by his resurrection, brought us into a new life (Aaron's rod), so that we can love and serve him, and by him we live (manna). He is the Great Antitype of what the ark was to the Jewish nation, a type of their Messiah; and, as they have rejected him, it is quite fitting that the type should be withdrawn; and I believe with the Hebrews, that it is in the safest kind of keeping until the time comes when they 'shall look upon him whom they have pierced.' It was to them his dwelling-place among his people, a constant reminder of his graciousness in selecting them for a people as the custodian of his truth. Read Rev. 11:19. If the archæologists are really looking for the ark, the sooner their attention is directed to this Scripture the better, for they will never find it under the Mosque of Omar."

Mrs. A. C. W., Williamsburg, W. Va. 1. What was Paul's father's name? 2. What was the "thorn in the flesh" of which Paul wrote? 3. Did Peary or Cook get to the Pole?

1. Although it is gathered that his father was a Pharisee belonging to a family of note among the Jews, the name is not given. 2. Some commentators believe the "thorn" was sore or weak eyes; others that it was epilepsy or hysteria. 3. If the scientific societies cannot answer this, we certainly have no means of doing so.

G. W. K., Chicago, Ill. Please explain the relationship between "love" and "fear of God," as found in the Scripture.

"Fear" (not dread, but rather awe and reverence) is the attitude of man in his sinful state toward God (see Gen. 3:10). It is associated with the workings of conscience and the knowledge of actual sin, and may be regarded as a natural and proper feeling on the part of dependent humanity toward offended Deity. Moreover, it is a safeguard against persistent transgression (see Prov. 1:7; Job 28:8; Ps. 19:9). Under the New Covenant, "fear," which makes man stand in awe of the Divine judgments, gives place to love and confidence. "Perfect love casteth out fear." The old, slavish filial fear gives way to the love of the child toward a kind Father. The New Testament completely dispels the old-time "fear" on the part of those who come under the Gospel influence. In the consecrated soul, love and trust take their proper place. (Rom. 8:15; II. Tim. 1:7; I John 4:18). Love to God and to our fellowmen is the fulfilling of the law.

N. R. V., Birmingham, Mich. 1. Please explain how admission is gained to Annapolis Naval Academy and West Point. 2. What are the five strongest denominations in the United States? 3. How many churches have the Covenanters in the United States and Scotland?

1. Each Congressional District is entitled to one appointee in the Naval Academy and one at West Point at a time. The Congressmen for the districts nowadays in many instances employ the competitive examination method to determine whom they shall recommend. The candidates for admission undergo an examination both physical and mental and must come up to a set standard. 2. In number of communicants, church organizations and wealth, the following may be taken as the order of the leading Christian denominations in the United States: Roman Catholics (accounted for by the fact that all nominally Roman Catholic families are included), Methodists, Baptists, Lutherans, Presbyterians. 3. The Covenanters as a denomination are not known in the United States. In Scotland they are usually classed with the adherents of the "Auld Kirk" or Presbyterians. We can find no statistics as to numbers.

Mrs. E. F. C., Stiles, Tex. Please explain Isa. 58, especially verses 6 to 14. Do these promises apply to Christians of to-day?

The prophet was dealing with conditions which have their counterpart to-day. He was reproving hypocrisy and declaring the promises to the true servants of God, the helpers of the oppressed the kind, the charitable, the compassionate. These promises stand good to-day to those who delight in doing the Lord's work, who reverence his Sabbath, who do his will, and who love their fellow-men. The prophet's teaching here is a reminder to the modern minister to speak boldly and spare not the guilty, if he would awaken his hearers to the conviction of their sins. Soft words in the pulpit, temporizing with sinful conditions that ought to be denounced, are an offense to God.

O. L., Waterloo, Ia. How large was the town of Nazareth at the time of Christ, and was it located on a main road?

Previous to the return of Joseph and Mary with the infant Christ, the town was an insignificant village, practically unknown to history. Nazareth is about three days' journey from Jerusalem and eighteen miles from the Sea of Galilee. It is situated among the hills which constitute the south ridges of Lebanon. In Christ's time, it was little more than an out-of-the-way hamlet, and was apparently held in contempt by the inhabitants of the surrounding country on account of its insignificance and its uncultivated people, who spoke a rude dialect.

R. A. F., Bentonville, Va. Is Armageddon past, or is it yet future? In your answers in THE MAIL BAG you are a futurist in the interpretation of Revelation. Will Mr. Carnegie's great gifts and endowments for the cause of peace, and the negotiations of Secretary Knox in bringing the nations together in the Hague federation, amount to nothing? Is it not now within the power of the great nations of the world by agreement to enforce the peace which they desire by a treaty of mutual self-defense without actual war? If you answer in the affirmative, what becomes of your future Armageddon? The prestige of England, the United States, Germany, France, and other nations that will be enlisted in the cause, would be sufficient to deter any nation from undertaking a conflict. The Hague federation would not be armed for attack, but only for defense, which is always justifiable.

It is the view of the recognized authorities on Bible exposition that Armageddon is yet to come. We take the ground, in dealing with prophecy—and especially with those questions that are commonly acknowledged to be purely speculative—that while it is a duty to search the Scriptures and to pray that we may know and understand aright, there is a very definite limit set to human knowledge in this direction (see Matt. 24:36 and Mark 13:32). The peace and arbitration movement is a distinctly hopeful sign; yet, as a German cabinet minister recently declared in Parliament, treaties would not stand a moment, where the question involved was one of national honor or territorial integrity. Still, it is the duty of every Christian not only to pray for, but to work for the coming of the Kingdom and for the peace and spiritual progress of our fellowmen in all lands. Much good will doubtless come of the peace movement; war will be minimized and brotherly love established among the nations, and we rejoice in the prospect.

C. A. C., L'Orignal. 1. On the day of Pentecost, did the apostles speak in one language and men of other languages understand them, or did they all speak the same language, as I heard one man say? 2. Explain John 10:16, "and other sheep I have, which are not of this fold."

1. The narrative in Acts, Chap. 2, is clear and circumstantial. The speakers were Galileans, capable at most of expressing themselves in Greek, Latin, Aramaic or Hebrew, and before them stood a multitude of foreigners from many regions widely separated, yet all of whom heard themselves addressed in their own familiar tongue (see Acts 2:6, 8). 2. He meant the perishing Gentiles, of whom he spoke as being also "his sheep." (You will find your other questions answered in any good modern encyclopedia).

Copyright by G V Buck

The Sugar Trust Investigating Committee

SITTING, FROM LEFT TO RIGHT—Hon. John E. Raker; Hon. Finis J. Garrett; Hon. Thomas W. Hardwick, Chairman; Hon. Asher C. Hinds; Hon. George R. Malby; Hon. Edmond H. Madison.

THIS committee, which has become known as the Hardwick Committee, was appointed by Congress to investigate the organization and the conduct of the business of what is known as the Sugar Trust. This consists of The American Sugar Refining Comany, The National Sugar Company, the Michigan Sugar Refining Company, and a number of others in which the late O. H. Havemeyer was influential. The combination of a number of smaller concerns to form these great companies, and the issuing of great amounts of additional stock upon the consummation of these combinations, is engaging the attention of the committee. The presidents of the various companies have been called upon to explain the conduct of their business and origin of their companies.

Miscellaneous

M., Effington, S. Dak. Your suggestion is quite in order, but we regard it as included in the list we printed.

R. P., Fairmont, Minn. A large majority of the Christian Church now use unfermented wine at sacrament.

W. L., Knoxville, Tenn. You are quite entitled to your own interpretation, of course; but it is not supported by a single authority on the subject.

Anna G., Adams, Neb. There has been no satisfactory confirmation of the reported finding of the ark of the covenant, and it now looks like an exceedingly doubtful story.

Mrs. Ruth A. Anderson, of Woodbury, N. J., writes that the Fulton Street noon-day prayer meeting was begun by Jeremiah C. Lanphier in 1857.

Any one knowing the address of Mrs. Geo. E. Hall (nee Bertha Baumgardner), formerly of Sioux City and Madison, Wis., will confer a great favor by forwarding it to 1102 N. Maple Street, Creston, Iowa.

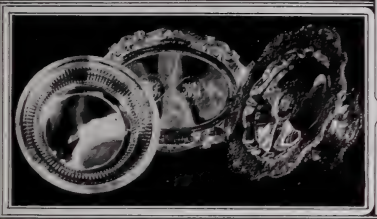
I. L. G., Sylvatus, Va. 1. Many scientists believe in evolution, and many others, including not a few of distinction, do not. 2. No. 3. Phrenology is a pseudo-science—not accepted as a genuine science.

Mrs. O. G., Lamoine, N. D. The clipping you enclose is written in the spirit of banter and good nature, being evidently intended to amuse. Of course, it isn't science, but it is good writing and very entertaining verse. A real scientist would smile at it.

L. J. P., Ballston Lake, N. Y. Although there is no specific statement concerning Adam's repentance, as he lived to a great age (see Gen. 5:5) he had ample time to recall the past and to regret the loss of his primal innocence and his expulsion from Eden.

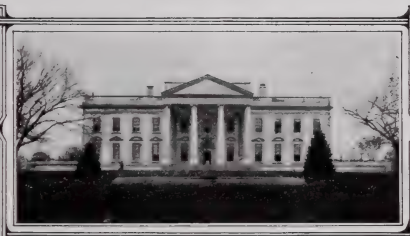
Mrs. M. E., Dubuque, Ia. 1. It costs $21 to endow a cot at our Children's Home at Mont-Lawn for the season. Seven little waifs occupy the cot in succession, each for a period of ten days. 2. Yes, we welcome contributions, but we cannot accept pay for children. Only those little ones whose parents are too poor to pay for an outing for them, are accepted.

A. L. P., Napierville, Ill. In the passage in Matt. 11:12, the violence employed means urgency, earnestness, intensity of purpose. See the parallel passage in Luke 16:16. It was as if the Saviour had said in rebuking the Pharisees: "While publicans and sinners are pressing eagerly into the kingdom of God, ye, adherents of the old forms and ceremonials, do not discern the signs of the times and are allowing the tide to flow past you and are missing your great opportunity."



W. C. H., Huron, O. The narrative in I. Sam 28 does not say that Saul himself saw the appearance which the woman (the witch of Endor) called up. In verses 13 and 14, he inquired of her what she saw, and on her telling him, he perceived from her description, (though not with his own eyes, that it was Samuel. If he himself had seen the figure, spirit or otherwise, he need not have asked her to describe it as he did. Volumes have been written on the question whether the scene was an imposture or a real apparition. Most of the ancient writers hold that Saul himself saw nothing, but on hearing her description and the denunciation which the spirit conveyed, he fell to the floor in utter despair.

NEW YORK, JULY 5, 1911



THE · CHRISTIAN · HERALD

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED NEWSPAPER FOR THE HOME

The Gifts from the Washington Correspondents and the Psi Upsilon Fraternity of Yale

The White House

The Gifts Presented by President Taft's Philippine Party and the Class of '78 of Yale University

Copyright, Underwood & Underwood

Copyright, Underwood & Underwood

THE WHITE HOUSE SILVER WEDDING

THE 19th of June, a quarter-century ago, William Howard Taft, a young lawyer, unknown and obscure, and Miss Helen L. Herron, eldest of the five daughters of Judge John William Herron of Ohio, were married in the distinguished old family mansion of the Herrons in Cincinnati. It is a favorite after-dinner story now among the Taft-Herron connection that the "ambitious and obscure young lawyer," in the exhilaration of his first love for her, confidently promised "Miss Helen," if she would but become his bride, he would never stop in the pathway of his unbounded ambition and love, until he had raised her to the lofty position of First Lady in the land.

An exalted promise indeed! But the propitious stars that shaped the course of President Taft seem never to have changed. For twenty-five years the young lawyer, United States Judge, Governor of the Philippines, Secretary of War, never wavered nor forgot his promise. From one point to the next, with dignity and force, Mr. Taft steadily advanced along the blazed trail of successful statesmanship, until finally the day came when he was regarded as the one man best fitted for the highest position the American nation has within its power to bestow. There was a time, to be sure, when Mr. Taft very much desired to be a Supreme Court Judge, but his wife, ever ambitious for his onward march to the very top, held him to his schoolboy resolve, constantly urged him on to the fulfilment of his early ambition, and, on the 19th of June, 1911, that high-hearted boyish pledge, fulfilled, was celebrated with pomp and splendor in the Executive Mansion at Washington. In the vernacular of the small boy, together they won out. It is scarcely given to the stranger, perhaps, to realize what that silver wedding anniversary really meant to the President and the First Lady of the land.

Copyright, Underwood & Underwood

President Taft and His Family United for the Silver Wedding

The silver wedding anniversary of the Chief Executive of the 90,000,000 of people in the United States of America was made an occasion for felicitations and congratulations of monarchs and rulers of every country and kingdom in the civilized world and of business and social organizations, personal friends, and innumerable individuals unknown to the White House.

The historic home of American Presidents, with its vast gardens and lawns, was turned into a veritable wonderland for the occasion. Outlining the classic beauty of the famous old White Manor, every cornice and angle and gable was pricked out with electric light, and many incandescent bulbs festooned the capitals and encircled the pillars. In the stately gardens, the trees and shrubberies were threaded through and through with tens of thousands of tiny electric lights, while gigantic ferns and potted plants, transplanted from the Agricultural and White House Conservatories for the night, were brilliantly lighted up. What appeared to be endless lines of Japanese lanterns stretched along the driveways, walkways and garden paths leading to the majestic Potomac, while a giant searchlight, placed on the apex of the Treasury Building near by, playing directly upon the fountains and the moving throngs, magicked the scene into one of remarkable splendor and brilliancy.

A unique part of the magnificent lighting scheme was immense American flags made of electric light bulbs flashing their varicolored radiance above each pillared portal. Within the White House the principal decorations were American Beauty roses in bunches of twenty-five. The wedding gifts, which were costly and numerous, included tokens of esteem from the Cabinet, the Supreme Court, the Senate, the House of Representatives, the Philippine Party, the Army, the Navy, the National Press Club, and many royal gifts and greetings from emperors and kings and foreign dignitaries. The gifts were on view in a unique way, for they were placed about the rooms so as to form part of the scheme of decoration.

Among the most notable of these, all in solid silver, were three dozen service plates from the House of Representatives; a magnificent fern-dish from the President's Yale class (1878); an antique platter from his college fraternity (Psi Upsilon); two Grecian ewers, and a salver from the "Tafters," the Philippine party of 1905; a mammoth loving-cup from the Commercial Club of Cincinnati; a large antique fruit-dish from the Washington newspaper correspondents; a dinner service from the Supreme Court; another from the Senate; a set of lemonade bowl, ladle and salver from the people of Maryland, the gift selected by a special committee appointed by their governor; a pitcher and tray from the celebrated Gridiron Club; and superb gifts from each member of the Cabinet and diplomatic corps, and from the leading families of Washington and nearly every other large city in America.

Among the unique gifts was a diminutive platinum locket-watch for Mrs. Taft, from the wives of forty of the generals of the army. It is studded thickly with diamonds, and hangs upon a platinum chain, similarly decorated. Another was from Miss Harriet Waters Forbush of Lancaster, Mass., a distant relative of the President, and was one of the wedding shoes of their common ancestor, his great-great-grandmother.

One of the most interesting features of the day was the short speech with which the President responded to and accepted the gift of a massive silver bowl filled with roses sent by the Business Men's Commercial Club of Cincinnati. President James Albert Green, on behalf of the club, announced:

"Mr. Taft, we have no axes to grind, no petitions to present; we come simply as friends from home, to assure you of our affection and of our loyalty. In doing this we believe we express the sentiment of the whole country when we say that the esteem in which we have always held you mounts higher day by day. We shine in your reflected glory, and, no matter how much the nation may claim it, yet always, in the last analysis, you are William Howard Taft, of Cincinnati, Ohio."

"As I look about this table," the President responded, "and exercise such memory as has been left to me after my experience in Washington, almost

Continued on page 690

THE
American Pulpit

A Sermon by
Charles F. Aked, D.D.*

Copyright, Underwood & Underwood

SMILE AND SUNSHINE

TEXT: Eccles. 11:6—"In the morning sow thy seed, in the evening withhold not thine hand."

THIS is a philosophy of smile and sunshine. It is breezy, inspiriting. It is in marked contrast with much that we find in the Book of Ecclesiastes. Often the utterances of this book are pessimistic, occasionally they are cynical; at the best there runs through the whole a plaintive tone. But this is delightful. It seems to rest upon a wholesome conception of human nature. You are to go on sowing seeds of kindness here and there without particularly inquiring what the nature of the ground may be, or whether there are probabilities that a good harvest will repay the effort. Keep on being good. Keep on being kind. Speak the pleasant word. Do the generous deed. Reach out the helping hand when you can. And keep on smiling. In the morning sow thy seed. At evening do not refrain; still keep on sowing. Thou knowest not which of all thy kind words and generous deeds shall bring forth fruit a hundred-fold, nor whether indeed every seed of honest planting shall not ripen to the harvest.

Sow in Confidence

There is a fine flavor about it that appeals to the dash of healthy recklessness which is in our blood. Sometimes a definite effort will accomplish a definite end. You set out to do a certain thing; you lay your plans; you do the work. So be it. It is good to get immediate results from expenditure of money, thought, and toil. But taking life in the large, you are satisfied if the myriad activities with which your days are charged are somehow making for the ultimate goal. You sow in the morning your seed, and in the evening you are sowing still. You do not know which shall prosper, this or that, but so long as something prospers and the harvest is assured, all is well.

We can express this healthy, stimulating teaching in a few portable maxims. Do not spend your time looking for the good and fruitful soil. Keep on sowing. Take your chances of the crop. The good soil is found in such odd places, in such unlooked-for places. Human nature, says the humorist, is a queer thing and there's a lot of it. It is a queer thing. Its varieties are endless. The man of science says that there are no two nervous systems which are alike. And though it may be in moral things that every individual is a type of some others, yet the number of individuals in the race is so enormous that it may seem to you that you go for many years without meeting two people who are really alike.

There is an unknown element in our human nature which may respond to your appeal, to the lesson you are teaching, to the kind act you are doing, the kind word you are speaking, the kind look that is in your eyes, or the kind thought unspoken which is in your heart. You are not to pick out a person here or there and say, "Now, it looks to me as though I might do that person some good; it looks as if the ground there were prepared, and I may plant a seed of goodness which will bear fruit after many days." You are to go on sowing seed to the right hand and to the left hand, not indifferent as to result, but smilingly confident that whether you see result or not there will be result from some of it, and perhaps none of it will be lost.

What a Stray Seedling Did

It was one Sunday evening in October that a drunken man staggered through the streets of Worcester, Mass. He had been brought down to the depths. He had passed through the inner temple of sorrow. He had stood by the railroad track contemplating hurling himself beneath the engine wheels. He had fingered the bottle of poison. And it was an unknown man that tapped him on the shoulder and said in tones not of disgust but of affection, "You have been drinking to-day"; and asked, "Why do you not sign the pledge?" The question was commonplace, puerile almost—at least you might think so—yet strangely enough it stirred the inmost soul of the victim, and though he stammered something to the effect that he was hopelessly, helplessly beyond the point where he could take the pledge, the stranger's tender words flowed on—and John Gough arose to become an enthusiast, an apostle, a prophet. And a million men and women have since risen up to call him blessed. What is that unknown, mysterious element in our complex human nature which responded to Joel Stratton's touch and word?

Cobbler Carey's Seed-Sowing

The centuries will never cease to wonder at the marvelous story of the inauguration of foreign missionary work by the Protestantism of the world. William Carey made far-reaching plans while he cobbled shoes in the English village of Moulton. He worked very hard for a living. An English village shoemaker in the closing days of the eighteenth century saw little of the luxury of life. In this obscure village, toiling through every waking hour, on Sundays finding rest only in a change of labor, this cobbler, "still under thirty, surveys the whole world, continent by continent, island by island, race by race, kingdom by kingdom, tabulating his results with an accuracy and following them up with a logistical power of generalization which would extort the admiration of the learned men even of this present day." There he wrote the immortal pamphlet which bears this title: An Inquiry into the Obligations of Christians to Use Means for the Conversion of the Heathens. In Which the Religious State of the Different Nations of the World, the Success of Former Undertakings, are Considered. By William Carey. The stately Fuller, the seraphic Pearce, Sutcliff, Ryland, read and marveled. In the back parlor of Widow Beeby Wallis they met and carried some resolutions and took a collection. It amounted to less than $66. But every Protestant missionary society and every Protestant mission in the world has grown out of it. Only you cannot understand these things.

Unexpected Harvests

What is that incomprehensible, unexplored, unmapped region of our human nature in which the seed finds lodgment? What is that incomprehensible, unexplored, unmapped element in the intellectual and moral and spiritual make-up of a village cobbler which sets him pondering the religious state of the nations, which sets Fuller, the orator, and Pearce, the saint, pondering the ways and means by which they can hold the ropes, while Carey goes down into the depths? And what is that incomprehensible, unexplored, unmapped potentiality of human hearts the wide world over which receives the seed of these men's planting and brings forth fruit, not fiftyfold or a hundredfold, but brings forth fruit a millionfold for the glory of the Lord? Shall Joel Stratton ask, "What precise result do I expect to follow from a sentence or two that I may exchange with this ragged and dirty drunkard?" Shall Carey in his penury and privation and bodily weariness ask, "What precise result do I expect if I succeed in scraping together shillings and pence so as to print my poor little Inquiry into the Obligations of Christians to Use Means for the Conversion of the Heathens?" Joel Stratton and Carey shall do nothing of the kind. Sorrow is to them, loss to the world—oh! deadly loss is to the world!—if they pause to do anything of the kind, for "in the morning sow thy seed, and in the evening withhold not thy hand; for thou knowest not which shall prosper, whether this or that, or whether they both shall be alike good."

In such instances as these we touch another of the palpable facts of human life, that the good seed, wherever dropped, however lost to view, buried from sight, forever abolished as it seems, is kept alive by forces as mysterious and unexplored as these elements of human nature which receive it. Grains of seed have fallen out of wrappings twisted round Egyptian mummies recovered from tombs in which they have lain for three thousand years, and life has been in the good grain. Flung into the ground by way of experiment, exposed to the genial dews of heaven, its gracious rain, its life-giving sun, the seed in due time has yielded its crops. A Roman lady named Fabiola founded at Rome as an act of penance—think of it, as an act of penance!—the first public hospital. "And," says the historian, "the charity planted by that woman's hand has overspread the world and will alleviate to the end of time the darkest anguish of humanity." Is it half the territories of the United States which to-day are "dry" by the vote of the people? Is it thirty millions or forty millions of the population who live where the saloon is outlawed by public sentiment? I confess that I cannot keep pace with the record. Over sections of the country larger than many a European kingdom a generation has grown up which has never seen the open sale of intoxicating drink.

The Work of Divine Grace

I heard a Chicago preacher say that he met a woman who had been a member of his congregation, but resident for many years in a Prohibition State, and he asked her, "Does Prohibition prohibit where you live?" And her answer was, "If you had a family of boys to bring up, and left Chicago for our city, you would think you had struck a segment of the millennium." But it all goes back to that night in Portland, Me., when a woman came to General Neal Dow, a neighbor, and asked him to go with her to the saloon and try to persuade her husband to come home. The saloon-keeper resented their interference. He said that he was licensed by the State of Maine to sell liquor and he should sell liquor as long as a man wanted to buy. Neal Dow was a Quaker, and therefore had fighting blood in his veins! And he said: "If this is the law, by the grace of God we will change all that." Yes; by the grace of God he has changed all that. But what is the force we call the grace of God which has kept that passion alive and spread it abroad in the hearts of men until more than thirty million of them have gathered round the standard which Neal Dow unfurled?

More than two hundred years ago an old Puritan, whose very name I do not know, wrote a little book called The Bruised Reed. It fell into the hands of one Richard Baxter and led him to Christ. And Baxter, though destitute of university education and throughout his life handicapped by a frail body and feeble health, attained great learning, became one of the greatest of English theologians, a famous preacher of the commonwealth, a martyr, and a saint. Richard Baxter wrote The Call to the Unconverted, and Philip Doddridge read it, he who sang for us

> Hark! the glad sound, the Saviour comes!
> The Saviour promised long;
> Let every heart prepare a throne,
> And every voice a song.

But it is Baxter's Call to the Unconverted which moves his heart, and he writes The Rise and Progress of Religion in the Soul. One of the greatest names in the annals of human philanthropy is that of William Wilberforce, the champion of the slave. It is Doddridge's Rise and Progress of Religion in the Soul that wins Wilberforce for humanity and God, and he in his turn writes The Practical View of Christianity. Two men read The Practical View of Christianity, Leigh Richmond and Thomas Chalmers. Richmond by his book, The Annals of the Poor, became a pioneer of the modern social Gospel, and Chalmers by his preaching of titanic force and fiery passion won the souls of unnumbered thousands for God. And if we could call to that old Puritan who wrote The Bruised Reed—that old Puritan whose name I have forgotten—if we could call to him in his place above the stars of God, and bid him look upon the Baxters and the Doddridges and the Wilberforces, upon Richmond and Chalmers, upon Europe and Asia and Africa and America which have been blessed by the work they did and the spirit they sent abroad over all the earth, and the men and women of the Church triumphant and the Church militant created and re-created by their breath, I wonder whether he would not tell us that in all the wondrous Bible words he used to know and love so well, nothing to him was sweeter or more splendid than these of our sunny philosophy: "In the morning sow thy seed, and in the evening withhold not thy hand."

Continued on next page

* Formerly of Fifth Avenue Baptist Church, New York, now of California.

Smile and Sunshine

Continued from preceding page

Elizabeth Fry was a noble Quaker woman in the early days of the nineteenth century in England. When she began visiting Newgate prison in 1813 she found hell let loose among the women prisoners. Three hundred poor wretches herded together in two wards and two cells without the remotest provision for modesty or for decency. Only scoffing met her early efforts to bring mercy to the prisoners. Tom Hood, genial soul as he was, had only a good-humored rebuke and a bad pun. She opened her School of Pity in Newgate prison and Tom Hood wrote:

I like the pity in your full-brimmed eye,
I like your carriage and your silken grey,
Your dovelike habits and your silent preaching,
But I don't like your Newgatory teaching,
Mrs. Fry.

There was consternation in the little village of Kaiserwerth on the Rhine. The straw-plaiting industry on which the people depended failed. Casper Fliedner, the village pastor, went through Germany begging for his poor starving people. He went to England. He made the acquaintance of Mrs. Fry and learned what she was doing in Newgate. He returned home bearing with him the gifts he had collected; but his mind was full of Mrs. Fry. The troubles passed in Kaiserwerth. Prosperity returned. He and his wife began such work as Mrs. Fry was doing in England. They received discharged prisoners, and God's blessing rested upon them. They established a home and school for orphans. They built a hospital for the sick. They raised an asylum for lunatics. Women were trained for such ministry. They were called deaconesses. In this institution the art of sick nursing acquired a state of perfection at that time unknown in any part of Europe. Here Florence Nightingale received the training which enabled her to save those uncounted thousands of lives in the Crimea and made her immortal in history. What was it that Longfellow says of Florence Nightingale, the Santa Filomena of his lovely poem, "The Lady of the Lamp?"

And slow, as in a dream of bliss,
The speechless sufferer turns to kiss
Her shadow, as it falls
Upon the darkening walls.

Contrast the science of nursing today with the Sarah Gamps and Betsy Prigs who live only in the pages of Charles Dickens; then measure if you can what the world owes to Florence Nightingale, Pastor Fliedner, and the inspiration of Elizabeth Fry's Quaker spirit, and tell me if you will what other sermon can we preach: "In the morning sow thy seed, and in the evening withhold not thy hand."

So, then, the sermon finishes as it began. It has made no progress from point to point. It has laid down no promises. It has reached no conclusion. There is no logic in it. It has established no doctrines. It has told you nothing you did not know before. It has admitted that the wonderful things of life are too wonderful to be understood, and the most intelligible statement it has to make is that these things are incomprehensible, unexplored, and unmapped. But all the same you will be happier and life will be sweeter and the earth will be fairer and our human nature will be more divine just in proportion as you incarnate this philosophy of smile and sunshine. Do not carp. Do not cavil. Do not repine. Do not despair. Look forward and not back. Do not reckon up results. Do not calculate chances, nor weigh evidence, nor measure probabilities. But keep on being good. Keep on doing good. Be cheerful with it, and keep on smiling. With a light-hearted and joyous recklessness scorn quick return of profits and trust to a far gain. "In the morning sow thy seed, and in the evening withhold not thy hand."

The Joy of Hard Work

By EUGENE THWING

THE greatest fun in the world is work done heartily and well. To every man and woman it is given to know the joy and dignity of labor, yet thousands refuse the precious gift and blindly complain of the "grinding, crushing toil" which is the "curse of their lives," while others, even more pitiable, regard labor with contempt and try to shut out the laborer from "good society." We read in a contemporary that much humbug is drooled about the "dignity of labor." There is a great deal more dignity in rest. People work because they have to, not because they want to. To be sure, some folks pretend or really think that they like to work. Such a feeling, if genuine, is a preversion arising from habit. Not only is there no merit in work, but the institution itself has a disgraceful origin and springs from the crafty counsels of the serpent, more subtle than any beast of the field, from the apple and feminine curiosity and Adam's inexperience. As a reminder and memorial of original sin, labor and the bread eaten in the sweat of the face are justly painful to every sensitive soul.

The writer who so bitterly preaches rebellion against the richest and most blessed thing in life has not read his Bible aright. Work had no such origin as he describes. "In the beginning" God himself set the example of work, and when his great task was done he looked his work over "and behold it was very good." He felt the satisfaction which comes from work well done, and he "rested on the seventh day from all his work." The very first gift to man, before sin came, was work. He was commanded to "replenish the earth and subdue it." That mighty task has kept him busy from that day until now. Christ's word to man was, "My Father worketh hitherto and I work. . . . The works that I do shall ye do also, and greater works than these shall ye do." Thus work had the loftiest possible origin, imparting to it a dignity and nobility beyond measure.

. . .

WHEN work might be made to fill the life with glory, isn't it a pity that so many insist upon making it a drudgery and regarding it with gloom and hopelessness? "Where there is no vision the people perish." When once the eye of the soul has beheld the vision, life and all it holds is transformed. Hard work becomes exhilarating pleasure; labor becomes service; obstacles become opportunities. The difference is in the worker rather than in the work.

No one ever really enjoys hard work which employs only muscles and nerve and brain. The heart must be in it. Every effort must carry with it a passionate interest and desire. Every moment must contain the indulgence of a wish, must be a stepping-stone of an ambition. There is a way to connect the most commonplace labor that needs to be done with the great movements of the world's progress and uplift.

When the new parliament buildings of the Dominion of Canada were being reared, a visitor stopped to speak to a number of workmen who were cutting stone. The visitor asked one man what he was doing, and he replied that he was earning two dollars and a half a day. He asked a second man the same question, and pointing to a chart spread before him the man said he was trying to make the stone on which he was working correspond with the chart. A third man was asked what he was doing. All three men were, to outward appearances, engaged in precisely the same work. But the third man let his mallet rest a moment, and straightening himself up, pointed proudly to the great building, the graceful lines of which were beginning to show in the massive pile above them. He thought of the glory of the completed building, and what it meant, and he replied eagerly, "I am helping to make that." This man had a vision; he was doing something worth while. The task of earning money may not be worth while; the task of blindly following a pattern may not be worth while; but to have a part in making something good—whether it be a cathedral or a character—that is worth while.

. . .

WORK must be an expression of love—some definite love which can find in no other way so satisfying an expression. That man who was enjoying his work with mallet and chisel loved his province, loved his nation, and loved his sovereign. Their glory was his glory, and to enhance their glory was his joy. The same rule holds true in the kitchen, or the barn, or the office. Household duties are intolerable when they are done without the light and joy of love; but the girl who would rather sweep the floor and wash the dishes in order that mother may have an hour more of rest—that girl, if you will open the door just now, you will find singing at her work. All work is service; all worthy service may be an expression of love, and love is the essence of joy. The inevitable conclusion is that all work, to bring real joy to the worker, must take him out of himself—must in some way, directly or indirectly, be service for others. Selfishness seeks for joy and finds it not. Unselfish service finds joy without searching. Every achievement, every realization of a blessing conferred upon another, is an inspiration and an incentive to further effort. The power to change the life of another man, or woman, or child, is a wonderful responsibility. When that power is used to bless, the joy it brings is beyond measure.

. . .

JOYOUSNESS in work is contagious. When the face glows and the voice thrills with the delight of the work, the tasks of other men are made lighter, and they feel a new sense. "No man liveth unto himself; no man dieth unto himself." No man can loaf without tempting some other to loaf, and no man can work heartily, joyously, without sending a wave of inspiration for work toward some other life.

"Give us, oh, give us the man who sings at his work," exclaimed Carlyle. "Be his occupation what it may, he is equal to any two of those who follow the same pursuit in silent sullenness. He will do more in the same time—he will do it better—he will persevere longer. One is scarcely sensible to fatigue while he marches to music. The very stars are said to make harmony as they revolve in their spheres. Wondrous is the strength of cheerfulness, altogether past calculation its powers of endurance. Efforts to be permanently useful must be uniformly joyous—a spirit all sunshine, graceful from gladness, beautiful because bright."

Do You Know Your Bible?

AS announced in a previous issue of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, a number of delayed answers to our second list of twenty Bible questions have been received. Up to May 3, 597 letters containing solutions of List No. 2 had been sent in, and these were announced in the issue of that date. There were 9 readers who made a "clean score," sending in correct replies to all the questions; 31 answered 19 questions correctly; 66 answered 18 correctly and 93 answered 17 accurately.

Of the delayed answers to this second list of questions (some 150 letters in all), the following sent correct answers to the entire list of 20 questions:

Mrs. J. N. Hess and Anna E. Roberts.

Nineteen questions were answered correctly by Esther Kemp and Mrs. Nellie E. Hetnik.

Eighteen and one-half questions were answered correctly by Mrs. Edgar Myer.

Eighteen questions were answered correctly by Mrs. T. W. Stillwell, Viola E. Cash, Lulu Rodebaugh, and Margaret E. Evans.

The answers to the third list of questions, which appeared in our issue of May 3, will be published shortly.

WAITING FOR THE BUGLE

By the late Thomas Wentworth Higginson

WE WAIT for the bugle; the night-dews are cold;
The limbs of the soldiers feel jaded and old;
The field of our bivouac is windy and bare;
There is lead in our joints, there is frost in our hair;
The future is veiled and its fortunes unknown
As we lie with hushed breath till the bugle is blown.

At the sound of that bugle each comrade shall spring
Like an arrow released from the strain of the string;
The courage, the impulse of youth shall come back
To banish the chill of the drear bivouac;
And sorrows and losses and cares fade away
When that life-giving signal proclaims the new day.

Though the bivouac of age may put ice in our veins,
And no fiber of steel in our sinew remains;
Though the comrades of yesterday's march are not here,
And the sunlight seems pale and the branches are sear—
Though the sound of our cheering dies down to a moan,
We shall find our lost youth when the bugle is blown.

Anvil Sparks

..THE Lord loves a cheerful forgiver.

..GROWING weary in well-doing is not doing well.

..TRUTH harmonizes with all truth, but lies have to be made to agree.

..IT IS better to be forgotten than to be remembered for disagreeableness.

..THERE will never be an universal peace movement in the fight against sin.

..UNHAPPINESS is a quality of the mind which comes to him who doesn't mind.

..STRIVE continually for more cheerfulness in your conversation, more liberality in your payments, and more spirituality in your prayers.

..THE kickers in a community are also the sitters, and they have their feet spread out for others to walk over, so that they are always in the way.

..THE man who doesn't enjoy his religion probably has something which he thought was "just as good," but which he at last discovers isn't religion at all.

..THE man who stays home because he finds it too hot to listen to the sermon, ought to feel ashamed. It is hotter for the man who preaches than the man who listens—yet the preacher is always there.

Christian Endeavorers by the Sea

REV. WM. J. WILLIAMSON, D.D.
St. Louis, Mo.

MRS. ROSE WOODALLEN CHAPMAN
Leader of Personal Purity Conferences

WILLIAM SHAW
General Sec'y Int'l Christian Endeavor Committee

"TRAINING for Service" is the convention theme of the twenty-fifth Assembly of International Christian Endeavor for this week at Atlantic City, N. J. The programme plans cover about one hundred different gatherings, from the open-air quiet hour assembly at dawn on the shore, conducted by Rev. Dr. F. B. Meyer of London and Rev. Dr. J. Wilbur Chapman, to mass meetings at night in the great Auditorium and Hippodrome on the pier.

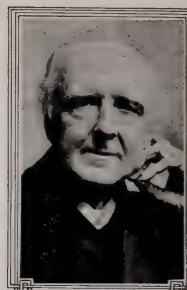
That Christian Endeavor is becoming more and more an educational factor is shown by the fact that some 30,000 young people, of all denominations, are the students in this great religious training school; and hundreds of leaders and religious teachers are the faculty.

President Taft will speak on Training Citizens. Christian Endeavor Training for the Church is the subject of an important session presided over by President Francis E. Clark, when Marshall A. Hudson, president World Wide Baraca Union, Syracuse, N. Y., speaks on Training Sunday School Workers; Rev. Dr. Jesse Hill, Williston Church, Portland, Me., on Training Church Officers, and Rev. Dr. George B. Stewart, president Auburn Theological Seminary, N. Y.; Rev. H. T. Marshall, Baptist Missionary, Rangoon, Burma; Rev. Dr. Alexander Gilray, Toronto, Canada; H. H. Spooner, secretary Connecticut Temperance Union, and Rev. Dr. Denton, Troy, N. Y., will also deliver addresses on timely topics.

The Christian Citizen in Politics, by Judge Ben B. Lindsey, Denver; The Uplift of a Race, by Dr. Booker Washington, Alabama; The Christian Business Man in Politics, by Hon. John Wanamaker, Philadelphia; and Good Citizenship, by Speaker Champ Clark, are among the subjects considered in training for world citizenship. Rev. Dr. Charles M. Sheldon, of Topeka, Kan., and Rev. Dr. Russell H. Conwell will also speak.

The daily Christian Endeavor Institute is a succession of simultaneous conferences on methods of work, in which fifteen field secretaries take part. Several Personal Purity Conferences and Talks to Mothers are held by Mrs. Rose Woodallen Chapman; and the Women's Meeting is led by Mrs. Francis Clark. A new feature is the "Consultation Hour" daily at 9 o'clock, when experts in Christian Endeavor work meet any who desire a personal talk on religious problems. A special guest at the 1911 biennial is the blind poet Fanny J. Crosby.

Twenty-four denominational rallies are listed, and also a German and a Welsh rally. Fifty-four State presidents make "rapid-fire replies" to the query, "What is the best thing I have seen in Christian Endeavor?" Representative workers from New Zealand, England, Japan, Burma, Philippine Islands, British Guiana, Germany, India, Jamaica, and China also take part in this symposium.

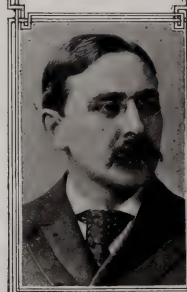


Farewell messages from young missionaries under appointment, messages from missionaries and missionary workers are part of the programme on Training for Missions. A group of Hawaiian delegates, and Mr. Enos Bacon, the Yorkshire singer, render special music. Hon. Charles W. Fairbanks tells how Foreign Missions promote fellowship, in the session devoted to Training in Interdenominational and International Fellowship.

Christian Endeavor now makes its home in over seventy different countries; 45,000 of the 75,000 local societies are in the United States, with a membership of over three million. There are some 15,000 societies in Great Britain, 3,000 in Australia, 600 in Germany, 150 in France, 3,000 in Canada, 150 in Mexico, 50 in Spain, 200 in South America, 25 in Hungary, 40 in Norway, 200 in Sweden, 40 in Russia and Finland, 12 in Italy, 900 in India, 400 in China, 150 in Japan, and 500 in South Africa. The grand total of over four million Christian Endeavorers equals the population of Ireland or of Texas, and could fill Maine and Massachusetts.

The societies are conducting a variety of endeavors, the missionary and evangelistic work being most prominent and only second to hospital and prison and floating endeavors. It is estimated by President Clark that, up to date, about $15,000,000 have been given to missions and charities through the Christian Endeavorers, who support hospitals, schools, missionary ships, fresh-air camps, rescue missions, drinking fountains, reading rooms, etc.; print sixty religious papers and magazines in twenty-five different languages and are establishing a central building in Boston as a permanent headquarters for the work.

Reports from all parts of the world in 1911 show that Christian Endeavor is steadily increasing in numbers and in usefulness. An interesting feature of the great closing rallies at Atlantic City is the recognition by States and countries for the Christian Endeavor Increase Campaign of 1911, and plans for the evangelistic work as far ahead as 1913.



J. A. S.

REV. DR. F. B. MEYER
London, Eng.

MRS. FRANCIS E. CLARK

REV. DR. J. WILBUR CHAPMAN
Secretary, Committee on Evangelistic Work

THE NEW OCEAN QUEEN'S MAIDEN VOYAGE

IN THE early hours of the morning of June 21 the new 66,000-ton White Star liner Olympic, the biggest ship in the world, steamed into New York Harbor for the first time, and was berthed at her pier in the Hudson River. Although those great ships, the Mauretania and the Lusitania of the Cunard Line, retain the palm as greyhounds of the sea, they must yield the place of the largest vessel afloat to this new leviathan, which represents an investment of $10,000,000. The White Star Line pier had to be extended a hundred feet for the accommodation of the Olympic and her sister ship the Titanic, and it was only after a long struggle between the officials of the line and the War Department at Washington that permission was granted to build the temporary addition that is now being used. A fleet of twelve tugs stood by to help the monster ship make her way up to the dock in such a manner as to damage neither it nor herself. One gentle jolt from such a floating mass, and the new section of the pier might have been separated from the rest and floated away down the river.

Copyright, Underwood & Underwood

A Fleet of Tugs Helping the Giant Olympic to Her Dock

The dimensions of the Olympic are 882½ feet in length and 99½ feet beam, with 66,000 tons displacement and a depth of 175 feet from the top of her funnels to her keel. She carries a crew of 850 officers and men. Here are some of her other measurements: Height of funnels above casings, 62 feet; draught, 34 feet 6 inches; largest shell plates, 46 feet long and 1⅛ inches thick; number of decks, 11; number of watertight bulkheads, 15; capacity of double bottom, 5,700 tons; cargo capacity, 5,600 tons; number of passengers provided for, 2,650. Sixteen boats are carried at the davits on her top deck.

The swimming bath on the promenade deck is 33 feet by 14, with a depth of 9 feet of water. The huge rudder, which is operated electrically, weighs 100 tons; the anchors weigh 15½ tons each, the centre propeller 22 tons, and each of the two wing propellers 38 tons. Each link in the chain anchor weighs 175 pounds, the huge after bosses from which the three propeller shafts are suspended weigh in all 73½ tons. There are three passenger electric elevators in the first class sections and one in the second class. The bridge deck promenade is 550 feet long, which gives a good idea of the huge scale on which the vessel has been built. Five times around this deck measures more than a mile.

While the ship was still at sea the following dispatch was sent by wireless telegraph to New York:

"As we left Southampton, flying the Royal Naval Reserve ensign, we were saluted by the British fleet at Spithead. We have received many congratulations from passing ships, and the wireless equipment has been kept very busy from the time we started. The passengers are unanimous in praise of the big ship. One, who is aboard, says this isn't a ship, but a bridge across the Atlantic. It takes the best part of the voyage to find one's way about the vessel. The public rooms and the staterooms are huge, and the ventilation is wonderful. The French restaurant is a great feature and is largely patronized. The swimming pool, electric and Turkish baths, and racket court are all much used and highly appreciated."

One thousand three hundred and sixteen passengers came in on the new ship, so with her crew she carried 2,166 persons. As there are already 700 bookings for the first cabin for the eastward voyage she will carry even a greater freight of human lives as she goes back to the old country.

CORONATION OF KING GEORGE

"VIVAT, vivat, vivat Rex Georgius! Vivat, vivat, vivat, Maria Regina!"

With startling suddenness in the midst of the most magnificent and deeply impressive ceremonies that history has ever seen, the boys of Westminster School exercised their ancient privilege of cheering the newly crowned King and Queen of Great Britain. The emotional tension of the wonderful ceremony which took place in Westminster Abbey on June 21 was heightened by the sharp staccato shouts of these lusty young throats. Into the midst of the quiet decorum of the impressive religious ceremony and the glorious music by which it was accompanied these boys introduced the note which by its recollection of the more savage ancient privileges seemed to galvanize every spectator in the great Abbey.

As early as 8 o'clock in the morning Westminster presented a gorgeous spectacle, already filling with the peers and peeresses, and the foreign representatives, in all the gorgeousness of their court garments. Scarlet and purple and gold, untold millions of dollars' worth of diamonds, all the brilliance that the great empire and Europe could provide was gathered in the buff and blue decorated Abbey. At 11 o'clock the actual ceremony began. First came the procession of foreign representatives. Trumpeters and an escort of the Royal Horse Guards preceded these royal guests, few of whom were recognized by the crowds. The spectators were quick to pick out John Hays Hammond, Special Ambassador from the United States, the envoys from France and Germany, and the Crown Princes. Each of these was cheered, and there was a spontaneous clapping of hands.

Immediately following was the second procession, with members of the British royal family, including the Prince of Wales and the Princess Mary and their younger brothers. Their appearance was the signal for the heartiest demonstration up to that time. The cheering began as the royal children emerged from Buckingham Palace, and, carried along the row upon row of seats, was echoed by the crowds behind. Within the Abbey one of the most charming groups in the whole magnificent scene was formed by the royal children, emblems of future hope for England.

As the trumpets announced the entrance of the King and Queen the assembly in the Abbey rose to its feet and a choir of four hundred picked voices sang the anthem, "I was glad when they said unto me, Let us go into the house of the Lord."

The royal procession was headed by a group of the most famous clergymen of the Anglican Church; next followed the five pursuivants and the heralds in their quaint mediæval costumes of the royal household. Then came the officers of the orders of knighthood, then the official ushers of the royal palace. Five of the highest Lords of the realm, bearing the standards of the various dominions of the empire, were followed by the four Knights of the Garter who carried the King's canopy. The Queen, gowned in her gorgeous coronation robe and carrying a great bouquet of pink carnations, followed the nobles who carried her regalia. After the Queen's suite came the highest nobles of the kingdom, attended by their pages and bearing the regalia of King George. Great clergymen, diplomats, soldiers, and administrators made up this group. After them walked the King in his crimson robe and cap of state, looking very tired and overweighted by the splendor which was but the symbol of the vast responsibility which he was taking upon himself.

A thunderous shout "God save the King" rang through every corner of the Abbey as George made his way to the chair of state. "Be strong and play the man," sang the glorious choir; "keep the commandments of the Lord thy God and walk in his way." The ancient ceremony familiar for twelve hundred years was performed with only the actors changed. The Archbishop of Canterbury presented the King. Facing the four sides of the Abbey in succession he announced:

"Sirs, I here present unto you King George, the undoubted King of this realm; wherefore, all of you who are come this day to do your homage and service, are you willing to do the same?"

As the voice of the Archbishop died away, the spell was broken by the blast of the trumpeters and the mighty chorus of "God save the King!" fairly shook the edifice. Then followed the various rites of the ancient service. The King solemnly swore to and signed the oath committing him to govern according to the laws of the land and to maintain the Protestant form of religion. He was anointed by the Archbishop of Canterbury and invested with all the regalia and insignia which symbolize the justice and mercy of his power. Then reverently the Archbishop placed the crown upon his head, and again the trumpets sounded. Once more the Abbey resounded with cheers and the cry "God save the King!" and as it escaped the walls and was echoed and reechoed by the throng outside it passed through the millions gathered in the streets to watch the great pageant, and the mightiest choir that the world has ever seen united in singing Great Britain's National Anthem.

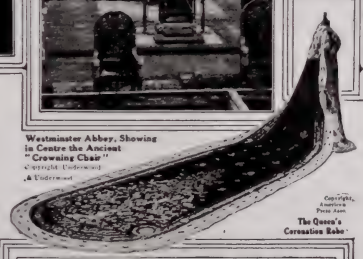
After the boyish Prince of Wales in his robes as a Knight of the Garter, the Duke of Connaught and the other great nobles had done their homage, the simpler ceremony of the crowning of the Queen took place. Oblations at the altar and the celebration of the Holy Sacrament concluded the chief functions of the ceremony, and the procession was reformed for the return to Buckingham Palace. Along the entire route the crowds, many of whom had waited thirty hours in their places, cheered as the soldiers and the sailors and the bands went by and cried in more subdued fashion, "God save the King!" as the newly-crowned monarch returned to the palace. One American who had watched these vast orderly throngs through the hours which preceded the actual ceremonies, after having told of singing and the noise which they had made to keep themselves amused, said: "But what mattered that when one thought of what he knew was passing in their minds? Was it love of their King, or was it a desire to witness a grandiose spectacle? Steeped in the atmosphere of the past, it was a magnificent sight! Yet the whole crowd seemed to see a vision of the eighteen hundred years of England's glory." The great crowds of people were orderly and good natured. No untoward circumstance marked the day. Though it rained slightly in the early morning the sky cleared and the sun came out just as the King was leaving Buckingham to go to the Abbey.

In chair seats reserved in Westminster Abbey for the principal members of the Diplomatic Corps, sat Ambassador and Mrs. Whitelaw Reid, the former in the American diplomatic uniform of plain evening dress, with two or three medals on the lapel of the coat. Mrs. Reid wore white with a magnificent collar of diamonds and a diamond crown. John Hays Hammond occupied a seat almost opposite that of the American Ambassador. Mr. Hammond made his entry in the procession with the other special representatives of foreign powers and potentates. The only unofficial Americans were Charles P. Taft, the President's brother, with Mrs. Taft and Miss Taft, J. Pierpont Morgan and eight newspaper men. Mrs. Taft wore a white satin gown embroidered in brilliants and her jewels were pearls and diamonds.

The Rt. Rev. Randell Davidson, Archbishop of Canterbury

The Royal Coach on Its Way to Westminster

Copyright Underwood & Underwood



Her Majesty Queen Mary of Great Britain

His Majesty George V., King of Great Britain

Westminster Abbey, Showing in Centre the Ancient "Crowning Chair"

Copyright Underwood & Underwood

Copyright, America Press Assn.

The Queen's Coronation Robe

Copyright Brown Bros.

Japan's Representatives at the Coronation, General Nogi and Admiral Togo

OUR EDITORIAL FORUM

OTTO KOENIG, President — GEO. H. SANDISON, Managing Editor — THEODORE WATERS, Secretary

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD is published weekly by "The Christian Herald," at the Bible House, Fourth Avenue, 8th and 9th Sts., New York City. The officers are: Otto Koenig, President and Treasurer, Bible House, N. Y. City; Geo. H. Sandison, Vice-President, Bible House, N. Y. City; Theodore Waters, Secretary, Bible House, N. Y. City.

Subscription Price, $1.50 a year, in advance.
Remittances should always be made in the safest manner available to the remitter. Register cash remittances.
Foreign Postage.—For each copy to be mailed outside the United States, Canada, and Mexico, add one dollar a year.

Change of Date.—It takes at least two weeks to change the date, after your subscription is renewed.
Expiration of Subscription.—The date on the wrapper indicates when your subscription ends.
Change of Address.—It requires three weeks' time to make the change. Give both old and new address.

Subscriptions may commence with any issue.
Letters should be addressed, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, Bible House, New York.

Entered at Post Office, New York, as Second-class Matter
Entered as Second-class Matter at the Post Office Department, Ottawa

Cheerful Christians

AMONG the many letters that come to us from our readers, it is a pleasure to note that the great majority of them are cheerful in tone, full of spiritual sunshine and broad and generous in their views of life and its duties. Although there are many of these friends whom we have never met, we love to picture them in imagination, with cheerfulness chiseled on every feature, with the grace of inward goodness shining through the eyes and speaking through the lips. We love to picture them as radiating sunshine wherever they go, carrying it into the homes of sickness, and into the social, friendly gatherings of which they form a part. And why should cheerfulness not be an essential part of the Christian character? Does not the Gospel—or the good-spell, as the old Anglo-Saxons had it—mean simply "glad news"? And if the sense of the Divine goodness is so strong and pervasive in nature that it helps the flowers to smile and the birds to sing and the winds to whistle and everything animate and inanimate to rejoice, why should not a glad heart and a cheerful mind be the heritage of every Christian on the face of the globe? We know there are some good people who suffer from dolefulness and depression at times. There are days when the world looks dark, and when it seems as though things went all wrong; but these bad spells pass, and when the depressed one takes the load of trouble to the throne of grace and lays it down there, then there come into the sad and lonely heart great shafts of celestial sunshine and cheer, messengers from God that quicken the life anew and give freshness and joy to existence. The truth is that Christianity and gloom are antagonistic terms; like oil and water, they do not mix well together. A gloomy Christian is an anachronism. Why should we be despondent, morbid and dull, if the heart be right and if we are living in God's sunshine and doing his work? We know that our Father above understands all our needs and that "He is faithful that promised"; we know that in his own good time every wrong will be righted, every evil redressed, every sorrow comforted. Knowing this, we see no reason why this old world of ours should be taken as a place of penance, instead of as a scene of joyous service and useful existence surrounded by blessings, as God meant it should be. We commend the optimistic attitude—the optimism of faith in God, of cheerful work wherever our lot may be cast. Get the cheerful habit. Sing and smile and laugh away gloom, worry and cynicism; whistle away the blues! Get out into the sunshine, and when any gloomy spell comes, just remember that you are one of the heirs of all the promises and that no matter what comes here, He will make it all right by and by. We may drift a little at times, but

> We surely know we cannot drift
> Beyond his love and care.

When the dark hours come, as come they will at times to every life, make a straight run for port and lay all your troubles before your Father, who will "carry you through." We have known of many good Christians who, at such times, instead of personal petitions, left their own demands unuttered and gave themselves wholly up to praise and thanksgiving. Half an hour of such prayer is a tonic for a whole day long.

Significance of the Coronation

EMPEROR MUTSUHITO, Japan's poet-ruler, on the occasion of the coronation of England's King, sent a quaint little coronation ode which, translated, reads:

> When nation speaks to nation in the tones
> Of friendly greeting, 'tis a joy to hear.
> When nations dwell in pence beneath the sway
> Of wise, good rulers, 'tis a joy to see.

And the whole British Empire evidently feels that it has placed the imperial crown upon the head of one who is both wise and good—a ruler who is sound-hearted, clean-minded, serious of purpose and public-spirited. In the mighty gathering of British subjects in London, and in the whole-souled demonstrations of loyalty to their newly-crowned king, we have the spectacle of one of the most democratic and progressive peoples of the earth uniting to honor those mediæval ideals that still pervade their national life. Deep-rooted in the British heart is custom; and although the throne and all its appurtenances have come to be but the symbols of the true power of the realm—the people themselves—they still choose to preserve their ancient kingship and to invest it with all the pomp and grandeur of ten centuries ago. England is in the midst of a splendid development of the democratic spirit. The Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr. Lloyd-George, is a democrat with strong socialistic tendencies. The present Liberal government has enacted several socialistic measures without strong opposition from the Conservative forces. The land-holdings of the hereditary nobility have recently been taxed on their commercial value. Many problems that have long been subjects of heated controversy are being safely and quietly solved. The very existence of the House of Lords as a legislative body is seriously threatened. Yet England, to a man, turns out to acclaim its sovereign and to applaud the appearance of those very lords from whom some of its people would wrest the power to influence its legislation. The inborn loyalty and persistent conservatism of the British people made possible the gorgeous ceremony of June 22. All the world has remarked this fixed trait of the British character, nor is it the least admirable of British traits. Not alone to attest its loyalty to the constitutional monarchy and the Protestant form of religion has England incurred the great expense of this national demonstration. It is another triumph of the British ideal of holding fast to old customs which have proved good till that which will, beyond all doubt, prove better, presents itself. We extend the open hand to our friends across the sea, and we heartily join them in their wish for a successful reign for the newly-crowned ruler of the ancient empire.

Our Fleet in German Waters

EMPEROR WILLIAM and the entire German fleet gave an imperial welcome to the American squadron on its arrival at Kiel on June 21. Personally congratulating Rear-Admiral Badger, the American commander, the Kaiser complimented him upon the fine showing made by our warships, their officers and crews. It was an occasion of friendly exchanges and pleasing comradeships between the representatives of the two nations. There is no ruler in Europe who can outvie the Emperor as a host and entertainer, and he took especial pains to impress the visitors with the genuineness of Germany's greeting and the sincerity of its friendship. It was the first formal visit to a German port of any important American sea-going force, and our "jackies" as well as their officers were delighted with the warmth of their welcome and the generous treatment extended to them as guests. Such events produce mutual respect and lay the foundations of international good feeling.

War on Medical Quacks

THERE are evidences that the day of the vender of health nostrums and cure-alls is nearing a close. On June 22, President Taft sent to the extra session of Congress the sole message it will have to consider besides the subject of Reciprocity. It recommends an amendment to the Pure-Food Law so that it should not include in its protective restrictions worthless nostrums and quack medicines labeled so as to deceive the defenseless public. It is understood that over two thousand cases have been prepared for trial in the courts against the venders of cure-alls and worthless drugs. These belong to the class which the President in his message declares to be among the rankest frauds ever conceived. Unless the law is amended, they will not only escape punishment, but will be sheltered by the inadequacy of the statute itself. One of the saddest aspects of this class of cases is that a majority of the dupes are poor, sick men and women, who are ready to grasp at anything that promises to offer them relief. For the sake of our helpless sufferers, and to protect its readers as a whole against the impositions of these charlatans, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD long ago excluded all such advertisements from its pages. It should not be possible, through any technicality or any wrong interpretation of the law, to shield such offenders or to permit their nefarious business to flourish unchecked. They prosper on the credulity of the ignorant and the helpless—the very class who need protection most. If the Pure Food and Drug Act is to be of real service, it should root out unsparingly these conscienceless traffickers in ridiculous cures and catchpenny medicines. It should be made practically impossible for such humbugs to flourish longer at the public expense.

The Church and the Peace Movement

THE fact of deepest and widest significance in the church life of the United States to-day is that the organized Christian forces have found their united voice and are speaking on the great question of International Peace.

On Saturday afternoon, June 17, there took place at the White House in Washington a memorable interview. The occasion was the introduction to President Taft, by the Rev. E. B. Sanford, D.D., Secretary of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, of the Rev. F. B. Meyer, who brought to the Chief Executive the official greetings of the National Council of the Evangelical Free Churches of England and Wales. The message of the churches across the sea to our President is as follows:

Mr. President: On behalf of the National Council representing the whole of the Evangelical Free Churches of England and Wales, having about 10,000 separate congregations, we beg to express our profound thankfulness, not only for the most Christian proposals that you have made in favor of arbitration between the two countries, but for the cordial unanimity with which these proposals have been welcomed.

Not only have you taken a step in advance more momentous than any statesman has previously ventured to suggest, but you have had the happiness of witnessing its approval, both by the masses of the people and their leaders, more farspread and enthusiastic than anything that has been witnessed in this generation.

We are gratified to know that these proposals are to be embodied in a permanent form, and we cannot doubt that they will have a profound effect on the relations between civilized nations. We welcome the growing community of conviction and feeling between the United States and Great Britain which evinces their agreement in humane aspiration, progressive spirit, and moral ideals. Holding as they do empire over a third of the population of the world, their agreement to withdraw all disputes from the final arbitrament of the sword must have far-reaching results.

We beg to offer you the expressions of our profound respect and congratulation, and of our wish that you may long be spared to exert your personal influence on behalf of all that will help to further the upward progress of mankind.

REV. CHARLES BROWN, President.
SIR J. COMPTON RICHETT, Treasurer.
REV. F. B. MEYER, Secretary.

President Taft expressed himself as greatly pleased that the churches of the two great nations were back of him with their moral support. What made him glad was not alone what had been accomplished by the churches, but what was promised through their united efforts. It has yet to be shown that the churches are loyal to their leaders in this great movement. More than 100,000 ministers and pastors of churches in the fellowship of the Federal Council welcomed the call extended to them by the Council to devote the services on Sunday, July 2, to consideration of the questions of Peace and International Arbitration.

Contents of this Number

Wednesday, July 5, 1911

	PAGE
Our Mail-Bag	678
The White House Silver Wedding (Illustrated)	679, 690
Smile and Sunshine. Sermon. By Rev. Charles F. Aked, D.D.	680, 681
The Joy of Hard Work. By Eugene Thwing	681
Christian Endeavorers by the Sea (Portraits)	682
The New Ocean Queen's Maiden Voyage (Illustrated)	682
Coronation of King George (Illustrated)	683
OUR EDITORIAL FORUM	684
THE BIBLE AND NEWSPAPER (Illustrated)	685
Recalling the Old Viking Days (Illustrated). By William Durban	686
What One Woman Did for Her Race (Illustrated). By Alfred Free, Ph.D.	687
Young People's Societies	687
In My Veranda Easy Chair. By Margaret E. Sangster	688
Our Boys and Girls (Illustrated). By Miss Janet Porter	689
Another Talk on Thrift	690
The Apple Tree and Jimmy. By Eleanor H. Porter	691, 692, 695
Love's Work	693, 694
Sunday School Lesson, by Dr. and Mrs. W. F. Crafts

THE BIBLE AND NEWSPAPER

Conducted by FERDINAND C. IGLEHART, D.D.

Senator Lea Saves Wife

THE wife of Senator Luke Lea of Tennessee, who had been an invalid for several months, was operated upon at the Georgetown University Hospital, the other day, and was rapidly sinking down to death when Drs. H. F. Frey and George T. Vaughan told her husband that the only chance of her life was the transfusion of a large quantity of blood from some strong and healthy person. The Senator immediately replied: "I am that subject," and removing his coat and baring his strong arm said, "I am ready as soon as you are." Incisions were made in arteries in the arms of husband and wife, they were connected by a tube and a pump sent the life fluid of the strong man into the body of the weak woman. Gradually the color was restored to the lips and cheeks of the pale sufferer. At the same time the flush faded from the cheeks of her husband. The process of transfusion was continued for an hour and a half, taking three pints of blood from the Senator, after which he fell fainting to the floor. The doctors believe that Mrs. Lea, who would have been dead in a very short time, will live and that the Senator will be restored to his full vigor in a few days. Senator Lea is only thirty-two years old, the youngest member of the United States Senate. He is a lawyer and the owner of a newspaper in Nashville, of which Senator Carmack was the editor at the time of his tragic death. Senator Lea was elected to the United States Senate in January in a non-partisan contest upon the issue of the State-wide prohibition of the liquor traffic and the rigid enforcement of the State prohibitory law now in force. The saving of the life of his wife at the risk of his own is a mark of chivalry confined to no section and very common in the South. In contrast to the brazen divorces that push themselves into public notice there is this splendid illustration of domestic fidelity, which is fortunately the rule in American home life, and which is in obedience to the instructions of the apostle.

Let every one of you in particular so love his wife even as himself; and the wife see that she reverence her husband. (Eph. 5:33.)

Discarded Cash from Korea

When Japan annexed Korea it decided that Korean money should be discarded and replaced by Japanese currency. The steamship Seneca, which arrived at a Brooklyn dock yesterday, brought 1,400 tons of Korean metal money as a part of the cargo. About 20,000 tons more will be brought to this country, where it will be taken to the smelting works of the United States Metals Refining Company at Chrome, N. J., and melted. The various metals extracted from the coins will be remoulded into bars and sold in the market. Much copper and silver will be obtained from these coins. Korea, which got its civilization from China and is older than Japan, is thus further humiliated by having the government stamp and authority taken from its coin. Japan did not intend that any traces of the old government should be left upon the circulating medium of the nation. This custom was followed by the Romans, as suggested by the piece of coin Christ asked of those theological students who tried to trap him:

Show me the tribute money. And they brought unto him a penny. And he said unto them, Whose is the image and superscription? They said unto him, Cæsar's. (Matt. 22:19-21.)

Boys' Duel Fatal

Two boys, sixteen years old, schoolmates most of their life, got into a quarrel while playing a game of "cat" in a public lot at West Eighty-first Street, near Broadway, New York City, the other day. They decided to fight it out. They went over a few blocks, and crawled through a hole in a high board fence out of the sight of the "cops." A prize ring was made, seconds were selected, a referee was chosen, and Frank Burke and James Wesley Smith, the two little bullies, began the fight with their bare fists. In the rounds Burke's eye was closed, and he struck Smith back with desperation, landing a blow on Smith's stomach, which threw him to the ground. Ten was counted and the boy did not arise. The twenty boys, ten on a side, who were witnesses of the duel, ran away. Burke got a bucket of water at a house near by, dashed it in Smith's face, and then ran away, and a negro bell-boy pulled the dead body of Smith through the hole in the fence to a corner drugstore, where a physician was summoned, who pronounced the boy dead, and an ambulance was called to take him to the morgue. Some of the newspapers in reporting the tragedy were inclined to emphasize the pluck of the boys and commend the fact that in the scrap the rules of the game were pretty well observed; but we look upon this as one of the most shocking conceivable tragedies, where two promising boys, friends, make a ring and start in to batter each other like devils. Neither would consent to a time limit when the fight began. It was to be until one or the other was knocked out. They were only imitating the older people of the tough prize-fight gang, and are only infinitesimal hints of the kings that quarrel over smaller things than a game of "cat" and set their uniformed agents to the task of doing each other to death. A promising young life has gone out through folly and sin, and another life just beginning will be marked to its end with a streak of blood. Against human anger and the murder and suicide of the duel and all forms of manslaughter following it, this law of God stands:

Thou shalt not kill. (Ex. 20: 13.)

Fooled the Fish

At this angling time sportsmen will be interested in the fishing device by which Forest Hennion and Charles Jacobus took from Green Lake, N. J., pretty nearly a wagon load of bass and pickerel with pole and line. The lake is very clear and the men put a large mirror at the bottom of it and fished over the glass. Every worm looked like two and was increased wonderfully in size. They also trolled

Senator Luke Lea of Tennessee and Mrs. Lea with a hand mirror that was tied to and reflected the nightwalker on the spinner. In a few hours they caught their boat full of fish. The game warden is hoping to find some means of punishing the men for their wholesale slaughter of the finny tribe. That kind of deadly fishing would soon exhaust the streams and leave fun for no one. The deceit of the fish with a mirror at the bottom of the lake and the one attached to the spinner is no greater than that of a piece of metal and feathers made to look like a fly, bug, worm, shiner, or other bait, nor the catgut leader to make the fish think there is no relation between the hook and the line on which he is to be hung. All these devices remind us of the deceit Satan constantly uses in the concealed hook and bait he uses to catch the soul. The metal hook and feathers are the butterflies, the pearl and silver spinner the live fish, the mirror in the lake or on the line, magnifying in numbers and in size the attractions and promises of pleasure and satisfaction. The tempted think they are to have everything and they get nothing but the hook. The pity is that there are so many that are deceived by the bait and caught on the hook of temptation. Satan's deceit and the caution in avoiding it are thus referred to by the apostle:

Lest Satan should get an advantage of us: for we are not ignorant of his devices. (II. Cor. 2:11.)

Revenge of a Horse

Sergeant Edwin J. Hughes of the New York City police was seated upon his magnificent black horse "Midnight" when a vicious bulldog rushed up to the horse and sank his teeth in the animal's right leg. Midnight kicked the dog loose, leaped straight into the air and began to run, not away from but after the dog. The horse forgot that he had a rider and zigzagged over street and sidewalk in a wild chase after the fleeing dog, during which the sergeant was thrown to the ground. The dog ducked and doubled. Midnight was hot upon his track. After a chase of about three hundred yards the horse managed to jump with both feet on the dog, crushing the life out of him. The surly dog had no business to punish the kindly horse who was doing benevolent duty in the interest of the public, and got his dues for his brutal insolence. Revenge is a strong characteristic in many of the lower animals, reaching its climax perhaps in the elephant. Horses, though sensitive to ill treatment, seldom manifest their revenge in so intelligent, persistent and summary a manner as Midnight did. No one thinks of blaming the horse for a settlement with the bulldog, but the law of love and not of vengeance is upon man's conduct, and he cannot punish his enemy at will by force as the police horse did.

Dearly beloved, avenge not yourselves, but rather give place unto wrath; for it is written, Vengeance is mine; I will repay, saith the Lord. (Rom. 12: 19.)

A Grateful Servant

In an engagement in Virginia during the Civil War Colonel Thomas Willis, commanding a Connecticut regiment, took some prisoners, including a negro slave. Some Union soldiers, in hastening toward a stockade prison, beat this negro, who was lame and could not keep up the pace. "Hold on, sir!" exclaimed Colonel Willis; "let that black fellow alone," and he put the slave, whose name was Henry Green, badly disabled, on his own horse and took him to the prison. Not long afterward came the end of the war. "Marse Colonel," the black man—then young and strong—pleaded, "let me go wif yo' all, let me stay 'long wif yo' de rest o' mah life." The colonel was rich. He took Henry Green to the North, and ever since, both in Hartford and in East Orange, the negro was his personal bodyguard and butler. Three years ago the colonel died. A clause in his will directed that Henry Green so long as he lived should be clothed and fed and paid good wages, and at the death of both, the body of the servant was to be laid crosswise at the foot of his master's grave. Henry died last week, and his attendants say that his last words were "Marse Colonel, I'se comin'." A paper indicates that some wealthy people of Hartford have entered a protest against allowing the old colored servant to be buried in his master's lot. We hardly think so foolish a prejudice could exist, but if it should, we doubt whether it could make its protest effective. The colored servant lived a life of devotion to the colonel for having saved his life. Christ has saved us and we owe him a continuous and cheerful service during our natural lives. Paul describes this complete service which is due by the reference to the custom of olden times of the master branding his slave, and he rejoices in the brand which indicates his faithful servitude to Christ.

For I bear in my body the marks of the Lord Jesus. (Gal. 6:17.)

Sermon at Ball Game

At a Sunday base ball game at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., recently, Rev. J. W. Larkin preached a sermon. The preaching service had been widely advertised as a feature of the afternoon sport, and a thousand people gathered about the platform desk placed in the right field just below the third base. The minister commended the game, which he said was innocent amusement for the Sabbath, and preached a sermon on practical religion to fit the masses. One minute after the clergymen had retired the umpire shouted "play ball" and the game began. From our standpoint, such a sermon and service was a parody, a mockery. We will not be uncharitable enough to charge that it was a desire for sensation, so censurable in some American pulpits, which prompted the experiment. We will give the speaker credit for right intentions in what he and many like him would call a broad view of things. At the very time he was preaching the church people of New York State were fighting desperately at Albany to prevent the legislature legalizing Sunday base ball on the ground of its widespread demoralization to the young and to the community in general. We suspect that the forces of moral evil were as much delighted as the friends of public virtue were grieved at the Sunday performance of the liberal minister. A banner over the preacher's desk might appropriately have had this text:

Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy. (Ex. 20: 8.)

Recalling the Old Viking Days

The Ancient Abbey and Monastery of Mont St. Michel, on the Coast of Normandy

Statue of Joan of Arc as a Prisoner at Rouen

Copyright by Underwood & Underwood, New York

The Birthplace of Joan of Arc at Domremy-la-Pucelle, Vosges, France

By WILLIAM DURBAN

PERHAPS nowhere on earth is a greater amount of the realistic romance of history packed into one small territory than in the region of France known as Normandy, which, since France was revolutionized, has been made to include the five rich departments of Seine Inférieure, Eure, Orne, Calvados, and Manche.

Each of the two sections of Normandy, Upper and Lower, is now being gratified by celebrations specially located in its capital. The President of the Republic appointed June 24 for his visit to Rouen, and July 15 and 16 for Caen. All the world is hearing of the splendid pageants, for which elaborate and enthusiastic preparations have been long made. Paris will provide entertainment for those of its citizens who cannot repair to the two old cities.

Perhaps no race ever combined as did the Norsemen who settled in France, in such equilibrated proportions, the qualities that went to make up the character known as chivalry. They beyond all others blended militarism and devotion, fighting and prayer, etiquette with dauntless valor, scientific culture of the military art with passionate love of poetry, love of conquest with delight in the most refined architectural construction, and irrepressible seeking of new coasts for establishing their colonies with determination to consolidate their settled rule.

Historians record that when King Harold II., while encamped on the fateful hill at Senlac, heard some of his Saxon followers jeering at the chanting and praying of the Normans in the opposite camp, he rebuked them by predicting that it would soon enough be proved that those same opponents could fight as persistently as they could pray. But what ravaging plunderers the fathers of the Frankish Normans had been! A band of the Norse pirates, swooping down from the savage Scandinavian fastnesses, fixed their grip in 911 on the fair coasts of the region then known as Neustria. To their terrible leader, Rollo, baptized into Christianity under the name of Robert, was given by King Charles the Bold, as a fiefdom, half of the province, to be held under the suzerainty of the French crown, together with the Princess Gisela, daughter of the king, as wife. That is the memorable event commemorated this season in France. For several centuries England and France wrestled for the possession of Normandy, each side winning brilliantly and losing disastrously by turns. Normandy had conquered England to become the vassal of the land it had subdued, till after a series of vicissitudes it became at length French forever.

Take Upper Normandy, and say if its towns are not unique in their architectural allurements? Rouen, with its cathedrals of Notre Dame and St. Maclou, fantastic with the grace of thirteenth and fifteenth century conceptions in stone and in iron; Evreux, whose cathedral is flamboyant with the confusion of the glories of the styles of seven centuries; Lillebonne, with the ruins of that castle in which William proposed to his nobles the invasion of England; Yvetot, where once petty kinglets ruled at whom Béranger so heartily laughs; Lisieux, Harfleur, Honfleur, Le Havre and Dieppe—these are chief amongst the quaint places that captivate the tourist. Then in Lower Normandy, none of the visitors can forget the charms of Caen, once supreme in Norman militant councils, with its two churches of the Conqueror's day; Falaise, where lived the daughter of the simple tanner who won the heart of Robert "the Devil," sixth of the haughty dukes, and in 1027 gave birth to William the Conqueror. Right back to two thousand years dates Bayeux, with its venerable annals and its incomparable tapestry. Coutances, too, is entitled to a millennial celebration, with its enchanting cathedral of St. Lo. A little pilgrimage further on is Avranches, one of the very oldest of all Normandy's cities, perched on a cliff commanding a view of the Bay of St. Michel. Alençon, too, the fine city of the Department of Orne, world-famed for its fine cathedral and its point lace, participates in the commemoration of the history of a thousand years.

The most picturesque thing in all Normandy is the curious conglomeration of monastery, abbey, and fortifications towering on the wonderful crag over the coast, that goes by the name of Mont St. Michel, where, the legend tells us, the Archangel Michael appeared in a vision to Aubert, Bishop of Avranches.

"La Normandie" to-day is almost bewildering in its variety of urban and rural fascinations. Its inhabitants are by far the most versatile, so far as industry is concerned, in all France, for they excel equally as sailors, fishermen, agriculturists, poulterers, cattle-raisers, and horticulturists; and these stalwart and intelligent yeomen are proud of the wonderful mediæval and antique cities dotted about all over their province.

. . .

Dr. Durban's article, which refers to the thousandth anniversary of the Northmen, now being celebrated in France, describes events that are going on simultaneously with a second celebration—the five-hundredth anniversary of the birth at the little village of Domremy, of Joan of Arc, the "Maid of Orleans." Joan was born in 1411. At Compiègne a great historical mediæval pageant has been planned in her honor. Battle scenes in which "the Maid" is a prominent figure, tournaments in which armed knights run tilt against each other; processions where men and women in the costumes of that ancient day, mingle with men-at-arms, bowmen and spearmen; attacks on fortresses, led by columns with all the ancient standards and military insignia of those days—these are some of the picturesque attractions of the celebration in honor of "the Maid," who was burned at the stake as a "sorceress and heretic" in 1431 at Rouen.

TOPICS OF INTEREST THROUGHOUT THE WORLD

—A LARGE new geyser came into existence in Norris Geyser Basin in Yellowstone National Park on June 19. The new geyser has been named The Harvard, in honor of the delegation of Harvard alumni which arrived in Yellowstone Park on the same day it was discovered. They had been attending the convention of Harvard clubs. The new geyser plays to a height of over 100 feet.

—THE BRITISH Government's invitation to Morocco to send a special ambassador to the coronation of King George was recently withdrawn, and the Foreign Office notified El Mokri, who had been designated to represent Sultan Mulay Hafid, that he will not be received. This action on the part of the British Government was brought about by the cruelty with which the Sultan's troops treated women and children in the recent raid from Fez. The soldiers captured many women and girls in the neighboring villages and sold them in the streets of Fez.

—THE DAILY lowering of the water in the cofferdam which now surrounds the remains of the battleship Maine in Havana Harbor discloses more and more fully the vastness of the explosions which sent her to that berth of mud thirteen years ago. On account of these revelations all plans heretofore proposed for the ultimate removal of the hulk have become merely conjectural. That the old ship will ever float again of her own bouyancy is no longer hoped. Piecemeal removal is now about the only alternative left. So far very few bodies have been recovered, though the exploration of the coral-encrusted hulk has brought forth many surprises. Two raincoats, a paper-covered book, some door-mats and other articles have been found well preserved. In one of the cabins a pair of encrusted and corroded binoculars were found still on the table where their owner had placed them the night before the catastrophe.

—THE POLITICAL HORIZON seems to be clearing in Mexico. The promise of factional strife in the ranks of the new controllers of the land have been happily broken. General Reyes has publicly announced his withdrawal from the coming Presidential race, and has asked the Mexican people who favored his candidacy to support Madero. The manifesto which makes this announcement also explains General Reyes' position as a soldier, which demanded a blind following of the orders of the Diaz government, to which he was loyal as a soldier, but that his ideas had always been favorable to the reforms advocated by Madero. Following a visit to the Presidential residence at Chapultepec Castle, General Madero said: "If I should be elected President, Senor de la Barra will be Minister of Foreign Relations and General Reyes will be Minister of War in my Cabinet." General Zapata, the bandit leader, whose future conduct was at one time very problematical, has accepted the authority of the provisional government and come into Mexico City to answer charges against him before Madero. General Diaz, whose health is considerably improved, has been cordially received by the various European countries he has visited. He said recently he wished every success would attend the new administration, as his hope is for the land whose destiny he controlled for over thirty years.

What One Woman Did for Her Race

'N VIEW of the great amount of good work that is being done for human advancement, one can- not be wholly pessimistic to-day. Indeed, the lls for aid in such work that come to the charita- y inclined men and women of our land are so merous and varied that none can fail of oppor- nity for wise investment. Here, for instance, is e industrial school for young colored people, cated at Mayesville, S. C., in the ry centre of the "black belt," ith a student enrolment, last year, nearly 600 boys and girls. It id its inception, many years ago, the brain and heart of a young lored woman, born in slavery. he story of her struggles to secure n education reads like a chapter om a thrilling romance. Her ersonal endowment for her work complished, Emma Wilson went ack to the home of her childhood nd opened a school for children of er race, in an old, abandoned cot- n-gin. Space will not permit me o give even a meagre outline of her eroic work, although I count it ner than any sermon or story of odern times. Many of the read- rs of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD are ready familiar with it.

The beginning seemed unpro- itious. Ten pupils came at her all; but the dingy surroundings ere uninviting, and the outlook loomy; friends were few and morous. But she had faith in od and in her ideals. Impelled y a passion for her race, she per- isted. Her one aim was to found school and dedicate it to the glory f God and the uplift of her race. It included ot merely the instruction of her pupils in the three R's," but also, and emphatically, a prepara- ion for the actual duties of life. She would teach hem how to "do things." They should learn how o work and make themselves truly free and inde- endent.

Her enterprise grew. The number of pupils in- reased, and soon additional teachers were needed nd employed. The doubts and fears of her friends were conquered; social prejudices were disarmed. The white people of the county and State became proud of the Mayesville Industrial School, and prominent citizens of the neighborhood were glad to be chosen to its Board of Directors. But financial backing was sadly deficient. Then Miss Wilson, supporting herself by manual toil, unheralded but undaunted, made her way to the North and found or made ways to bring her cause to the attention of philanthropic people. It is a story replete with moral heroism.

The Emma Wilson School at Mayesville, S. C.

From a beginning with ten pupils the school has grown to an annual enrolment of nearly six hundred. It owns fifty-four acres of good farm-land, and is now completing the erection of its eighth substantial building. The main edifice, which contains the chapel, class-rooms and boys' dormitories, has become overcrowded, and an effort is being made to secure funds to erect a new modern building for chapel and class-rooms; after which the old building should be enlarged to house the increasing number of boys.

The farm is the principal agency in the training of the boys, who come mainly from rural districts. They are instructed in scientific and intensive farming: how to get the most out of the soil, and how to conserve its productivity. An opportunity is now presented to the school to secure a valuable tract of land, adjacent to its present holdings, containing four acres, with buildings. To purchase this $2,500 is needed. With this additional land and some very essential increase in implements and equipments, Miss Wilson figures that the boarding department of the school would be entirely supplied with its own food.

Built largely by the students themselves from plans drawn in the school, there are now upon the property at present owned, beside the school-buildings, a blacksmith shop, a carpenter shop and other structures in which cooking, dress-making, tailoring and other domestic arts are taught. Of the 563 pupils enrolled last year two-thirds were girls; 118 boarded in the school, the others coming from the surrounding country; 35 entirely indigent pupils were supported wholly by the school.

The school publishes monthly a small paper, edited by the pupils; but they sorely need a good printing press. They need other things. Ten thousand dollars would put them on their feet, and insure their going. Full information concerning the work and its needs may be obtained by applying to Miss Emma J. Wilson, President of the Board of Trustees, Mayesville, S. C. If large gifts are beyond the ability of the average person, smaller gifts will not fail to accomplish great and lasting good; and let us remember that "mony a mickle makes a muckle."

Winchendon, Mass. ALFRED FREE, PH.D.

TOPICS OF THE YOUNG PEOPLE'S SOCIETIES

From Need to Abundance*

PREACHERS have been lately remarking upon the decline of repentance. So much is being said in these days of the "duty of joy" and "the missionary effect of a smile," that we have perhaps been led to emphasize unduly the happy side of life and of religion. Still, we should not overlook the fact that the normal attitude of the Christian should not be one of gloom or despondency, but rather of joy and thanksgiving. A morbid and unhappy Christian is sadly out of place in the working scheme of Christ's kingdom. The man or woman who renders the best service and in whose hands things are made to "come to pass," is the man or woman whose faith shines brightly and whose face is an index of the happiness within. It was the famous Dr. Abernethy who, speaking of a sad-faced person, said, "He may be a Christian, but he looks as if it didn't agree with him."

Just as in practical, every-day life, we must from time to time search out our needs and must remedy our defects of character and equipment if we would succeed; just so in our spiritual life, we must sometimes examine ourselves for lacks and blemishes, and must acknowledge them to our Creator, beseeching him to supply us with help out of his abundance. On every hand are evidences of his individual love and care for each one of us. Even the most purblind Christian must see them, and yet most of us go on our way, failing to avail ourselves of his offered help until we fairly faint under our load of blunders and sins.

"There are," says Henry B. Wright, "two parts to every advance in civilization—God's part and man's part. God is ever ready with his plan, . . . but he never forces or compels it. Patiently and uncomplainingly he waits while the pupil in the school of life experiments with his own little, stubborn, selfish schemes, . . . until finally love, as revealed in the Teacher, awakens in the child confidence and a desire to be led."

Then how quickly and bountifully he responds, and how sharply, if our natures are sound, does Conscience upbraid us for our long delay in turning to the Great Helper!

Mr. Moody used to tell the story of an old slave in Mississippi. A young college man who was teaching in his town saw one day a sign-board upon which were the words, "Liberty, 40 miles." The whim took him to ask the old slave what those words meant, pointing to them as he spoke.

"De ol' slave don' read in dis yer country," replied the old man sadly.

"It says, 'Liberty, 40 miles,'" laughed the young man. "So why don't you start and go there?"

The slave shook his head and smiled sadly.

"Dat yer's a sham, young massa," he said, "but if it pointed up yonder," —he raised his trembling hand toward heaven—"to the liberty wherewith Christ makes us free, dat yer wouldn't be no sham."

In his soul, this ignorant man had availed himself of riches, of which this young man, with all his culture, had thought nothing. He was only one of the great army of the apostles and martyrs, of whom the world was not worthy, and who, amid the persecutions of time, received joy and strength from unseen sources.

Yet not until our bland and self-satisfied souls perceive that they are malformed and starving, does our Lord impart the deepest and richest blessings.

* Topic of the Epworth League for Sunday, July 16. TEXTS: Phil. 4:19; I. Cor. 10:13; Phil. 4:13.

Our Debts*

THE appreciation of obligation and the determination to discharge it should characterize every civilized being; but the very fact that we regard those traits as very noble indicates that they are not common.

One word expresses the quality which they embody. It is "honesty." And to show how highly our nation values it, think over our heroes and our "near heroes" (to borrow a current and telling slang phrase), and see how honesty crowns them all. Washington, Adams, Lincoln, Grant—go carefully over the list (it is not long); and then compare with it that of certain men whose brilliancy and ability might have made them forever dear to their country, and yet who failed to win its love and devotion because of some devious transaction, some blot upon the purity of their lives —which darkened their memory forevermore.

This is not to say that even the heroes that we honor the most were or are perfect. They had and have their faults, but we glory in their honesty.

The kind of honesty that attracts us most is the rugged and simple kind—the kind which shows at once in a man's face and bearing. When this accompanies a shrewd and penetrating mind, as in Abraham Lincoln, it wins the heart at once.

"I do not want it to be praise to a man," said Theodore Roosevelt lately in Colorado, "that he is honest. I want it to be an impossible supposition that he should be anything else. But if you train up your children to hear a shady scoundrel spoken of with a certain half-admiration, as, 'Well, he is smart'; if you let your children hear a man's crookedness excused on the ground that though he is a cheat, he cheats mighty well, you have only yourselves to blame if your legislatures betray you."

Next to the personal debts, which are the most necessary of all to be paid, come the debts to the community in which you live. You are born with these debts upon you, first, to pay your own way as a man and a citizen; and then to help to carry your town along. It has poor to be assisted, public institutions to be founded and supported, and a government to be kept pure and efficient. The man who contracts private debts for his food, clothing, lodging or whatever, and then runs away in order to get rid of paying them, is properly despised by all his fellows; but he is no more contemptible than the man who shifts the whole burden of the care of his town's poor and his town's politics upon others. This is especially true in a democratic government, and yet you know many who shirk that duty.

While you are yet young, get into the habit of being interested in the doings of your community. Find out what its needs and its resources are. Examine into the character of its officials. If you discover that things are wrong, give every instant that you can spare, and your best thought, to the task of setting them right. The corruption which has crept into so many of our municipalities and our States has sprung largely from the ignorance of our people; and even more largely from their indifference and carelessness, after they had been informed.

These are worldly debts; but above them all towers our great debt to our Creator and our Redeemer. We are to pay it with the loving service of our every power, every day we live, by extending God's kingdom and upholding his Church.

*Christian Endeavor Topic for Sunday, July 16. TEXT: Rom. 13 : 7-10.

IN MY VERANDA EASY CHAIR

The Trials of Children

By MARGARET E. SANGSTER

ARE we not prone to underrate the trials of little children? When they cry over a broken doll or a disappointment grown people are much too apt to be deficient in sympathy. The trial that looks very small to man or woman may be large enough to blot the sunshine from the child's day. Children take life very seriously. The little girl who misses a promotion would like to hide herself from the successful members of her class. Only a few years ago a boy of fifteen in New England was found dead in the woods, slain by his own youthful hand, because he had failed in his effort to be graduated from the high school. Parents should not be too ready to frown upon misdemeanors or failures that may be due to thoughtlessness, inexperience or misunderstanding. The burden that a child sometimes carries unsuspected by elder people, would tax the endurance of teachers, fathers and mothers. Be sympathetic with the children. I once knew a little maid who had the gift of tears. They changed to smiles when her father came home at night. She would run to him and say, "Daddy, carry me and comfort me."

. . .

A Hint to the Ministry

"DON'T you think it time that ministers should be more enthusiastic about getting whole families into the church? In my opinion there are too many churches. Husbands go to one, wives to another or all stay away.
"J. C. P."

Pardon me for saying that ministers cannot be enthusiastic very long if compelled to preach to empty pews. Fathers and mothers should insist that their children attend church with them. Too much liberty is allowed growing boys and girls in the matter of church going, with the result that young people do not form the habit of attending divine worship. If the family does its duty in filling up its own pew, and if the family next door are told about the good sermon that has been missed by absence, and if again during the week our minister is praised by the congregation, not one church but all churches in towns and villages will soon be comfortably filled. When the Rev. Campbell Morgan was told one summer that the New York churches were empty because people were out of town, he expressed his surprise, because everywhere he saw crowds of people, non-church-goers, who certainly were still in the city. Don't blame the ministry, dear friend. We who are church members need to get up steam ourselves. The subject is open for discussion.

. . .

An Old-Time Relic

AMONG the most prized gifts that came to the editor of this page just before Christmas, was a copy of the Massachusetts Sun, in excellent preservation, published in Worcester, July 17, 1776. Thirteen days previous to this issue the Declaration of Independence had been signed in Philadelphia. No braver deed was ever done by living men in the face of tremendous odds. The first article in the paper is the Declaration itself.

The type is quaint and old-fashioned, but the printing is done extremely well and the margins and spaces are generous. One is impressed by the time it took in those days to send letters from one point to another. Our modern rapid transit was entirely unknown. Perhaps one hundred years from now our own present methods may seem slow in the eyes of our descendants.

A little note from the proprietor of the paper courteously touches upon a vital point:

"I. Thomas, returns his sincere thanks to those gentlemen who have settled with him for News-papers for the year past: He begs that such as have not paid him, would be so considerate as to think of the great disadvantage it must be to him, to have so many small sums in different hands, therefore would now request that they would pay their respective ballances to Mr. Daniel Bigelow jun., (as he has removed to Boston,) which will greatly oblige their humble servant,

"ISAIAH THOMAS.
"Worcester, June 14, 1776."

. . .

An Afternoon Picnic

AN ALL-DAY picnic often sends people home very weary at nightfall. If it be a Sunday School or church affair, the older members of the party have so much responsibility concerning the children, the start has to be made so early and the return is frequently so late that a majority of those who have shared the outing declare that they are glad such picnics come but once a year. Preparations, too, must be made on so extensive a scale both for the food and the fun, that these, too, contribute to fatigue almost as much as to enjoyment. An impromptu afternoon picnic in which one or two families or a half dozen familiar friends combine has none of the disadvantages of the more elaborate function. To put up a simple luncheon of sandwiches, fruit and cake is an easy matter in most homes, and about four o'clock those who are going may set out together in the cars, on a ferry-boat, or in a sail-boat, according to the place where they live. If to the outfit may be added a basket containing cold tea or coffee and bottles of milk, or if at the picnic ground there is the opportunity to kindle a fire, boil water and make tea or coffee, the provision for the supper will be complete. As the summer twilight gathers story-telling and songs will naturally follow the pleasure of an informal meal, and between nine and ten o'clock the party may count on returning ready for a night of refreshing sleep. If you have never tried the plan of an afternon picnic organize one at once and see how charming it can be.

. . .

Saving for the Rainy Day

A MOTHER, whose young daughter is about for the first time to enter an active business life, has asked that something be said to young girls on the importance of saving for the rainy day. Others besides the young in this lavish age of ours and in this bountiful country need this reminder. The rainy day, by which is meant the day of illness, of loss of employment, of a sudden and pressing emergency, or of help that must be given to dear ones may come to the most prosperous. The temptation to a young girl who has been compelled to deny herself pretty things and nice clothing and the luxuries attractive to the young is to spend all she earns, put nothing aside and especially to be reckless in buying things to wear. A better way is for the young wage-earner from the very beginning of a business life to determine how much he or she will need for actual wants and then week by week lay aside a definite sum, however small, in the savings bank.

To spend all that one earns is foolish, while often to spend more than one earns is little short of criminal. If one would sleep well at night, meet the world fearlessly, and remain young in defiance of Time, one must be prudent and discreet in the use of money. A good test of character is to be observed in the manner in which money is treated by the average boy and girl. Parents should early train children in thrift, not in hoarding. If money is wisely saved, wisely spent, and wisely given away, character will broaden and deepen and happiness will be unshadowed.

. . .

A Misdemeanor

A STRENUOUS fight is being maintained in various parts of this land against an evil which menaces the peace of the home and works ruin to soul and body wherever it gets a foothold. The saloon is responsible for poverty, wretchedness and crime, and there are few of our cities in which it does not stand conspicuously on the corner of many a street. There are those who apologize for the saloon on the ground that it is the poor man's club, and that it affords him social privileges which he cannot otherwise compass when his income is scanty and his home ill-provided with even moderate comfort. The fact that the scanty income and the lacking comfort are abridged and accounted for by the saloon itself, and that the hard working woman at home is the chief sufferer from its influence, is overlooked by sentimental apologists.

In Tacoma, Wash., a step has been made in the right direction if it can be legally enforced. The authorities in that city have declared the common practice of treating to be a misdemeanor. A man must be contented with paying for his own glass, but may not invite his neighbor to drink with him. An old farmer who strongly held to total abstinence, having in his childhood suffered from the brutalities of a drunken father, and having witnessed the misery of his mother, made up his mind long ago that treating was one of the worst accompaniments of the drink habit. His home was on a New Jersey farm, and whenever he went to market in the nearest large town acquaintances would hail him with the request to come and take a drink. "No, thank you," the old man would shout amiably enough, "I won't drink with you, but if you insist I'll take the ten cents." This settled the matter without further debate. For the sake of women and children and of men in whom is good stuff, but who are demoralized by drink, every thoughtful householder must labor that the saloon as a power in the land may one day be abolished. The Tacoma people are moving forward with this end in view.

Copyright, Underwood & Underwood

The Kindergarten Housekeeping Game

IN MANY of the kindergartens throughout the country the games to which children devote themselves with greatest enthusiasm are made under the direction of trained and competent teachers, to instil the ever needed lessons of neatness, goodfellowship, forbearance and good manners. The accompanying photograph shows the tea party, that loved amusement of little girls, transformed into a miniature meal which the little housewives have prepared and from which they are to be taught lessons which lead on to interest in courses in domestic science.

Our Boys and Girls

Some Prize Winners in the Cozy Corner

OLD GLORY

E the flag a-waving high up in the sky;
Old Glory is a-floating and the sun is passing by.
Justice, valor, purity
Held up with security
y every loyal, faithful man ho would work with love for his native land.

"Playmates"
Mary Ladner, age 12

See the stars in the field of blue!
See Old Glory to which we are true!
Even the tiny tots
Cheer the brightcolor spots
And listen to the story
Of the flag and all its glory.

ALICE GREENAWALT, age 11.

Night

The leaves are rustling gently
Through the boughs that seem to say,
Welcome the time when all is still,
And the stars come out to play.

The flowers and grasses whisper,
And the cool breeze passes by,
And even the birds seem happier,
When night is drawing nigh.

MARGARET DENNISON, age 13.

A Sunshiny Shower

Little drops of water,
Dancing in the sun.
You could never, never count them,
Though they are falling one by one.

"Trusty Old Dick" Elinor Bray, age 13

And when the dance is finished,
In the sky you'll see
Colors bright as diamonds,
Dancing merrily.

EMMA HANSON, age 13.

The Tin Soldier

I'm an old little, tin little soldier
Thrown out from the window above,
In the cold and the wet and the dampness,
Where once I was petted and loved.

My small mistress, ah, but she's pretty;
Her eyes are the darkest of blue;

"The Old Swimming Hole"
Wentworth Lawson, age 15

Her lips are as red as a cherry,
I believe she looks something like you.

Oh, no! but it could not be you, dear,
That threw me far out in the cold!
A poor little, scuffed little soldier like me,
So stiff and so lame and so old.

LUCILE WELLS, age 11.

My Hospital

One day I made a dolls' hospital
Because all my dollies were sick
With broken legs and losted hair
Or maybe a crack in the neck:

Jane's eyes had both fallen in,
Elizabeth's arms and legs were gone,
Maria's fingers and hair were off.
Poor dear! She'd been ill so long!

Martha's neck was a little cracked,
But she was really very well,
So I had her help with the nursing,
She and my rag-doll Nell.

"Having a Good Time"
Donald Heil, age 11

There was poor old Punchy-Clown
Who was once so full of fun;
His head was off, and so we feared
That nothing could be done.

But we were very careful
And took care of all the dears,
And when we formed op'rations
There were always many tears.

ADDIE BOB BOWLES, age 10.

Buttercups

They come in the Spring; the first flowers I see
Are the buttercups, dearer than all to me;
For they whisper stories in my ear,
The kind of stories I love to hear.

Into my questioning eyes of brown,
They tell me this, as I look down:
"Little girl, little girl, you seem to say,
'May I cull you, dears, and carry you away?'"

RACHEL MOE.

The June Honor Roll and list of Prize Winners in last month's Cozy Corner contest will be published July 12.

"Dancing Bears on Our Lawn"
Betty Carter, age 14

"A Good Time"
Lucile King, age 16

MY DEAR BOYS AND GIRLS: You can readily see in these pages, made up of your own pictures, verses and stories, which we publish from time to time, that our standard of work is growing constantly higher. Perhaps it seems a very little thing to you to be interested in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD Cozy Corner, entering the prize contests each week and making friends with one another, and writing to the Cozy Corner Aunt, who is interested in everything that interests you; but it is not little. You are taking part in a big, inspiring and onward world movement among thousands of boys and girls, in which every one is important, and it is your own efforts and enthusiasm that are leading us on.

But right here I want to say something very special about your work. Most of it is fresh and original, and for this reason it is most interesting; yet now and again, a verse or a story that is not your own is sent to us, and signed as though it had been done by the boy or girl who sends it. Here is a case in point:

We built a ship upon the stairs
All made of the back bedroom chairs,
And filled it full of sofa pillows
To go a sailing on the billows.

. . .

We sailed along for days and days,
And had the very best of plays;
But Tom fell out and hurt his knee,
And there was no one left but me.

This is part of a copyrighted poem by a well-known author, and yet some Cozy Corner little girl sent it in signed by herself, saying further that it took her a long time to write it.

Once for all, let us have a clear understanding on this point. We want only your own work. We do not mind a little help over a hard place that some one may give you, perhaps, but anything deliberately copied, in whole or in part, must be considered out of the contest. Remember, the Cozy Corner is the place where you may start and work up to greater things, and you may come as often as you like and be sure of our interest, our co-operation, and our love. Enter the prize competitions every week, or send in original work of any kind at any time. Do not bother to decide for yourself whether the things you would like to send are good enough or not; we must all make a beginning and from there gradually work ourselves up to the top.

If you want thoroughly to enjoy the Boys' and Girls' Department in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, and you have not as yet written, do not wait; write and introduce yourself to-day. You will, almost by return mail, receive a delightful Cozy Corner letter written especially to you.

My "Good Time" is with the Kodak I won in the Cozy Corner. My brother took this picture.
James Langdon, age 12½

Our Good-Night Verse

Blessed be the Lord my rock.
My high tower and my deliverer:
My shield, and He in whom I trust.

Lovingly and faithfully,

The Aunt in the Cozy Corner

Follow these directions, and you can shave as well with Ivory Soap as with any shaving soap you ever used:

Moisten the face with lukewarm water. Rub on it a cake of Ivory Soap, manipulating it as you would a stick of shaving soap. Work up the lather with the brush. Rinse. Moisten the brush and reapply the lather to the face, working it up thoroughly. Shave.

Ivory's advantages as a shaving soap are: It is inexpensive; it is always at hand in the bath room; it contains no "free" alkali and leaves the skin in better condition than any other soap.

The usual way of using Ivory Soap for shaving—applying the brush to the soap and then to the face—is not entirely satisfactory. The lather is light and dries quickly. But this objection is overcome if you adopt the method outlined above.

Ivory Soap . . 99 44/100 Per Cent. Pure

Safety and 5%

$500 First Mortgage Real Estate Notes

Secured by a Deed of Trust on a specific parcel of high grade improved Real Estate.

We own and offer, subject to prior sale, the unsold portion of the following issues:

Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary
Fort Worth, Texas. Total mortgage, $60,000; valuation of security, $150,000. Notes payable serially, one to five years.

First Presbyterian Church
Spokane, Wash. Total mortgage, $40,000; valuation of security, $146,000. Notes payable serially, one to five years.

Right Rev. John B. Morris
Little Rock, Ark. Total mortgage, $70,000; valuation of security, $190,000. Notes payable serially, one to ten years.

Broadway Baptist Church
Fort Worth, Texas. Total mortgage, $20,000; valuation of security, $70,000. Notes payable serially, one to five years.

Corner Realty Company
St. Louis, Mo. Total mortgage, $425,000; valuation of security, $700,000. Notes payable May 1, 1916.

The above are only a few of the many First Mortgage Real Estate Notes we have to offer. On request, complete detail circulars of all issues will be sent you, giving full description of properties, amount of insurance and the maturities available. All interest payable semi-annually, evidenced by interest coupons.

A most convenient form of investment with absolute security.

Price any maturity to yield 5%.

Real Estate Loan Department

Mercantile Trust Co.
SAINT LOUIS, MO.

Capital and Surplus:
Nine and One-half Million Dollars

In answering, mention The Christian Herald

YOUR INVESTMENTS

Would you like to know about them?
"The Financial World's" Advice Service

Over 11,000 investors kept themselves informed last year regarding securities of all kinds through this unbiased and absolutely independent bureau conducted by THE FINANCIAL WORLD for the exclusive benefit of its subscribers. It is a safeguard against all financial frauds, an invaluable aid to the selection of sound securities.

Our Unusual Offer If you will mention THE CHRISTIAN HERALD and enclose postage to cover our reply we will express our opinion on one and only one investment in which you are interested, and also send a specimen copy of our paper. You can then judge whether it is to your advantage to become an annual subscriber and receive the same benefits that more than 50,000 investors have received in the last six years. Address

THE FINANCIAL WORLD, 18 Broadway, New York

IF YOU COULD BUY A SECURITY which is a legal investment for Savings Banks, which is secured over two and a half times, which is controlled by yourself alone, which can be independently investigated by yourself without cost and through unbiased channels, which is constantly being purchased by the great institutions of this country for their investment funds, which is logically bound to increase in value of security, and which yields 6% per annum, would you investigate it at once?

We offer you that investment with our reputation of thirty-three years' experience to sustain our recommendation.

Send for booklet "A" treating of First Mortgage Farm Loans.

WELLS & DICKEY COMPANY
Established 1878. Capital and Surplus, $700,000
Security Bank Building, MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

Another Talk On Thrift

IF a boy, born near the water and with opportunities for learning to swim, but from which art he has been debarred by the excessive ignorance or excessive caution of his guardians, is drowned, the emotional will say: "Too bad for the poor parents!" The wiser will clench their teeth and feel, if they do not say it: "The loss of that fine boy is directly chargeable to the criminal ignorance of his guardians! They knew he must live on or near the water, perhaps get his living from that element, yet they never even gave him kindergarten lessons that would insure an elementary knowledge of the conditions under which he was to spend his life."

Yes, we are rehearsing that kindergarten lesson on thrift, for we know it to be the most important in the series now being outlined. The most important acquisition made by the scholar, in all his long life, was the mastery of the alphabet. When he had learned the control of those fragments of words, he had secured the key to the recorded knowledge of all the ages. All beginnings are small, elementary if you will, but the toiler who ignores the little things will never find himself in a position to control the great. True education is the development and acquisition of correct habits of mind and body; and character, whether good or bad, is confirmed habit.

The old maxim, "as the twig is bent the tree's inclined," holds quite as good to-day as when it was first uttered. There are people born with a natural aptitude for certain callings, and this we call "talent," or when it is conspicuously developed we name it "genius"; but all schools are for the average man or woman, not for the exceptional. With the ample opportunities in nearly every part of our country for a fair common school education, it is regarded as a disgrace if the normal American child has reached the age of fourteen without being able to read, write and cypher after a fashion, but the disgrace for such ignorance should attach to the parents or guardian and not to the child.

Theory Versus Practice

People have no doubt been greatly helped by reading books that purport to teach finance, music, languages, or swimming in "ten easy lessons," or through some other short-cut theoretical process, but no one ever learned business methods without actual business experience, no one ever learned to swim without going not "near" but actually into the water. We all know this, just as we know that the average boy and girl are qualifying themselves to earn money, that is, to make an honest living, when they go to school, but with too great a faith in books—in theory. We are apt to forget or to ignore the absolute importance of a practical acquaintance with the management of that one thing which represents so many things, and to win which all this effort is being made, and that is—money.

By all means study the theory of thrift, and the laws governing business and trade, for such study will help enormously in actual practice. It is not our purpose here to call attention to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD'S publications along this line, but we know it has issued, in cheap, handy form, a few books that every man and woman, and boy and girl, should read over again and again, till the details, the essential elementary knowledge they contain, is mastered. All this will prepare them the better for the actual practice, an ounce of which is worth a ton of untested theory.

Step by Step

We are trying in these talks to illustrate the successive and progressive steps for the acquisition of a competency through thrift, by comparing them with the grades through which the scholar passes from the kindergarten to the high school or college. In doing this we are drawing no fanciful analogy, for this education, this knowledge of finance and this drill in the wholesome habits of thrift should be considered an essential part of every education, whether a certain fortune is to be inherited and held through good business management, or an uncertain fortune to be won by individual effort.

There are young men and young women, graduating from our colleges just about this time, to whom the average possessor of a common school education will feel inclined to look up as to the privileged few with wonderful intellectual accomplishments and endowments, and yet, and it saddens us that it is so, a majority of these young people, whose bills have been met by hopeful guardians, are more ignorant of thrift and less able to take up the life battle, than the ragged urchin whose papers they buy, and who is saving up until he can own a stand or a news route and so become his own employer and master.

The youth who has passed through the kindergarten school of thrift, and done well in the intermediate grade, should be well qualified to hold high rank in the grammar school; but just at this point in our illustration there comes in an element that diverges from the parallel. It is safe to prophesy that the pupil who has done exceptionally well in the lower grades will continue his success in the higher department; but because one can swim all right close to shore, it does not follow that he is qualified to venture boldly into the more turbulent depths, nor is it certain that because a beginner has managed well his tens or even his few hundred dollars, that he can rush without fear and with equal hope into larger ventures.

In climbing this hill of success, the grade becomes steeper and the danger greater as we advance, and so each succeeding step must be taken guardedly lest the ground slip and we are sent further back, with increased experience to be sure, but with lessened strength for another upward effort. This step we are calling the "grammar grade" in the school of thrift, and what we have so far said in this short article must not be regarded as a lesson, but rather as an introductory lecture to the more serious consideration of the subject.

We have not gone into details in this consideration, but we hope to illustrate some subsequent talks with actual experiences in the grammar school of thrift.

White House Silver Wedding

Continued from page 679

every face brings up some incident of my life in Cincinnati that I like to cherish. And, as the time grows nearer when I shall go back there to make it my permanent home, as a retiring place for one ex-President, the pleasure of anticipation and retrospection as to my friendships there grows greater and greater."

Mrs. Taft's gown for the occasion was of white silk brocade with a court train embroidered with silver roses. Miss Helen Taft, who gracefully assisted her mother in receiving, wore a girlish dress of rose pink.

No story of this national function would be complete without a description of the famous wedding cake, which was a triumph of the confectioner's art. Around the base of the great cake were twenty-five American flags, made of frosting and sugar, the stripes of each flag being over three inches long. Fruits and flowers made entirely of sugar were artistically heaped upon it and surmounted with silver-frosted wedding bells.

The Guaranty Trust Company of New York, 28 Nassau Street, will be pleased to furnish upon request a new circular describing a selected list of railroad and industrial bonds yielding from 4¼% to 6%. Ask for circular D-142.

Do You Want Your Money to Earn 5%

To be amply secured at all times from possibility of loss—

And to be where you can get it on demand any time you may need it?

You can open an account with this Company with any amount from $25 to $5000. You can add to it at your convenience or withdraw as you wish.

It will earn 5 per cent. for every day that it is in our hands.

It will be amply protected by first mortgages on improved real estate and will be in the hands of an institution that in sixteen years has never been a day late in the payment of either principal or interest.

Ask for the booklet telling all about it.

The Calvert Mortgage & Deposit Co.
1046 Calvert Building, Baltimore, Md.

6% NET INTEREST

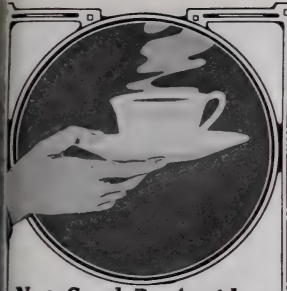
and the best security in the world!

Principal and interest secured by select Mortgages on Pittsburg Preferred Real Estate

Amounts of any size ($25, $50, $100, $200 or multiples) can be invested, temporarily or permanently. Your money available when wanted. Endorsed by highest financial authorities everywhere.

Our Booklet explains how 6% Interest is possible on such preferred securities.

If your Savings, or any other money, is drawing less than 6%, read our booklet. Copy free on request.



A. C. LESLIE CO.
Suite 117, Bakewell Law Building, PITTSBURG, PA.

Our "READY REFERENCE MANUAL," mailed to investors on application, contains 230 pages of condensed statistical data concerning the more important Public Utility Corporations. The completeness and accuracy of the information and the systematic arrangement combines to make a useful little volume for ready reference.

Ask for above pamphlet and July Investment Circular No. B-70

N. W. HALSEY & CO.
BANKERS

New York	Philadelphia	Chicago	San Francisco
49 Wall St.	1421 Chestnut St.	125 W. Monroe St.	424 California St.

Not Good By Accident

THE mellow, full-flavored richness of Mrs. Rorer's Coffee is not the result of accident.

Determining which of the many kinds of coffee to use, cost Mrs. Rorer months of investigation—then she spent weeks in experimental blending—for she was content only when she had attained a blend more rich and "flavorful" than any other coffee. You get this very blend when you buy a package of

Mrs Rorer's
OWN BLEND
Coffee

Sold only in patented, triple-sealed, paraffine protected packages.

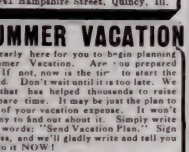
Try Mrs. Rorer's Coffee to-day—If you don't find it the most delicious you ever tasted, any grocer is authorized to return your money.

FREE: Mrs. Rorer's Book

"27 Coffee Recipes"—mailed at once if you send us your grocer's name mentioning whether he handles Mrs. Rorer's Coffee.
Tells how to make good coffee every time and how to make all sorts of dainties with coffee as a flavor. Write for this Free Book today.



Climax Coffee & Baking Powder Co.
Dept. H 2, 39 Main St, Indianapolis - Ind.

Rider Agents Wanted

In each town to ride an exhibit sample 1911 bicycle. Write for special offer.
Finest Guaranteed $10 to $27
1911 Models
with Coaster Brakes and Puncture-Proof tires.
1908 & 1910 Models $7 to $12
all of best makes....
100 Second-Hand Wheels
All makes and models, $3 to $8 good as new.....
Great FACTORY CLEARING SALE
We Ship on Approval without a cent deposit, pay the freight, and allow
10 DAY'S FREE TRIAL.
TIRES, coaster brake rear wheels, lamps, sundries, parts and repairs for all makes of bicycles at half usual prices. DO NOT BUY until you get our catalogues and offer. Write now.
EAD CYCLE CO. Dept. L-71 CHICAGO

The "Eli" King of Balers Horse and Steam Power

A train of followers, but no equals. Proves its superiority wherever it goes. Makes tight shapely bales, not loose bundles, works fast, avoids accidents and endures. Little draft, tremendous power. The machine that makes competitors tremble. Fill catalogue free.
18 Styles
Collins Plow Co., 2041 Hampshire Street, Quincy, Ill.

YOUR SUMMER VACATION

The time is nearly here for you to begin planning for that Summer Vacation. Are you prepared financially? If not, now is the time to start the Vacation Fund. Don't wait until it is too late. We have a plan that has helped thousands to raise money during their spare time. It may be just the plan to help you finance part of your vacation expense. It won't cost you a single penny to find out about it. Simply write on a postal card these words: "Send Vacation Plan." Sign your name and address, and we'll gladly write and tell you all about it. Better do it NOW!
The Christian Herald Vacation Bureau, Bible House, New York City

BLYMYER CHURCH BELLS.
UNLIKE OTHER BELLS SWEETER, MORE DURABLE, LOWER PRICE. OUR FREE CATALOGUE TELLS WHY.
Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

PATENTS SECURED OR FEE RETURNED.
Free report as to Patentability. Illustrated Guide Book, and List of Inventions Wanted, sent free.
VICTOR J. EVANS & CO., Washington, D. C.

PATENTS That Protect and Pay
Advice and Books FREE. Rates Reasonable. Highest References. Best Services.
WATSON E. COLEMAN Patent Lawyer, WASHINGTON, D. C.

LEARN TO WRITE ADVERTISEMENTS MAKE More Money
We can positively show you by mail How to Increase Your Salary. Book mailed free. Page-Davis, Dept. 44, Chicago.

The Apple Tree and Jimmy

By ELEANOR H. PORTER
Author of "The Story of Marco," etc.

"PLEASE, mister, would ye mind if I et jest one? I'll pick out a jammed one, or one what's got a worm in it." The boy's voice was wistful. His eyes were eagerly fixed on the man, leaning against the stone wall.

The man, Farmer Cross—known to some as "John Cross," but to more as "cross John"—turned his head impatiently. He was not surprised to see that the boy was a stranger—none knew better than Farmer Cross that no neighborhood lad would have addressed those words to him.

"Well, who are you?"

"Jimmy Dolan, sir."

"How'd you come here?"

"Walked."

"Where from?"

"The Brigges', where I'm a-stayin' ten days. I'm a Fresh-Airer, ye know."

"Humph!" commented the man, and turned back once more to his moody contemplation of the apple-strewn ground before him.

The boy shifted from one bare foot to the other. Already he was as near the wall as he could get; already his hands were placed for the easy vault over it. Wistfully his eyes swept the trees, the grass, and the far-reaching green aisles of the orchard. Above, beneath, beyond, everywhere were apples—red, enticing apples. One more minute he endured it; then he spoke.

"Please, mister, did ye say I could have jest one ter eat? Ye know it's a-goin' ter be a wormy one!"

"Eh? What? Great guns, yes! Eat the tree if you like."

Jimmy was over the wall in a trice.

"Did ye mean dat—on de level, now?" he demanded, between mouthfuls.

"Of course I meant it! Why not?"

Jimmy suspended operations long enough to grin derisively.

"Oh, I say! Jest s'posin' I did et de tree an' all de apples on it—where'd be de money what was a-comin' ter you for 'em?"

"Money!" snapped the man with bitter sharpness. "There's no money there, boy—for me."

Jimmy stared. He actually forgot, for a moment, to eat.

"Oh, I say, ain't ye on ter yer job?" he flared. "If ye ain't jest listen ter me. Why, folks'd pay Apple Sally down home five cents fur t'ree o' dem apples, an' sometimes fur only two. On de level, now!"

"Yes, and how much of that five cents do I get?" snarled the man. "Mighty little, I can tell ye. By the time them apples are picked and packed and hauled and freighted and dropped into the hands of your city middlemen and dealers, there ain't much comin' ter me—who growed 'em. Now, maybe you'll think I know what I'm talkin' about when I say you can eat the tree and welcome—if ye like!" And Farmer Cross turned and began to stump angrily away.

He had not gone a dozen yards before there came the soft patter of running feet behind him.

"Oh, I say, mister," called the boy, coaxingly, "ye don't care which way I lug 'em off, do ye?—whedder in my hands or in my stumich?"

"No, no! Eat what ye like, do what ye like—only leave me alone," growled cross John.

"Yes, sir—t'ank ye, sir," caroled Jimmy, joyously, as he hurried back to his tree.

It was the next day that Farmer Cross, on the highway that passed by his orchard, almost met with an accident. His horse shied violently at a curious object in the road ahead.

With an angry exclamation the man pulled his horse to one side and waited irritably.

Continued on next page

The Howard Watch

When the U. S. Battleship "Maine" was sunk in Havana Harbor, Admiral Sigsbee's HOWARD Watch went down with it.

It lay in sea water for five days—was recovered by a navy diver—and today it varies less than ten seconds a month, which is a ratio of one second in 260,000. Admiral Sigsbee has carried his HOWARD Watch since 1868. It has cruised in eighteen vessels of the U. S. Navy—over a distance of Two Hundred and Eighty-eight Thousand miles.

It has set the standard time in taking observations for navigating—where a few seconds' error may spell disaster to the ship. A service so exacting that even the ship's chronometers have to be checked up in every port.

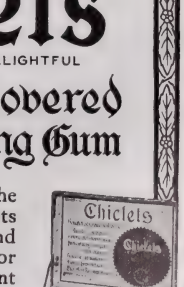
A HOWARD Watch is always worth what you pay for it.

The price of each HOWARD is fixed at the factory and a printed ticket attached—from the 17-jewel (double roller escapement) in a "Jas. Boss" or "Crescent" gold-filled case at $40, to the 23-jewel in a 14K solid gold case at $150.

Not every jeweler can sell you a HOWARD Watch. Find the HOWARD jeweler in your town and talk to him. He is a good man to know.

Admiral Sigsbee has written a little book, "The Log of the HOWARD Watch," relating to the history of his own HOWARD. You'll enjoy it. Drop us a post card, Dept. W, and we'll send you a copy.

E. HOWARD WATCH WORKS, Boston, Mass.



DURING 1910, 2,623,412 CHICLETS WERE SOLD EACH DAY

Chiclets

REALLY DELIGHTFUL

The Dainty Mint Covered Candy Coated Chewing Gum

The singer's tones are more dulcet, the speaker's voice more clear, when Chiclets are used to ease and refresh the mouth and throat. The refinement of chewing gum for people of refinement. It's the peppermint—the true mint.

For Sale at all the Better Sort of Stores
5¢ the Ounce and in 5¢, 10¢ and 25¢ Packets
SEN-SEN CHICLET COMPANY, METROPOLITAN TOWER, NEW YORK

The Yankee's Sunday Breakfast is a treat good enough for the best. It may come true any day, anywhere, if you serve

SNIDER PROCESS PORK & BEANS

made from only the best of beans prepared and cooked with utmost care in the special Snider way, which makes the beans more delicate in flavor and more easily digested.

The seasoning, made from Snider's Tomato Catsup, is a tonic to appetite and digestion.

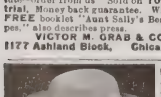
The sweet and dainty bit of pork jowl, in each can, renders them more luscious and more nourishing.

A perfect food for particular people—order Snider's, noted for quality.

Use Snider's Chili Sauce upon meats, hot or cold.

"It's the Process"

The T. A. Snider Preserve Co.,
Cincinnati, U. S. A.



All Snider Products comply with all Pure Food Laws of the world.

YALE FRUIT PRESS

Best, most practical, durable press for making Jellies, Jams, Grape Juice, Cider, Wine, Fruit Ices, stuffing sausages, etc. No woman has strength to press fruits with her hands, besides without a press half the juice, and nearly all the flavor, which only great pressure brings out, is lost. All steel and iron plated. Clamps to table, etc. With a few turns of wheel, materials are put under 2,000 lbs. pressure. 4 qt. size. $3.95 If dealer won't supply you, take no substitute—order from us. Sold on 10 days' trial. Money back guarantee. Write for FREE booklet "Aunt Sally's Best Recipes," also describes press.

VICTOR M. GRAB & CO.
1127 Ashland Block, Chicago, Ill.

GENUINE Hand Woven PANAMA Rare Bargain

Panama Hats more popular than ever this Summer

By importing large quantities, at lowest prices for this superior high-grade hat, we are enabled to offer genuine all hand-woven, unblocked, unbleached Panama hats in any shape or style—just as worn by the $10.00 kind; only not as fine a weave. All sizes. Small, medium and large brims. Light weight. Send $1.00. Order today. Satisfaction guaranteed. Postpaid, on receipt of $1.00.

PANAMA HAT CO., Dept. C, 830 Broadway, New York City

FREE You Can Have This Switch FREE

Send us a sample of your hair and we will mail you this beautiful 22-inch human hair switch to match. If satisfactory send us $1.50 any time within 10 days, or sell 3 to your friends for $1.50 each and get yours absolutely free. Extra shades a little higher. Souvenir catalog showing latest styles of fashionable hairdressing, etc., on request. Enclose 2c postage. Marguerite Colly, Dept. 119 115 S. Dearborn St., Chicago

THE APPLE TREE AND JIMMY

Continued from preceding page

"Look a-here, what do you mean by scaring—great guns, boy! you?" he broke off amazingly. "What is the meaning of this?"

There came the clatter of tin and a series of soft thuds; then Jimmy Dolan's red, perspiring face emerged above two battered tin pails, a broken market-basket, and a gunny bag, all overflowing with apples.

"But, mister, you said I could," panted Jimmy, anxiously.

"Could what?"

"Lug 'em off inside my stomich or outside; an' I choosed outside. Gee! but dey does weigh a heap," he finished ruefully, trying to straighten his aching arms.

"Where are you taking them to?"

"Home. My time's up ter-morrer, you see."

"Home! You don't mean—the city?"

"Sure I does!"

"Humph! And you think you can carry two pails and a market-basket and a bag full of apples all the way from here home, do ye?"

Jimmy frowned and sighed.

"I know; dey does weigh like time," he admitted. "But, ye see, de cars take me, an' I reckoned if I could take de apples—" he stopped, and sighed again, his eyes dejectedly on the tumbled heap of fruit that had rolled from the open sack into the dust of the road.

"Humph!" ejaculated the man again. "And so you was cal'latin' ter get the money; eh?"

"Money?" The boy's face was plainly puzzled.

"Maybe you're tryin' ter make me think you wasn't goin' ter sell 'em; eh?"

"Sell 'em!" cried the boy. An eager light had leaped to his eyes, but the next instant the frown returned. Lifting his hand he scratched his head thoughtfully.

"Say, I could 'a' sold 'em; couldn't I? But—" he paused, and shook his head slowly. "But then, ye know, I couldn't, after all. Dey hain't got any money ter pay—'most of 'em."

"They? Who?"

"Kit an' the Phelans an' Ol' Mag, an' the rest."

"Do you mean ter say you was luggin' all them apples home ter give ter folks?" challenged Farmer Cross.

"Uh-huh." Jimmy's face grew anxious once more. "Ye see, dere had ter be a lot of 'em, 'cause dere's so many what needs 'em. Now Kit—she's lame an' can't walk—she hain't never seen a apple growin'. I got a little teeny piece of de tree fur her, wid de green leaves all growin' out of it an' de apple in de middle, so she can 'magine de whole tree a-growin'—an' she can do it, too, mister. Kit's a peacherino on 'maginin' t'ings. Why, look a-here, mister, if ye don't believe it, jest listen. Kit really lives in a room what's no bigger'n nuttin', an' all dark an' smelly. But she 'magines it's a palace all big an' grand, like what she read out of a book once. An' she says de smells is sweet nonsense or some odder kind o' 'cense, an' dat I'm her brave knight, an' all dat. So ye see, a tree won't be nuttin' fur her ter 'magine.

"Den dere's de Phelans. Dey got kids ter beat de band, an' dere ain't never 'nuf fur dem ter eat, no matter how hard Mis' Phelan works (he drinks, ye know). Apples'd help dem lots. Ol' Mag—she ain't right in her head, an' she likes apples sumpin' awful. Dey say dat's de quickest way ter quiet her when she gits on a tantrum—givin' her a apple. An' I was reckonin' on givin' Lizy Jane—she lives wid Ol' Mag, ye know—quite a bunch, an' den maybe Lizy'd git some peace.

"An' den dere's—oh, mister! dere never ain't no end ter de folks what wants apples, honest dere ain't; an' dere ain't half 'nuf here ter go' round, I know. But I can't, I jest can't lug

Continued on page 695

The Nabors Triplets—Ruth, Mary and Ester
Tallassee, Alabama

These bright, healthy babies are Mellin's Food Triplets

At three weeks of age they were started on Mellin's Food. They were then so small that it hardly seemed possible that they could ever be raised to strong, healthy childhood. Mellin's Food agreed with them from the very start.

They have been fed entirely on fresh milk modified with Mellin's Food ever since, and to-day they are three as sturdy, healthy little girls as you will find anywhere.

What Mellin's Food has done for these babies it will do for your baby. If your baby is not thriving get a bottle of Mellin's Food at your Druggist's — to-day.

We have a valuable book "The Care and Feeding of Infants," which tells just the things you ought to know about feeding and caring for your baby. We shall be very glad to send you a copy of this book, free, together with a Trial Size Bottle of Mellin's Food, if you will write us.

MELLIN'S FOOD COMPANY - - - - - BOSTON, MASS.

AGENTS My Sanitary Coffee Maker produces pure, sweet coffee, needs no settler and never wears out. Saves coffee, money and health. Every wife buys at sight; new invention; exclusive territory. Send 15c. for 50c. size, postpaid.
DR. LYONS, 430 Day St., Pekin, Ill.

HEART RIGHT

When He Quit Coffee.

Life Insurance Companies will not insure a man suffering from heart trouble.

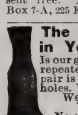
The reason is obvious.

This is a serious matter to the husband or father who is solicitious for the future of his dear ones. Often the heart trouble is caused by an unexpected thing and can be corrected if taken in time and properly treated. A man in Colorado writes:

"I was a great coffee drinker for many years, and was not aware of the injurious effects of the habit till I became a practical invalid, suffering from heart trouble, indigestion and nervousness to an extent that made me wretchedly miserable myself and a nuisance to those who witnessed my sufferings.

"I continued to drink coffee, however, not suspecting that it was the cause of my ill-health, till, on applying for life insurance I was rejected on account of the trouble with my heart. Then I became alarmed. I found that leaving off coffee helped me quickly, so I quit it altogether and having been attracted by the advertisements of Postum I began its use.

"The change in my condition was remarkable. All my ailments vanished. My digestion was completely restored, my nervousness disappeared, and, most important of all, my heart steadied down and became normal, and on a second examination I was accepted by the Life Insurance Co. Quitting coffee and using Postum worked the change." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.



"There's a reason." and it is explained in the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

MUSIC LESSONS FREE

in your own home for Piano, Organ, Violin, Guitar, Banjo, Cornet, Sight Singing, Mandolin or Cello. One lesson weekly. Beginners or advanced pupils. Your only expense is for postage and music, which averages about 2 cents a day. Established 1898. Thousands of pupils all over the world write "Wish I had known of you before." Booklet and free tuition offer sent free. Address, U. S. SCHOOL OF MUSIC, Box 7-A, 225 Fifth Ave., New York City.

The Biggest Thing in Years for Live AGENTS

Is our guaranteed hosiery. A fast seller and good repeater. You don't have to argue because every pair is guaranteed to last four months without holes. Worn goods replaced free.
We positively live up to this guarantee.
YOU CAN MAKE BIG MONEY.
No experience needed. We teach you everything. Here's your chance—don't lose it—write to-day for terms of Free Outfit.
THE THOMAS MFG. COMPANY
1924 Wayne St. Dayton, Ohio

WHEEL CHAIRS A wheel Chair is often an invalid's greatest comfort. We offer over 75 styles of these easy, self-propelling and Invalids' Rolling Chairs, with latest improvements. Ship direct from factory to you, freight prepaid and sell on

THIRTY DAYS' TRIAL
Liberal Discounts to all sending for free Catalogue NOW.
GORDON MFG. CO.
478 Madison Ave., TOLEDO, O.

"ESCO" KITCHEN OUTFIT

Contains the Following 10 Useful Articles:
Meat Cleaver and Tenderer, Butcher Knife, Meat Fork, Can and Bottle Opener (two cutters for round and square cans), Cake Turner, Paring Knife, Mixing Spoon, Knife Sharpener, Bread Knife, Kitchen Saw. Every article is carefully made with Waterproof Rubberoid Handles by experienced workmen, and thoroughly warranted to be free from defects in material or workmanship. Price set complete, $2.
Eastern Specialty Co., Dept. E, 63 Barclay St., New York

Corns removed without pain or danger by A-Corn Salve. Try it on that stubborn corn of yours. at druggists' or by mail.
Giant Chemical Co., Philadelphia

DAISY FLY KILLER placed anywhere, attracts and kills all flies. Neat, clean, ornamental, convenient, cheap. Lasts all season. Made of metal, cannot spill, tip over, will not soil or injure anything. Guaranteed effective. Of dealers or sent prepaid for 20 cents.

HAROLD SOMERS
150 DeKalb Ave.
Brooklyn, N. Y.

START A MILLINERY BUSINESS or $50.00 or $100.00

MAKE YOURSELF INDEPENDENT
Establish yourself in a profitable and pleasant usiness of your own. A small investment now ail that is necessary to open a retail millinery ore or department. Thousands that we have arted in this way are now enjoying good incomes. With one of our special complete stocks of ready rimmed Millinery, you can open a store or depart- ent without the services of a trimmer. These ocks are made up of the very latest city yles. Every hat is a positive success and will ll quickly at a large profit.
We conduct one of the largest wholesale and manufacturing Millinery concerns in the world, producing over 7,000 Trimmed Hats daily, and the most portant department is selling Millinery stocks.
THERE IS MONEY IN MILLINERY
No other legitimate business offers the same opportunity. In no other business can you invest so ttle and draw out so much. Many of our successful ustomers, not wanting to start a separate store, nted space in a store where millinery was not andled, or used a room in their own home.
VE PROTECT MILLINERY DEALERS BY REFUSING TO SELL CONSUMERS
If you can invest $50 or $100 now you hould be able to turn over your investment many times during the season. After on have opened your store we send you catalogues, tyle books, etc., keeping you always informed on he new correct styles that are in popular demand. y using our catalogue you can, without any previus experience, re-order such goods as you need, eeping your stock always new, up-to-date and com- plete. You can succeed without previous xperience in the Millinery business and with less effort than in any other line.
WRITE TODAY for itemized list No. 1 It tells what our Fall and Winter Millinery stocks consist of, what they will sell for and just how much profit you an make, also full particulars how best to start a Retail Millinery business. Write—right now. Let it not be said that opportunity beckoned you in vain. DO NOT DELAY.
CHICAGO MERCANTILE CO.
17-19-21-23-25 N. Wabash Ave., Chicago

GUARANTEED MORTGAGES
For Large and Small Investors
Don't think, because your capital is small, that it can earn only 3½ per cent. or 4 per cent. It used to be so—the small investor for hundreds of years had no chance beside the capitalist. Our
First Mortgage Trust Bonds
On New York and Suburban Real Estate
put you exactly on a par with the wealthiest investor. You have the same security and the same certain returns—5 per cent. or 5½ per cent. You have the same opportunity to withdraw your capital if you should need it.
Under Supervision of New York Banking Department
Write for our Booklet
NEW YORK MORTGAGE CO.
Dept. D, 1470 Broadway, New York City

OXALBITOL
AN ANTISEPTIC DRESSING that is better than any other preparation for healing cuts, ulcers or wounds of any sort.
Get it from your druggist, or a bottle will be sent by mail for 35 Cents.
OXALBITOL CO., Honesdale, Pa.

BABY LAX
THE ONLY LAXATIVE PERFECT FOR BABIES OR CHILDREN
SURE, SAFE, MILD, PLEASANT.
A doctor's formula perfected after years of study of babies needs. Delighted mothers praise it. Try it. Sent postpaid 25c. Address Dept. C
THE BABYLAX CO., Franklin, Pa.

ZOBO THE MUSICAL WONDER.
YOU CAN PLAY IT Without Learning
Sing into the mouthpiece. Zobo does the rest. For Home, Church and Sunday School Entertainments. Full information FREE. 10c required.
STRAUSS MFG. CO., 355 Broadway, Dept. 19, New York

Love's Work

Sunday School Lesson by Dr. and Mrs. Wilbur F. Crafts

MANASSEH, son of Hezekiah, was born B.C. 708; crowned B. C. 696; carried captive to Babylon B.C. 677; in exile B.C. 676; returned to Jerusalem B.C. 675; died B.C. 641. Of the eleven years of his boyhood as the prince royal we are told nothing. Of the nineteen years which followed his coronation at twelve years of age we are told many things, and all are evil, because Manasseh set himself to destroy all the good that his father had done, and to make the kingdom of Judah as it was in the time of his grandfather, King Ahaz. The first act of King Hezekiah had been to turn the idols out of the house of God. The first act of King Manasseh was to turn God out of his temple and restore the idols. The holy place quickly became a den of idolaters. All over his kingdom, he threw down God's altars, and set up altars for the worship of the heathen gods Baal and Ashtaroth, and the sun and moon and stars. With King Manasseh for their leader, God's people became even more wicked than those who had always worshiped idols. God looking down from heaven saw all the wickedness of King Manasseh and determined to punish him. God can punish in many ways, but the way he chose to punish King Manasseh was to send the great King of Assyria and his army to make Manasseh a prisoner and take him away to Babylon. He was taken in one night like an ox, not with a ring in his nose, attached to a rope or chain, but with a hook in his lip, fastened to a chain by which he was pulled along. What inglorious treatment for a king! In Babylon he had nothing like the work of a king to do, he had only to sit and think, think, think! He thought about how wicked and foolish he had been. He prayed to God, and told him that he was sorry for the wrong he had done, and asked God to forgive him, and let him have another chance. During one whole year Manasseh thus prayed to God in his prison in Babylon, and then God put it into the heart of the king of Assyria to send Manasseh back to his home in the city of Jerusalem.

A little boy seven years old was once asked, "What is it to repent?" His answer was: "To be sorry for your sins and stop doing them." King Manasseh understood "repent" this way too, for after he was back again as king, there was no more worship of idols for him. He took out of God's house the idols he had put there, and had them broken up. Then he worshiped God as King Hezekiah had done. and he removed the idols from every part of his land, and again it was God's house, and God's city, and God's land. It was that way for all of the years that King Manasseh yet lived—thirty-five in all. He had been a wicked king for nineteen years, and for almost twice as long he was a good king—a follower of God.

It would be well now to read this whole story from the Bible. II. Chron. 33: 1-20, also II. Kings 21: 1-18. Let these two Scripture portions be compared and let the differences be noted on a piece of paper. They can best be compared by two persons taking part, one reading aloud in II. Kings, while the other holds the Bible open in II. Chronicles.

Manasseh's Evil Inheritance

He received his heritage of weakness from his grandfather Ahaz, who was drawn by cords of idolatry; from his great-great-grandfather Uzziah, whose

Continued on next page

* The International Sunday School Lesson for July 16, 1911. Manasseh's Wickedness and Penitence. II. Chron. 33: 1-20. GOLDEN TEXT: "Cease to do evil; learn to do well." Isa. 1: 16, 17.

For Summer Appetites.

In hot weather, when the appetite is just a little off, and there is a peculiar craving for something cool and satisfying, nothing touches the spot like

JELL-O

It is so deliciously cool, so light, so wholesome, so nutritious—so tempting and good every way—that it satisfies the summer appetite as nothing else can.

Fruit of almost any kind can be added, as the housewife chooses, or left out, and in either case the dessert will be delightful.

There is no other dessert worth serving that can be made without cooking and fuss, and in hot weather no housewife wants to cook and fuss more than is necessary.

A Jell-O dessert can be made in a minute.
Seven delightful flavors: Strawberry, Raspberry. Cherry, Lemon, Orange, Peach, Chocolate.
10c. a package at all grocers'.
The famous recipe book, "DESSERTS OF THE WORLD," illustrated in ten colors and gold, will be sent to all who ask us for it.

THE GENESEE PURE FOOD CO.
Le Roy, N. Y., and Bridgeburg, Can.

TYPEWRITERS ALL MAKES VISIBLE WRITERS
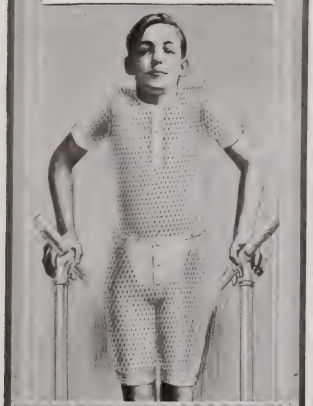
or otherwise
L. C. SMITHS, OLIVERS, UNDERWOODS, Etc.
¼ to ½ MF'RS PRICES
Shipped ANYWHERE for Free Trial, or RENTED allowing Rent to APPLY
PRICES $15.00 UP
First Class Machines Fresh from the Mfrs.—Write for Illustrated Catalog 71
Typewriter Emporium, (EST. 1892) 92-94 LAKE ST., CHICAGO

I TRUST YOU TEN DAYS. SEND NO MONEY.
$2 Hair Switch Sent on Approval. Choice of Natural wavy or straight hair
Send a lock of your hair, and we will mail a 22 inch short stem fine human hair switch to match. If you find it a big bargain, remit $2 in ten days, or sell 3 and GET YOUR SWITCH FREE. Extra shades a little more. Inclose 5c postage.
Free beauty book showing latest style of hair dressing—also high grade switches, pompadours, wigs, puffs, etc. Women wanted to sell our hair goods.
ANNA AYERS,
Dept. A158 22 Quincy Street, Chicago

Protecto Plate
A Necessity in Every Home
Two iron plates, joined; 10-inch diameter. Chutes on under side diffuse heat, intervening air-chamber equalizes it. Separating fire from cooking utensil prevents scorching or burning food. Heats flat-irons uniformly. Inverted pan over plate bakes potatoes in 20 minutes, biscuits in 6. Makes most brown toast. Saves worry, utensils and 50 per cent fuel. Prepaid 50c. Agents wanted.
C. H. CONNOLLY MFG. CO., 123 Liberty St., New York

THE "BEST" LIGHT
2¢ A WEEK
MAKES and burns its own gas. Produces 100 candle power light—brighter than electricity or acetylene—cheaper than kerosene. No dirt. No grease. No odor. Over 200 styles. Every lamp warranted. Agents wanted. Write for catalog. Do not delay.
THE BEST LIGHT CO.
3-70 E. 5th St., Canton, Ohio



BISHOPRIC WALL BOARD AND SHEATHING
Save Money, Time and Labor in Building
BISHOPRIC WALL BOARD is cheaper and better than lath and plaster. Easily nailed to studs. Applied dry, it is ready at once for paint, paper or burlap—inexpensive or artistic decoration. Made of kiln-dried, dressed laths imbedded in Asphalt Mastic, insuring a solid, substantial covering for Walls and Ceilings
Will not shrink, warp or crack. Clean, odorless and sanitary. Guaranteed proof against dampness, heat, cold, sound and vermin.
Used for finishing new buildings of every description; also for partitions, attics, cellars, porches, laundries, garages. It is the original Wall Board, construction patented.
BISHOPRIC SHEATHING is made of same materials as Wall Board, but is nailed smooth side to studs with laths and asphalt exposed.
SAVES 75 PERCENT in material and labor. Does away with building paper. Makes smooth, solid job. Proof against heat, cold, dampness and vermin. Used under weather boards, flooring and ready roofing or cement; also as lining for barns, poultry houses and other out-door buildings. Houses finished with Bishopric Wall Board and Sheathing are ready for immediate occupancy. Write today for factory prices and FREE Booklet and SAMPLE of { Bishopric Wall Board Bishopric Sheathing Bishopric Ready Roofing
The Mastic Wall Board & Roofing Mfg. Co. 40 E. Third St. Cincinnati, O.

NOT merely elastic, or absorbent, or cool, or ventilated, but possessing all these qualities in one sum total of underwear perfection. Worn by two million people. Buy a suit. Look for the label.

Write us for Illustrated Catalogue

MEN'S 50c Union Suits $1.00 — Any Style Shirts and Drawers — BOYS' 25c Union Suits 50c

CHALMERS KNITTING COMPANY
30 Washington Street, Amsterdam, N. Y.

TRADE MARK
FABRIC NAT. ORG. DE 1905
"Porosknit"
DESIGN NAT. ORG. DE 1905
REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.

LABLACHE
FACE POWDER

As the Touch of Summer

develops the fragrance of the rose, so LABLACHE imparts to the complexion that bloom of youth so essential to the woman of refinement. A toilet necessity, invisible, but protecting the skin from summer sun and keeping it clear, smooth and velvety.

Refuse substitutes.

They may be dangerous. Flesh, White, Pink, or Cream. 50 cents a box of druggists or by mail. Send 10 cents for a sample box.

BEN LEVY CO.,
French Perfumers,
Dept. 22, 125 Kingston St.
Boston, Mass

A Secure 5% Without Risk

INSTEAD of risking and tying up your idle money in an attempt to earn 6% interest, if you deposit it with this Company, you make a non-speculative investment, your money can be withdrawn at any time upon short notice, and we are paying 5% on deposits, compounded semi-annually, or remitted by check as desired.

Established eighteen years.

Assets $2,300,000.00

Conservative management and judicious investment of funds according to the stringent requirements of the New York State Banking Laws characterize this Company. This is the most secure and most profitable way to invest idle money.

Write for booklet.

INDUSTRIAL SAVINGS AND LOAN CO. NEW YORK CITY

Industrial Savings & Loan Co.
2 Times Bldg., B'way & 42d St., New York

Sunday School Lesson

Continued from preceding page

prosperity was his undoing; from another of his forebears Jehoram, who had little or no regard for the kind of associates he selected. From his ancestor Rehoboam Manasseh had inherited a recklessness that would not yield to wise guidance. If there had been a row of family portraits in the king's palace, undoubtedly Manasseh would have been "one of them over again" in appearance and in manner. "God forgive me out of a pitying heart that curses the man whose sinful life has made it hard for a little boy to be good."—Wilbour Merrill, M.D.

Jimmy was a boy who had "rented" a livery rig for an hour's ride; but the following day Jimmy and his little pal were arrested forty miles from home, making camp along the roadside. The mother said to a friend who came to comfort her: "But you must know that my Jimmy is not deserving of all the censure his bad conduct has placed upon him. From the time he was four years of age, his unsteady life has been even more and more vacillating and uncontrolled. It is some hidden power that has made him dishonest in the very hour that he has wept himself sick at my breast, begging me to forgive him for stealing. No, sir, I can't be too hard on the lad when he comes to me and through his tears tells me he doesn't know why he is so bad."

So Manasseh went on from boyhood through young manhood doing those things which he ought not to have done through a vicious inheritance. Fathers, mothers and teachers, has it occurred to you to study the makeup of the boys with whom you have to deal?

Manasseh's Inheritance of Righteousness

We have been looking at the family portraits on only one side of the hall. On the other side his forebears were good and true; his noble father Hezekiah, his great-grandfather Jotham, who was mighty because he prepared his ways before the Lord his God (II. Chron. 27: 6), and his great-great-great-grandfather Jehoshaphat, who had caused all places of idolatry to be destroyed and had placed in authority the best and wisest men of his kingdom. Going further back, there was King Asa, who was a great reformer in his time, and had tried to do away with every form of evil in his kingdom, calling upon the people at a solemn festival to enter into a formal covenant with God. Following back down the line, we see among the family portraits King Solomon and King David. We no longer marvel that there was some good in the soul of Manasseh which could be called into action when he was alone with God for one year in the Babylon prison. All of these gracious influences helped Manasseh to rule righteously for thirty-five years after his return from Babylon.

Manasseh Blessed by the Love of God

After nineteen years of evil-doing, what would Manasseh have done without God in the world? God had held on while Manasseh had let go. "You have worn out my patience," said a mother to her boy, who often forgot what she told him to do, and hardly ever met her expectations. "Well, it's no use to try," responded the boy; "you don't seem to know how a fellow feels." But God's patience and forbearance cannot be worn out, because it is infinite.

Two men were walking together across a field in the vicinity of Saratoga. One of the men was the owner of the farm; indeed he had lived there all his life. It never had occurred to him that he was a rich man. The friend who visited him that day in the course of their walk drew his attention to a spot where the grass looked rather dry and yellow, while all around the grass was fresh and green. Does it always look dry like that?" asked the visitor. "Yes," replied the landowner. "Have you ever thought there might be a reason for it?" asked the visitor. "I don't know what reason there could be," was the reply. "I will find out if you will give me a chance," said the visitor. "You may have all the chance you want," was the reply. "That means that I may dig down in the spot?" "Certainly." "I will begin to dig next week." He did, and it was not long before one of the greatest of Saratoga's springs was developed—a gas well, and also a wonderful fountain of water, which not only brought wealth to the owner and the discoverer, but health and blessing to thousands of people. No one can tell for how many ages it had been deprived of a vent. Like that spring is the love of God that men go trampling over, heedless of what there is in store for them. God used the unfriendly hand of the Assyrian king to help in opening up the treasures of his love to the hardened, almost dried-up, soul of Manasseh.

God's love is a fountain of blessing which is waiting to be opened into each and every life. It is the well of water springing up unto eternal life of which one drinks and never thirsts again (John 4: 13, 14).

Lessons from the Life of Manasseh

How discouraged Manasseh would have been if some prophet had come to him just after his return from captivity to Jerusalem and had said, "You must be good before you can be happy." God in his mercy did not send a prophet with such a message, but instead he gave Manasseh the desire and strength of purpose to clear away the filth of idolatry which in his blindness he had put in the way of the people. Speaking in ship language, we would say God changed Manasseh's course. By way of illustration think of a ship at sea making directly for the rocks. How is the danger to be avoided? By scrubbing the decks, or by setting the men to work at the pumps? No, these things are good enough in their own time, but if the ship is to be saved, one thing is to be done—her course must be changed. Yes, and changed suddenly. Sometimes it comes as a shock, as was the case in one of our voyages last summer. The captain utters a few quick words, and the ship turns and speeds away from the danger. It took a year or less for the utterly wrong Manasseh to be turned from a wicked and dangerous life, dangerous to himself and to others, because the Captain of his salvation was at the helm and the soul-ship responded to the guidance. No upbraiding followed, only love and forgiveness.

It is said that when Wilberforce had appealed to Parliament for the freedom of the slaves in the West Indies, they eagerly awaited the news of the result. On the arrival of every ship the anxious question was asked: "What has Parliament decided?" At last there came a ship bearing the proclamation of their freedom. The captain could not wait to land before communicating the news, and so he shouted through his trumpet to the waiting people on shore: "Freedom! Freedom! Freedom!" The story of Manasseh teaches us that freedom from sin, and freedom from the love of sin is provided for us through the love of God.

Have mercy upon me, O God, according to thy loving kindness;
According to the multitude of thy tender mercies blot out my transgressions.
Wash me thoroughly from mine iniquity,
And cleanse me from my sin.
. . .
Create in me a clean heart, O God:
And renew a right spirit within me.
Cast me not away from thy presence;
And take not thy Holy Spirit from me.
Restore unto me the joy of thy salvation;
And uphold me with a free spirit.
--Ps. 51: 1, 2, 10-12.

The golden key to happiness is contained in the text of this lesson. "Cease to do evil; learn to do well."

ELEVEN CENTS A DAY

A Student at the Nebraska State Norm School Lives on Eleven Cents a Day and Reaches a High Standard of Health and Efficiency

Just how little a person can eat a keep in good health and first-class phy ical condition is a question that does interest the average person who has t means with which to gratify all the desi of a normal appetite. It happens, ho ever, that the nutritive value of a food seldom measured by its cost. Diete experiments along this line yield sor rather astonishing results.

Mr. J. Alfred Hanna, a student of t Nebraska State Normal School, recent made some dietetic experiments on hi self and was surprised to learn that t foods which supply the greatest amou of strength and endurance, and whi satisfy all the cravings of a normal app tite are the foods that cost the least.

While conducting an individual se boarding experiment, Mr. Hanna co pleted five weeks of Summer school at cost of $1.18 a week for food. One wee his menu cost an average of eleven cen a day. Another week he lived a litt more luxuriously on twenty-four cents day, while on other days the average e pense amounted to eighteen cents a da

The opinions of scientific men va widely as to what constitutes a prop daily ration for an individual. Commo sense teaches us, however, that the se son, bodily condition, size, occupatic and other considerations enter into th question as to how much food should b eaten. When Mr. Hanna was living o eleven cents a day his daily menu wit cost of each item was as follows: Mill three cents; eggs, three cents; brea two cents; shredded wheat biscuit, thre cents. On this daily ration this colleg student attained the highest mental an physical efficiency. He found himse enjoying the best of health and also foun that he could accomplish much mor each day than he could on a more elab rate and more expensive dietary.

If Mr. Hanna had cared to try the e periment, he would have found that h could have dispensed with all other food and lived on shredded wheat biscuit wit milk and a little fruit, and on this die could have reached the highest physica strength and mental alertness. This ha been demonstrated over and over agai in hundreds of cases. Shredded whea contains all the strength-giving materi in the whole wheat grain made diges ible by steam-cooking, shredding an baking. The crisp, porous shreds enabl the stomach to quickly and easily tak up all the nutritive material in the whea while the bran coat of the wheat, whic is scattered along the shreds, stimulate peristalsis, thereby keeping the bowel healthy and active. As a food for th Summer months, when it is desirable t cut out the high-protein foods, nothin is more wholesome or more nourishin than shredded wheat, especially whe combined with berries or other fres fruits.

SLIP A BOX OF Huyler's CANDIES IN YOUR GRIP.

IT TAKES BUT LITTLE ROOM AND MAKES YOU DOUBLY WELCOME

THE APPLE TREE AND JIMMY

Continued from page 692

no more," finished the boy, dolefully, stooping to gather up his burdens once again.

He picked up the basket and both pails, but when he reached for the bag he dropped one pail, and when he clutched at that, he lost his hold on the basket. Again he tried, but a sharp "honk—honk" and a whizzing whir of wheels and dust sent him scrambling with his treasures to the side of the road. The next minute he was mournfully regarding a little crushed heap of red and white—all that the automobile had left of the truant apples that had rolled from the bag.

For a moment Farmer Cross, busy quieting his horse, seemed to have forgotten the boy; but he turned at last.

"Now, there was a man that could have helped ye, boy," he jeered. "Why didn't ye stop him an' tell him what ye want?"

"Help? Me? Who was he?"

"He's James Howard Weston, the Boss, the King, the Great Mogul of the railroad you'll be ridin' on to-morrow. Now if he said the word they'd have to take a barrel o' them apples for ye, an' with never a lift of yer little finger yerself. What he says goes, my boy!"

With one bound Jimmy reached the middle of the road, his eyes on the whirling wake of dust.

"Huh! and I never knew!" he almost sobbed.

The man stared; then he laughed uproariously.

"Bless me! if I don't believe the kid would have done it," he muttered. Aloud he mocked: "Oh, 'tain't too late, my lad, if you're really wantin' ter interview the gentleman. He's got a summer home right up there where you see them two towers. You can go to him now. He's just gone there, you see."

"Jiminy! Say, I'm a-goin' ter," breathed the boy. "Jest keep yer eye on my apples, will ye?"

The next moment an amazed man found himself lone guard of two battered tin pails, a broken market-basket, and a bulging bag of apples, while up the road sped two bare, dirty little feet.

The entire story of what followed was never known in the village. The butler of the great house on the hill told that a ragged, dirty boy came one day, and demanded to see "Mr. Weston what bossed the railroad." Mr. Weston himself had overheard the boy, and, to the butler's astonishment, had ordered the lad to be admitted. After that the butler heard only the boy, as he spoke first:

"Say, mister, if you're de Boss, an' what you says goes, I've come ter ask ye ter say my apples goes; see?"

The door had closed then, and the butler, dumb with aghast wonder, had heard no more.

Later, some time later, the boy had come out and run down the hall with a skip and a bound and a joyous shout. In the room behind him there was silence; and the butler, going in long minutes later on some trivial pretext, found his master sitting motionless, his head leaning against his hand.

John Cross, waiting in the road below, told afterward that he could not believe his eyes or ears when Jimmy came bounding toward him.

"He said it—he said it!" the boy was panting. "He said my apples goes!"

"You mean—that?" gasped the man.

"Yes, sir, dat's jest what I mean. He'll carry 'em free—all I got. Why, say! he said he'd haul a carload if I had 'em—he did!"

John Cross leaned forward suddenly. "Did he say just that—old man Weston?" he demanded.

"Sure he did!"

"Then, by thunder, we'll give him one ter haul," vowed the man, bringing his fist down hard on his knee. "Just you wait, Jimmy, an' see what I can do!" And with a pull of the reins the man drove briskly off, an expression on his face that few had ever seen there—not for nothing had John Cross kept lonely guard over two battered tin pails, a broken market-basket, and a bulging bag of apples. He, like Jimmy's Kit, must have been "'magininʼ"—for before night he had the pledged word of half a dozen farmers; and in the morning a score of men and boys were stripping trees in half a dozen orchards to fill waiting, empty barrels.

When Jimmy went home that day he bore carefully a basket of apples, a tree-branch with a cluster of leaves and fruit, and a promise of something so unbelievable that all his friends tapped their heads significantly, and declared that Jimmy, too, had taken to "imaginin'."

But when, in due time, the promise was fulfilled, and the apples came——

The great James Howard Weston had given orders that Jimmy should be in command, and right royally did Jimmy exercise his prerogative. Doubting Thomases as they were—those friends and neighbors of his—they nevertheless came at his bidding, and once there, they doubted no longer.

It is safe to say that never before nor since has a smoky, gloomy freight-yard seen such a sight. In steady streams they came—men, women, boys, and girls, thronging, chattering, laughing, shouting; and each with something empty to be filled: a cart, a box, a baby carriage, a pail, a basket, a bag, a washbowl, a foot-tub made of tin. And everywhere was Jimmy, alert, efficient, guiding, restraining, a just judge, and a careful dispenser of his luscious treasures.

Long hours later, when the twilight fell, there was nothing left but empty barrels and the freightmen softly whistling at their task, as in their ears still rang some child's shout of joy, or some woman's sob of gratitude.

In Kit's tiny room that night a little crippled girl—in her hands a tree-branch, and in her nostrils the spicy odor from a big basket of apples—walked through a fair green orchard with the sunlight on her hair and the summer wind on her cheek.

Nor was Kit the only one to whom a round red apple had brought something sweeter than itself. Old Mag in the alley went to bed that night with an apple in her hand and a smile on her lips, while Lizy Jane, her niece, drew the first sigh of rest she had known for days.

The Phelans, big and little, had full stomachs for once. Mike Phelan, too, was not drunk, for a wonder; perhaps because he had been so delightfully busy carting apples home that he had no time to spend at the saloon round the corner. Even Apple Sally in the Square wore a beaming smile, and actually gave away an apple to a wistful-eyed horse that stopped by her cart. Did she not have, indeed, at home, a whole big box of apples that were hers without payment of a cent?

Blind Tom down the street played a livelier tune on his violin. He, too, had a box of apples waiting at home. Men and women passing by did not know that; they knew only that someway their step grew quicker and their heart grew lighter in answer to the little tune that he played.

Called Higher

Mrs. Alice E. Clark, Memphis, Tenn., has gone to reap the reward of faithful service.

Mrs. Frances Ford (85), of Mitchell, Ont., Can., has been called to the Master's vineyard.

Mizpah Esteele Bradt (20) died recently at the home of her parents in Hamilton, Ont., Can.

Mrs. Eleanor Paterson was called to the Master's house from her home at Boone, Ia., on February 12.

L. W. Hamilton (74), of Liverpool, Pa., entered into rest after years of faithful service for both his God and his country.

Mrs. Eliza L. E. Higgins (92) died recently at her home in Sandoval, Ill. She had been a reader of this paper for many years.

Mrs. Laura A. Johnson (93) of Alpha, Ia., died recently at her home there. Her life of service to her family and of helpfulness to her neighbors testify to the consistency with which her Christian life has been lived.

(A short human-interest story written by C. W. Post for the Postum Cereal Co., Ltd.)

Some Day Ask Your Physician

To tell you the curious story of how the mind affects the digestion of food.

I refer to the condition the mind is in, just before, at the time, or just following the taking of food.

If he has been properly educated (the majority have) he will help you understand the curious machinery of digestion.

To start you thinking on this interesting subject, I will try to lay out the plan in a general way and you can then follow into more minute details.

Pawlow (pronounce Pavloff) a famous Russian Physician and Chemist, experimenting on some dogs, cut into the tube leading from the throat to the stomach.

They were first put under chloroform or some other anaesthetic and the operation was painless. They were kept for months in very good condition.

When quite hungry some unappetizing food was placed before them and, although hunger forced them to eat, it was shown by analysis of the contents of the stomach that little if any of the digestive juices were found.

Then, in contrast, some raw meat was put where they couldn't reach it at once, and a little time allowed for the minds of the dogs to "anticipate" and create an appetite. When the food was finally given them, they devoured it ravenously and with every evidence of satisfaction. The food was passed out into a dish through the opening before it reached the stomach. It was found to be mixed with "Ptyalin" the alkaline juice of the mouth, which is important for the first step in digestion. Then an analysis was made of the contents of the stomach, into which no food had entered. It was shown that the digestive fluids of stomach were flowing freely, exactly as if the desirable food had entered.

This proved that it was not the presence of food which caused the digestive juices to flow, but the flow was caused entirely and alone as a result of the action of the mind, from "anticipation."

One dog continued to eat the food he liked for over an hour, believing he was getting it into his stomach, whereas not an ounce went there; every particle went out through the opening, and yet all this time the digestive juices flowed to the stomach, prepared to quickly digest food, in response to the curious orders of the mind.

Do you pick up the lesson?

Unappetizing food, that which fails to create mental anticipation, does not cause the necessary digestive juices to flow, whereas, food that is pleasing to the sight and hence to the mind will cause the complicated machinery of the body to prepare in a wonderful way for its digestion.

How natural then, to reason that one should sit down to a meal in a peaceful, happy state of mind and start off the breakfast, say with some ripe delicious fruit, then follow with a bowl of crisp, lightly browned, thin bits of corn like Post Toasties, add a sprinkle of sugar and some good yellow cream and the attractive, appetizing picture cannot escape your eye and will produce the condition of mind which causes the digestive juices nature has hidden in mouth and stomach, to come forth and do their work.

These digestive juices can be driven back by a mind oppressed with worry, hate, anger or dislike of the disagreeable appearance of food placed before one.

Solid facts that are worthy the attention of anyone who esteems prime health and human happiness as a valuable asset in the game of life.

"There's a Reason" for saying "The Memory Lingers" when breakfast is started with* POST TOASTIES.

The Berkshire Hills Sanatorium
For the Scientific and Effective Treatment of CANCER
Without Resorting to Surgical Procedure

The only private institution of magnitude in the United States for the exclusive treatment of Cancer and other malignant and benign new growths. Conducted by a physician of standing. Established thirty-two years.

For complete information address
Berkshire Hills Sanatorium, North Adams, Massachusetts

How to Forget a Corn

A Blue-jay plaster is applied in a moment. Then the pain of the corn stops instantly. Then the bit of red B & B wax gently loosens the corn, and in two days it comes out.

The plaster is snug and comfortable, and one simply forgets the corn. In 48 hours one is rid of it. No soreness, no pain, no inconvenience. Do you wonder that most people now use Blue-jay? Five million corns are removed by them every year. Please try them on yours.

See the Picture

A is the harmless red B & B wax which loosens the corn.
B is soft felt to protect the corn and keep the wax from spreading.
C is the comfortable narrow band which goes around the toe.
D is rubber adhesive. It fastens the plaster on.

Blue-jay Corn Plasters

At All Druggists 15c and 25c per Package

Sample Mailed Free. Also Blue-jay Bunion Plasters.

Bauer & Black, Chicago & New York, Makers of Surgical Dressings, etc.

Every household shelf should contain Fairbank's soaps is the housekeeper's best friend and dirt's worst enemy. Its base is pulverized vegetable oil soap, with other purifying and cleansing ingredients added. It does its work quickly, thoroughly and efficiently.

Gold Dust

There's nothing about the house that Gold Dust will not clean—clothes, dishes, pots and pans, floors and woodwork, mirrors, windows, refrigerators, brooms, brushes, oilcloth, dairy utensils, bath tubs, sinks, pipes—in fact anything that is ever cleaned with soap or other cleanser.

"Let the Gold Dust Twins do your work" is pure soap. It is made from edible products, and has a clean, delicate, refreshing smell. Its whiteness cannot tell a lie, as it contains no coloring matter, impurities or adulterations. Beware of soaps that masquerade under strong perfumes and dyes.

Fairy Soap

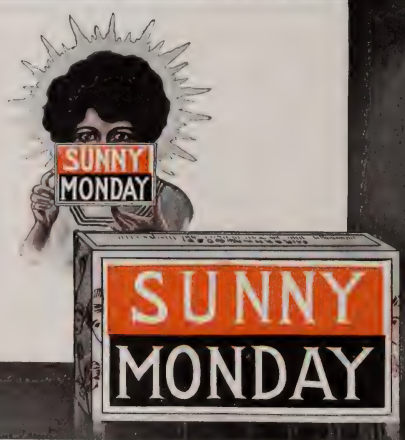
You can pay more but you cannot get more soap goodness than is found in Fairy Soap—the white, handy, floating, oval cake—at 5c. Try it and learn why.

"Have you a little 'Fairy' in your home?"

Sunny Monday



Laundry Soap

Sunny Monday is a white soap—made from choice fats, vegetable oils and a wonderful dirt-starting ingredient, which saves half the rubbing.

Sunny Monday washes equally well in hot, cold, luke-warm, boiling, hard or soft water.

The use of Sunny Monday means the saving of clothes—it will double their life—and make them whiter than they ever were before.

"Sunny Monday Bubbles will wash away your troubles"

THE N. K. FAIRBANK COMPANY—MAKERS—CHICAGO

Christian Herald

$1.50 A YEAR — 5c. A COPY
PUBLISHED 52 TIMES A YEAR

COPYRIGHT, 1911, BY THE CHRISTIAN HERALD

NEW YORK, JULY 12, 1911

VOLUME 34 — NUMBER 28
OFFICES: BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK

Young Moorish Girls Harvesting in the Fields, Algiers

OUR · MAIL · BAG

Questions and Answers

M. M., Leavenworth, Kan. Have we any definite traces of the Hittites or reliable data drawn from recent discoveries concerning them?

Recent excavations in Eastern Asia Minor and Northern Syria have been successful in unearthing traces of the "Children of Heth" or Hittites. Their kingdom, which seems to have been one of considerable size, was known as Hatti, and to the Egyptians as Khita. They were flourishing long before the days of Abraham. Hugo Wenckler, a noted Orientalist, in 1906-1907 excavated ruins of Hittite palaces at Boghaz-keni in Cappadocia, and also remains of royal archives, some of which were in a tongue not yet deciphered. Enough has been read, however, to show that the Hittites, about 1800 B.C., made successful war on Babylon.

W. V. B., Grand Rapids, Mich. Please explain II. Sam. 7:14, 15. Some think that Solomon was not saved because the Bible nowhere tells of his repentance.

The promise of Divine favor for Solomon, as Nathan delivered it to David, was a beautiful and auspicious one. His strange career, his idolatries and other sins, marred a noble character: but we are not the judges of his final destiny. The great leaders of the Christian Church have shrunk from debating the question and so may we. Let us hope, however, that the same divine mercy which is extended even in the eleventh hour, found Solomon repentant and forgiven, and at peace with God, who had blessed and honored him so abundantly in his lifetime.

O. G. Y., Jesup, Ia. 1. Is the work of George Muller of Bristol, England, still carried on? 2. Is the work of Dr. Charles Cullis still going on in Boston?

1. Yes, in the same place. 2. Yes, in the Dorchester district of Boston. As many as fifty consumptives are often cared for there at one time.

J. P. F. B., Krumsville, Pa. If I contribute for the foreign field, and send it to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, will it be sent directly to the place where I desire to have it sent, or will it be added to a special fund designed for the foreign field?

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD has been used as a channel of missionary support for many years. Those who desire to designate a special missionary or mission have the assurance in sending to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD that their gifts will go in full and direct to the missionary or mission for which they are intended. If, on the other hand, they designate a cause embracing not one but many individual objects, their gifts will be added undiminished to any fund that may exist for the benefit of that cause. Such funds are usually controlled by missionary committees in the field, who are responsible for the equitable distribution of all moneys sent to them for that purpose.

P. M. S., Oakland, Calif. Please explain I. Sam. 16:23. Can any evil emanate from God?

You have touched upon a topic that has caused much controversy. Evil is the negation of good. God is the source of all goodness, and no evil dwells in him; but with the withdrawal of his guiding and protecting Spirit from man, evil comes. In I. Sam. 16:14, we are distinctly told that this was the case with Saul. The Spirit of God had forsaken him, and then his soul was an easy prey to the Spirit of Evil. He was hypochondriac and his distemper was aggravated by his wicked temper and his consciousness that as the result of his own sin and folly he was in danger of losing his throne.

F. L., Capac, Mich. What object lesson was Christ teaching in John 8:7?

He was not condoning the woman's sin, but was showing the injustice of her condemnation by others who were themselves guilty before God. It was a rebuke to the self-righteous. (For second question see the account of the raising of the Maine in last week's CHRISTIAN HERALD.)

J. B. G., Wilton, Me. What did Jesus mean by "perish," John 3:16?

The world, in the widest sense, was ready to "perish" when God's love devised the "gift," or sacrifice, that would save it. It was under divine condemnation, estranged from God, neglectful of his laws, and had loved "the darkness rather than the light." By "perish" was evidently meant the fate reserved for those communities and nations which, living to the flesh and rejecting all else, are at last overwhelmed in their sins by some great calamity, like the nations and cities that have been destroyed in the past. But Jesus refers also to the condition of the individual soul. That there is a destruction beyond physical death is implied in several passages (see Job 26:6; 28:22; Prov. 15:11 and 27:20; Ps. 52:5; Matt. 10:28; Phil. 3:19; James 4:12). Whether perdition means ultimate annihilation, as some have contended, or exclusion from heaven and a separation so absolute and irredeemable as to practically amount to extinction, is matter of dispute. In Rev. 21:8, perdition is described as the "second death."

W. J. W. C., Santa Maria, Calif. Please explain Rom. 9:1-18; also Zech. 8:23. Has this prophecy ever been fulfilled?

The first eleven verses of Romans 9 refer to the condition and destiny of the "chosen people." Paul was discussing the divinely appointed means of opening up the way of salvation to both Jew and Gentile. In verse 4 what he writes may be more broadly interpreted: "And well may I feel thus toward a people so illustrious for all that is ennobling—in their origin, the trusts committed to them, and the debt which the world owes to them for the birth of a Redeemer through their race." He shows, however, that the spiritual Israel is not identical with Israel after the flesh. Though Israel after the flesh had fallen, the spiritual elect Israel has not failed. The passage in Zechariah is allied to these verses, but not closely. Read the preceding verses in Zechariah 8, which shows that verse 23 relates to a prophecy yet unfulfilled and points to a time when all nations and tongues shall know that God is of a truth with his people, and so will desire to be joined to them.

S. J. F., River Forest, Ill. Was Uzzah, who had the care of the Ark, eligible to the priesthood? To what tribe did he belong and were there any special favors accorded them?

Uzzah was a Merarite Levite. He was not a priest, and his offense in touching the Ark was contrary to the law. He did not enjoy the privileges belonging to the priestly family.

Subscriber, Westling, Pa. Please tell me whether Great Britain or the United States could put the most ready men in the field in case of war.

The figures for Great Britain's army were in 1910, as follows: Peace strength, 255,000; reserves, 509,000; available for duty, untrained, 18,700,000. The United States regular army numbers about 77,000, and may be increased to 100,000. The enrolled militia number about 113,000, while about 15,000,000 are available for military service.

Miss L. E. W., Warehouse Point, Conn. Do you not think that "tithe," or "tenth," is first mentioned in Gen. 14:20, instead of later, as stated in your paper some time ago?

The first Biblical mention of tithes is Gen. 14:20, as stated in your letter, but there are other passages which explain the term better than this, and these you can find by reference to your word-book or concordance. Many people practise tithing even at this date, but the majority tithe the income, and not the entire possessions or gross receipts.

E. E., Merrill, Ore. Kindly inform me how the "livings" or pastorates in the Episcopal Church in England are filled.

The appointments are made by the bishop of the diocese as in America. Upon the recommendation of the Synod the newly-ordained candidate is appointed to the position of curate. There may have been in the past isolated cases of abuse of this system, but it is quite certain that none exist at the present time.

Miscellaneous

P. F. Y., Sidell, Ill. 1. It is pronounced Ed-ers-hime, with accent on the first and last syllables. 2. According to the records as now interpreted it was on Friday. 3. The King James Version still retains its popularity, although the Revised is now used by many preachers and is preferred by Bible scholars on account of the many corrections and improvements in the text.

G. H., Grampian Hill, Ill. We confess that our philosophy does not extend into the realm of dreams. It is a study altogether outside of the sphere of THE MAIL-BAG. You may be of an unduly sensitive temperament, and this fact may give form and character to your dreams which, after all, are but the distorted reflex of our waking thoughts. A very interesting volume on the subject is The Night Side of Nature, published by Coates & Co., of Philadelphia. It may help you to a solution.

F. F. F., Oshkosh, Wis. 1. The Holy Ghost or Holy Spirit is the third person in the Trinity, proceeding from the Father and the Son and equal with them in power and glory. In the Old Testament original Hebrew he is called "the Spirit of God" or the "Spirit of Jehovah." Besides this personal use of the term the words frequently occur in the New Testament as representing the influence or effect of the Spirit's agency, with reference to power, enduement and inspiration. His personality is proved by John 16:13; Acts 10:19; Acts 13:2; I. Cor. 12:12; John 14:26; Rom. 8:26, etc. 2. The passage in Prov. 23:31 warns us not to be caught by the color and sparkle of the wine in the cup. Much sin enters the soul through the avenue of the eye. 3. The statement we printed concerning the Creation is the view taken by modern commentators and in our opinion does not conflict with Revelation. Literal interpretations are not necessarily right. There are many passages which call for a broad, spiritual interpretation rather than a literal one. 4. The Chinese Government did much for the famine sufferers. It made liberal appropriations and is still helping them where needed. To claim that the famine was sent as a judgment against the people is unjustifiable. Famine or distress is liable to visit any nation. China's primitive methods of agriculture and lack of a proper drainage system doubtless did much to aggravate the situation.

"THOU FOOL!"

And Eleven Other Remarkable Sermons Never Before Published

BY THE LATE EVANGELIST

DWIGHT L. MOODY

THESE TWELVE GREAT SERMONS are replete with the spiritual fire and vigor of Moody in the prime of his evangelistic ministry. They form a connected Series and will be welcomed with genuine satisfaction by all who love the Truth of the Gospel Message. They were discovered recently by Mr. Moody's old stenographer, the Rev. W. D. Bridge, in long-forgotten note-books, and their genuineness is vouched for by Mr. Moody's family. They bring the reader to the very foot of the Throne of Grace, and speak to the heart with a strange and irresistible power concerning our duty here and the joys of the life beyond.

Rev. F. B. Meyer called Moody the "Uncrowned King of Preachers; rugged, terse, full of mother-wit, direct and sharp as a two-edged sword." The secret of Moody's power is revealed in these twelve wonderful sermons, which come at this time as special messages to a world that needs to be stirred from its spiritual apathy and deadly indifference.

Thousands have been brought from darkness to spiritual light through Moody's sermons. In these newly-discovered discourses he seems to speak from his resting-place on Round Top, Northfield, with the voice of a prophet and to sound forth anew the wonders of God's love. His sermons have an inspiration and a spiritual uplift possessed by those of no other preacher or evangelist of this age.

These hitherto unknown Sermons are now published by THE CHRISTIAN HERALD and offered on terms easily within the reach of all. They make a compact volume of 240 pages, printed on good paper in a clear, legible type, easily read. The Book is bound in semi-flexible covers, with gold stamp on front. The following are the titles of this Wonderful Series of Sermons:

Thou Fool	The Soul-Winner	Excuses
Power For Service	Working for Christ	Invitation and Altar Service
How Backsliders May Return	Trust	The Gospel
How to Deal With Inquirers	Instantaneous Salvation	God's Promises

How to Obtain These Sermons FREE

You may obtain this volume FREE, and have in your house a means of constant inspiration, merely by pointing out the good qualities of the CHRISTIAN HERALD to your friends, and having one of them take a trial subscription. Send us 50 cents for a four months' New subscription (17 weeks) mailed to any address in the United States or Canada, and we will send you this remarkable volume without charging you one cent. Address,

CHRISTIAN HERALD, BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK

NEW YORK, JULY 12, 1911

THE · CHRISTIAN · HERALD

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED NEWSPAPER FOR THE HOME

MORNING PRAYERS AT CAMP NORTHFIELD

Photo by Levering

THE BATTLES OF "ROUND TOP"

How Northfield Began and Grew Until Its Spiritual Conquests Became World-wide

NORTHFIELD'S Summer Conference is probably the oldest gathering of its kind in America, perhaps in the world. It is an outgrowth of the Bible readings which the late Dwight L. Moody gave in his own home in the summers of 1877 and 1878. He had returned to Northfield, his birthplace, to spend a season in rest. The neighbors whom he invited in on Sabbath and Tuesday evenings filled the large living rooms and halls, into which were carried all the available chairs of the home.

But it was while conducting a series of meetings in Cleveland in the fall of 1879 that the Holy Spirit moved in Mr. Moody's heart to call together a larger circle for conference in a summer session of those who were concerned about the state of Christ's Church, in order that, through prayer and study of the Word, the life and service of Christians might be more vigorous and abundant. And thus the circle widened, the first session being held the next summer. Some of the meetings were held again in the village church and others in a large tent erected for the purpose. From 1882 to 1885 no Conference was held owing to Mr. Moody's work in Great Britain, out of which grew the Keswick movement. Since 1885 the Conferences have been held annually, and almost every famous preacher of the last decade has been heard from the Northfield platform.

In 1894 Mr. Moody raised funds for the erection of the beautiful Auditorium, which seats over 2,500 persons. Some of Mr. Moody's friends doubted the necessity of such a large structure, which was in those days one of the largest halls in Massachusetts, as indeed it is still. But the first Sabbath it was used every inch of space in the building was occupied, and it has been of increasing service every summer since then. The attendance runs far into the thousands.

It is interesting to stand on Garnet Rock among the hills behind Northfield, and see spread out before the eyes the many buildings, each of which is a monument to the faith and prayers of Mr. Moody. His memorial is not the granite stone that marks his last resting-place on the beautiful knoll of Round Top, which was his favorite spot. His real monument is in the lives of those whom he touched during all those years, many of whom made decisions right there on Round Top during the Summer Conferences. Those whom he influenced were men of widely different opinions and training and disposition; but he would always get them in some line of work for the Master. An illustration of this may be seen in the scores of evangelists on whom has fallen "the mantle of the prophet," yet all of whom work in different ways, and reach very distinct classes of people. While Mr. Moody was conducting his series of meetings in England, Dr. F. B. Meyer felt a new call to preach the simple Gospel. The writer well remembers hearing Dr. Meyer tell, some years ago, how he had climbed the hills behind the large tent at Keswick, where the meetings were being held, and quietly settled the question with God. Since that night his whole ministry has been different, and has reached around the world.

Of a different type was Rev. Len G. Broughton of Atlanta, Ga. He came, one summer twenty-five years ago, with a group of brother ministers from the South. They were quartered in the Marquand Hall. A misunderstanding occurred one day, which was a great disappointment to those men who had come so far. The whole party prepared to pack up and leave. Mr. Moody appeared upon the scene and adjusted the difficulty. The party remained and Mr. Broughton received a great blessing, out of which has grown his very large and extended ministry.

Mr. S. D. Gordon,

Continued on page 708

Sunset Service on "Round Top"

The American Pulpit

A SERMON BY

Rev. J. Wilbur Chapman, D.D.*

A SOLEMN QUESTION

TEXT: Gen. 44:34—"How shall I go up to my father, and the lad be not with me?"

THIS text may be read in many different ways, but it is always searching. How shall I go up to my Father and my husband be not with me, or my wife? How shall I be able to stand before God if the one who has worked in my home, or side by side with me in the office, be not with me? We are not responsible for the conversion of our friends, but we are responsible for telling them of Jesus, and if we have not spoken I am quite sure that one day we shall be obliged to answer for our neglect at the judgment seat of Christ.

There was a great famine in the land where God's people lived, but there was plenty in the land of Egypt. Jacob and his sons were suffering because the famine pressed him sorely, but still more was Jacob in distress because Joseph was away from him. Jacob's sons, with the exception of Benjamin, had gone over into the land of Egypt to buy corn. You will remember that when they came into the presence of Joseph they did not know him, but he knew them; he asked them concerning their father, and asked them if they still had another brother, and learned that Benjamin had been left behind. Then he treated them as spies, though they assured him they were there upon an honest mission, and he said that he would hold one of their brothers, Simeon, as a sort of hostage, and they should go back again to their father, but they could not have Simeon, nor could they have more corn, unless they brought Benjamin into his presence.

These brothers, now bringing Benjamin, come again to Joseph, and he gives them the corn, but places in the sack of Benjamin a silver cup. They start back again into the land where their father dwelt, and they have not gone very far when the messengers of the king overtake them and they find the silver cup in Benjamin's sack. They make him a prisoner, and take him back into the presence of Joseph, and when the eldest son realizes that Benjamin may be kept a captive, he makes his appeal in the text, which is really a searching Scripture. "How shall I go up to my father, and the lad be not with me?"

As a Man Soweth

What are the lessons that we may learn from this text? First, that what we sow we reap. Jacob deceived his father, and his sons deceived him. "Be not deceived; God is not mocked; whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."

Then there is another lesson. I wish we might have as great a responsibility for those around us as this brother had for Benjamin. I wish that every father would say, "How can I go up to God, and my boy be left behind?" If that were true, fathers would spend sleepless nights. If that were true, they would turn away even from their business; they would not cease to pray and work until their boys came to Jesus. You cannot escape responsibility. You are bound to answer for it. You may sit before your fire, and pile great blocks of wood upon it, then watch the flames until the coals become red, and then gradually whiten until they turn to ashes, and the fire is dead, and the room becomes cold; but listen! Science tells us that the heat is never lost; it goes out, and out, and out, in ever widening circles. And the same thing is true of your influence. There is not a father but his influence is counting for or against his boy, for or against his household; there is not a business man but his influence is counting for or against his employees. It will be a great thing when every business man realizes his responsibility for those who are employed by him. You have not fulfilled your obligation when you have won your family to Christ. You are responsible for others as well. A friend of mine in the city of Boston told me of a great New York business man who, in one of his services, came suddenly to a realization of his responsibility, and who went the next morning to his place of business and called one man after another into his private office, saying to each, "I have for years been a Christian, but I have been untrue to my profession." The last man to come was his private secretary. Taking him by the hand, the business man said, "Edward, have I not always kept my promises to you?" "Certainly, sir." "And fulfilled every obligation?" "Most surely, sir." "Have I failed in anything?" "Not a thing, sir." But there was something in the man's face that made the secretary think there was a crisis ahead, and he said, "I hope we are not going to part; you are surely not going to dismiss me, sir?" Then, putting his arm around the younger man's shoulder, the business man said, "I am certainly not going to dismiss you, but you and I have been together fifteen years, and all that time I have never asked you to be a Christian, and I want to ask you to be a Christian this morning." Not another word was spoken; tears were rolling down the secretary's cheeks, their hands came together and he went out of the room. What was the result? That man's minister came into that great manufacturing concern and won thirteen men to Christ within a week, and one of the neighboring pastors came and won sixteen more: twenty-nine men won for Jesus Christ, simply because one man felt his responsibility. What we need in America to-day is such a baptism of the Spirit to come upon the Church that every man in the Church will begin to feel his responsibility for others and become a soul-winner; and when we have that spirit, then we shall have the spirit of the text, "How shall I go up to my father, and the lad be not with me?"

The Responsibility of Parents

I cannot understand some parents. Some of you seem to think that the minister ought to bring your boy to Christ; some of you act as if you thought that the Sunday School teacher should win your girl to Christ; some of you seem to think that a meeting such as this should bring your children to Christ. Now, the ministers will try to do it, and the Sunday School teachers will attempt it, but I would like to say that I should feel eternally disgraced as a father if I thought that anybody had more influence over my boys than their father, if I thought that any minister in the world could influence them more than I.

I was standing in Tiffany's great store in New York, the greatest jewelry store in the world, and I heard the salesman say to a lady, who had asked him about some pearls, "Madam, this pearl is worth $17,000." I was interested at once. I said, "Let me see the pearl that is worth $17,000. The salesman put it on a piece of black cloth, and I studied it carefully. I said, "I suppose Tiffany's stock is very valuable?" And as I looked around that beautiful store I imagined them bringing all their stock up to my house, and saying, "We want you to take care of this to-night." What do you think I would do? I would go as quickly as I could to the telephone and call up the chief of police, and say, "I have all Tiffany's stock in my house, and it is too great a responsibility. Will you send me some of your most trusted officers to help me?" You would do the same, wouldn't you? But I have a little boy in my home, and for him I am responsible. I have had him for nine years, and some of you may have just such another little boy. I turn to this old book, and I read this word: "What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world, and lose his own soul? or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?" It is as if he had all the diamonds and rubies and pearls in the world, and all the art and music and power of the world, and held them in one hand, and just put his little boy in the other, and the boy would be worth more than all the jewels. If you would tremble because you had seventeen million dollars' worth of jewels in your house one night, how shall you go up to your Father, and the lad be not with you?

I am pleading for responsibility. A short time ago in a meeting there was handed to me this request for prayer: "Please pray for my daughter eighteen years of age; her heart is like a stone. When she was a little girl she wanted to be a Christian and to join the Church, but I put her off. Since then I have urged her and wept over her, and prayed for her, but her heart is like a stone. Please read out this request, so that no other mother may make this awful mistake." You might have St. Paul in your pulpit, but he could not win souls if the mothers and fathers were careless.

Our Children's Danger

How may we possess the spirit of the text? First, when we realize our children's danger. I am rather old-fashioned as regards doctrine, and I know this is true, and if it is not true, then the Bible is not true: that a man without Jesus Christ is lost. You will never feel the burden of responsibility for your children until you realize that they are in danger. I was passing through the streets of the city of Philadelphia when I suddenly saw the door of one of the finest homes thrown open, and a woman sprang out upon the steps. She began to wring her hands and cry, and in less than ten minutes there was a crowd around her. A police officer coming up to her, she said, "The nurse took my little girl into the park this morning, and her attention was diverted, and she lost sight of the child for the moment, and when she turned back she was gone." I shall not soon forget that mother wringing her hands, and saying over and over again, "She is lost, she is lost!" I am sure we shall never feel our responsibility for the souls of our children until we realize their peril. But that is not all. I must bring the subject closer to you than that. We were crossing the China Sea recently, and I heard of one of the ship's doctors who had brought his wife and children on board with him. The children were playing around the deck, and the doctor was sitting talking to one of my friends. Just after the vessel had got out from port, one of the sailors came up, and saluting him said, "Doctor, just as we were about to leave port a boy fell overboard. We rescued him, and we have done everything we can to resuscitate him." "What have you done?" asked the doctor. "We have done this and that and the other," answered the sailor, mentioning various methods used on such occasions, "but he is still unconscious. Is there anything else we can do?" The doctor remained seated, and looking up in a careless, professional sort of way, said, "I think not." Then my friends said, "Doctor, would it not be a good plan for you to go and see the boy?" So they sauntered down the deck until they came to the little crowd surrounding the boy lying on the deck. The doctor bent over him, and turned the little fellow's face around so that he could look at him. Suddenly his indifference was gone. "My God, it is my boy!" he said. He put his ear to the boy's heart, and began to chafe his limp hands. He exerted all his strength, using every method to resuscitate him, crying all the time, "Help me! Help me!" That makes all the difference.

Now Is the Accepted Time

There are times that are especially opportune for our work. There is a time in every boy's life when a father may speak to him. There is a time in every girl's experience when a mother may speak to her on this subject. You cannot drive people into the kingdom, and you cannot scold them in, but there are times when you may win them easily. I once asked my church officers how many of them had won a soul for Christ, and while seven said they had, five stood up to say they had not. One of them, a bank president, said: "That is a sharp question; will you excuse me if I go home?" He went off to his beautiful house, found that his boys were asleep, made his way up to their room, and bending over put his hand on the face of one of them, and as he roused the boy from his sleep, he said, "My son, your father has come home to ask you to be a Christian." I received those boys into my church a month later. There is an opportune time, and youth is generally the time. I sometimes think we may take people into the Church when they are too old, but I do not think we can take them in when they are too young. Polycarp came when he was a child of nine, Matthew Henry at eleven, Jonathan Edwards at seven, and the immortal Watts at nine. When did you come to Christ? Remember that if you put a barrier in the way of a child of seven who wants to come to Christ you may be putting a barrier in the way of one who might become a Watts or an Edwards, or a missionary who might stir the world for Christ.

How are you going to win your loved ones? First, just live Christ. It is not possible for every father to be rich, and in our country, when a man is rich and leaves a fortune to his boy, the chances are sometimes against the boy, but I am sure of one thing: It is possible for every one of us to be good. If you are going to win your children to Christ, you must live Christ in your homes.

Continued on next page

* Dr. Chapman (Presbyterian) is America's leading evangelist.

A Solemn Question

Continued from preceding page

Secondly, you have got to pray for them. Dr. Talmage was my personal friend, and he told me of a youth who went one day to his mother, and said, "Mother, I want to go to-night to Somerville, N. J., and spend the night." She knew the place he was going to was not exactly as it should be, so she said, "My boy, you cannot go." Finally, because he was self-willed, he said, "I will go!" "Very well," she said, "you may go; but every moment you are out of the house I will be in prayer for you." Dr. Talmage went on to tell me that the boy went, but he could not enjoy himself, and at three o'clock in the morning he tramped back to his home in the country, and when he got near the house he saw a light in his mother's window. He slipped up and looked through the old-fashioned blind, and saw his mother on her knees. He put his ear against the glass, and heard these words: "O Jesus! O Jesus! Keep my boy!" Dr. Talmage told me that the boy stole around the house, got in by the back door, slipped into his mother's room, dropped on his knees, and said, "Mother, I have come back." And that night he was converted. As a result of his conversion fifty country boys in the neighborhood were converted, and a revival swept over the entire neighborhood.

I have only one thing to say in conclusion. Do not be too late. Sin is terrific in these days. I should be afraid to let my boys live without Christ to-day. Sin gets in by eye-gate, and ear-gate, and by a thousand different ways that it did not get in when I was a boy. Do not be too late. One of these days the heart will be so hard that you cannot soften it, the will will be so stubborn that you cannot yield it, the life will be so steeped in sin that you cannot win it. Some time ago Mr. Alexander and I were holding a meeting, and we were asked to go to a suburban church for an afternoon meeting. We found the church crowded to overflowing, and I used this text for the first time for years, and just as I came to close and said, "Do not be too late," I saw a lady rise in the crowd, and with some difficulty make her way to the door. She seemed a woman of culture and refinement, and I thought she was angry at something I had said. When the evangelist who was in charge of that district came down to our hotel the next day, he said, "Did you notice the woman who went out as you were closing your sermon?" Then he went on to tell me the story. She had one boy, who was in the high school, and while I was pleading she remembered that while she was a Christian herself, she had never spoken to him, and suddenly it occurred to her that she might never see her boy again. She rose and pushed her way out, went along to the high school, where she waited until the boys came out. When her eighteen-year-old boy came along, she linked her arm in his and said, "My precious boy, your mother has never yet spoken to you about Jesus, and this may be her last chance." And right there, on the street, with a hundred other boys moving past, she led him to Christ. Do you want to pray for your boy, your girl, your class or school? Then do it now, and you may win them for Jesus.

A Cathedral Inscription

IN THE Cathedral of Lubeck, Germany, is the following inscription:

"Thus speaketh Christ our Lord to us:
Ye call me Master, and obey me not;
Ye call me Light, and seek me not;
Ye call me Way, and walk me not;
Ye call me Life, and desire me not;
Ye call me Wise, and follow me not;
Ye call me Fair, and love me not;
Ye call me Rich, and ask me not;
Ye call me Eternal, and seek me not;
Ye call me Gracious, and trust me not;
Ye call me Noble, and serve me not;
Ye call me Mighty, and honor me not;
Ye call me Just, and fear me not;
If I condemn you, blame me not."

White Carnations

THE world is full of mysteries; but we may be certain that amidst them all Some One guides our steps.

It was just a year ago when in the afternoon Mrs. N., who through her assignments to charitable work calls a hundred cities home, was walking along an obscure cross-street of Boston. A voice from behind caused her to turn. A boy was hurrying after her. She waited.

"Oh, lady! won't you buy some flowers?" he panted.

Mrs. N. smilingly shook her head. Flowers were farthest from her thoughts just then.

"No, thank you," she said. "I don't want any flowers now. I have no place for them."

"But I'm selling them cheap. Please do."

The appeal had been made to exactly the right person, even if at apparently the wrong time. Mrs. N. is a flower-lover. She weakened.

"Well—where are they? I might look at them."

"In that shop yonder." And he led her back.

They were splendid flowers—carnations; and only twenty-five cents the dozen.

"Dear me, but these are white," expostulated Mrs. N. "I don't like the white. Haven't you any pink, or red? I care for the white least of all."

No; the boy had no other color in stock. And, although she "cared for the white least of all," she surrendered her last coin, save carfare, and bore away with her the dozen. She had no idea what to do with them. She must go a considerable distance yet, the day was sultry, and they would wilt. So she determined to give them to some child, or to lay them upon some bare door-step.

. . .

HER route unexpectedly took her past one of the largest churches of Boston, which she was accustomed to attend, and where she felt more or less acquainted. Sudden rain was beginning to fall, the doors of the church were wide open, and she entered for a moment of devotion and for a respite until perhaps the shower would cease.

As she lingered an instant, having crossed the threshold into the vestibule, the sexton advanced and accosted her. He was attired in his black gown.

"Oh, Mrs. N.," he said (for he knew her), "won't you come in? We are to have a funeral. The services will commence very soon now."

"Who is it?"

"A woman, found dead in bed only this morning."

"But won't I be intruding?"

"Bless you, no," assured the sexton. "So far as we can discover she has not a relative, nor even a friend. You'll be the only person present, except the officials."

"Not a relative, nor a friend, nor even a flower for her," spoke, half bitterly, he who evidently was the undertaker, sitting near upon a stool.

"Oh!" gasped Mrs. N., deeply moved.

"You see," explained the sexton, "it happened in a cheap boarding-house. The landlady found her dead in the bed, and hustled her body out, and there is nothing to delay interment for."

"A beautiful old lady," vouchsafed the undertaker. "Somebody's mother, maybe. She has on a wedding-ring, worn thin. But there she lies, without sign or token of any human interest."

"Oh!" gasped Mrs. N. again. She hesitated no longer. "Come," she bade.

Interpreting, the undertaker preceded her; the sexton followed. Leaving the rain-darkened vestibule, up the long sombre aisle they went, to where beneath the chary lights was resting the cheap casket—singularly lonely and isolated, within that high, wide vault. Not a word was uttered. Only the undertaker gently removed the head of the casket lid; with the sexton standing by Mrs. N. gently placed her dozen white carnations inside; the cover was gently adjusted; and the three of them as gently withdrew to the vestibule.

. . .

MRS. N. now did not stay. 'Twas needless. The mission to which she had been appointed was accomplished. She understood. The rain had slackened; and with heart brimming out of her great thankfulness to God for his gracious mercy in leading her, she felt impelled to hasten forth and seek the boy, His instrument. She must share her gratitude. But vainly she searched. She was able to find the boy not again, not the shop, not even that obscure little street wherein those white carnations had virtually been thrust upon her.

EDWIN L. SABIN.

The Sunshine Land

IN FAITH'S bright vision I ofttimes see
A beautiful City as clear as the sun—
Many loved ones are there who are calling for me;
They are calling me onward; I haste and run;
As closer I get to that City fair,
I see its palaces, glorious and grand;
There is one for me, for my Saviour has said—
He will come and bring me to the The Sunshine Land.

I'll be with my Lord in that City fair,
And drink from the wonderful Fountain of Life;
With my King I will walk on the streets of Gold,
And my soul find its rest after years of strife.
With my loved ones there, I will sit me down,
And list to the songs of the angel band
Who are singing the praises of Him who was slain,
And has brought me home to the Sunshine Land.

Forever I'll be in that City fair,
"No more to go out" from the side of my King.
I "shall see His face," and bear His dear Name,
As the "Bride of the Lamb" I joyously sing.
Then I'll know the love that brought me there,
And in all its rich sweetness I'll understand;
And "He'll wipe every tear away from my eyes,"
For sorrow ne'er enters the Sunshine Land.

I'm longing that soon He'll come for me,
As upward I look with eyes that grow dim
And misty with tears, as I watch and wait
For the Bridegroom to come and take me to Him.
"Sorrow and sighing will all flee away,"
And we'll evermore be with that glorious band
Of ransomed, redeemed ones—earth's sorrows forgot;
Forever with Christ in the Sunshine Land.

Passaic, N. J. REV. J. R. MORRIS.

It Must Be So

IT MUST be so—the flowers must bloom to die,
And clouds must gather in the brightest sky;
It must be so, that Youth, with footsteps fleet,
Will haste till Age comes on, with weary feet.

It must be so—Life's twilight must displace
Youth's garland, which lent sunshine to the face;
It must be so, though years may bring renown,
Regret attends, for the lost vernal crown.

It must be so—the loved ones of to-day,
To-morrow from our lives afar must stray;
It must be so, and yet 'tis hard to think
Love's golden chain must sever link by link.

It must be so—there must go on, within,
The needful work—God's loving discipline;
And as it must be so, let's try to bear,
With cheerful hearts, God's love-sent sorrow and care!

VENI MCDONALD PORGES.

The Faith of a Scientist

DR. WM. THOMSON, better known to the world as Lord Kelvin, who passed away in December, 1907, was one of the most distinguished scientists of the last half century. His body now rests in Westminster Abbey, beside that of Sir Isaac Newton. Honors were showered upon him for his remarkable discoveries and inventions in the realm of electricity and magnetism. He was a principal figure in the laying of the Atlantic cables. He devised the modern form of the compass and he was the leader among a brilliant body of investigators into the nature of matter. He was, however, one of the most modest of men and never puffed up by his remarkable talents.

"Lord Kelvin's faith," writes a recent biographer, "was simple and immovable; it was confirmed and not weakened by his unequaled mastery of scientific law and of scientific truth. He is perhaps the most brilliant example we have had in our time of the great principle that Bacon expressed: 'It is the little knowledge that leads to atheism; it is the deeper knowledge which leads you back to God.' The reason why many scientific men are not believers is that they are not scientific enough; they can see only a part of the thing and not the whole; but wherever a mind of the first order is discovered at work in science, that mind is always reverent and essentially believing. Kelvin declared that science positively affirms a Creative Power; the fact of a Creator, of a Creative Power, was proved, he maintained, by two points in the inorganic world, to mention only two. First, Fourier's equation for the flow of heat requires a beginning, an initiation; and, secondly, the permanence of the atoms as a vortex of motion could not be produced by any known animate or inanimate agency. And therefore Kelvin distinctly asserted the atom of matter proves God. As life proceeds only from life, the necessity of believing in an Author, an Origin of life, becomes manifest. 'The mystery and the miracle of the creation of living creatures,' to use his own phrase, were a proof of God, confirmed by the demonstrated daily miracle of human free will.

"Kelvin, therefore, had no difficulty in holding religious faith amid all his scientific work. A scientific career, in its unselfishness and lofty devotion, is essentially Christian. For Christianity is a method of securing the greatest good and blessing for mankind, the best conditions of living, and the highest use of human faculties. No man is a Christian who does not make the world happier and better.

"Lord Kelvin has shown us perhaps better than any man who ever lived that if you would be particular to understand even the portion of matter that is under your eyes, the matter that is in your own body, you would well find yourself in the presence of God."

SUMMER JOYS AT OCEAN GROVE

Tali Esen Morgan
Musical Director at Ocean Grove

Miss Helen Gertrude Rumsey
Leader of the Twilight Services

Rev. W. H. Morgan, D.D.
Leader of the Young People's Work

Mrs. Farraday
Pres. of the Sunday School Assembly

Rev. C. L. Mead, D.D.
General Leader for June and July

THE season at Ocean Grove has opened with a most attractive programme. It is interesting and gratifying to note the continued popularity of this famous seaside religious resort. Here the people come for rest and to enjoy the religious advantages and simple life by the shores of old ocean, where one may look out and have visions of the Great Beyond. Ocean Grove stands as a symbol of holy living, and the ideal of a past generation, who knew the meaning of "the faith once delivered to the saints." The Association has ever been mindful to fulfil the wishes of the originators, and to keep the question of salvation before the people.

Many improvements have been made during the past year. The North End Pavilion was completed in 1910. It is at the end of the Board Walk, and at the foot of Wesley Lake. The old Ross Pavilion was very useful in the early days, but never a thing of beauty. The North End Pavilion is a stately two-story structure, beautifully finished in white, and open on all sides. On the second floor is a broad expanse with an unobstructed view of the ocean, and provided with comfortable chairs. Here, by the payment of five cents, one may sit and watch the vessels passing on the eternal deep, read, or dream in undisturbed quiet. Needless to say, it is a Mecca for the great hosts who visit this resort. There is also a new building, for hot and cold sea-water baths, which is one of the most attractive of anything of its kind on the Jersey coast. The Ocean Grove Association will replace the old Pavilion at the south end of the Board Walk with a similar building. Wesley Lake has been improved by a new wall and walk. Rebuilt bridges and a new power plant are the features of this season. The middle of June found Ocean Grove ready for the opening Sabbath services, which were held in the Auditorium, June 18. The first Young People's meeting this summer was held June 20, under the leadership of the Rev. C. L. Mead, D.D. This meeting has a history. It was organized July 31, 1876, and then addressed by George G. Cookman, Mr. Joseph Thornley and E. S. Ferre. They marched to Centennial Park, where a vase was dedicated to the young people of Ocean Grove. In 1878, the inspired Margaret Bottome assisted the young men through the summer. The first Young People's Temple was built and dedicated in 1879, and meetings were held under the general direction of Mrs. E. C. Brooks, of Baltimore. The leader during 1882 was the Rev. William Wilberforce Cookman, now of Southern California. The summer of 1884 opened with another new leader of the young people, the Rev. C. H. Yatman, who was destined to lead the hosts to victory for a quarter of a century. The present Temple, seating 1,500 people, was completed July 2, 1887, and filled with a thousand enthusiastic young people. In 1896 the twenty-fifth anniversary of the leadership of Rev. C. H. Yatman was celebrated in the Auditorium. His report reads thus: "To-day closes my twenty-fifth year of work at Ocean Grove—years of hard work and harvest—blessed years of growth for me. The hundredfold return has been mine multiplied." God's providence took Rev. C. H. Yatman across the sea to lead more souls to Christ. He fell at his post, and was obliged to rest from his arduous labors. He returned last year to America, and will be at Ocean Grove this summer, not as a leader in the Master's work, but to be a living witness of Christ's power by his patient and deeply spiritual life. In 1906, the closing year of Bishop Fitzgerald, president of Ocean Grove Camp Meeting Association, he was leader of the Young People's Meeting. None will ever forget the stately figure in the speaker's chair. The Rev. C. L. Mead, D.D., and Rev. W. H. Morgan, D.D., were placed in charge in 1908, with the best results following. This year Rev. C. L. Mead will have the services until August, when the Rev.

"North End Pavilion," on the Board Walk at the Foot of Wesley Lake

W. H. Morgan will assume charge. On Sunday, June 25, the several departments of the Sunday School were organized, Joseph A. Hudson of Philadelphia leading the Intermediate and Mrs. W. H. Skirm of Trenton, N. J., the Primary Department. A Chinese Sunday School is held in Thornley Chapel.

Rev. Dr. A. H. Ballard, now ninety years of age, still continues as president of the Ocean Grove Association, but the Rev. Frank Wilson, D.D., of Yonkers, will in future assist him in this arduous position. However, Dr. Ballard takes charge of the Beach Meeting at 6 o'clock on Sunday evenings. This year's plans include a Sunday afternoon service at 4 o'clock, led by Rev. C. L. Mead in the new North End Pavilion, and Rev. Dr. I. H. Alday's Holiness Meeting in the Tabernacle every morning at 9 o'clock. The Twilight Services every day at 6 o'clock in the Tabernacle, under the efficient leadership of Miss Helen Gertrude Rumsey, are a great attraction to the young people. She is an evangelist in the Woman's Christian Temperance Union and a fine representative of a consecrated Christian woman—young, bright, pleasing. She possesses rare gifts of gentleness, intuition and faith—a woman of strong personality and in her exhortations, Biblical, clear and magnetic. She is a popular leader of young people, and draws around her a charmed circle of assistants. The Musical Department is under the wise direction of Tali Esen Morgan, who is indefatigable in training the children for the Festival Chorus. The rehearsals are held every morning at 10.30 from July 5. Children of any age can join. The chorus is divided into companies, according to age. No fee is charged, and the training in vocal production must surely be of great value. The Children's Fairy Land Festival is made up from this chorus. The Ocean Grove Boy Rough Riders are doing wonders in military discipline and training. Camping out is one of its features. Independence Day was celebrated by an oration from Woodrow Wilson, Governor of New Jersey. Much enthusiasm and patriotic spirit were manifested. Great crowds gathered at the Auditorium to greet him.

On July 26 Clarence Eddy, America's greatest organist, is to give a recital, and each afternoon there will be a concert in which Clarence Reynolds will feature certain well-known semi-classical selections. The National Convention of Organists is to be held at Ocean Grove during the first weeks of August. A number of attractions of a musical nature are scheduled for these weeks; among them being a production of Handel's Messiah with a chorus of six hundred voices. On August 14 the United States Marine Band will render concerts in the afternoon and evening.

The distinguished preachers this year will be Bishop Anderson, Bishop Hamilton, and Bishop Samuel Spreng of Cleveland, O.; Revs. F. Stockdale, F. Wilson, H. N. Condon, Chaplain of the House of Representatives; Rev. Robert F. G. Pierce, D.D., Rev. Cortland Myers, D.D., Tremont Temple, Boston; Rev. Dr. Goodell of New York.

The Camp-Meeting proper will begin August 25, with the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, and close September 4. There is something exquisitely beautiful in the thought that the Ladies' Union Aid Society of Ocean Grove is caring for a Preachers' Rest. Rev. Dr. Stokes suggested that "Grove Cottage," the gift of the Association, should be called "Elim," and hither the ministers and other workers are welcomed for recuperation at the mere cost of living. Since it was first opened in 1876, about nine thousand workers have been helped to a vacation and a Christian Home. The very atmosphere makes home and love features of this circle of consecrated men and women.

MARY B. COOKMAN.

The Beach and Board Walk at Asbury Park, Looking Toward Ocean Grove

The Greatest Coronation in History

KING GEORGE

QUEEN MARY

Photo Copyright, 1911, by The American Press Association

THE SCENE IN WESTMINSTER ABBEY AT THE MOMENT WHEN KING GEORGE V. WAS CROWNED

This is one of the photographs made at the King's command by Sir Benjamin Stone. Prints of this picture, together with all the other official photographs of the ceremony, will be placed in the archives of the British Museum.

OUR EDITORIAL FORUM

OTTO KOENIG, President — GEO. H. SANDISON, Managing Editor — THEODORE WATERS, Secretary

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD is published weekly by "The Christian Herald," at the Bible House, Fourth Avenue, 8th and 9th Sts., New York City. The officers are: Otto Koenig, President and Treasurer, Bible House, N. Y. City; Geo. H. Sandison, Vice-President, Bible House, N. Y. City; Theodore Waters, Secretary, Bible House, N. Y. City.

Subscription Price, $1.50 a year, in advance. Remittances should always be made in the safest manner available to the remitter. Register cash remittances. Foreign Postage.—For each copy to be mailed outside the United States, Canada, and Mexico, add one dollar a year.

Change of Date.—It takes at least two weeks to change the date, after your subscription is renewed. Expiration of Subscription.—The date on the wrapper indicates when your subscription ends. Change of Address.—It requires three weeks' time to make the change. Give both old and new address.

Subscriptions may commence with any issue. Letters should be addressed, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, Bible House, New York.

Entered at Post Office, New York, as Second-class Matter
Entered as Second-class Matter at the Post Office Department, Ottawa

Bishop Williams' Arraignment

IT IS well for the Church and for the cause of Christianity that some of our religious leaders in these days have the courage to cultivate the habit of plain speech in dealing with vital questions. Bishop Charles David Williams of Michigan is one of the few who in discussing the needs of the Church today do not employ the veiled language of ecclesiastical diplomacy, but speak and write straight to the point. In a recent magazine contribution he gives a new aspect to the discussion of the Church's loss of numbers and influence—a topic worn almost threadbare by numerous disputants, who have but faintly illuminated its intricacies. Bishop Williams holds that the change has resulted in > a conflict between a religion which is a fresh inspiration from the Spirit of God brooding over the living, present world, and a Church which is largely a crystallization out of the experience and the mind of a dead past. . . . The Church has carried down the ages the teachings and spirit of the prophets and apostles of old, and, above all, of her Divine Master, the Christ. To-day those teachings and that spirit are finding issue and expression in mighty impulses and movements of scientific and philosophical research, of political righteousness, social service, economic justice, commercial honesty and industrial equity. The Church does not recognize these movements as essentially religious.

Proceeding from this basis, the Bishop makes a plea for "untrammeled freedom for investigation and discovery," as a part of "the glorious liberty wherewith Christ doth make men free." This freedom he thinks the Church does not allow: "she has put limitations upon investigation; . . . she has made her creeds into paddocks" to confine her children. This, of course, is the usual stereotyped accusation, which carries little conviction among thinking people, since a clear rule of faith or belief is essential to any religion, and Christians to-day know of no reason why they should not continue to uphold such a rule, which is simply the concrete expression of their conscientious belief. Creed-smashing has never succeeded, nor will it succeed, so long as it is the nature of man to yearn after God.

But it is on another line of argument that the Bishop's indictment of present-day Christianity possesses the strongest appeal. He charges that the Church confines its work to the respectable classes and is dependent upon wealth; that it takes the "tainted" money of the rich and pays it back in glorification; that the lips of preachers are closed in deference to the rich and influential; that there is one standard of morals for the wealthy and another for the poor; that the Church is timid on all points vital to religion, narrowing its usefulness and putting it out of touch with great moral, social, industrial, political and other movements for the betterment of human society. There is much more to the same point.

Only in part can we approve the Bishop's well-meant and timely philippic. There is neither point nor logic in his assault on creeds and denominations; but the Church to-day certainly does need to arouse itself and to get out of the dull rut of formalism. It must shake off its indifference to the living issues of our time, and gird itself to take a leader's part in the battle. It is just beginning to realize this and the good Bishop's reminder may jog it into a more energetic attitude. When Jesus walked on earth, the Gospel he taught was applicable to the needs of all men; it is even more universally applicable to-day. There are crying public sins to be rebuked, far-reaching abuses to be redressed, a thousand problems that involve the welfare of multitudes, to be grappled with and solved. In this war the Church's place is at the front. In a word, it must come out of its exclusiveness and not only do its full share, but it must take a leader's place in all that relates to public betterment and individual, community and national righteousness. It must get its forces together to translate the Gospel of Jesus into practical work for the glory of God and the uplift and happiness of humanity.

Our Peace Circles

ON ANOTHER page of this issue may be seen the record of the noble response which the readers of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD have made to our call for Peace Circle organizations. This splendid showing must inspire many others to enlist for the promotion of peace. It would seem that the ink was scarcely dry on the page before Ohio responded to the summons. New York and the nearby States were preparing at the same time to organize. The subject is one to especially appeal to the great philanthropic and humanitarian element in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD family. They have learned from long experience to weigh correctly the importance of a cause, and they have gauged properly the significance of the Peace Movement, of which Andrew Carnegie has recently said, "It is the greatest step forward that humanity has ever taken. All progress, all inventions, are petty and inconsequential in comparison."

Let the work of founding CHRISTIAN HERALD Peace Circles go forward. We have few readers who are not keenly in sympathy with the Peace Movement. They may not have known heretofore how to express that sympathy. Here is a way to do it. Join or found a Peace Circle.

Rash Aeronautics

SO MANY excellent things have been accomplished by our brave and cool-headed airmen that it is a pity that there should be any need of adverse comment on any of the work of these high-flying pioneers of the blue. Many terrifying accidents have resulted from taking wholly unnecessary risks in the air and one would naturally conclude that the lesson of caution had been sufficiently enforced. But this is far from being the case. Only a few days ago, one of the boldest of the airmen skimmed across the awful torrent of Niagara in his machine, swept through the mist of the falls and, at the momentary risk of his life, in the presence of 150,000 thrilled spectators, performed certain evolutions before alighting in safety on the Canadian side. Of course, it was all very brilliant and exciting; but we fail to see that any good results can come from such an achievement, which is on a par with the perilous leap of the parachutist from a balloon in mid-air, or the dizzy walk of a man who crosses a raging river on a tight rope, only more difficult than either. Courage of this sort is sheer recklessness. Doubtless many in that gaping crowd that gathered to witness the Niagara flight expected a tragedy. The real triumphs of aerial navigation are not to be won by such exhibitions. There was practical purpose in the feat of Curtiss, who flew down the long Hudson Valley, in the brilliant work of Sopwith, who dropped an aerial post-bag from his machine squarely on the deck of the giant liner Olympic, and in the flight of the airman who demonstrated the practicability of alighting upon and starting from a battleship's deck. There is none, however, in the Niagara feat, which stands alone as an exhibition of brilliant but useless daring in which the operator was lucky to escape with his life.

The Mythical Mr. Lin

SEVERAL weeks ago, our attention was called to a new book purporting to be written by one Lin Shao Yang, a Chinese, in which missions and missionary methods were most unjustly criticised and misrepresented. Within the past week we have received letters from several missionaries in China in which the writers state that the opinion generally accepted there is that Lin Shao Yang is not a Chinese, but a foreigner masquerading under an assumed name, and that well-informed people in China, native and foreign, declare that the writer's narrow prejudices and wild malicious statements have rendered his attacks harmless. In the columns of the Shanghai Times and North China Daily News, the mythical Mr. Lin is discredited as a rationalist in disguise, at whose blunders the more intelligent Chinese as well as the missionaries are commenting with amusement, since in his furious tirade against the proposed establishment of a Christian university at Hankow, he has disclosed such gross ignorance on many things that his whole book misses the vital point. Dr. I. C. Garrett, of the Union Theological Seminary, Nanking, China, writes: "There can be no doubt, I think, that Lin is not Chinese. Further, his very vehemence appears to indicate that the spread of Christianity in China is assuming proportions which mean that it has come to stay." It is recalled that an enterprising foreign author not long ago wrote The Letters of a Mandarin, and for some time he paraded successfully as a Chinese until his disguise was penetrated. Possibly the same "mandarin" may be the author of this new diatribe.

Summer Dangers

ALREADY reports of fatalities on river, lake and ocean are beginning to fill the columns of the daily newspapers. Yet the season when the water—just to be by it, or in it, or on it—is most attractive has only begun. The love of the open sky, the winds, the woods and the water is inherent in our natures. God's great good out-doors is ours to enjoy to the fullest extent, and we should go to that enjoyment prudently, yet unharassed by any inward fear. To meet the pleasures of summer with carefree hearts, we should be influenced by that caution which is not timidity but the application to our sports and pleasures of the same sound judgment and good sense which animate the daily routine of our lives. The dangers which may beset us from our own unsteady nerves or those of our companions are always with us—possibilities that we must simply accept and safeguard ourselves against as best we may. Those dangers which arise from pure exuberance of youthful spirits or the misconceived notion of fun which possesses some people are by far the greatest we have to combat. For the first there may be no cure save the caution of wiser heads and admonition to self-control. For him who endangers others by his persistence in ill-timed horseplay, hardly any treatment is too drastic. He who refuses to "trim ship" when the sailboat tacks, or who rocks the rowboat or insists upon changing seats in the canoe, should be brought to his senses by any means at the command of the rest of the party. Not long since, one of those clever persons whose keenest enjoyment seems to be to cause fear or annoyance to others, rocked a boat in which there were two girls and a second man. When the dock was finally reached in safety, he was punished with a blow that sent him off the pier, to be ignominiously pulled out of the water with a boat-hook. He rashly took the matter before a magistrate, who, on learning the story, said he needed only a complaint from the occupants of the boat to send the practical joker to jail. Though this may be an extreme case, its occurrence at the opening of the vacation and outing season may well enforce the lesson to any who may be tempted to make ignoble fun by endangering the comfort and even imperiling the lives of others.

General Notes

—A RECENT DISPATCH from Sedan, France, announces that Lieutenant de Malherbe, a French military aviator, flew from Paris to that town a few days ago, covering the distance, 286 kilometers (177.6 miles), in 1 hour, 44 minutes and 35 seconds. This is one of the fastest flights yet recorded.

—LEFT HAND, FOR YEARS chief of the Arapahoes, died at his home near Darlington, Okla., several days ago. He was 83 years old, and one of the most famous warriors of the early days of the West. One of his important exploits was the massacre of Major Joel H. Elliott and nineteen men the day of General Custer's battle of Washita.

Contents of this Number

Wednesday, July 12, 1911

	PAGE
Our Mail-Bag	698
The Battles of "Round Top" (Illustrated)	699, 708
A Solemn Question. Sermon	700, 701
By J. Wilbur Chapman
White Carnations. By Edwin L. Sabin	701
Summer Joys at Ocean Grove (Illustrated)	702
By Mary B. Cookman
Greatest Coronation in History	703
OUR EDITORIAL FORUM	704
THE BIBLE AND NEWSPAPER (Illustrated)	705
Baptists from Thirty Nations (Illustrated)	706
The Story of Joseph (Illustrated)	707, 712
By Wayne Whipple
Making New Citizens in Canada (Illustrated)	708
By Aubrey Fullerton
Our Boys and Girls (Illustrated)	709
By Miss Janet Porter
Peace Circles Begin Work	710
Our Comfort Corner	711
By Margaret E. Sangster
Good Work for Boys	713, 714
Sunday School Lesson, by Dr. and Mrs. W. F. Crafts
Young People's Societies	715

THE BIBLE AND NEWSPAPER

Conducted by FERDINAND C. IGLEHART, D.D.

China's New Cabinet

AMONG the momentous movements of the century is that of China toward a constitutional government. In selecting Prince Ching as the Premier of the new Cabinet the Prince Regent says: "The throne is in earnest in its determination to make adequate preparation for a constitutional government, and the creation of the Cabinet is of great importance. We ordered Prince Ching to fill the post of Premier in the hope that he would endeavor to effect a successful government. As the Prince is in advanced years the throne has no intention of compelling him to remain in active service for a long time, but the throne has to depend upon his services in the present emergency." Prince Ching has been in office continuously since 1884 and was the right hand of the Empress Dowager. His retirement in the near future will break the last link between the administration of the Empress Dowager and the present régime. Na-Tung is the Manchu Vice-Premier, and Hsu Shih-Chang is the Chinese Vice-Premier, both men of experience and ability. Liang Tun-Yen has been placed at the head of foreign affairs in the Cabinet, where he will have a free hand. He is a graduate of Yale and highly honored in his own nation. The Minister of Finance is Duke Tsai-Tse, a man of intellectual force and sterling character, who will likely succeed Prince Ching as Premier. Tang Ching-chung is Minister for Education, Yin-Chang Minister for the Army, Shao Chang, Minister for Laws, and Prince Su, Minister for the Interior. Sheng Hsuan-huai, Minister for Communications, is said to be about the ablest man in service in Peking. He has official tact, business ability, a strong will and sterling moral courage. Shou-chi is Minister for Dependencies. Absolute despotism is dead in the world. There is no crown or throne in the Western Hemisphere; there are some royal dependencies that are as free as our government. Russia and Turkey as absolute monarchies have vanished from the map of Europe, and despotism is being driven out of the Far East. Language cannot describe the blessing which will come to her people and the world by the gift of a constitution and parliament to China. The action of the Prince Regent is unlike that of Rehoboam as he was inducted into the office of ruler of Israel. The Chinese ruler listened to the counsels of the wise, who advised the granting of more liberties to the people under the new dynasty than under the old. The king of Israel took the advice of the rash young men in making the government more despotic, and suffered the consequences of the same.

DUKE TSAI-TSE — LIANG TUN-YEN

PRINCE TSAI-HSUN — PRINCE PU-LUN — PRINCE SU — PRINCE CHING

HSU SHIH-CHANG — NA-TUNG

And now whereas my father did lade you with a heavy yoke, I will add to your yoke. My father hath chastised you with whips, but I will chastise you with scorpions. (I. Kings 12:11.)

Lord Mayor's Son Stranded

Sidney M. Bell, who says he is the eldest son of Sir John Charles Bell, Lord Mayor of London in 1907, is penniless in a cheap lodging house in South Boston. Mr. Bell, who is only twenty-six years old, said to a reporter: "I owe my so-called failure in life to the 'wanderlust.' Four years ago I took my A.B. degree at Cambridge and left London with $5,000 to see the world. My father, who was at that time Lord Mayor of London, wanted me to stay at home, but I was restless and went out over the sea. My father sent me a remittance to Canada, and at the end of the year I was $3,700 behind. The creditors sent the bills to my father, who also wrote this letter to me: 'Young man, I have brought you up, given you an education, and supported you extravagantly. Now don't you think it is about time you did something for yourself?' I cabled back just one word: 'Yes.' And that ended my relationship with home." It is the old story of the wreckage of the indolence and prodigality which curse so many sons of the rich. Young Bell may have gone to pieces like thousands of other such sons of fortune have done, by counting themselves above work. It is more than likely, however, that wealth bred the extravagance and vice. Some rich young men have brains and industry enough to retain and add to an inherited fortune, but they are the exception. Most of those who go to the front in the various callings in this country are the children of poverty who begin at the foot of the ladder and work their way to the top. It is to be hoped that this young man will turn to the One who is mighty to save and will enter upon a life of toil and duty. Christ gives a very good picture of the idle profligate son of wealth.

And not many days after the younger son gathered all together, and took his journey into a far country, and there wasted his substance with riotous living. (Luke 15:13.)

Wheat from Egyptian Mummy

Ten grains of wheat which had lain for thousands of years in the tomb of an Egyptian mummy were sent to a farmer at Greeley, Colo., and planted by him. Eight stalks of the wheat grew to maturity, promising a variety of grain superior to any growing in that locality, and may yet become the standard grade of American wheat. The persistency of life in the seed and the harvest after the death of the grains from the ancient tomb remind us of our immortality and resurrection. Paul uses this phenomenon in nature as a type of the resurrection.

But God giveth it a body as it hath pleased him, and to every seed his own body. (I. Cor. 15:38.)

Biggest Baby on Earth

James Adolf Cody of Mount Airy, Ga., is said to be the largest baby in the world. He is two years and three months old and weighs 122 pounds. The child's measurements are: Height, 29 inches; around head, 24 inches; neck, 14 inches; breast, 33 inches; waist, 36 inches; arm above elbow, 12 inches; wrist, 8 inches; limb above knee, 16 inches; below knee, 13 inches; ankle, 9 inches; length of foot, 6½ inches; across shoulders, 15 inches. With the first indication of abnormal growth, the parents consulted a physician, who did everything in his power by diet and otherwise to keep down his unusual growth, but all in vain. The baby sleeps well, is healthy and strong, his appetite is omnivorous. For breakfast he will eat three and four biscuits with bacon gravy, butter and syrup, two glasses of buttermilk and two cups of coffee. Between breakfast and dinner he requires another meal. The dinner is bountiful. He eats again a few hours after dinner and closes up the day's eating with a hearty supper. This abnormal growth is likely to be a handicap to the child and man. Should it continue he could hire himself out to a museum and gain his livelihood by curiosity, which would be a very unsatisfactory kind of life. It is to be hoped that time will reveal a normal mental, moral and religious development which will provide a useful and happy support. Physical strength has much to do with success in life, but physical bigness very little. A few giants have been masters in the world, but those who have succeeded best in the various callings of life have been those of medium size or even undersize physically. The little Davids have often slain the mighty giants, and the small Napoleons lead the great armies of the world. The stature of a person depends not upon physical size, but upon intellectual ability, moral vigor, and spiritual power. True greatness consists in the growth of the soul.

Grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. (II. Peter 3:18.)

Pulled Off Shutters

A woman in New York City the other day tore off the shutters from the windows near her house. She first pulled down those that she could get at easily, and then got a step-ladder to reach those that were higher up. She was so violent in her devastations that a policeman arrested her and took her to headquarters. The reason she gave for her conduct was that God's sun was shining and that the people were shutting it out from their homes and hearts. She claimed that they could not see so well in the house and could not view the things without. Instead of being shut up in jail she was taken before a commission and declared insane. The value of sunshine to the health and happiness of the family which the crazy woman felt was true, but it was not her business to take the remedy into her own hands. The sunshine of God's truth and life are barred out from many homes and hearts. The shutters must be unfastened from the inside. Christ has described those that put up the shutters of the soul and bar out the heavenly light and love in these words:

For this people's heart is waxed gross, and their ears are dull of hearing, and their eyes they have closed: lest at any time they should see with their eyes, and hear with their ears, and should understand with their heart, and should be converted, and I should heal them. (Matt. 13:15.)

Coronation Naval Pageant

King George V., in his royal yacht Victoria and Albert, in the uniform of a full admiral, reviewed his combined Atlantic and home fleets at Spithead. There were 187 warships stretching a distance of twenty-four miles, from the heavy dreadnought Neptune to the small torpedo boat, making the greatest fleet, perhaps, in all the ages. The Spanish Armada that went against England nearly 400 years ago, which came nearest to it, contained only 129 large ships, different kinds of vessels, too, from those the new king commanded. The United States battleship Delaware was the heaviest warship at the coronation review and commanded the attention and favor of all. A comparison between the Neptune and the Indefatigable of the British navy and the German cruiser Von der Tann and our battleship Delaware would show them to be pretty nearly equal. The fleet reviewed cost half a billion dollars. How many institutions of education, beneficence and piety that amount would establish! This murderous tribute of money and men for war which has been going on for thousands of years, must cease, is ceasing, and such spectacular naval pageants only emphasize the gigantic sin and folly of such armaments and the necessity of a new adjustment to the spirit of the times, to the spirit of Christ, which is peace on earth and good will to men. The prayer of the universal civilized world is that the peace God promised to Israel may prevail in England and all nations.

Upon David and upon his seed and upon his house and upon his throne shall there be peace forever from the Lord. (I. Kings 2:33.)

BAPTISTS FROM THIRTY NATIONS

SOME OF THE DELEGATES TO THE WORLD'S BAPTIST ALLIANCE, PHILADELPHIA, JUNE 18 TO 25

AT THE great meetings of the World's Baptist Alliance in Philadelphia, June 13 to 25, visible evidence was given of the international unity of the various divisions of the Baptist denomination. "It is not that we have made any new discovery or surrendered any long-cherished truths, or forsaken any primary aims, or found any new basis of agreement—not at all," declared the venerable and honored presiding officer and Christian scholar, Dr. John Clifford, of England, in his opening address. "Although the World's Alliance is a new creation, it is really the outward and visible sign of an inward and spiritual grace that has been working within us with special energy and vitality during the past fifteen years."

Representatives from thirty countries responded to the roll call of nations, including a noteworthy group of forty Russian Christians, some of whom have been persecuted for their faith. They were led by Rev. William Fetler, of St. Petersburg, for whom a bond of $2,500 was demanded by the Russian Government before he was permitted to leave Russia.

The work in Russia, facilitated by the granting of religious liberty to the people, has been the most important the World's Baptist Alliance has met since its foundation in 1905. The Baptist movement in Russia, which is now rapidly spreading, was begun by German and Swedish missionaries, aided by the converted British officer, Lord Radstock. The latest estimate gives at least 100,000 Russian Baptist Christians, who are organizing churches modeled on the English and American bodies.

A large group of German delegates held rallies led by Rev. J. G. Lehmann, of Cassel, and others. Special national meetings were also held by the French, the Swedes, the Poles, the Italians, and by the Welsh, who made plans to bring about closer action among the churches of Wales. The foreign workers present included Rev. A. N. Kamanguchi, of Japan; Paul Vincent, France; L. Ten Evans, Hayti; J. G. Chastain, Guadalajara, Mexico; Hugo Gutsche, King Williamstown, South Africa; G. H. Cargreeg, Perth, West Australia; R. S. Gray, Christchurch, New Zealand; P. Olsen, Copenhagen, Denmark; E. Jannson, Wasa, Finland; Domenico Scalera, Rome, Italy; J. A. Ohen, Christiania, Norway; J. Uhr, Valencia, Spain; C. E. Benander, Stockholm, Sweden; M. N. McCall, Havana, Cuba, and L. M. Lowell, Buenos Aires, and others working for the advancement of Christ's kingdom.

One of the impressive gatherings was that of the women which filled the great Baptist Temple where all the Alliance meetings were held. Mrs. Russell James spoke for the new independent body of English Baptist Missionary workers. Mme. Ysakanousky of Odessa and Miss Fetler of St. Petersburg gave stirring incidents of training and conversion. Among the other speakers were Mrs. Foster of Canada, sister of Isabella Thoburn, the pioneer missionary, and Mrs. Burroughs of the Southern Baptist group, who urged the evangelization of women in heathen lands.

Dr. Robert S. MacArthur, of the Calvary Baptist Church, New York, was elected president, and Rev. J. H. Shakespeare, of London, secretary. Rev. J. N. Prestridge, of Louisville, was elected American secretary. A vice-president was named for each contributing union in each land, and an executive committee of twenty-one members, representing the various countries affiliating with the Alliance, was formed. In plans for world evangelization Russia was considered the primary point of advance.

Seventy-nine thousand of the one hundred thousand dollars desired for the theological seminary in St. Petersburg was raised, the stories of persecution told by the Russian delegates arousing sympathy, although their sufferings were caused by local petty persecutions which were not authorized by the imperial government.

The Convention was marked by the active participation of the young people and the first World's Union of Baptist Young People was launched. Many practical plans were made for the round-the-world work, including the establishment of a training school for ministers and missionaries in central Europe; and also for permanent universal peace. A message of appreciation was sent to President Taft for his attitude on peace and arbitration. J. A. S.

. . .

The second photograph is a very unconventional convention picture which was snapped at the reception to the World Baptist Alliance at the University of Pennsylvania. The energetic gentleman on the right is the retiring president of the Alliance, Rev. Dr. John Clifford, of the Westbourne Park Baptist Church of London, England, while the other who faces him, smiling, is Dr. MacArthur, pastor of the Calvary Baptist Church, New York.

When the Retiring President Met the Incoming President

TOPICS OF INTEREST THROUGHOUT THE WORLD

—AFTER A CONFERENCE between President Taft and Ambassador Bryce of Great Britain, announcement was made at the White House on June 28 that the arbitration treaty between the United States and Great Britain was practically complete. It was added that with the exception of a few comparatively unimportant details the terms of the treaty had been agreed upon.

—THE FIRST Chinese warship to visit America will make her way into New York Harbor during July. This will be the cruiser Hai Chi, now in British waters to take part in the Spithead naval review. Only once before has any Chinese vessel visited an American port, and that was in 1880, when a small merchant vessel called at San Francisco. The Hai Chi is the largest vessel in the Chinese navy, having a displacement of 4,300 tons and a speed of 24 knots. She is armed with two 8-inch and ten 4.1-inch guns. The Navy Department is making arrangements to welcome the Chinese sailors.

—THE DIRIGIBLE BALLOON PARSEVAL V., while it was undergoing repairs on June 26 at Hannoversch-Muenden in Prussia, caught fire and was destroyed. No one was injured. The Parseval V. had recently been making passenger trips out of Berlin. Last April 2 the airship made a perilous descent at Halberstadt in a storm. The crew were compelled to rip the envelope, and made a rough landing. The Parseval V. was owned by the Aerial Traffic Company of Berlin, which purchased it from the builders, the Parseval Company. The Parseval dirigibles have been more fortunate than those designed by Count Zeppelin, though they have figured in serious accidents. They were designed primarily for military uses and are non-rigid, the chief characteristic being their portability. The cars are smaller than those of the Zeppelin, providing accommodations for about twenty passengers and crew.

—ADVICES FROM MANILA, dated June 28, state that four Americans have been murdered by Moros in Mindanao, one of the largest of the Philippine Islands. Prospectors named Oyler and Vexesboses were murdered near Camp Overton. A plantation owner named McGill was killed by robbers at Pantar, while Private Michaelis of the Twenty-first Infantry was killed at Parang. He was stabbed seven times in sight of his companions.

THE STORY OF JOSEPH

I

The Prison Slave Becomes the Prime Minister

By WAYNE WHIPPLE

Author of "The March of Any Man," "The Lincoln Calendar," etc.

JOSEPH, young man of God, forgotten by shallow ingratitude, thou art remembered on high. Clanking about in thy chains, lodging in the dungeon; doing all the little good thou canst in thy gloomy prison—thou hast been faithful in a few things, thou shalt be ruler over many. Thou hast conquered thine own spirit, thou shalt rule over many cities. Thou hast been enslaved by envious brethren, and imprisoned by a jealous woman because of thy very virtues, thy day is dawning. Thou openedst not thy lips to speak even truth of her who lied against thy pure soul. The stars in their courses have fought for thee, and by star is rising. The king himself hath been dreaming dreams that thou alone canst interpret in words of the world. The footsteps are approaching to free thee. Thou hast been tried in the fire and art coming out pure gold. Ennobled by greater adversity, canst thou bear prosperity unsullied?

After two full years from the release of the royal cupbearer, it was again the king's birthday, and the court of Egypt assembled to celebrate the happy event. But the king was not happy. He had had a double dream the night before—a dream he was unable to drive out of his mind. It haunted and worried him. They had sent to the college of the priests, but no two of them could agree as to its real meaning. This added to his distress, and matters had come to a desperate crisis.

Then the cupbearer remembered the prisoner who had told him the meaning of his own dream. Prostrating himself before the maddened monarch, he confessed:

"I do remember my faults this day: When Pharaoh was angry and put me in prison in the palace of the captain of the guard, with the chief baker, we dreamed a dream in one night, I and he. There was with us a young man, a Hebrew, slave to the captain of the guard; and we told him, and he interpreted our dreams to us. And it came to pass, as he interpreted to us, so it turned out. I was restored to my office, and he was hanged."

Then Pharaoh turned quickly to Potiphar, captain of the guard, saying: "I hear you have a slave in your guardhouse, a young Hebrew, who can interpret dreams."

The chief executioner bowed.

"Then send for him," commanded the king.

Several of the royal guard were detailed to go at once, bring Joseph in all haste, and report in the throne room of the palace. They were gone, it seemed a long time, because of the intense anxiety of the king and the court. It was a strange birthday celebration.

Joseph received the king's soldiers with a quiet smile. He requested them to wait outside where it was light and pleasant, while he shaved himself and changed his clothes. He soon considered himself presentable at the high court of Egypt.

When the king's guardsmen escorted Potiphar's slave and prisoner into the royal presence, the court made way for him. All were curious to see this servant who could reveal the will of the great gods even to the deity who sat on the throne of Egypt; for the Pharaohs claimed to possess godlike powers. Some of those present recognized Joseph as the former major domo in the palace of the Potiphars. The captain's wife, also, was in attendance upon the king on that festal day. She felt ill. What if the man she had so grievously wronged should speak out now and tell the whole truth before her husband, the king and all the court!

But Joseph's mind, unconscious of her, was fixed upon the Pharaoh. He drew near to the throne and made a grave obeisance. The distracted monarch gazed at the tall young man before him, started up, came down, took him by the hand, and leading him gently up the steps, motioned him to be seated. With a gesture of thanks the noble slave declined the signal honor, and stood beside the king, who remained standing. Joseph was now thirty years old. His prison life had made him paler and thinner, but his face had not lost its freshness and still revealed the sweetness of his spirit. He was taller and nobler looking than the young king. His form seemed to glow with the grandeur of his soul. His bearing was both kingly and kindly. No wonder the Pharaoh started with amazement, for he had expected a cringing slave to come groveling before him.

"See, I now appoint thee over all the land of Egypt"

Joseph had come to the king as an ambassador of a Power higher than the mightiest monarch on earth. The two men stood and gazed into each other's eyes, the slave looking down upon the Pharaoh from "the glorious height of manhood clean and whole," while the court looked on in breathless astonishment. The youthful Pharaoh had met his superior. Strangely enough, he himself realized this. The Egyptian court merely saw the slave standing before the king. History sees only a Pharaoh, whose name is not known for a certainty, standing there in the presence of Joseph, whose story is a household word throughout the civilized world to-day, nearly four thousand years after this meeting of slave with king, as man to man.

At last the king's lips moved. He began to speak in a tone of apology, explaining to the slave why he had sent for him.

"I have dreamed a dream and there is no one that can interpret it; and I have heard say of thee, that when thou hearest a dream thou canst interpret it."

And Joseph answered the Pharaoh, "It is not in me, but Jehovah will give the king an answer of peace."

Joseph had the simple modesty that goes with soul grandeur. He felt that he was in partnership with God himself. He had told the Potiphar woman about Jehovah. When about to reveal the hidden meaning of their dreams to the butler and baker, he gave all the honor to God—and now, in the presence of the court of Egypt—worshipers of Osiris, Isis, and many minor deities, with kindly condescension, to the king who claimed divine attributes for himself:

"The one true God, with whom I commune, will grant to the Pharaoh an answer which shall give sweet peace to his anxious soul."

Then the king went on earnestly:

"In my dream I stood on the bank of the river Nile, and there came up out of the river seven cattle, fat and well built, and they fed in the reedgrass; and then seven other cattle came up after them, poor, very badly formed and such as I never saw in all the land of Egypt for badness; and the lean and poor cattle ate up the first seven fat cattle; and when they had eaten them up, it could not be known that they had eaten them, for they were still as poor as before. Then I awoke.

"And I saw in my dream, seven heads of grain came up on one stalk, full and good, and, behold, seven other heads, withered, thin and blasted with the east wind, sprang up after them. And the thin heads swallowed up the seven good heads. And I told this to the magicians, but there was no one who could explain it to me."

Then Joseph said to the king:

"What Jehovah is about to do he has declared. The seven good cattle are seven years; and the seven good heads of grain are seven years; the dream is one. And the seven lean and ill-formed cattle that came up after them are seven years, and also the seven empty heads blasted with the east wind; they shall be seven years of famine. There are seven years of great plenty coming throughout all the land of Egypt; and there shall come after them seven years of famine; and all the plenty shall be forgotten in the land of Egypt; and the famine shall consume the land; and the plenty shall not be known in the land because of the famine which shall follow, for it shall be very grievous. On that account the dream was repeated.

"Now, therefore, the king should look for a man discreet and wise, and put him in charge of the whole land. Do this at once and let him appoint overseers in all parts of the country, gather all the food of these good years that are coming, and lay up grain for food in the cities, and let them store it up for the seven years of famine which shall come in the land of Egypt; that the people may not perish during the famine."

The Egyptian court stood, transfixed with amazement, to hear a slave calmly dictating to the king. The Pharaoh, however, was pleased to accept the counsel of this modest Hebrew, who claimed no credit for it himself, for he said:

"Since God hath shown thee all this, there is no one so discreet and wise as thou; thou shalt be in command over my palace and according to thy word shall all my people be ruled—only in the throne will I be greater then thou."

Then the king took the great seal off his own right hand—the ring with which he signed and sealed all his decrees—and placed it on the right hand of Joseph, saying as he did so:

"See, I now appoint thee over all the land of Egypt!"

All present knew, by this act, that Joseph had been made acting king, and that all the power of the Pharaoh stood behind whatever his new premier saw fit to do. Only a moment before he had stood there a slave, but now he was lord and master of them all.

The Pharaoh did not do this in a half-hearted way. He gave the command and the newly appointed grand vizier was invested at once with all the sacred authority of the priestly order, being arrayed in white vestures of fine linen.

Yet this was not enough. The Pharaoh put the heavy gold chain, the badge of the highest rank, about the neck of the new prime minister. As Joseph stood there with all the emblems of authority and privilege upon his sacred person, he looked down for the first time upon the assembled court. In the foreground, by virtue of his office, stood Potiphar, solemn and unmoved by the sudden elevation of his manslave.

The king had not yet finished the heaping of high honors upon his prime minister, for he further announced that Joseph should ride in the exclusive chariot, reserved for the king only; that he should have regal escort (commanded by Potiphar, as captain of the guard) and make royal progresses through the streets and over the highways of Egypt. So far as the people, who never entered the palace, were concerned, this act of Pharaoh was equal to placing Joseph on the throne of Egypt.

Then, as the viceroy of Egypt ought not to bear the name of a foreign slave, the king announced Joseph's new name and title, as Zaphnath-paaneah—"The Saver of the World."

Continued on page 712

Making New Citizens in Canada

ABOUT 150,000 Ruthenians have emigrated from central Europe to Canada and have settled mostly on free farms in the West. They are proving very good farmers, but it is harder for them to become citizens. The way how is being shown them by the churches and schools. Dr. George Arthur, a medical missionary working among these people in Alberta, has met the problem of making citizens of aliens in two ways. His mission at Vegreville, in the heart of a Ruthenian settlement, began with a hospital. The Ruthenians were at first suspicious; but their fears have now been largely overcome by the relief and cures that have come to them through the hospital. Dr. Arthur declares that, given an equal opportunity, the Ruthenian youth will hold his own, in ability and readiness to learn, with the average Canadian or American. He is now making trial of a new plan—a boarding-home for Ruthenian boys. One of these homes, in which are twelve bright lads, is now under trial, and thus far with much success. The difference between the native boy and the boy alien is being gradually lessened, and future citizens are in the making. Dr. Arthur hopes soon to add more cottage-homes. The twelve lads are housed together in a cottage, with a matron in charge. They go daily to public school, where they quickly learn.

A Ruthenian Thatched Building

A class of young men and women whom Dr. Arthur has been teaching are bright, intelligent, adaptative, and already show a great development toward citizenship. The Ruthenians in central Europe were oppressed, poor, and unprogressive, yet they have always kept the ideas of national existence, history and language before them. In the freedom of the new Northwest, where for the first time they may all have land-holdings of their own, these qualities are finding room for expression. The problem is how best to guide that expression, for these people have much both to learn and to unlearn before they can fully enter into the spirit of a new life. Old and new are side by side in their homes, and tradition lingers; but the new is gradually gaining, under the influences of school, church, and neighbors.

Newly Arrived Ruthenian Settlers

In Europe, they were Greek Catholics. In Cana some retain connection with the Orthodox Chur some are ministered to by the Catholic Church; there is also a strong, independent movement, giv opportunity for Protestant missionary effort. Arthur's mission at Vegreville is under the Ca dian Presbyterian Church. Similar work is be done elsewhere in the three prairie provinces by t and other churches. Ruthenian ministers Ruthenian congregations have been found to be most effective means of giving the Christian m sage, and several have already taken courses Western colleges and are now at work as missi aries among their own countrymen.

AUBREY FULLERTON

Thoughts for the Quiet Hour

..BROKEN confidence is a natural crop from seeds of broken promises.

..INDECISION does not lead a man into inco petency, but rather leaves him there.

..IT IS a good business rule to beware of tra actions that can only be defended with the maxi "business is business."

..WHAT a pitiful and unprovided-for orphana this world would be with the brotherhood of m yet without the fatherhood of God.

..WHERE the Spirit and the letter are in h mony, there is no excuse for those who declare th are led by the Spirit yet who disregard the letter.

..COLLECTING as a rule is hard work, and the m who claims that the world owes him a living, m find it even harder to collect the debt than to earr living himself.

..YOU are complaining about a number of thin not being right, forgetting that every one of them waiting for a reformer like yourself to make th so. Your complaints only show that your own wo is not done.

THE BATTLES OF "ROUND TOP"

Continued from page 699

whose quiet, helpful talks and books on Christian experience have helped hundreds of thousands to a larger and clearer view of the Christian life, was converted in the great revival conducted by Mr. Moody in Philadelphia in the seventies. On the other hand, we have the world-wide work of Dr. J. Wilbur Chapman, with his score of helpers in the "publicity" campaigns, who also felt the power of the Spirit working through Mr. Moody. Then there was Professor Drummond, with his thoughtful and deeply spiritual work among students, and Dr. Grenfell of Labrador, with his active ministry among the deep-sea fisher-folk. And we have Dr. J. Campbell Morgan and Dr. R. A. Torrey, the latter a student in Yale when he heard the call of God through Mr. Moody.

What was the secret of all this power in Mr. Moody's life? Simply that in the early part of his Christian experience he heard a speaker say once in a meeting that the world had yet to see what God could do through a thoroughly consecrated man, and one who was completely yielded to His will. Mr. Moody then and there decided to try and be such a man. This was coupled also with a most marvelous natural tact in dealing with people, "in being all things to all men," and with an absorbing desire to do good to everybody.

Then we should also mention among the younger men, Mr. John R. Mott and Mr. Robert Speer, and the whole movement for young men in our colleges. For another outgrowth of those early Conferences at Northfield was the beginning of the Student Volunteer Movement for Foreign Missions and what has come to be the Student Christian Federation of the World. Both of these movements have been, and are yet destined to be in the future, of great strategic importance in the extension of Christ's kingdom. In the summer of 1886, the first Student Conference met at the invitation of Mr. Moody, in one of the buildings at Mount Hermon. Some two hundred and forty-nine students from different colleges responded to that first invitation. This summer, seven different Conferences, arising out of that first gathering, will meet in different parts of the United States, with an attendance of between two and three thousand delegates, representing practically all the colleges and professional schools, as well as preparatory schools in this country and Canada. Mr. Mott was one of the young men who were present as delegates from Cornell at that first Conference, twenty-five years ago.

At the sunset meetings on Round Top each evening, many decisions for life-work have been made. Literally thousands of students have wrestled with God in prayer on these hills around the Conference buildings. Perhaps some have seen the vision and turned back, but all over our country, as well as all over the world, are scattered men leading lives of undoubted real success, who owe their inspiration to the influence of these summer Conferences. The Student Conference will celebrate this summer its twenty-fifth anniversary. It will be presided over again by Mr. John R. Mott; the delegates will ha the opportunity of hearing directly from his li the facts of the progress of the world-wide Christi movement among students.

Mr. Moody saw clearly the needs of the you men and women for whom he planned the Northfie schools. He had learned through his own efforts secure an education just what is the true found tion of all knowledge: "The fear of the Lord is t beginning of wisdom." He saw clearly the gre need of the Church and also of the world in th time of strife and ambition, of material prosperi and progress; that it needs, and Christ needs no men and women who can see clearly what God h taught in his own Word and who will learn how teach this simply and clearly. Young men a women have gone forth from Northfield who a working in all parts of the world. Mount Hermor graduates are helping forward the cause of Chri and righteousness in all the walks of life. It was great loss to Mount Hermon when Crossley Ha burned to the ground last January, but even befo the ruins were cold contributions began to come for rebuilding the hall.

The great hope of the schools is to be enabled carry on the work plann by Mr. Moody, accordi to the first plan of furnis ing education to worth young men and wom who would not otherwi be able to secure an educ tion. That was Mr. Moody great desire. The mor and spiritual worth Northfield is not to gauged by ordinary met ods, although it merits th noblest endowment. It the hope of those who a trying to carry on th work on the foundati laid down by the divine guided man who pray it into being, that th Church of Christ may co tinue to receive in missio lands and on the hom fields hundreds of those whom the "mantle of El jah" may continue to fa for the glory of our R deemer's kingdom.

Group of Speakers and Bible Class Leaders at Northfield

The Cozy Corner—Short-Story Hour

Art Museum, New York Paxton

"AFTERNOON TEA"

al friend is a treasure worth more than s stones."

A BRITTANY HERO TALE

THE evening of the 31st of May, 911, Matelot, the plucky light-keeper on the lonely headland of Ile-en-Mer in the Bay of Biscay, filling his light, found his way the winding stairs, and at the n fell dead of heart failure. In espair and excitement that fol-, Carl and Marie Matelot were y their mother that their r was very ill and that she stay by him to pray.

it first, watch you here, essed babies," said Mother ot, "while I climb and the light." But she could manage the machinery would set the lamp in mo- for it was beyond her gth, and in quiet despair eturned to tell the chil- "We can make it move," said. "You stay here, er, and mind father and aby." And this is exactly those two children did. out a word of fussing, not even g for their supper, they instantly to the lighthouse tower, and be- they could not reach the lever they knew would start the great revolving, they decided between selves to keep the enormous globe ig by pushing it back and forth their hands; and this they un- ingly did from half past seven k at night until four in the morn-e knew we must do what father and the weights would not work s, so we took turns and pushed it y times apiece to keep ourselves e with counting," said Carl, aged "And when the morning began to , I crept down to ask mother if we t stop, and mother said, 'Yes, the will be safe now,'" explained e, who was just seven.

ither the brave boy nor the little nor even the mother in her deep , and surely not the sailors twenty out at sea, measured the loyalty, fine unconscious heroism that d the red flashes from the Belle ight on that dreadful night that assed down into the local history ie night of the worst storm ever n on the Bay of Biscay.

"ORCHARD HOUSE"

Where Little Women Lived

E Woman's Club of Concord, Mass., has set on foot a plan by h a fund will be raised to buy the hard House," which will be kept t forever in memory of Louisa tt. For twenty-five years, "Apple Slump," as Miss Alcott waggishly called it when the family fortunes dwindled to nothing, was the home of the Alcotts. There it was that adorable tomboy Joe, full of the pent-up energy and unselfishness that we have grown to think of as the essence of Miss Alcott's nature, dreamed and wrote the stories which she so earnestly peddled among Boston publishers. It was down the graveled pathway from Orchard House that Louisa Alcott "waved farewell to Marmee with her worn, patient face, and to Amy's blue eyes and yellow hair in the window, and started off to war, my heart ever turning and returning to my home."—(Diary of Louisa M. Alcott, 1857.)

Later, when Marmee and Beth and Amy and dreamy impracticable Mr. Alcott were sleeping in Sleepy Hollow Cemetery, Miss Alcott could no longer endure life at Orchard House, so she sold it and went away to make a home for Meg's two boys and to bring up a baby girl that Amy had left to her care.

This reclaiming of Orchard House is a particularly fitting tribute to the memory of the author of Little Women, Little Men and An Old-Fashioned Girl, stories that for fifty years have held their own in popularity. They have been translated into many languages, and the readers of these lovely old-fashioned tales are still counted by millions.

When she died, Miss Alcott left directions that she wanted to be taken to Sleepy Hollow, beyond Orchard House, to rest, not beside those for whom she had always cared, but at their feet, so that she could take care of them still.

INVESTING THE PRINCE

ON THE 13th of July, the little Prince of Wales will be formally invested with the robes and symbols of his rank. The Prince, a boy of twelve, and oldest son of King George V. of England, will be met at Hollyhead by an army of ten thousand soldiers, and a vast conclave of peers and court officers will accompany him.

The elaborate ceremonial of investiture consists of placing upon the shoulders of the heir to the Princedom of Wales the royal robes of state, girding on the sword of justice, placing upon his head the cap of office, upon his finger the ring pledging fidelity to his subjects, and in his hand the golden staff of justice. Each separate ceremonial is accompanied with devout petitions for the welfare of the nation, and prayers that strength to loyally execute to the fullest extent the rights for which the symbols stand shall be abundantly given to him whom faithful and loving subjects shall serve.

"KIND HEARTS ARE MORE THAN CORONETS"

ONCE upon a time—about thirty-five years ago—General Custer, riding at the head of a column of cavalrymen, happened to look down upon the ground, where just below him was the nest of a meadow lark with birdlings in it. With ready wit, that was worthy the big-hearted general, he guided his horse around it, and then resumed the straight course, saying no word and giving no direction to his men. As the entire command of many hundred cavalrymen followed closely the general's lead, each soldier, coming up to the place where the soldier just ahead of him had turned out, looked curiously down into the nest to find the reason for the unusual departure from the straight line of march.

"Katydid—Katydidn't—
She did—she didn't."

A Katydid sat on a stone
And sang in her merriest tone.
Said a frog that was nigh,
"Why, bless me if I Shall let that young thing sing alone!"

So he joined in with such a large croak
That the world all about him awoke.
Although it was night
The meadow was light,
And misty as wind-blown smoke.

The butterflies stretched out their wings,
The bees began sharp'ning their stings,
And the birds with a cheep
Wakened up from their sleep
And got dressed in their everyday things.

Not morning, but darkness came by,
So the bees and each pied butterfly
All into bed sprang,
While the tiny voice sang,
"Katydid—Katydidn't" again.

RENA CARY SHEFFIELD.

Our Good-Night Verse

Whoever restores a young bird to the limb,
Or gladdens the lives of dumb creatures in need,
Is one of Christ's helpers, whatever his creed.

Some June Prize Winners in The Cozy Corner and Their Ages

Wentworth Lawson, 15; Rosemary Ladner, 14; Donald Hill, —, Betty Carter; 14; Elinor Bray, 13; Dorothy Bangs, 10.

Some Cozy Corner Boys and Girls Whose Work in June Deserves Special Honorable Mention

Gladys Harned, 11: Hope Kirkpatrick, 12; Herman Little, 11: Halbert Pollock, 5; Katherine Tobias, 16: Kate Hustler, 13; Elsworth Hayes, 8; Nora A. Mahon, 13; Willie Dodd, —; Victor E. Reimer, —; Edwin Mills, 13; Earl B. Trexler, 15; Gust Henrickson, 14; James Sainsbury, 14; Emma Hurner, 15; Garnett Michaux, 16; Hilda Morse. 15; Beatrice Detling, 13; Annie L. Wilson, 13; John C. Mann, 13; Hazel Wetherby, 12; Jean S. DeYoung, 8; Roland Harrison, 12; William E. Thomas, 10; Hunton Sellman, 11; Robert Cathcart, 11; Mary Dufendack, 11; Ruth Pomeroy, 10; Lyndall C. Powell, 10: Helen Holt, 10; Sterling Tolby, 7; Jeanette S. Richardson, 14; Margaret Johnson, —; George W. Barnett. Jr., 15; Violet Lippincott, 11; Walter Beare, 14: Craig Tedford, 12; Della Zumbro, 15; Vida Rowsam; Paul Boehm, 13; John H. Vondell, 13; Beulah M. Atkins, 11; Bessie Kelly, 14; Willis W. Clark, 11; Lawrence B. June, 12; Robertson Jones, 9; Lois Pirie, 12; Hattie Robson, 11.

Honor Roll

Earl E. Smith, 14; Helen F. Gleason, 14; Fannie McCormic, 16: George Hilton Butler, 13; Ruth Downing, 15; Marjorie Gunn, 12; Gertrude Mather, 10; Frances M. Hollingshead, 11; Harry Hanson, 16; Galen B. Harrison, 11; Milledge Galphin, 14; Edward Durant, 12; Lucy Ulman, 13; Mabel Borgerson, 13; Otha Phillips, 13; Beula Gill, 14; Eldridge Dean.

Lovingly and faithfully,

The Aunt in
The Cozy Corner

LITTLE PEOPLE'S CORNER

For best verses, subject "Little Bo-Peep," we will send twenty delightful Cozy Corner Prizes in order of merit.

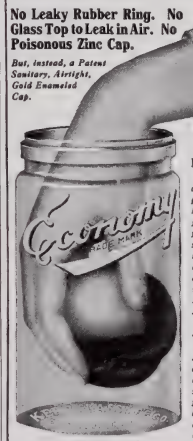
Did You Ever Can Corn on the Cob?

Or Peas? Or String and Lima Beans? Or Tomatoes? These and every other vegetable—Berries and all other fruits—fish and meat—you can put up and keep perfectly—forever in the Sanitary Airtight

Economy Jar

White Crystal Glass. Wide Mouth.

And you positively cannot in any rubber ring jar on earth!



The public has decreed that rubber rings are unsanitary. They decay and let in air, which causes contents to mould and spoil. Pure food commissioners have denounced zinc caps as unhealthy and dangerous to use for home canning.

The Economy Jar is the only jar in the world that uses no rubber ring. All rubber ring jars are a thing of the past.

The Economy Jar uses no zinc cap, no uneven, leaky glass top, no rubber ring. It seals airtight, as no other jar has ever been sealed by means of a gold enameled cap, which has a patent airtight sanitary composition gasket. It seals itself by air pressure and is strongly endorsed by all health authorities.

No Leaky Rubber Ring. No Glass Top to Leak in Air. No Poisonous Zinc Cap.

But, instead, a Patent Sanitary, Airtight, Gold Enameled Cap.

Jar Trademark

Light or Heat Does Not Affect Contents, as Air is Excluded

Read This Letter:

"I have in use over four dozen Economy Jars for the past three years, and never had one jar spoiled. Have just finished canning direct from our garden—beans, squash, carrots, beets, tomatoes, onions, radishes, red cabbage. My corn on cob is delicious; also have several varieties of fruits."—Mrs. Jack Scully, Vallejo, Cal., June 28, 1910.

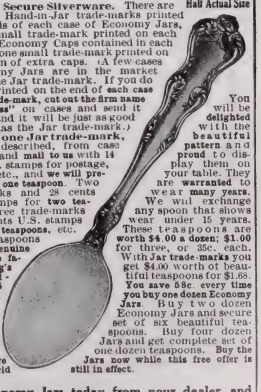
And This One:

"I have used the Economy Jar for three years. Have canned everything that can be put in cans from fruits to soups, fish, meats, fowl, in fact everything that can be bought in grocery stores in tin cans. Wouldn't keep house without them."—Mrs. H.C. Large, Seattle, Wash.

To Advertise the AIRTIGHT ECONOMY JAR we will give

Free To Buyers of Economy Jars

King's Hall Silver, 1066



Sectional Plate Silver Teaspoons

(Solid Silver the Only Better)

Three Full Size Teaspoons with every dozen Economy Jars
One Full Size Teaspoon with every dozen extra Economy Caps

You want a half-dozen or dozen of these spoons—FREE!

Free Teaspoon Half Actual Size

How to Secure Silverware. There are two large Hand-in-Jar trade-marks printed on the ends of each case of Economy Jars, and one small trade-mark printed on each carton of Economy Caps contained in each case, also one small trade-mark printed on each carton of extra caps. (A few cases of Economy Jars are in the market without the Jar trade-mark. If you do not find printed on the end of each case the Jar trade-mark, cut out the firm name "Kerr Glass" on cases and send it in to us, and it will be just as good a coupon as the Jar trade-mark.)

Cut out one Jar trade-mark, as above described, from case or carton and mail to us with 14 cents U.S. stamps for postage, packing, etc., and we will present to you one teaspoon. Two trade-marks and 28 cents U. S. stamps for two teaspoons, three trade-marks and 42 cents U.S. stamps for three teaspoons, etc. These teaspoons are the genuine full size famous King's Hall Silver, 1066 Sectional Plate Silver Teaspoons. In the finest and best silver plated ware in the world

You will be delighted with the beautiful pattern and proud to display them on your table. They are warranted to wear many years. We will exchange any spoon that shows wear under 15 years. These teaspoons are worth $4.00 a dozen; $1.00 for three, or 35c. each. With Jar trade-marks you get $4.00 worth of beautiful teaspoons for $1.68. You save 58c. every time you buy one dozen Economy Jars. Buy two dozen Economy Jars and secure set of six beautiful teaspoons. Buy four dozen Jars and get complete set of one dozen teaspoons. Buy the Jars now while this free offer is still in effect.

Buy Economy Jars today from your dealer and start your set of free spoons. If your dealer is out of Economy Jars be sure to write us. We will refer you to a dealer who has a stock on hand and send you a booklet of valuable recipes free.

Kerr Glass Mfg. Co.

Home Office
112 Hoyt Street
Portland, Oregon

Eastern Office:
184 G West Washington St.
CHICAGO, ILLINOIS.

Peace Circles Begin Work

IN RESPONSE to the call for the organization of Peace Circles which appeared in these columns recently, many readers of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD have sent in their names and expressed readiness to perform the preliminary work as organizers. To all of these, instructions have been forwarded, and we are glad to be able to announce that many Circles are now fairly on the way toward organization, while some are already fully organized.

The first Peace Circle to be fully organized and in working order was the Robertson Heights Circle of Lyndon, O., as the following letter from the Historian of the Circle announces:

Dear Christian Herald Peace League: Obedient to the call which came to us through the printed matter you so kindly mailed to our address, we have organized a home Peace Circle, and given it the name of our summer home, "Robertson Heights," which is located in beautiful and picturesque Southern Ohio, in the shadow of our little Alps. The writer, having been made Leader and Historian of the Circle, will briefly acquaint the National Circle with the "mountain top" where we have planted our Peace Banner; and from whence, it is said, the light extends ten miles around.

The senior member of our Circle, Mrs. Martha Robertson (whose name has long been on THE CHRISTIAN HERALD list), was ever the patron and friend of Dr. Klopsch in all of his missionary, charitable and literary enterprises—an extraordinary prestige to our home Circle. It will be our pleasure, at all times, to affiliate with local as well as national organizations. As a member of the School League for International Understanding and a member of the American Peace Society, it also gives me great pleasure to thus have the privilege of being identified with THE CHRISTIAN HERALD'S greatest of all movements—that of bringing the peace sentiment to the masses of intelligent people everywhere, without respect to persons.

MARGARITE ANDERSON,
Robertson Heights Peace Circle.

The following are the officers and comrades: Leader, Mrs. Delano W. Butler. Secretary and Historian, Margarite Anderson. Standard Bearer, Phileman Erskine Butler. Orator, Mr. Delano W. Butler. Members and Comrades, Mrs. Martha W. Robertson, Marion Butler, Wilgas Anderson Butler, Edith Newell, Mrs. Mary C. Lorentz, Mrs. Sarah Alvis, Mr. and Mrs. Cabel Alvis, Dr. and Mrs. Edward Pricer, son and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Kello, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kello, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Mason.

The following are the organizers who have taken the lead in the Peace Circle movement in the various States. Many Circles are already in working order:

Colorado—Mrs. J. F. Coffman, Mrs. E. M. Tanner, Mr. H. A. Griffith.

Pennsylvania—Rev. B. B. Loomis, Mr. James N. Wilson, Mr. Joseph Pounds, Mrs. Johnston C. McClain, Rev. Joseph K. Freed, N. W. Kuukel, Mr. Albert Frank, Mrs. Amelia P. King, Mrs. Fannie Wood, Mrs. J. H. Davis, Miss C. Callet.

Iowa—Mrs. Luther Phipps, Mrs. J. M. Knowles, Mrs. E. W. Pfeiffer, Mrs. W. F. Belau, Mrs. G. H. Melloe, Rev. J. W. Neyman.

Nebraska—Mrs. J. R. Nichol, A. T. Hoffert, T. J. Merryman.

West Virginia—E. W. Webster, Mr. V. B. Greene.

Oklahoma—J. S. Smith, Mrs. Nelia Evins, Mrs. J. P. Wilhite, Mr. Alvin Cafock.

Washington—Miss Harriet E. Wright, F. F. Tuttle.

Maine—B. Mangar, Mrs. L. S. Smith.

New York—John B. Lacey, Mrs. O. St. Marie, Anna Surm, Miss Anna Brownell, P. E. Miller, J. J. Carpenter, Robert L. Palmer, R. W. Allen, Rev. H. P. Scharffler, Mr. H. L. Oldfield, Mr. H. H. Hill, Dr. A. H. McKinney, Mr. C. E. Butt, Mr. F. A. Huch, Miss S. K. Payne.

Michigan—J. H. Keeler, Rev. H. W. Chamberlin, F. M. Bush, Mr. C. N. Dickinson.

Mississippi—A. G. Barton, D. B. Westrope, Jr.

Montana—Mrs. D. Sheldon.

Rhode Island—Mr. Frank Smedley.

Oregon—Mrs. Jennie L. Thorp, Mr. Henry Sheak.

Texas—Mr. H. C. Fallon, Mrs. M. A. Goodnight, H. F. Palmer, Miss Jennie May Kerby, Mr. R. W. Dolson.

Alabama—Mrs. C. E. Blue, T. W. Paine.

Ohio—J. R. Sherry, Margarite Anderson, Delano W. Butler, F. H. Daily, Rev. William C. Detling, Margarite Anderson, Mr. O. B. Huffman, Susan M. Sturges.

Illinois—Rev. W. Gardner Thrall, Miss Carrie B. Leonard, H. A. Tempel, Rev. Herman H. Thoren, Mrs. J. R. Graham, Miss Ellen M. Burllen.

Indiana—Rev. F. G. Kenny, Anna Hutton, Mrs. Mary M. Clapham, Mr. William H. Smith.

Virginia—Mrs. Laura E. Johnson, Mrs. D. O. Knight, Mr. Benjamin C. Moomaw, Mr. R. A. Finnell, William Hope Carrington.

Massachusetts—E. G. Frothington, Mrs. Julia R. Leeman.

Minnesota—A. J. Sundahl.

Florida—Mrs. N. N. Swain, Rev. George H. Northrop, John E. Ennis, Mrs. Isaac Story.

Kansas—J. L. Heisey, E. F. Gillette.

New Jersey—Miss Ada Baldwin, Mrs. P. A. M. Speer, Mrs. M. Post, Rev. Paul S. Meinert, Mrs. M. Post, Mr. Orie Compton, Miss Fannie J. McGalliard.

Georgia—Mrs. J. T. Blulock, Mrs. Louise T. Hodges.

Idaho—R. Forrest Allen, L. D. Farmin, M. L. Handlin.

Missouri—Mrs. E. Kothe, Mr. Adam Kern, Mrs. Juliet W. Hill, M. M. Anthony, Ella V. Russell.

Connecticut—Mrs. Sophonia P. Perry, Mrs. E. J. Hill, Miss Cornelia Baird, Miss Cornelia Raymond, Mrs. Walter Atkins, Mrs. M. J. Anderson, Dr. A. H. Baldwin, Mrs. Dexter Hitchcock, Mrs. Denny Hull, Mrs. H. J. Hypson, Mrs. Eugene Fauntleroy, Mr. M. W. Silliman, F. D. Torrey, Mrs. Frederick Thompson, Miss M. A. Olmsted, Miss H. F. Holburn, Mr. George M. Benedict, Mr. William P. Beers, Mrs. Sophia A. Weed, Rev. F. T. Bastel, Miss Annetta E. Bailey.

California—Miss Addie Marsh, L. Chamberlin, Mrs. W. A. Cleland, Mr. A. G. Lentz.

North Carolina—Mr. C. A. Hege.

Circles Abroad

Hawaiian Islands—Mary S. Whiting, President W. C. T. U., Honolulu.

England—Mr. F. G. W. Spriggs.

Canada—Mr. Jas. Fotheringham, Dr. James A. Gillespie, Mrs. Hamilton Conn.

Programme for First Peace Circle Meeting After Organization

1. Roll Call.

2. Singing of the following Peace Hymn:

A Hymn for Peace

Air "Speed Away"

Give us peace! Give us peace! like an angel of light,
To heal human sorrow and scatter its night.
We will cherish her ever, and crown her with bays,
And clothe her with beautiful garments of praise.
Bid the warships lie idle, the armies decrease!
Give us peace! Give us peace! Give us peace!

Give us peace, that our brethren far over the sea
May know that the men of this land of the free,
Though strong as the strongest, and bravest of soul,
Will have no more war while the ages shall roll,
And will strive that the spirit of love shall increase.
Give us peace! etc.
Give us peace, that the world may behold the glad reign
Of reason and justice from mountain and plain,
From ocean to ocean, o'er peasant and king.
And the Bethlehem song through the nations shall ring—
"Glad tidings! Be joyful! All battles shall cease!
Welcome, Peace! Lovely Peace! Everywhere, Peace!"

O God of our fathers! we bend low to thee,
And lay on thine altar our sacrifice free;
Our fortunes, our lives and our honor we give,
That the Gospel Christ taught us may spread and may live,
And that brotherhood's star in our skies may increase.
Give us peace! etc.

3. Initiation Pledge: "I pledge myself as a member of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD Peace League to urge the cause of Universal and International Peace and Arbitration; to attend the meetings of this Circle so far as it is possible; to help extend its influence and increase its membership, and to do my individual share toward making the meetings of this Circle a success."

4. Brief address by the Leader, in which the object of the Circle's meetings should be set forth.

5. Reading of Peace Pamphlet (supplied to each Secretary by THE CHRISTIAN HERALD.) Main topic for the fortnight ending July 26, 1911, "The Mission of the United States in the Cause of Peace," by Justice David J. Brewer.

If thought best, a ten-minute digest of this address may be prepared in advance by some member, or it may be decided to read the contents of the pamphlet.

6. Discussion of points in Justice Brewer's address, speakers limited to three minutes. Subjects for Discussion: Main points. The angels' song at Bethlehem and Christ's words on peace. Equality of nations and The Forced Peace. Reasons why America should lead. Arguments for Limitation of Armament. The three great interests opposed to war. These subjects are more or less amplified in the pamphlet, which we are sending to CHRISTIAN HERALD Peace Circles.

7. Summing up of the situation by Leader or chosen spokesman.

8. Music, recitations, refreshments.

9. Rally; announcement of next place of meeting and subjects for discussion. Adjournment.

All who propose to be identified with the Peace Circle Movement, and who desire to aid in organizing Circles, are requested to communicate with THE CHRISTIAN HERALD Peace League, Bible House, New York. All necessary literature and instructions will be forwarded.

Among the Workers

—JAMES STOKES OF NEW YORK, who founded the Miyak, the Russian Young Men's Christian Association, and Franklin A. Gaylord, also of the New York association, were recently presented to the Emperor by Senator Mestchansoff, the President of the Miyak.

—REV. DR. WM. MERRILL, formerly pastor of the Sixth Presbyterian Church, Chicago, has accepted a call to the historic Brick Presbyterian Church, Fifth Avenue, Manhattan, succeeding the late Rev. Dr. W. H. Richards, who succeeded Rev. Dr. Henry Van Dyke.

—THEY HAVE RELIGIOUS meetings in the Wall Street district often, but on June 14 the Old Tent Evangel Committee established its temporary service and pulpit directly in front of the New York Stock Exchange on Broad Street. The service was held from an automobile. There was a big crowd on hand. Professor William Houghton of Brooklyn played hymns on a cornet, the Rev. William Wallace of the Baptist Temple, Brooklyn, preached a doctrinal sermon, weaving in Flag Day, and asking for a junction of patriotism with religion in bringing about a broader life.

—THE VETERAN Christian seaman, Captain G. W. Schroeder, who established the first Baptist missionary work in Sweden (he is now a patriarch of four-score and ten) was honored on April 10 by the Baptist Ministers' Conference in New York with a special fellowship meeting and the gift of a purse of $300. He was born in Gothenburg, April 9, 1821, entered the navy at eight years of age, and at seventeen commenced a career in merchant vessels in American waters. He was converted in 1844, and united with the Baptists in New York. As president of the Religious Liberty Union, he has done much to secure religious toleration in Sweden.

—THE SHANGHAI MISSIONARY Conference of 1907 recommended co-operation in theological teaching "for the sake of economy, to increase the efficiency of the teaching staff, and to draw the educated young men of the church into a closer mutual fellowship." This hope is rapidly being realized. At Nanking, three theological seminaries, representing four denominations (Methodist, Christian, Presbyterian North and Presbyterian South) beginning next fall, are to do the work of all these institutions, except that which is technically denominational, in a single Union Bible School. It will have its own board of managers, separate from the seminaries, and will be modeled after the New York school, in which the students will be housed and taught with the exception of denominational elective courses where required. This Union Bible School at Nanking is the first of a proposed series of "mergers" in religious education for China.

$1,000
Given Away for the Best Hundred Let ters on The Advantages o

Scot Tissue Towels
"Use like a Blotter"

We want opinions from ever housewife, every factory and offic employe, every one who uses towel at home, in office or factory, a school or in public places on th advantages of the Scot Tissu Paper Towels.

For the best hundred letters we wil give $1,000 in prizes divided as follow

1	of $100	$100
2	" 75	150
3	" 50	150
4	" 25	100
5	" 20	100
8	" 15	120
10	" 10	100
14	" 5	70
15	" 3	45
18	" 2.50 ...	45
20	" 1	20
100		$1,000

In entering this fascinating contes you obligate yourself to nothing— it is open to all. You will fin discussion of the subject with you friends helpful to you in writin your letter. You will be surprise at the newspaper reports publishe about the fabric towel dangers.

What to Write About

1st The Sanitary features of Paper Towels
2nd The fewest number necessary to pro erly dry your hands.
3rd The condition of hands after using.
4th The advantages to the complexion du to lack of roughening of the skin by friction.
5th The comfort of using Scot Tissu Towels to dry the face after shaving. (As your men friends to tell you.)
6th The absorbent qualities as compare with fabric towels.
7th The cost in comparison with Fabri towels.

Your letter must not exceed 20 words, and should be written i numbered paragraphs (see sugges tions "What to write about").

Not Necessary to Buy

While it is not a condition of thi contest that you should buy Scot Tissue Towels, if you desire to tr them before writing your letter the may be obtained from your deale at a cost of 35 cents for roll of 15 towels and 25 cents extra for fixture

If your dealer hasn't Scot Tissue Towels i stock, send us $2.00 ($2.50 if West of Mississipp River) and we'll send you by express prepai a carton containing 5 rolls and a fixture.

Scot Tissue Towels are of the heaviest, whit absorbent paper made from clean wood pulp Every towel carries the Scot Tissue water mark

Contest Closes

Your letter must be received at thi office on or before September 15th 1911, when contest closes.

For any further information ask your dealer or write

SCOTT PAPER CO., 662 Glenwood Ave Philadelphia

OUR COMFORT CORNER

By MARGARET E. SANGSTER

THE STAY-AT-HOME

UST abide beside the stuff,
ust care for little homely things,
le others rove to distant lands,
nd cross the main as if with wings.
busy hands are seldom still,
keep the house for those who come;
just because it is God's will,
am a quiet stay-at-home.

n evening falls you would not know at I had swept and baked and brewed; n the hearth the blessing falls
most untroubled solitude.
beds for weary heads are made,
nd daintily the board is spread;
mine own dear ones there I wait break with love their daily bread.

ell may hap some coming day at looking back, my kin shall bless eyes grown dim, my watchful thought, y ceaseless brooding gentleness.
now I reap as I have sown,
r happily my darlings come,
arms of tender love are thrown round their little stay-at-home.

. . .

Co-operative Housekeeping

HE time is undoubtedly coming when a portion of our most strenuous housework shall be lified by co-operation. There is no reason, for example, why a families should not have their ing and ironing taken every week aundry where this hardest house-task might be performed at small se to the great relief of the mis-

In many of our cities a dozen s are now heated in winter by a al plant, relieving each of the of the furnace and as well mini-g the cost of fuel to the individual holder. We are accustomed to ighting of our homes by outside anies, and there is no reason why me many of our other domestic should not be met in the same mical manner.

may, of course, be objected to by rvative people who fancy that a in individual flavor would be ban-from the cooking, and a certain site daintiness be lost from the lry, if baking and washing were outside in a co-operative way. against this objection should be e health and strength of mothers wives, and the increase of light-edness on the part of women who most of the time too utterly ied by daily labor to be cheerful. at do our readers think about e contributions of our depart-of Women in Council take a d range in the summer season. first letter to appear this week rns the delicate and all-important ct of the marriage of two persons are some stations beyond their st youth. They have accordingly ed over the enchanted ground of nce and sentiment into a sort of plain where practical issues have ight of way. This is the situa-

What Shall She Do?

WOMAN of forty-three, who possesses a moderate fortune and spinster, is courted by a man of own age who is a widower and has buried five children. He is a tian gentleman, active in the h and Sunday School and highly cted in the community, but sick-and death in his family have kept poor and he has never been able rn more than a medium salary. not very strong, although he can-e called an invalid. He is greatly med by the lady and she thinks ould be happy in his companion-but hesitates on the ground that ossesses money, and he has saved ng. What shall she do?"

The editor of this page has her own opinion, but reserves it for the present. The readers are asked to send brief, pertinent replies, not more than one hundred and fifty words in length.

. . .

Concerning Folklore

THE folklore of all nations is an interesting study. A thread of similarity runs through it from the ancient days down to this morning. East and West, under an Indian sun or amid Iceland snows, the old superstitions bear a family resemblance. They are very hard to define. Few of us are entirely free from some vestige of fear which we disclaim, and yet which halts us when there are thirteen at table, or makes us walk around a ladder instead of under it, and inclines us not to accept as a gift a knife or other cutting utensil.

We can hardly tell whence came to us this traditional bondage; possibly it is in our blood. Perhaps a nurse or old retainer of our home in childish days sowed the first seeds. There are any number of lucky and unlucky proverbs in folklore about marriage. For instance, it is lucky to marry at the full of the moon or with the flowing tide. It is lucky to see a flight of birds on the way to church, or to have the sun shining on the wedding day. It is not considered a good omen for a lover to go courting on a Friday, which of all days is undesirable for most enterprises. The old rhyme on the relative merits of the days of the week for birthdays is familiar, but will bear repetition.

Monday's child is fair of face,
Tuesday's child is full of grace,
Wednesday's child is full of woe,
Thursday's child has far to go,
Friday's child is loving and giving,
Saturday's child works hard for a living,
And the child that is born on the Sabbath Day
Is great and good and fair and gay.

The folklore of dreams has its fascination. To dream of the teeth falling out is said to indicate death or the loss of a law suit. Some persons dislike to dream of horses; others have a prejudice against dreaming of snow.

Friday night's dream on the Saturday told
Is sure to come true be it never so old.

To dream of a wedding signifies a funeral, for dreams go by contrary.

Superstitious people do not tell a dream until they have broken their fast.

The Jews believe that the sun always shines on some part of every Wednesday because the sun was created on the fourth day of the week. Thursday has one lucky hour, the hour before sunrise. Saturday was considered by the ancient Egyptians an unfortunate day to begin a journey, to shave or cut nails. To change one's residence on the Saturday is thought to betoken a short term of residence in the new place. Many eminent personages have died on Saturday; among them in English history were William III., Queen Anne, each of the four Georges, the Duchess of Kent, Prince Albert, and Princess Alice of Hesse. Among other signs that have to do with marriage, it is said to be unlucky to try on the wedding ring until it is put on the bride's finger at the altar. The bride must not look at herself in the glass after she is dressed, or look behind her in going to church. To complete a patchwork quilt without assistance means for a maiden a single life. A bride should never be addressed after her marriage by her maiden name.

These bits of folklore have been taken at random from a book entitled Leans' Collections.

To Make Tea Biscuit Light and Flaky

USE Kingsford's Corn Starch mixed with your flour —but be sure it is Kingsford's and not an inferior substitute delivered at your kitchen door when you plainly ordered Kingsford's.

A low grade corn starch is very expensive—it costs you just as much per package to say nothing of the food it spoils and disappointment of every one at table.

For over 60 years Kingsford's has meant corn starch purity. Ask for Kingsford's and see that you get it.

KINGSFORD'S CORN STARCH

Tea Biscuit.—Sift well together two and one-half cups flour, one-half cup Kingsford's Corn Starch, three-fourths teaspoon salt and two well-rounded teaspoons baking powder. Rub in thoroughly two large tablespoons lard. Moisten with milk until consistency to roll out. Make about three-quarter inch thick and cut with biscuit cutter. Bake at once a good brown.

Send for Cook Book O — 168 of the best recipes you ever tried—it's free. Just send your name on a post card.

T. KINGSFORD & SON
National Starch Co., Sue'rs
OSWEGO, N. Y.

CHRISTIAN HERALD PILGRIMAGE TO THE HOLY LAND

By special arrangement with The Raymond & Whitcomb Company, the famous tourist agency, the CHRISTIAN HERALD is able to announce a "Pilgrimage to the Holy Land," including Europe, Palestine, Syria, Egypt, the Dead Sea, the Jordan, Jerusalem, Jericho, Jaffa, with supplementary extensions to Mount Lebanon, Damascus, the Sea of Galilee, and many other places intimately connected with the life and death of our Lord.

The splendid steamer Cretic, of the White Star Line, will leave New York at noon, Wednesday, September 20, for the Mediterranean, stopping en route in Italy, Greece, Turkey, Asia Minor, etc., and arriving back in New York about Nov. 21.

For further information regarding this exceptional opportunity to visit the scene of the events described in the Bible, address

CHRISTIAN HERALD PILGRIMAGE BUREAU, BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK

10 DAYS FREE TRIAL

We will ship you a "RANGER" BICYCLE on approval, freight prepaid to any place in the United States without a cent deposit in advance, and allow ten days free trial from the day you receive it. If it does not suit you in every way and is not all or more than we claim for it and a better bicycle than you can get anywhere else regardless of price, or if for any reason whatever you do not wish to keep it, ship it back to us at our expense for freight and you will not be out one cent.

LOW FACTORY PRICES We sell the highest grade bicycles direct from factory to rider at lower prices than any other house. We save you $10 to $25 middlemen's profit on every bicycle. Highest grade models with Puncture-Proof tires, Imported Roller chains, pedals, etc., at prices no higher than cheap mail order bicycles; also reliable medium grade models at unheard of low prices.

RIDER AGENTS WANTED in each town and district to ride and exhibit a sample 1911 "Ranger" Bicycle furnished by us. You will be astonished at the wonderfully low prices and the liberal propositions and special offer we will give on the first 1911 sample going to your town. Write at once for our special offer.

DO NOT BUY a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone at any price until you receive our catalogue and learn our low prices and liberal terms. BICYCLE DEALERS, you can sell our bicycles under your own name plate at double our prices. Orders filled the day received.

SECOND HAND BICYCLES—a limited number taken in trade by our Chicago retail stores will be closed out at once at $3 to $8 each. Descriptive bargain list mailed free.

TIRES, COASTER BRAKE rear wheels, inner tubes, lamps, cyclometers, parts, repairs and everything in the bicycle line at half usual prices.

DO NOT WAIT but write today for our Large Catalogue beautifully illustrated and containing a great fund of interesting matter and useful information. It only costs a postal to get everything. Write it now.

MEAD CYCLE CO. Dept. L71, CHICAGO, ILL.

YOU CAN AFFORD

to have a new Song Book in your Church or Sunday School, and one for every person when you can get "FAMILIAR SONGS OF THE GOSPEL" for $3 for 100. Words and music, 83 very best songs. Sample copy 5 Cents. E. A. K. Hackett, 100 North Wayne St., Fort Wayne, Ind

THE STORY OF JOSEPH

Continued from page 707

And the Pharaoh said to Joseph:
"I am the king, and no man shall lift up his hand or foot in all the land of Egypt, unless thou dost allow it."

Then the king gave the last command in the ceremony of installation, saying, "Abrech!" (the word still used by Egyptian drivers when they order their camels to kneel)—"Abrech!" "Bow the knee!" Then all the court of Egypt, among whom were his former master and mistress, came and knelt before the throne to acknowledge their allegiance to Joseph.

II

"THE SAVER OF THE WORLD"

THE Egyptian College of the Priestly Orders elected Joseph an honorary member in recognition of his high gifts as a seer, and revealer of the secrets of the gods. The king was then able to marry his minister to Asenath, the daughter of the High Priest of On, of the noblest and proudest caste of Egyptian society. Even the king himself could not have married the daughter of the High Priest. The Egyptian kings, in the times of the patriarchs, were Assyrians, who had conquered Egypt several hundred years before. These Pharaohs are known in history as the Hyksos, or Shepherd Kings, and the old Egyptian nobility regarded them with haughty scorn, because, for religious and caste reasons, the Egyptians despised shepherds. The Pharaoh never tired of honoring Joseph—it seemed as though he could not do enough for his premier, and never was a royal favorite so worthy of confidence.

The pleasure-loving people of Egypt could not be made to believe that a famine was coming. As the years of abundance followed one another they led their happy, care-free lives, singing and laughing: "Eat, drink and be merry, for to-morrow we die."

To Joseph, who had gone about doing all the good he could in the narrow sphere of the prison, it was a great joy to be able to do good to all Egypt, and even to the world outside, which included his father and all their family. He must have rejoiced in his new name, "the Saver of the World." But he felt the crushing responsibility of it all. He could not rest day or night, for the constant thought that the lives of all Egypt, and perhaps of the whole world, were dependent upon his own energy and endurance. The thoughtless Egyptians made his task very hard indeed. They laughed at the reigning favorite for not enjoying life and taking his pleasure while he had everything in his power, instead of being driven from city to city in his well-known chariot, day after day, without rest, as if he were a galley-slave instead of the royal minister, superintending the erection of granaries and great storehouses, like modern grain elevators, in all parts of the empire, so that they could be reached easily by all the people when the years of famine should come. The thought ever present in the heart of Joseph was: "What if the people should starve after all, through my neglect, and what if my own father and his loved ones should be starving!"

During the thirteen years since he had kissed his father good-by in the Vale of Hebron, Joseph had thought much upon the causes of his brothers' violence toward him. He had concluded that, as his father had given him up for dead, it would be best to remain dead to them all until, in God's good time, his dreams should come true, and he should have the unspeakable joy of embracing his father once more. He had learned why he had been made to suffer so much, and he fervently believed that he would, somehow, somewhere, meet his father and all his brothers again. Joseph's failure to send word to his father was in no way due to neglect. He had to deny himself heroically the greatest happiness of his life while waiting, year after year, for the family to present themselves.

During the seven years of plenty two sons were born to him and Asenath, his wife. The first of these he named "Manasseh — forgetting," "for," said he, "God has made me forget all my toil and all my father's family," as if the child had come to him in Egypt to relieve him of a little of his terrible longing for home. The second son he named Ephraim, because God had made him prosperous in the land of his affliction. All Egypt was an "affliction" to the grand vizier with the great yearning to behold his father's face.

As the years of plenty followed each other, the Egyptians began to jeer at Joseph as a creator and prophet of calamity, just as the men before the flood had made fun of Noah.

And he gathered up all the food of the seven years which were in the land of Egypt, and laid up the food in the cities. And Joseph laid up grain as the sand of the sea, very much, for it was without number.

And the seven years of plenty came to an end, just as Joseph had said. And when all the land of Egypt was famished, the people cried to the Pharaoh for bread, and Pharaoh said to them, "Go to Joseph; and whatever he says, do."

And the famine was over all the face of the earth, and Joseph opened all the storehouses, and sold grain to the Egyptians; and the famine in Egypt was terrible. And all countries came to Egypt to Joseph for to buy grain; because there was famine in all the earth.

The crops and pastures in Canaan failed the first year of the famine. The second year they failed again. The cattle and sheep wandered in search of grazing, but found only parched ground and dust. It was sad for Jacob and his sons to see their stock, wandering and weak, lying down to die. But they could do nothing for the helpless animals. They began to think their own fate must soon be the same as their cattle's. Starvation, gaunt and terrible, stared them in the face. The sons came and gathered about their aged father, and sat on the ground in silence, gazing at one another, and at their father, like shipwrecked sailors starving on a raft. Jacob querulously demanded of his sons:

"Why do you look at one another like that? I have heard that there is grain in Egypt. Go down and buy some for us, that we may not die but live."

The ten men glanced furtively from one to another. Their guilty secret and the hideous part they had been acting for twenty years made Egypt the country most to be dreaded of all the earth. Was their brother still living, wan and bleeding, under the lash of some cruel taskmaster? Or was his blood crying to heaven, like Abel's, against them from the ground somewhere down there? The thought of going to Egypt filled them with horror. At last they consented to go down, only to save the lives of their wives and little ones. If one went they must all go—all but Benjamin, who had no part in their guilty secret.

They all started off, leaving Benjamin behind with their father. They were a dismal cavalcade, they and their donkeys. On their way to the Egyptian capital every slave they saw had a horrible fascination for them, though no one spoke of it. Long ago, soon after their first hollow attempts to comfort their father, they had ceased to talk about the sickening lie they were living.

To be continued

Around The World On Post Cards

TAKE a Picture Trip FREE and visit famous historical scenes, great buildings, beautiful scenery and unique people of different countries without leaving your own fireside. A novel way to entertain friends.

Starting with New York the cards take you across the continent, stopping on the way at the great cities, through Yellowstone Park, the Canadian Rockies, across the Pacific, and so on around the world. There are views of Manila, Honolulu, Shanghai, Australia, India, Jerusalem, Morocco, Egypt, and many countries in Europe—Fifty Cards in all.

On the reverse sides are short histories of the features pictured. Printed in colors and shipped carefully packed in a mailing carton, and we guarantee them all to be in perfect condition when received.

Think of having in your home the means of viewing the important places of the world without ever moving from your fireside!

How to Obtain these Cards and Take these Trips FREE

You may obtain these cards FREE, and have in your house a means of constant entertainment, merely by pointing out the good qualities of the CHRISTIAN HERALD to your friends, and having one of them take a trial subscription. Get only one of your friends to send us fifty cents for a four months' new subscription (17 weeks), mailed to any address in the United States or Canada, and we will send you a complete set of these Around the World Post Cards without charging you one cent. Address:

CHRISTIAN HERALD, Bible House, New York

The Rapid Combination Roasting and Boiling Fireless Cooker
You'll Be Surprised at the Low Direct Price I'll Make You
Satisfaction guaranteed by full 30 days' trial or no charge—Pays for self fastest—Cooks fastest—No experience necessary—Saves 1/3 per cent on fuel, time and work—Non-rusting metal-lined—Perfect insulation—Steam can't escape—Boils, Steams, Stews—Roasts, Bakes, Fries.
30 FULL DAYS' FREE TRIAL
Complete, With Genuine Aluminum Cooking Utensils Free. Also Metal Composition Heat-Radiators. Can't Break or Crack.
Cover completely protects cooker from dust, and makes it useful as a seat. Send name today for Over-Rich Splendid Recipe Book and Catalog Free, and low direct-to-you factory prices.
Wm. Campbell Co., Dept. 2 Detroit, Mich.
BOOK FREE

Sell Soft Drink
Make Big Mon
Make it easily, quickly, sellin delicious, healthful drinks at Pu Fairs, Parks, Ball Games, Be everywhere. We show you how to Our Crescent Orangeade Powder finest, richest drink imaginable. Jo cold water and sugar. Fully Guar under Pure Food Law, U. S. Seri 11,768. Over 4c profit every glass. A live Display Signs Free. Big money our powders, etc., to Families, Restaurants, etc. Send 10c for trial age (enough for one gallon or 17 gl with illustrated catalog and va information, postpaid. Send a
CHAS. T. MORRISSEY & 3391 Ogden Avenue, Chi

LADIES EASE YOUR FEET
A customer writes, "You could not have fitted me better. For the first time in years my feet are comfortable. The soft glove-like feel of PILLOW SHOES
is simply charming."
$3.00 Post-paid in U. S. A.
Soft, easy, durable, neat, stylish; genuine hand-turned shoes of Vici Kid. No lining to wrinkle and chafe; no breaking in necessary. Absolute comfort and fit guaranteed or money refunded. Price includes rubber heels. All styles. Write for free catalog and self-measure blank. Customers everywhere.
PILLOW SHOE COMPANY
184 Summer St., Dept. 3, Boston, Mass.

"DON'T SHOUT"
"I hear you. I can hear now as well as anybody. 'How?' Oh, something new—The MORLEY PHONE. I've a pair in my ears now, but they are invisible. I would not know I had them in, myself, only that I hear all right."
The MORLEY PHONE for the DEAF
makes low sounds and whispers plainly heard. Invisible, comfortable, weightless and harmless. Anyone can adjust it. Over Hundred Thousand Sold. Write for booklet and testimo
THE MORLEY CO., Dept. 754, Perry Building, Philade

ABSORBINE
Before After
Cures Strained, Puffy Ankles, Lymphangitis, Poll Evil, Fistula, Boils, Sores, Wire Cuts, Bruises, Swellings, Lameness, and allays Pain quickly without Blistering, removing the hair, or laying the horse up. Pleasant to use. $2.00 per bottle, delivered. Describe your case for special instructions and Book 5 E Free.
ABSORBINE, JR., liniment for mankind. For Strains, Painful, Knotted, Swollen Veins, Milk Leg, Gout. Price $1.00 per bottle at dealers or delivered.
W. F. YOUNG, P.D.F., 5 Temple St., Springfield, Mass.

DOUBLE Your Earnin
You can easily earn $20 to $45 Weekly b ling sales of the Automatic Combination To a Malleable Iron and Steel Wire Fence Stret and Splicer; Lifting Jack; Post Puller; P Wrench; Vise; Clamp, etc. Weight 24 Capacity 6,000 lbs. Write today for sp offer; name County in which you live.
AUTOMATIC JACK CO.
16 Main Street, Bloomfield, I

TYPEWRITERS FACTORY REBUILT
Save $25 to $50 on any make of Typewriter. Our "Factory Rebuilt" Typewriters are perfect in quality, condition and looks. Durable and reliable in construction and serviceable in every way. Buy from the largest factory in the world with branch stores in leading cities. We guarantee for one year against defect in workmanship and material. Write for catalogue and address of nearest branch office.
American Writing Machine Co.
345 Broadway, New York

MARVEL SOLDER
INSTANTLY MENDS ALL LEAKS
In all kinds of household utensils—enameled, tin, iron, copper, brass, etc. Solders Without Heat. Just squeeze from tube and spread over hole or crack with fingers. Hardening, it makes solid, smooth surface. Patches all machinery. Fine for motorists. Send 10c for trial tube. AGENTS WANTED.
MARVEL SOLDER CO.
1937 Broadway Dept. 8 New York

GOOD WORK FOR BOYS*

Sunday School Lesson by Dr. and Mrs. Wilbur F. Crafts

OSIAH was eight years old when he began to reign." Only two years intervened between his n and that of his grandfather, lanasseh. During those two years throne had been occupied by Amon, son of Manasseh, and father of ah. Amon was one of the worst ings, for "he walked not in the way he Lord," but served idols. He was dered by the servants of his own sehold.

He did that which was right in the of Jehovah." It was the highest mendation that could be given to boy Josiah—or to any one. "Even ild is known by his doings whether work be pure and whether it be it" (Prov. 20: 11). It might have said of Josiah as it was afterward of the boy Jesus: "He increased in dom and stature, and in favor with and man (Luke 2: 52).

Preparing the Boy King

He walked in the ways of David his ier and turned not aside to the t hand or to the left."

Josiah, like some other kings of ah, is traced immediately, as it e, to David. Josiah was the son of vid his father"—the larger father, deeper root, the elect of God."—Joseph Farber. In that he turned her to the right hand or to the left howed that even as a boy he had a -balanced mind. He was not wild irresponsible as some boys are, good boys, sometimes.

n the eighth year of his reign, e he was yet young, he began to after the God of David his er." He was then sixteen years

A modern psychologist would say, ad reached the time for the "per- lizing of religion." "Boyhood is time for forming habits, as adoles- e is the time for shaping ideals."—Byron Forbush. We must believe Josiah began in a new way to y his illustrious ancestor: as to God had been with him when sur- ded by enemies, and in battles, and he affairs of state. No doubt he many times the victory of David Goliath, which occurred when id was about his own age; and also t the friendship which existed be- n the two young men, David and athan. And best of all, he loved to the Psalms which had been writ- by David, and to study the circum- ces which gave them their rich ring, as the third and fourth ms written during the rebellion of alom.

The Young Reformer

n the twelfth year he began to e Judah and Jerusalem." His is had been formed, and he had inspired to do deeds of valor him-

The reformer had been born in during the age of adolescence. t the age of twenty, in the twelfth of his reign, Josiah entered upon work of a reformer. It was his to make a clean sweep of idolatry. his order the graven images and en images (idols) were pulled n, first in Jerusalem, then through- his kingdom, and in the regions be- the Jordan where Israel had it before captivity. He had the es ground into powder, and scat- d upon the graves of those who worshiped them. He had the bones up of those who had been the hers of idolatry, and he directed to be burned upon the altars used idol worship, not in revenge, but lesson to the people. Afterward personally superintended the tear- down of the altars and the high places (most prominent because they were on hill tops).

"Now in the eighteenth year of his reign he sent . . . to repair the house of Jehovah his God." It had taken almost six years to purge the land of idols, and then he moved to repair and refit the temple. The work of repairing he wisely trusted to three prominent officers who appointed workmen and overseers. It was a time of great rejoicing, and the Levites played upon their instruments of music, harps and lyres, etc., while the workmen were busy, in order to cheer those who worked, and thus help them to work all the faster. When the city of Thebes was built it is said that the stones and timbers danced to the music which Orpheus made upon his lyre, and took their places in the wall. This is a fable, but it illustrates the good cheer which music gives.

With Jerusalem and Judah purged of idols and the temple repaired for the worship of God, let us not think that King Josiah had no more reforming to do. It was far harder to cleanse the hearts and the lives of his people from idolatry, and he entered upon that task, and continued it during his reign of thirty-one years.

Other Youthful Reformers

They should be those of our own household. It has been said that "patriotism bears its most abundant harvest, not when it animates a few great souls, but when it is widely diffused among the masses of the people; not when it is confined to the senate chamber and the battlefield, but when it pervades the family, the church, and the school like an atmosphere, carrying health, vigor and happiness to all, and stimulating all to good works."—Thomas J. Morgan, LL.D.

Every home should be a school of civics for teaching the fundamentals of law and liberty.

The American home is not all it should be, but it has done and is doing a good work in rearing boys and girls to make this a better world for their having lived in it. The aged and revered statesman of Japan, Count Okuma, once said to an American gentleman who was commending the noble generosity of Japan in receiving the fifteen thousand Chinese students who wanted the Western education: "Oh, but," said Count Okuma, "we were not able to do for them what you in the United States did for the Japanese students. You took them into your homes, and gave them noble ideas of home life. We were not ready to do that."

The public school is a grand place in which to develop reformers. In a certain school that we know of street cleaning brigades were formed, not that the children were to go out to do the work of scavengers, but they were pledged not to throw paper or fruit peelings into the street, and to report the wrong use of streets or alleys by others in depositing ashes or garbage. One boy, not over fourteen years of age, wore a star, having been regularly commissioned a street officer because he had reported one hundred and thirty-nine genuine cases. The organization of "patria clubs" and short talks on current events would do much to help the civic spirit in our boys and girls and develop in them wise thoughts about being useful citizens. We must teach our children to think high thoughts through the performance of useful acts. Children can be interested in making the towns where they live more beautiful by growing flowers and trees in their own dooryards, or by being given a share in some public gardening.

What shall we say of the Sunday

Continued on next page

The International Sunday School Lesson for 23, 1911 Josiah's Devotion to God. II. 34: 1-33. Golden Text: "Remember now restor in the days of thy youth." Eccles. 12:1.

A Welcome Sight This Royal Food

Four-fifths of all people—by actual test—when given the choice of all ready-cooked cereals, select either Puffed Wheat or Puffed Rice.

We have proven this by lunch room tests—month after month—with many thousands of people.

Four chances in five, nothing else would be so welcome to the folks at your morning table.

Some like Puffed Rice the better—some Puffed Wheat. Some like the two grains blended.

Some serve with cream and sugar. Some mix the grains with fruit. And all folks like them served, like crackers, in a bowl of milk.

Toasted at 550 Degrees Then Exploded

We take whole grains of Durum wheat or selected rice and seal them up in guns. Then the guns are revolved for sixty minutes in a heat of 550 degrees. That's twice hot-oven heat.

The moisture in the grains turns to steam. When the guns are unsealed every grain is exploded. All the millions of food granules are blasted to pieces. The grains are puffed to eight times normal size—made four times as porous as bread.

Yet they are still whole grains, as shown in the picture, made porous and crisp and digestible.

Puffed Wheat, 10c Except in Extreme West
Puffed Rice, 15c

These enticing grains are like fairy wafers, with the flavor of toasted nuts. Yet they are scientific foods, made instantly digestible, invented by Prof. Anderson.

They are the favorite foods of millions. Twenty million dishes are consumed each month. The demand at present keeps our factories running night and day.

But there are millions yet to enjoy them. If you are one, please look at this dish. Think what it would mean—to-morrow—if the folks should find it on your breakfast table. Telephone your grocer that you want it. Don't forget.

The Quaker Oats Company—Sole Makers

Chicago

(191)

Called Higher

Miss Maria Louise Hann died recently at the home of her brother in Denton, Texas.

Mrs. Susan Gordon Waddell, aged eighty-six, of Richmond, Va., entered into everlasting rest October 25, 1910.

Mrs. Martha Sexton died a short time ago, aged 89. "She always enjoyed reading THE CHRISTIAN HERALD."

Mrs. E. P. High (66) died March 20, 1911. For the past fifteen years she has been a subscriber to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD.

Mrs. Amanda Clark of Los Angeles, Calif., formerly of Wheatland, Ia., "entered into life" October 6, 1910, in her eighty-fifth year.

Mrs. Sarah M. Watson died recently at the home of her son at Dexter City, O. She was for many years a faithful reader of this paper.

Mrs. William Kennett, aged 74 years, six months, was called home on November 12, 1910, She had been a reader of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD for over fifteen years.

Frank C. Kelly, aged 56, died at his home in Lancaster Township, Butler County, Pa., February 16, 1911. He was a subscriber of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD for twenty years.

Mrs. Louisa E. Cummings (88), of Sunbury, Pa., has been called to well-earned repose. She was a member of the Presbyterian Church for many years and took an active interest in church work.

Mrs. Isabelle Freeman died at her home at Aurelius, Mich., February 6, aged 71 years. She was a subscriber to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD for many years. "A faithful Christian has gone to her reward."

Mrs. Annie M. Hunter (42) has been called to the life beyond. She spent her life ministering to others. She loved children and remembered them at her death by a generous bequest to the Children's Home at Mont-Lawn.

Miss Anna M. Rinker was called to her reward on January 27 from her home in Norristown, Pa. "Her Christian faith was most sublime, and her consecration was complete, and she was beloved by every one."

The death of Madame L. F. Auziere, a well-known teacher of the French language, took place very suddenly at Lexington, Ky., not long since. Madame Auziere had given instruction in her native language in many parts of the United States and was loved and honored by thousands who had been her friends and pupils.

WRONG SORT

Perhaps Plain Old Meat, Potatoes and Bread May Be Against You for a Time

A change to the right kind of food can lift one from a sick bed. A lady in Welden, Ill., says:

"Last spring I became bed-fast with severe stomach trouble accompanied by sick headache. I got worse and worse until I became so low I could scarcely retain any food at all, although I tried about every kind.

"I had become completely discouraged, and given up all hope and thought I was doomed to starve to death, until one day my husband, trying to find something I could retain, brought home some Grape-Nuts.

"To my surprise the food agreed with me, digested perfectly and without distress. I began to gain strength at once. My flesh (which had been flabby) grew firmer, my health improved in every way and every day, and in a very few weeks I gained 20 pounds in weight.

"I liked Grape-Nuts so well that for four months I ate no other food, and always felt as well satisfied after eating as if I had sat down to a fine banquet.

"I had no return of the miserable sick stomach nor of the headaches that I used to have when I ate other food. I am now a well woman, doing all my own work again, and feel that life is worth living.

"Grape-Nuts food has been a God-send to my family; it surely saved my life; and my two little boys have thriven on it wonderfully." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

Does Your Granite Dish or Hot Water Bag Leak?
Don't Throw It Away
MENDETS
Mend all leaks instantly in graniteware, hot-water bags, tin, copper, cooking utensils, etc. No heat, solder, cement or rivets. Any one can use them. Fit any surface. Smooth. Sanitary. Inexpensive. Guaranteed. Sizes assorted, 25c., postpaid. Wonderful opportunity for live agents. Write today. Collette Mfg. Co., Box 122 Amsterdam, N.Y.

Wanted a man or woman to act as our information reporter. All or spare time. No experience necessary. Opportunity to earn big money. Nothing to sell. Send stamp for particulars. SALES ASSOCIATION, 661 Association Building, Indianapolis, Ind.

Sunday School Lesson

Continued from preceding page

School as a place for developing young reformers? We will quote from a letter written by the great statesman Daniel Webster in June, 1852. "The Sabbath School is one of the great institutions of the day. It leads our youth in the paths of truth and morality, and makes them good men and useful citizens. As a school of religious instruction, it is of inestimable value; as a civil institution it is priceless, and has done more to preserve our liberties than grave statesmen and armed soldiers. Let it then be fostered and preserved to the end of time."

Inspiration for the Boys

Such a course of lessons as we are having this year, upon the Kings of Israel and Judah, is especially fitted for the development of practical civic righteousness, and particularly this lesson upon the youthful reformer should fire the hearts of the boys to make theirs a better country here and now. The idea of the Junior Republic inaugurated at Freeville, N. Y., and carried on in other places, is one of the best possible plans for the development of young reformers. We do not forget that these republics were designed for boys who needed correction, largely street boys, but the idea of a boy president, a boy congress, boy policemen, boy storekeepers, boy bankers, boy lawyers, all learning civic betterment, can be made just as attractive to boys of a higher class, and such influences are needed to make men out of them. Boys were not made to be coddled, but to be encouraged and inspired.

Tell the following story to boys and see if it will not develop the reformer in them: A very plain man was seen making his way to the platform to speak at the recent Presbyterian General Assembly. He had raised his hand to get the attention of the moderator, and had been invited by him to come to the platform so that all might hear. Such are the rules in that gathering. The man began his speech by saying that he had been born in a saloon, and that he was the son of a saloonkeeper. He grew up in the saloon, and when he was twelve years of age, his father called him to the business by placing him behind the bar to sell liquor. In less than two years his father died, and then his mother. After that he was sent to the country to live with a good Christian man, and he himself became a Christian, and remembering the perils of his youth in the saloon, he became an ardent temperance worker. "But alas!" said he with a pathos that is almost indescribable, "Alas! my oldest son is a drunkard. The saloon captured him." We believe that every boy who hears this story will want to rid his city and his land of saloons just as young King Josiah rid Judah and Jerusalem of idols. They may not take Josiah's way of doing it, but they may be just as determined as he was to stop evil doing.

A Hint for Primary Teachers

Tell the children what Colonel Roosevelt said when he was President: that there are only two kinds of boys, good boys and bad boys; then tell the story of the good boy Josiah, who was not spoiled by being made a king. Instead of telling them what "good boys" can do now, get them to tell what good boys can do, and enlarge upon what they say. Tell the story of the saloon and the boy who was born in it.

TRUE WHEN TRIED

DO THY friends reproach and grieve thee?
Do disasters swiftly fall?
Cherished hopes and blessings leave thee?
Christ is left—and He is all.

"When thou passest through the waters"—
He hath said. "I am with thee;
Trust me, O my sons and daughters;
Ye shall safely stay with me."

On the Rock thy feet are planted,
If thy trust in God abide;
Great deliverance shall be granted,
If thy heart be true when tried.

MRS. FRANK A. BRECK.

Answered Prayers

Mrs. M. C., Haslett, Mich., acknowledges answers to prayers.

Reader, Myerstown, Penn., thanks God for answer to prayer.

L. O., Walsenburg, Col., acknowledges God's answer to prayer.

F. A., Atlanta, Ga., thanks God for direct answer to prayer.

J. H. T., Carrollton, Pa. "I know that God has answered my prayers."

Mrs. C. M., Tidioute, Pa. "God in his goodness has answered my prayer."

M. B., Pomona, Kan. "I acknowledge God's goodness in answering my prayer."

E. T., Camden, N. J. "I thank God for restoration to health through prayer."

L. H., Lizelia, Miss. "I acknowledge God's goodness in answering my prayers."

C. F. L., Ohio. "God has answered my prayer when I was in deep sorrow."

Mrs. A. M., Tiskilwa, Ill., acknowledges God's goodness in answering prayer.

Reader, Topeka, Ind. "I thank God for the restoration of a loved one to health."

C. B. E., Port Chester, N. Y. "I am very grateful for many answers to prayer."

Mrs. A. M. G., Omaha, Neb., thanks God for restoration to health through prayer.

N. L. S., Arlington, Calif., thanks God for restoration to health through prayer.

A. M. R., Van Wert, O. "God has answered my prayers in a family trouble."

M. A., Callaway, Neb. "I know God answers prayer for he has answered mine."

Mrs. M. S., Pittsburg, Pa. "I thank God for restoration to health in answer to prayer."

C. H. S., Elkhart, Ind. "Am satisfied that God has answered my prayers many times."

Mrs. G. S., Friendship, N. Y. "God has answered my prayer in improving my health."

D. H. C., New Milford, Pa. "My heavenly father has heard and answered my prayers."

R. K. L., Yorkville, S. C. "I called upon God in time of trouble and he delivered me."

Mrs. A. S., Williamsport, Pa. "I thank God for sudden and wonderful restoration to health in answer to prayer."

Give the Advertiser a Chance

WE HAVE just received a letter from one of our advertisers, complaining that on several occasions our subscribers have not given him a chance to adjust some trifling misunderstanding, before complaining to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD. In other words, subscribers complained to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD in the same mail in which they complained to the advertiser.

This hardly seems fair to the advertiser who is doing his level best to satisfy his customers. At least give him a chance to make good by writing to him first, explaining the difficulty, whatever it may be, and waiting a reasonable time for a reply, so that he may, upon his own showing, prove his intention to deal fairly and justly with his customers.

Our advertisers are as anxious as our subscribers could possibly be to have their mutual business transactions go smoothly. A pleased customer is a steady customer, and no one knows this so surely as the advertiser, whose future prosperity depends on the good will of the subscriber.

Whenever any of our subscribers is defrauded by an advertiser in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD we will make good the claim, provided that the subscriber, who must be of record, has mentioned THE CHRISTIAN HERALD in writing to the advertiser, and provided the claim is made to us within two months of the date of the appearance of the advertisement. This guarantee does not apply to investment advertisements.

Don't Take a Bath Without

LIFEBUOY SOAP

WHEN you have once used this pure and wholesome antiseptic toilet soap with your bath and shampoo, you will enjoy the double delight and assurance of perfect cleanliness and refreshment, with protection from infections, to which all are more or less exposed. THEN you will enjoy using Lifebuoy for all toilet purposes, at home or when traveling. Its use is fatal to disease germs.

Makes you "feel good all over."

5c. at All Druggists and Grocers

If not at your dealer's, send 5c. (stamps or coin) for full size cake to LEVER BROS. CO.
Dept. S
Cambridge, Mass.

Let Your Idle Money Safely Earn 5%

ASSETS of $2,300,000, conservative management, judicious investment of our funds, following the stringent regulations of the New York State Banking Laws, assure more than ordinary protection to our patrons, upon whose deposits we are paying 5% per annum. This is compounded semi-annually or remitted by check, quarterly or semi-annually, as preferred. Deposits are received personally or by mail, and funds may be withdrawn whenever desired, upon short notice. We have been established eighteen years and have patrons in every quarter of the world.

INDUSTRIAL SAVINGS & LOAN CO. NEW YORK CITY

Write for particulars. Probably we can refer you to some one in your locality.

Industrial Savings & Loan Co.
2 Times Bldg., B'way & 42d St., New York

I Was Deaf 25 Years
NOW I HEAR PLAINLY

with this artificial EAR DRUM in my ears. I never feel them—they are perfectly comfortable, and no one sees them. I will tell you the true story, how I got deaf, and how I made myself hear.

Medicated Ear Drum Pat. July 15, 1908

ARTIFICIAL EAR DRUM COMPANY
2 ADELAIDE STREET DETROIT, MICH

AGENTS! 100% PROFI

Can be Retailed at $2. Fully Guaranteed

New patented Automatic Razor Stropper. Automatically puts a perfect edge on any razor, old style safety. Big seller. Every man wants it. Write quick for terms, prices and territory.
C. Brandt Cutlery Co., 84 W. Broadway, N.Y.

UNLESS IT'S Duplex RICHMOND, VA. IT'S AN IMITATION

Specify "Duplex-Richmond"

We have made as many permanent customers for the Duplex Envelope System of Church Collections
by the excellence of our service as by the excellence of our system.
DUPLEX — Richmond, Va.

Mend the Leak

in your Granite, Tin, Aluminum and Iron Dishes, Kettles, Pans, etc., with PECKS Metal RIVET

Anyone can do it. Quick and easy. No solder, cement or bolt. Fit any surface. Send for sample box of 25 assorted sizes, postpaid. Regular package 25c.
AGENTS WANTED
PECK & CO., 288 Main St., Batavia, N.Y.

FOR INDIGESTION
MURRAY'S CHARCOAL TABLETS
Once Only, for trial
A 25c box for 10c
A. J. Ditman, 2 Astor House, N.Y.

BE AN ILLUSTRATOR—Learn to draw. We will teach you by mail how to draw for magazines and newspapers. Send for Catalog.
School of Illustration, 44 Page Bldg. Chicago, Ill.

Young People's Societies

[The Value of Losses*

T IS unwholesome and degrading to enter upon any sort of a religious terprise in a commercial spirit. We ually go into an earthly business beuse it will pay. We do it frankly r gain. We put in our capital, excting to increase upon it, and we pe it will increase largely.

Yet, though we know that honesty is e best policy; and though we know, rough the maxims of many nations d of countless generations, that ghteous living pays in every way—; t we all grant that the man who is nest simply because honesty is the st policy, or who lives righteously mply because it pays, is neither hont nor righteous, in the highest sense the word.

There are many texts given upon -day's subject, and many more might ve been added; for it seems as ough the Lord, understanding well e frailty of our poor human nature, d impressed it particularly upon us his word that it would pay us in the d to join his army.

Yet, after all, the rewards promised o not greatly appeal to a vulgar soul. hen a public-spirited citizen asked a ealthy man for help in a great civic terprise, he rejoined pointedly, What good am I going to get out of ?"

"Oh, you will get something—but, of urse, the main benefit will be reaped the generations that come after ou."

"Then you can count me out," said e man brutally. "What do I care r those that come after me! I atnd to myself and they can attend to emselves."

There was no use in appealing to ch a clod as that; and this soulless an felt toward religion and the spiritl world in very much the same way. he rewards of Christ's service were o impalpable for him.

"How do you know there will really e 'gates of pearl,' and 'everlasting ly'?" he scoffed. "No one has ever me back to tell us. I put my money nto no such uncertain speculation."

"But you want society to have the pirit of Christ," he was reminded. You want Christian ideals to be purued."

"I want men to be square and upght," said the selfish man. "But you on't need to be a Christian to be that. ny man who knows which side his read is buttered on will be square nd upright—religion or no religion."

He had no conception of the beauty f the all-loving, all-forgiving spirit of hrist, and the rewards which appeal o the faithful Christian had no value o him. To him the martyrs were ools and the saints lacked common ense. He could not understand that y the sacrifice of many of the comorts and joys of life—if not life itself —they had gained far more than they ad lost. And neither class seemed to im to be necessary to the world's busness. Dr. Jefferson has wisely said hat not only must the minister prepare a sermon carefully, but that the people must prepare themselves to reeive it; just as the farmer must prepare not only his seed but his soil. In he same way, our Lord has prepared or us the immeasurable glories of his ove, partly appreciated in this world —much more to be enjoyed, as our ouls ardently believe, in eternity. But nly the nobler sort can conceive of hese rewards, and can bear earth's ows unmurmuringly because of them. The low and sordid cannot grasp hem. God reveals them "to those who ove him"—already as in a glass larkly—and soon, we are persuaded, hey will be seen face to face.

* Topic of the Epworth League for Sunday, July 23. TEXTS: II. Cor. 4: 17; Mark 10: 29-31; II. Tim. 2: 11, 12; I. Cor. 2: 9; Rom. 8: 18.

Lessons From Animals*

NEARLY everybody has seen in one dumb animal or another marks of uncommon traits of mind or disposition. If you have never chanced to see any such thing you have surely heard of it from credible witnesses. From the wonderful results which are obtained by patient and skilful trainers, it has been argued by some philosophers that all animals should go to school, as it were, and have their intelligence developed to the full; and that the work they would do after education would help along the world's business enough faster to more than pay for the expense.

Once a sagacious dog was very fond of the dog of a neighbor. They played peaceably together and one was seldom seen without the other. One Sunday morning a man with a handcart was distributing to his customers pots of baked beans, when, unobserved by himself but quickly noticed by the sharp-eyed dog, one of the pots dropped to the sidewalk and broke. The beans fell out, and the dog, being very fond of this particular dish, began to lick them up. He ate but a moment when he was seen to pause and lift his head reflectively. Then he gazed around, saw that no one was near to steal his "find," scampered off as fast as he could, and presently returned with his dog-friend. Together they cheerfully devoured the savory breakfast, which no doubt the original dog could well have eaten alone, if his kind heart had not prompted him to share it with his friend.

Surely, there is a beautiful lesson for us all in this true story.

One of our great poets has said in a striking poem that there is nothing which clears the mind and strips off artificiality from man like living much with animals. He speaks of the patience with which they accept their lot, the satisfaction they feel with their plain food, the wise use they make of it, seldom overeating, their aversion to anything likely to injure or poison them, like whisky or tobacco; and other qualities in which they display a superiority to some men.

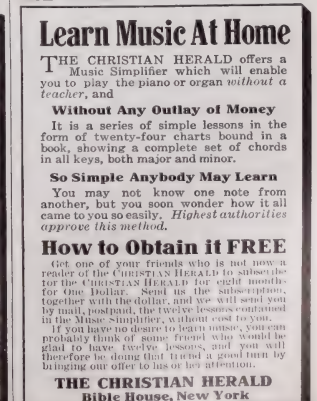
Perhaps it is not too wide a stretch of fancy to compare with this passage the old story of Nebuchadnezzar. "His heart was made like the beasts and his dwelling was with the wild asses. They fed him with grass like oxen, and his body was wet with the dew of heaven—till he knew"—mark the words—"that the most high God ruled in the kingdom of men" (Dan. 5: 21).

It is as though, by living in that simple way, with no companions but these contented and democratic animals, he had become sane and humble again; as the great poet says that we all should become if we would but study and profit by the ways of these dumb creatures.

The wild pagan man is often as fierce and merciless as is the wildest beast. It is only love and kindness which subdue him.

In these latter days a class has grown up which has come to be known as "nature fakirs." They have exaggerated the human characteristics of the wild creatures, and have created incredible adventures out of trifling incidents. But, on the other hand, they have helped the honest nature students to excite more interest in the inferior life of our wonderful world, and have promoted kindness to them, until we find to be almost a common motto literally, as well as figuratively, Charles Kingsley's beautiful lines:

> Do the work that's nearest,
> Though it's dull at whiles,
> Helping, when we meet them,
> Lame dogs over stiles;
> See in every hedgerow
> Marks of angels' feet,
> Epics in each pebble
> Underneath our feet.



* Christian Endeavor Topic for Sunday, July 23. TEXT: Ps. 104: 10-31.

"All the music of all the world" is at your command, whenever you please or your friends suggest, if you own a

Columbia Graphophone

or Grafonola

THE very first selection listed in the new catalog of Columbia Double-Disc Records is "Abide With Me," a baritone solo by George Alexander, with orchestra accompaniment, coupled on the reverse side with "Where Is My Wandering Boy To-night?" as a tenor solo.

Beginning right there, the entire 184 pages of the Columbia catalog are dotted with illuminating reminders of the unique qualifications of the Columbia Graphophone as "the one incomparable musical instrument."

The rapid growth of a general appreciation of the highest grades of music, both vocal and instrumental, together with the recent advances in the art of recording, has given peculiar prominence to the almost unlimited musical capacity of the Columbia Graphophone. But the mainstay of the entire industry seems likely, nevertheless, to remain not so much in the endorsements of the instrument by the great musicians and prominent critics as in the more and more rapid increase of its popularity among those every-day citizens who care for good music and clean amusement.

The Columbia Grafonola "Favorite," $50. All Mahogany

If you don't do another thing in this matter, prove that you are not too sure of your opinions to be convinced by proof: Go to the nearest Columbia dealer (whose name we shall be very glad to give you) and ask him to play for you our "Demonstration" Double-Disc Record. Hearing is believing—and if you have not kept in touch with recent developments in this branch of the noble art of music, you really do owe it to yourself and your family to discover whether you are all missing something that theoretically should and actually does make the home circle complete.

Columbia Phonograph Company, Gen'l

Box 221, Tribune Building, New York

LONDON: EARLSFIELD, S.W.

Creators of the Talking-machine industry. Pioneers and leaders of the Talking-machine art. Owners of the fundamental patents. Largest manufacturers of Talking-machines in the world. Dealers wanted. Exclusive selling rights granted where we are not actively represented.

Christian Herald

COPYRIGHT, 1911, BY THE CHRISTIAN HERALD

SUBSCRIPTION, $1.50 PER ANNUM
PUBLISHED 52 TIMES A YEAR

NEW YORK, JULY 19, 1911

VOL. 34—NO. 29. PRICE 5 CENTS
OFFICES: BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK

Our Mail-Bag

Questions and Answers

W. H. W., Hamansville, Md. 1. What is an ad valorem duty as levied by the Customs Department? 2. If all the families of the earth are of one blood, what is the explanation of "royal blood"?

1. The words ad valorem are Latin and mean "by value." In the Customs Department this means that the duty is assessed as a percentage of the value of the imported article. 2. There is, in the expression "royal blood," no inference of any physiological difference between it and any other human blood. The expression merely implies, in a figurative way, the distinction which was admitted to ruling families in those ancient times when most of the race believed in the divine ordination of kings.

G. T. B., Unionville, Mich. Please inform me how it is possible to obtain the B.A. or D.D. degree. Can they be obtained apart from a college? Are they not sometimes purchased?

The B.A. degree is awarded only by colleges and universities upon the successful completion of a prescribed course of study. The D.D. degree is similarly awarded, but is also sometimes granted as an honor to men who have distinguished themselves by their scholarship. These are usually men who have received their Bachelor's or Master's degree in the regular way. No degree can be honorably obtained apart from a regular college or university. The sale of a degree is an offense against the moral code that no reputable educational institution or person would be guilty of.

Constant Reader, Monson, Mass. It troubles me that I have no greater power in prayer. I do not seem to be used of God; yet the kingdom of God lies very near my heart. It grows in importance and grandeur. I have a yearning for the salvation of souls, but the indifference and ungodliness of my own neighborhood pains me. These two conditions of mind don't seem consistent. The church machinery runs, but no conversions result. Why is it if you are zealous yourself, yet cannot influence any one else to become a Christian?

You may be sure that your work, your prayers, your seed-sowing, will not be in vain. You should not forget, however, that it is not our part to command results; the labor is ours, but the harvest is God's. He alone giveth the increase (see I. Cor. 3:6). There are many results that may not be apparent to one who is engaged in Christian work, but which will yet come to convince him that God hears and answers our prayers and honors our work, when it is done for him in truth and sincerity. One of the leading missionaries to China was greatly disappointed to find his ministry unrewarded with a single conversion, and was about to withdraw from the field at the end of the sixteenth year, when there came a flood-tide of spiritual awakening and many converts. Spiritual work is cumulative. With regard to the efficacy of one's petitions, we would say that it is a distinct gift where one possesses the power of eloquent and prevailing prayer. Let your prayers be earnest, and no matter how simple your language, they will be acceptable. Have faith in God. If our prayers are in the right spirit, we have the assurance that whatsoever we shall ask in Jesus' name, it will be granted. Hold fast to this belief. Our Father is wiser than we, who are but as children in a spiritual sense. He knows best what is good for us. Hence, the answers to prayer often come in a form that we may have least expected, and "after many days," but always in the form that is best for us.

Clara M., New York. The question is asked—apropos of the suffrage movement—"Why does a woman strive so hard to make an inferior man of herself?" My rhyming comment would, I am sure, find thousands of sympathizers among your readers:

THAT NO-ACCOUNT MAN

He gazed in despair at the furrows
That queerly and crookedly ran:
As a plowman he was a flat failure,
The poor little no-account man.

He started to join a procession,
But dropped out when marching began,
Going home with a violent headache,
That poor little no-account man.

He shot at his foe but to miss him,
Then flung down his pistol and ran;
He's, perhaps, the worst shot in the country,
That poor little no-account man.

Yet I love him—none e'er loved more madly
Since wooing and winning began,
For you see he's a glorious woman,
That poor little no-account man.

As a bit of good-humored banter, hardly serious enough for satire, Miss M.'s verses may stir up some reply from "the other side." Let us hear what the suffrage advocates think of her portraiture of the "no-account man."

Rev. A. E. R., Medford, N. J. 1. Controversy is not the purpose of the MAIL-BAG, and religious questions that are purely controversial are not discussed, as in the absence of any new authoritative revelation, discussion of such topics could lead to little profit. Your first question relative to original sin is of this character. 2. A man may be alive in the flesh yet spiritually dead; while on the other hand, we can speak truly of those who, though dead as to the body, are yet alive in the spirit, having begun even in this life to live forever. 3. The most explicit and comprehensive

Continued on last column

Our Palestine Pilgrimage

AN OPPORTUNITY FOR CHRISTIAN HERALD READERS TO MAKE THE JOURNEY TO THE HOLY LAND

FROM almost every State in the Union letters have come from readers who earnestly desire information concerning THE CHRISTIAN HERALD Pilgrimage to Palestine. These communications come from people in many different walks of life; some from merchants, bankers, business men generally, and others from doctors, lawyers, college professors and pastors, and a number from ladies. Many of the applicants write for themselves and their wives. To all of these we have sent a booklet which has been prepared especially for that purpose, and which contains full information regarding the Pilgrimage.

Some of the Letters

From a few of the hundreds of letters received, we make these extracts which are fairly characteristic of the whole:

"I shall be delighted beyond utterance to be with you on that trip, if possible. I am rushing things to make it possible."

"I have long been thinking of taking such a trip."

"I would like, above everything, to take this trip, for it would contain so much of interest to me, vividly portraying the actual scenes of which I have heard and read from my youth up, in connection with our Saviour's life upon earth."

"I have long desired to take such a trip. I realize that the modernizing of the Holy Land makes unwise any unnecessary delay in such a visit."

"There is nothing in this world that could give me greater pleasure than just such a trip. It is a chance not commonly or frequently offered."

"I would enjoy a trip to Palestine more than anything in the world, as I have always desired, above any earthly pleasure, to visit the Holy Land, and see with my own eyes some of the things that my Lord saw, and walk on some of the ground that he walked on."

"How I have longed for such a trip! You will have a great throng, I am thinking."

"I ask of you all information necessary to plan for this life-cherished desire of every clergyman."

"A study of the Bible will, or should, make one anxious to visit the scenes and places portrayed there."

"I have just been there, but was hurried through and did not get to see as much as I wanted to, so I wish to go again."

"I am a graduate of the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago and a Bible student, and such a trip would be a great profit to me, intending to do Gospel work."

"I always had a desire to see the holy Bible places, and as I see that there is an opportunity I would be glad to accept it if nothing prevents my doing so when the time arrives to go. I think it should help a Christian as much as attending a Bible school for about a year. As my Christian work is Sunday School superintendent, I expect great help out of this trip."

"Have been a superintendent of a rural Sunday School for the past four years, and believe a tour of this kind would be of much help to me."

"It has been the dream and hope of my life to make a trip to the Holy Land, and now that you are offering cheap rates, I shall do my best to arrange my finances with a view to making this trip with you."

"I have visited Palestine once and would like to go again."

Points About the Pilgrimage

Our pilgrims will sail from New York on September 20 in the splendid White Star liner Cretic (13,517 tons). All the equipment will be of the best and the comfort of our travelers during the Atlantic voyage will be assured. It is the purpose of the Editor of this paper to accompany the pilgrims personally. All necessary arrangements have been made to assure the maximum of comfort and convenience both by land and water during the entire trip.

Our first calling place will be Ponta Delgada in the beautiful Azore Islands, September 27. Then a short run will bring us to Gibraltar on September 30. Through "the Pillars of Hercules" we enter the blue Mediterranean. Naples comes next (October 3), where we land and transfer to the Hotel Santa Lucia. Then a drive through the famous city, a visit to the Grotto of Posilipo, the Palace, the Cathedral and National Museum and then next morning by train—for Rome! We spend several days in sightseeing in the "Eternal City." We shall visit St. Peter's, the grandest religious structure in the world—the Vatican, the Capitol, the ancient Forum, the Coliseum, the Catacombs, the Appian Way, the Arch of Titus, and many other notable places. In Rome our headquarters will be at the Grand Hotel Michel. This Roman visit alone would be of itself a crown to the Pilgrimage; but there is something far better to follow.

To Visit Constantinople

Resuming our journey, we proceed down the Mediterranean, passing within sight of many historic places until we make our next stop at Piræus, the port of Athens (October 9). The Grecian capital city is second only to Rome as a point of supreme interest in southern Europe. The famous Acropolis, the Stadion, the Temple of Zeus, the Museum, and the beautiful Public Gardens, will be visited, with many other points of sacred and secular interest. October 10 we are due at Smyrna, where our party will take a side trip to Ephesus and revive its memories of Paul and the Ephesians. Next we reach Constantinople (October 12). This will be another noteworthy occasion. Carriages will take the entire party for a sightseeing trip through the city of the Sultans. The famous Mosque of St. Sofia will be visited, also the tombs and palaces of the Caliphs, the renowned bazaars and a score of points of historic interest. Pera and the Galata side of the "Golden Horn" will both be visited. On October 13 our steamer will proceed to cross the sea of Marmora and through the Hellespont, passing in plain view of Mount Ida and the plains of ancient Troy.

Our pilgrims resuming their journey will now pass down through the Grecian Archipelago southwards. In plain view there will be many points of sacred interest, including the Isle of Patmos, on which John was supposed to have written the book of Revelation.

At the Gateway of Palestine

On October 16, God willing, we shall arrive at Beyrout, our first stopping-point on the Syrian coast, and on the following day we shall be in Jaffa, where our pilgrims will be disposed of in the three leading hotels: Hotel Du Parc, Jerusalem Hotel, and Kaminitz Hotel. From this time on until October 31, every waking hour will be devoted to the real object of the Pilgrimage, which is to visit the sacred places of Palestine. This great and delightful experience which lies before us of two entire weeks in the Holy Land, we shall discuss in a second article, as it cannot be disposed of within the limits of our present space.

Readers of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD who desire to join our Pilgrimage, and who have not yet sent in their applications, should lose no time in forwarding them to us. It will be a great pleasure and satisfaction to have the entire party registered and provided with accommodations in ample time, and this we shall be able to do in the best manner possible if our friends co-operate with us now. All who write to us regarding the Pilgrimage will receive the promptest attention.

Address: Christian Herald Pilgrimage Bureau, BIBLE HOUSE, N. Y.

Our Mail-Bag

Continued from first column

explanation of the meaning of "in Christ" is th found in Romans, 8th chapter. In the preceding chapter Paul had written concerning the law a the impossibility of perfect human compliance Now he asserts in chapter 8, that to be in Chri is to have within us the law of the Spirit of Li which makes us free from the law of sin a death. Being in Christ, Paul explains, is walkin in his footsteps and taking his Spirit and teac ing into our hearts and letting him govern a guide our lives—walking, "not after the flesh, b after the Spirit." It is a union between the b liever and his Saviour, a personal spiritual unio in which the believer has one life with hi through the indwelling of his Spirit. This who chapter treats of this subject. See also John 1 23; Eph. 3:16, 17, 19, and other passages.

T. T. S., Jersey City, N. J. Gen. 6:15 says Ge told Noah to make the height of the ark thirt cubits. Gen. 7:20 says: "Fifteen cubi upward did the waters prevail; and the mou tains were covered." Question: If fifte cubits of water covered the mountains, and Noah made the ark thirty cubits high, as Go commanded, must it not have been twice a high as the mountains?

You have misinterpreted the meaning of Ge 7:20, which is that, estimating the cubit at 1 inches (the sacred cubit was 21 inches), the wate were 23 feet above the peaks of the mountains. I the mountains were the Ararat chain on th Armenian plateau in Kurdistan (as commentator assume), then the water about them must hav been several thousand feet in depth, the peak alone being submerged 15 cubits.

F. M., Petersburg, Ohio. What became of th prophet Isaiah?

Little is known respecting the circumstances o Isaiah's life. His father's name was Amoz (no the prophet Amos). Isaiah resided in Jerusalem not far from the temple. He was married and ha two sons, whose names are given in Scripture, an he called his wife "a prophetess," showing tha she was in active sympathy with and had a shar in his spiritual vocation. There is a tradition tha he suffered martyrdom under the wicked king Manasseh, by being sawn in two, and the scene o his martyrdom is even pointed out under an old mulberry tree, near the Pool of Siloam. Josephus (in Antiquities 10: 3, 1) mentions the massacre o the Hebrew prophets by Manasseh, although Isaiah is not named among them. It has been maintained, however, by several good authorities that Isaiah lived to a great age and died from natural causes. His prophetical office began in his twentieth year and was continuous until his eightieth year.

Miscellaneous

F. E. S., Portland, Me. Rev. Stephen Merritt is still alive and active in Christian work.

J. L. H., Conway Springs, Kan. Crucifixion was practised among many nations, Egyptians, Scythians, Persians, Assyrians and Romans included. It was abolished by Constantine. It cannot be stated positively that it was ever a Jewish mode of punishment, but some writers have so asserted. They may have borrowed it from the Romans. The process was either nailing or binding or both. Josephus writes that the soldiers of Titus nailed so many Jews to crosses that there was no room for the multitude of the crosses.

Emma S., Rahway, N. J. There are over 200 different species of mosquito, over fifty species having been differentiated in New York State alone. The mosquito known as anopheles carries fever and malaria. Stagnant pools should be filled up or treated with kerosene at frequent intervals, as they are the best breeding places of mosquitoes. Wet marshes and irrigation ditches also breed them, and if you live near such places your best protection is screening. Thorough drainage is the best thing to fight the mosquito. Don't leave any standing water about in pails or dishes. The insect breeds rapidly in slops and rain-water. Crude oil will kill the mosquito larvæ in cesspools.

G. E. T., Shelburne, Mass. 1. In a recent issue of THE MAIL-BAG, we discussed the meaning of God creating man "in his own image." 2. Paul, in his quotation in Acts 17:28, was quoting from Aratus, one of the Greek poets who lived three hundred years before Paul's time and who gave form to the expression "for we also are the offspring of God." Paul was speaking to a Greek audience, by which such classical allusions would be appreciated. Aratus, however, meant to convey a pantheistic idea, whereas Paul turned the phrase to his own purpose to teach a purely personal, spiritual theism. His meaning was that man in his original, unfallen state, bore a divine resemblance in his character, dispositions, temperament and love of purity and righteousness, but that he had fallen from that high position and the image of God had been marred by sin. 3. The Scripture teaching is that Christ will personally come and set up his kingdom on the earth. 4. There are many senses in which the world may be said to be growing better. We take the optimistic view, although we know there are many who take the reverse, and hold that the race will grow worse and worse as the end of the age approaches.

NEW YORK, JULY 19, 1911

THE · CHRISTIAN · HERALD

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED NEWSPAPER FOR THE HOME

Seeking Coolness at the Edge of the Docks

Spending the Torrid Nights on the Sands at Coney Island

JULY'S GREAT FATAL HEAT WAVE

THE first days of July brought with them one of the most widespread and highly fatal heat-waves that has ever been recorded in this country. From the Rocky Mountain States east to the Atlantic seaboard and from Northern Canada south to Texas and the Gulf of Mexico the country fairly sweltered under the broiling sun of five cloudless days. Starting with Sunday, July 2, the thermometer began to register such temperatures as the official weather men have seldom had to record. On Sunday the mercury hovered about the lower nineties. On Monday the official temperature was given as between 96 and 99 degrees. Then, in the larger cities where the stone or asphalt pavement and the high buildings retain the heat from day to day, the real suffering began. Tuesday reports were truly startling; from some twenty odd cities they announced temperatures ranging from 100 to 116 degrees. In New York City the maximum for the day was 103 degrees. This brought intense suffering to the entire city. Hundreds of persons were prostrated and all day the ambulances clanged through the streets, carrying the unfortunate victims to the hospitals. In the more congested districts every roof became an impromptu camp and even in the more favored residence districts thousands slept on the roofs. Nearly half a million people went to the beaches at Coney Island and Brighton, and a vast army of them spent most of the day in the surf. When night came the police made no attempt to clear the sands; extra patrols were added, and they spent the night in guarding the crowd of nearly one hundred thousand people who slept in the open. Over twice as many deaths were reported on Tuesday as on either Sunday or Monday. The first two days showed respectively 10 and 14, while on July 4 there were 35. The toll taken by the heat in other places brought the number of deaths up to 105.

The thermometer at Rocklesse, Ont., registered 108 degrees; Marquette, Mich., 104; St. Joseph, Kansas City, Des Moines, Omaha and Charles City, reported 102 degrees; Fort Smith, Louisville, Keokuk, Alpena and Sioux City, 100 degrees; Chicago, St. Louis, Detroit, Harrisburg, Cairo, and Toledo, 98 degrees.

On Wednesday the cumulative effect of the continued heat commenced to make itself apparent. Forty-three succumbed in New York and 64 in Chicago. From New England came reports of 40 deaths, and other places reported till the total for the day was well up to 250. In New York the street temperature reached 106 degrees, though the weather man from his tower reported only 92 degrees.

On Thursday, though many of the Eastern cities were still tortured by the heat, the temperatures lowered quite perceptibly, specially in the Mississippi Valley and some sections of Canada. More than welcome rain came to many places and greatly relieved the suffering. New York still perspired in temperatures ranging on the street from 88 degrees at early morning to 103 degrees at the middle of the day, though again the official temperature was 92 degrees. With evening came a short, tempestuous shower which hardly more than wet the pavements and reduced the temperature only one degree. Friday dawned with a promise of coolness in the air, and before the day was over a brisk wind was fanning all the Eastern States and the hot wave was officially declared over.

In New York these trying days presented many pitiful as well as some very comic scenes. Everywhere night found the people sleeping in the parks or on the docks and making every possible attempt to get cool. The children of the tenement districts suffered most severely, dozens of deaths being reported amongst them.

Sleeping on a Tenement Roof During the Killing Heat of Early July

On Tuesday a photographer caught a snap of a small boy walking unconcernedly through a downtown street with every article of his scanty wearing apparel tucked under his arm. Hundreds were to be seen arrayed in a single garment sitting or lying on shaded spots of the street pavements.

Wednesday morning an iceman who was delivering to a wholesale ice cream manufacturer had placed his great cakes of ice on the curb and returning after a few minutes in the building found a group of children, who had deposited their clothes on a nearby doorstep, huddled amongst his seasonable merchandise. That same evening in a horse-trough in the better residential district a number of small boys and girls having reduced their clothing to the lowest limit disported themselves with a great deal of noise and splashing while a policeman stood, entirely oblivious to the misdemeanor, at the neighboring corner.

While these little folk splashed in the fountain some thermometers in the lower part of the city registered 100 degrees. A careful comparison of the registrations of a street thermometer with those of the weather bureau show just how poor an index the latter's figures are of the temperatures in which men and horses toil in the great cities. At 3 o'clock the street thermometer registered 104 degrees, when the official record on the Whitehall Building in New York was 92 degrees, and one hour later, when the official thermometer showed that the temperature was slowly lowering, it then being at 90 degrees, Park Row registered 106 degrees. There is a vast difference between thirty-three stories in the air and the level of an asphalt street that is radiating heat like a blast furnace.

After the fourth day of such heat any analysis of the sensations of the sufferers is impossible. Even those who enjoy all the advantages of airy rooms in the best sections of the city are worn and irritable. One may observe the East Side mite on the first day as he visibly wilts under the burning sun. On the first night it may interest the sociologist to see him rolling on his pillow in some park. But when the fourth day comes and another is still to be endured all other questions but that of how to give some relief vanish.

This recent five-day heat spell, although intense, has not broken the record for duration. In 1876 there was a twenty-eight-day heat spell, June 24 to July 21, during which the thermometer stood at 90 degrees or over for ten of the twenty-eight days. In 1901 the period was from June 25 to July 5, ten days. The maximum temperature for these days averaged 93, while the highest record was 99. In 1908, from June 20 to July 7, eighteen days, a maximum average of 86.3 degrees was reached.

In general, the length of the hot periods, according to the records, has run from ten to twenty-two days, and the hot periods have always come at the last of June or the first of August. This does not apply, of course, to single days when the temperature has been exceptionally high.

The American Pulpit

A SERMON BY

Bishop Wm. Alfred Quayle*

REDEMPTION OF RAHAB

TEXT: Joshua 6:27—"And they brought out Rahab."

RAHAB was an ancestress of Christ. Nobody can be related to Jesus without getting dignity and a sort of solitary sublimity and supremacy from it. I think you must have noticed that nobody ever touched the life of Jesus that he didn't immediately pass into immortality. Nobody forgets Pilate. Pilate dealt unfairly with Jesus, and he has gone out into an immortality of bad repute. Nobody forgets Judas. Judas burned a kiss on Jesus' lips that the world never will forget nor forgive; and this man has sunk into the hell of the world's execration, as well as into the hell of punishment. Everybody related to Christ, in however remote a way, comes to be of consequence.

Now, to the best of my ability, I always tell the truth; I don't affect always to make the best out of it, but I get on quite as well as the average. I never cared to prevaricate about sacred characters any more than I would about current political characters. I never care to exonerate whom God has condemned; I never care to condemn whom God has exonerated; I never care to cast blemishes on the character of anybody that God hath given forgiveness to. I am not here to glorify Rahab; I am here to condemn her wherein she needed condemnation and deserved it, and I am here to exonerate her in so far as exoneration is legitimate.

The Translucent and the Obscure

Now, there are two classes of character in biography, as you have all noticed: one class is like the limpid pool in the depth of which you can see the rocks and the pebbles that lie there—and the little fish running to and fro, and playing hide-and-seek in the sunny pools. Some people's characters are like that. They are as transparent as a limpid pool on a limpid morning; you look into them, and you look through them; they have no seclusions in them to conceal; they have nothing to evade; they avoid nothing; they are like people who go directly on a journey, who make no detours, who do no dodging, but openly, plainly, in the light of a clear holy day, they walk to their destination. It is a pleasure to study a character like that. I think Charles Dickens' career is perfectly open. Everybody that knows him knows this, by this time: that Charles Dickens held, or thought he held, and now we know he held, the apostolate of democracy. I think John Wanamaker's career is perfectly crystal-clear. Here was a man that engaged in business, and somehow he had the strange idea that he ought to do business for God as well as for himself. He was poverty-smitten, and he understood that if he ever had anything, he would have to earn it. That is a good understanding to possess. So he went into business with God for a partner, and God was the only man that trusted him—and so far as I am concerned, I never have any word of unkindness for anybody that doesn't trust the young man or the new man. I am of those who believe that everybody has a right to serve an apprenticeship. I think every fellow that is worth while ought to work a little to show what he is worth.

There was Fletcher of Madely. He was one of the men who conspired in the early days to make Methodism electrical. In those days, when we had no electric battery that anybody could see, this man set himself with John Wesley and with God, for the purpose of disseminating a conception of religion that by and by was to girdle the earth. There is nothing hidden about Fletcher's life; it was open to the eyes of angels, and angels read it in its fairness; goodness looked at it and had nothing but laughter mixed with tears.

There are folks like that. Rahab's history belongs not to this class. I grieve me I must say it as truth compels me. Her life was not clear like that.

There are other lives that are intricate, like tangled strings that a boy carries in his pocket. Why a boy carries strings in his pocket, no living person can guess. He accumulates them, and there they are. He never can get them unknotted in this life. Some people's lives are like that—you cannot get at the beginning; or if you think you have found a clue, you get to be, by and by, like you used to be when you studied botany. Did you ever study botany? Now, botany ought to be the most beautiful study anybody ever looked into outside of religion. It is a study about how God grows the things he grows—how he grows the flowers and the trees and the grain; and I always will insist that it is a burning shame that botany is taught so as practically to set everybody against plants. I used to be in favor of plants until I studied botany, and then I got so set against them, I would hardly look at a corn field. I have outgrown that now. Botany ought to have ingratiated me so with every green thing, I ought to have loved it. But did you ever study botany? Did you ever have the professor give you a plant and say, "Young fellow, hunt that up and classify it"? And when you got it hunted up and classified, then you thought you would hunt it up some more, and you got as many different classifications as the time held out for; and every time you got it classified, you began to surmise that your classification was incorrect. Well, now, some people's history is like that: when you think you are sure of yourself, that moment great gloom and doubt come over you, and you begin to try to find out the truth once more.

Mirabeau called himself "the friend of man"; and like a good many people, he was a "friend of men" a long way off, and not to many near by. Some men are marvelous in their philanthropies to people that are exceedingly far off, but when they are right near, when they nudge right up against their notice, when a poor fellow comes and wants help, they don't know him; they don't see him; they are blind.

Now, as we look at Mirabeau he looks like some old burnt fortress; and for our life we cannot tell what we ought to think about him. A man pock-marked and scarred with infamy, with debauchery and lust; a man with a hundred nameless vices; a man whose dread glance was his supreme attraction; a man who had the superb power of so ingratiating himself that every woman seemed to be in love with him; a man who, when the torchlight of the French Revolution set on fire magazines, and the thunder of exploding cannon and the bursting of shells rent the air—this man sounded his voice above the din of the thunder of the conflagration and the firing of the guns: there he is, afar off yonder, as if himself were the conflagration of some great citadel whose flames never die, and whose hearth never gets back to ashes. We do not understand him, even after Carlyle has told about him. It is a tangled life, mixed with good and bad, and superb morality and republican instincts and possibilities and aspirations; and mixed with diabolisms that would make hell ashamed of him.

Tangled Characters

There was Bishop Burnet, whose memoirs of William III. are the best that have ever been written, and from which Macaulay has drawn so lavishly in compiling his history. Bishop Burnet wrote perhaps the best history of the Reformation written in his own day, and the best that has ever been written. He wrote tracts almost innumerable. He was a man of untiring industry and perseverance. His life was beautiful, and yet he was a man whose career nobody, even to this hour, can understand, because of the contradictions in him.

This woman Rahab belongs not to the class of characters whose limpidness is their beauty and adornment of glory, but she belonged to the class of people whose careers must be studied; and the more we study them, the more they alarm us betimes, and the more they amaze us other times, and we never understand them. She was a woman of ill repute. Rahab, the woman who was traitress to her country; Rahab, who lied as glibly as ever man or woman lied—when you heard her lying you observed that she was not a novice in the business.

On the other hand, you might name many virtues in her character: she was loyal to her family; she cared for their safety; she loved her father and mother and brethren. People are not altogether bad when they can love their own. When people do not love their own, then they are bankrupt, and I wonder what God himself could do with them. But she parleyed for the safety of her father and mother and brethren; she was loyal to them.

In the second case, she kept her word with the spies that lodged with her. She lied to her ruler, but kept her word with them, which shows that she had a sense of faith in them, and, therein, faith in God.

Now, I shall insist that nobody's career is ever to be understood by the steelyard process. A good many people suppose that you can weigh charact like you weigh flesh in steelyards. You weigh the good they do, and all the bad they do, and th you know what sort of people they are. I thi those people who suppose that God is carrying that sort of character-weighing process—I thi they depreciate God in their estimate. He is not crude a bookkeeper as all that. He does not kee his accounts after that poor foolish fashion. He u derstands better than that how to compute chara ter, and understands the specific gravity of goo ness and of badness. This woman Rahab had her badness enough, God knows, and badness t much by long odds; but she had faith, and when he attention was directed to God she believed in hin When her face was turned toward God and she sa him, then she fell in love with him; and every goo thing is possible to anybody that falls in love wit God. Here was a woman whose repute was too ba to name; yet who, in the providence of God, cam to be something or other worth while. Faith i God—that is a consideration worthy your attentio and esteem. Have you that possibility in you Have you ever fructified the possibility in you of sort of free-will faith in God? If God were talke about would you listen?

God's Judgment

Now, that character does good or ill, I don't deny but I do deny that you can measure it out in you hands or weigh it in the balance. God has got good deal better way than that. He asks this: how was that character governed? It is the governing principle in the soul that counts. He is not asking how many good things did you do, or how many bad things. He is not keeping a sort of record, and every time you do a good thing, put it down, and every time you do a bad thing, put it down. God is not doing that sort of thing. He is counting this; what sort of a life did you try to live? That is God's big question, and I insist it is mighty big. It is a great big question, because it includes character. Find out how a man is governed; what is his prevailing instinct; whether he tried to go right.

Here is the dominating and dominative force of faith. God puts lots of stress on faith. If you have the instinct of faith which you hazard and use, God can make something out of you. This woman Rahab, when she heard about the doings of God, had sense enough to know that anybody that did that was God. Lots of people haven't that sort of sense. Some people see God storming his way through the centuries, and making himself prevail in society; they see God mastering the exigencies of human history; they see God bridling the snarling whelps of the lions of infamy, and then they look around blankly, and say, "Where is God? Show him to me." I allow this as the initial word of glory in Rahab's character, that when she heard of the doings of God, she knew that anybody that did that thing was God; and she knew in her heart that she wanted to be at one with God.

My honest suggestion would be this: Rahab belonged to a doomed race. She belonged to the Canaanites. It is not so very long ago since a man made a pretty good living going around and deploring the way the Canaanites had been treated. A little sense will go a long way if you will just use it. The Canaanites had behaved so abominably and their morals were so infamously polluted, that they did like any other race like them will do—they rotted. Nations rot. You don't have to die to rot, the more's the pity. The trouble with nationalities is they die of evil. That is all that ever kills a race—it dies of evil. Its sin slays it.

Rome died because she didn't have enough holy vitality to live. Some modern nations are very apt to die of the same disease that killed Rome. If the United States should come into like torpor of faith, and like stagnation of blood, and like lack of possibility for healing, it will die too. The one thing that can hinder the United States of America from living till the day when governments shall cease, and all nationalities are merged into the eternal nationality of the kingdom of God, is that its blood remains pure, and its morals are held high. Let every patriot see that he stands for cleanness, for Sabbath observance, for absolute honesty in public and private life, and for purity in domesticity and publicity.

Continued on next page

*Bishop Quayle, of Oklahoma City, Okla., is one of the most eloquent leaders of American Methodism.

Redemption of Rahab

Continued from preceding page

This woman Rahab belonged to the naanites. I suppose you know that ere is such a thing as public atmos-here. It is one of the most danger-s or helpful things in the world. here isn't anything more singularly holesome and ennobling than a good blic atmosphere. There is nothing ore damnable and shameful than a bauched public atmosphere. When ople don't blush, that is where the nger is. When people do blush, ere is good hope for them. This oman belonged to an infamous at-osphere. She belonged in a region here philanthropies were unknown; e belonged in a region where con-ience was dormant or dead. God is oing to ask us, "Where did you live?" nd I tell you, honor bright, that peo-e that lived in this town; people that ved here in sound of the church bell, nd in sight of the church house; peo-le that lived here where every chick a child might have a Bible for the sking; people that lived here with very sort of moral and religious voices alling them to God, are going to have pretty hard time to front God and not se, unless they behave themselves retty well. There is the question of here were you? If Rahab had been sked whence she came, she would have aid, "I came from Jericho," and Jeri-ho got killed because it was not fit to ve. Don't you blame Rahab simply nd solely on the question of her char-cter; ask her where she lived.

My last word is this: Here was a ad woman—the worst type of a wom-n. Yet Rahab reformed. I bring er message of reform to everybody. I on't care where you come from, nor o I care what was your ancestry; I on't care, moreover, what was your ocation—if you will look God's way, nd let him come your way, if you will all in love with him, and let him re-hape your life, you can become clean, o that your life shall be as white as now-clouds that drift across the sum-ner sky.

Don't you think it is worth while to tudy this character—not as if she were a far-off buried personality? It s worth while to study her because she s the voice coming out of the dim past nd saying, "Hope, hope." Rahab eard of Israel's God, and believed he was to be loved and adored; and when he began to love and adore that God, he began to be beautiful in her life.

One thing is clear—when people come honestly to God, he won't talk about their sins. You come and say, 'I haven't done this, or this, or this," and he will put his hand across your mouth and say, "Never mind." You say, "I have debauched my own soul a thousand times!" "Never mind," and he puts his hand—and, mark you, that hand is a pierced hand—he puts his hand across your lips to make you keep still, and says, "Never mind." You say, "I have broken every law you ever made, and crucified the Son of God afresh," and he will put a pierced hand across your lips and say, "Never mind." He won't recall histories; he won't read chapters out of your old biography; he will give you a chance, and make you somebody.

O men, let's all take hope; O women, let's all take courage; let us remember that so far as we become confederate with God, we become writers of new history, and inspirers of a new biography, and dramatis personae in a new and engaging drama that God is concerned in: and he is challenged to our assistance, and he will answer to our call and he will give us help; and our names, some time, somewhere, here or there, now or hereafter, it matters not at all when or where—he will have it that our names shall be written in some noble roll-call and in some history of the saints of God; and in some roll of faith, some time to be read before the assembled universe, our names shall be there, and God's Christ shall write it there, and we shall be glad forever. Amen.

What's at the Other End?

By EUGENE THWING

WE ARE standing in a line, you and I, crowded so closely with our neighbors that we cannot stir hand or foot without touching them. Every movement we make jostles the person next to us, he jostles the one next to him, and the motion passes on to many others.

When we were children we stood blocks up in a line, one behind another at little intervals. Then we tipped over one block at the end and watched it fall against its nearest neighbor, and instantly one after another pushed down the other in front of it until the impulse ran through the whole line and not a block was left standing. It made no difference whether the line was straight or curved like the letter S, or even in the form of a circle; the movement of the first block was communicated to all.

Stretching away from us, now, are long lines of other lives standing closely enough to touch one another. We touch the one nearest us, and then we cannot stop the motion we have imparted to the whole line. It runs on to the other end. What's at the other end? Would our act at this end be just the same if we could see its effect at the other end? One of the most imperative needs of our day in every department of life is men and women who can see to the other end of the line.

* * *

AT THE end of one line is a wholesale baker turning out thousands of loaves of bread every day. He uses a poor grade of flour and puts in alum to make a good looking loaf. At the other end of the line is a little child, pale and delicate, the tender lining of whose stomach is shriveled by the astringent alum and the secretion of digestive fluids is checked. The little one droops and dies, and no one knows why, and no one in the line of bakers, and grocers, and salesmen, and clerks, and parents feels any responsibility for the real cause. If the man who put the alum in the bread could have seen a vision of a pale little face at the end of the line, would he have stayed his hand?

At one end of a long line is a manufacturing chemist. He makes up a compound containing a powerful drug required in critical illness; but he puts in the wrong quantity. At the other end of the line a father lies fighting bravely for his life. The crisis has come; the physician waits and watches intently, eagerly, every breath. In a little while there will be a word of joy and thanksgiving for wife and little ones—or a word of desolation. The physician counts the minutes on his watch and looks closely for the sick man to respond to the powerful medicine. The time comes and goes. Something is wrong. Suddenly a life flickers and goes out; a home is darkened, and bitter sorrow takes up its abode there. Who's to blame? Perhaps each one in the long line of wholesale and retail druggists, prescription clerks, physicians, and nurses may point to the others. But if the manufacturing chemist could have seen to the end of the line, would he have done differently?

At one end is a manufacturer of life preservers using poor material to save cost and increase profit. At the other end of the line are drowning men and women, clutching in vain at belts of sawdust instead of good sound blocks of cork.

At one end is a bright, festive birthday party of children in a Fifth Avenue mansion, and indulgent parents serving them wine and leading in the toasts. At the other end of the line—years later—is a patrol wagon backed up to the sidewalk of Madison Square early in the morning, while the police gather in the poor derelicts who have slept on the park benches. One wretched creature, disheveled, and still wild from debauch, shrieks, and curses, and struggles as she is forced into the dark wagon. She was one of the belles at the children's party and tasted there her first glass of wine. Ah, nobody saw to the end of the line!

* * *

WHAT have we to do with all this? Certainly it is unthinkable that any reader of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD could do such dreadful things. Why, then, must we take the warning to ourselves? Surely it does concern us. As Christian business men, parents, young men or young women, are we not even more concerned in the result of our acts than before we answered "yes" to the question, "Am I my brother's keeper?"

We sing, comfortably, "I do not ask to see the distant scene; one step enough for me," and we read, not always with clear understanding, the words, "Take no thought for the morrow, for the morrow shall take thought for the things of itself." Trustfulness for the future is a very different thing from carelessness for the future. We may well pray, for a change, "Help me to see the distant scene, that the step I take to-day may lead toward a bright to-morrow—that the act I do to-day may make for the well-being of my brother at the end of the line."

Every act, small or great, every word, every thought, even, changes the life and the destiny of some one who feels its effect. We cannot live otherwise. We are joined inseparably, though by invisible bonds, to countless other lives, and we cannot avoid, for a single moment, the transmission of force, nor can we stop it on its way down through the line.

* * *

THE rule works both ways with equal truth. We can send out acts of blessing, the force of which often will meet and overcome the opposite forces. How many acts of carelessness and sin have brought wretchedness to children of the city tenements whose misfortune it is to be at "the end of the line"! CHRISTIAN HERALD readers at the end of another line could not prevent the starting of these forces of injury, but they could set in motion other forces, and they did so. As a result, the tenement waifs find themselves at the end of another line, also, made up of the readers and publishers of a paper that loves them, and the "Children's Paradise" at beautiful Mont-Lawn is given them in exchange for the fetid slums.

So many long lines are started by the makers of sorrow throughout the world, that the makers of joy must always be very busy sending out the corrective and healing forces, and seeking to reach the "end of the line" before it is too late. Sometimes they can reach the starving Chinese with the shipload of bread; sometimes they can have the kind hand of the slum worker ready to lift up the unfortunate who has fallen in the gutter.

I shot an act, a word, a thought
Into the busy world of men.
If I could see the work it wrought
Where'er its influence was caught,
Would I send out its like again?

Do You Know Your Bible?

"Christian Herald" Readers Answer the Third List of Difficult Scripture Questions

LIKE the first two lists, the third list of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD Series of Bible Questions has brought answers from hundreds of our readers. Many of these letters express appreciation of this most interesting form of Bible study and hope that it may be continued. It has evidently been a real pleasure for a majority of these letter-writers to take up this work. We can picture them busy at it in the Home Circle, with the younger members of the family giving inspiration and suggestion, while their elders work out the problems with Reference Bible and Word-Book. It is an enjoyable and instructive task in which all may share with profit. The great Volunteer Bible Class whose members in many States are simultaneously studying these questions will find the interest growing as they advance, and the result will be an astonishing increase in the knowledge of the grand old Book of books itself.

Our third list of Bible questions with the answers is given below:

1. Who made the first draft of men for war? Moses. (Num. 31:3, 4, 5.)

2. Where are we told of the first man who shaved himself? Joseph. (Gen. 41:14.)

3. Where is the first mention of a tithe or tenth? Gen. 14:20.

4. Who was the writer of the first recorded letters? David. (II. Sam. 11:14, 15.)

5. By whom and when was a monument used for a dining table? Jacob. (Gen. 31:46.)

6. Whose daughter was Noah? Zelophehad's. (Num. 27:1.)

7. Where was a fourteen days' great revival held, and by whom conducted? II. Chron. 30:13-26.

8. Where is the record of a blessing on the wholesale and retail departments of business? Deut. 28:3, 4, 5.

9. What is the longest word in the Bible? Mahershalalhashbaz. (Isa. 8:1.)

10. Where is the first instance of church letters being used? Acts 15:22, 23.

11. What scripture proves it to be a duty for a church to support its minister? Gal. 6:5, 6; Luke 10:7.

12. What one word in scripture is said to contain the whole law? Love. (Rom. 13:10.)

13. Who called Jesus the "Shepherd and Bishop of our souls"? I. Peter 2:25.

14. Name three persons whose afflictions were their enjoyment. Rom. 5:3; II. Cor. 12:9, 10; James 1:2; I. Pet. 4:13.

15. What New Testament preacher at his first sermon had many conversions? Acts 2:41.

Only 1 answered the 15 questions correctly—Miss M. E. Miller.

Two answered 14 questions correctly—Miss Flora W. Leonard and Nettie Lovell.

Thirteen answered 13 questions correctly—Clarence R. Houck, Mrs. C. K. Sawyer, P. F. E. Albee, Mrs. Anna M. Furman, Georgiana Alexander, Alonzo N. Smith, Ida Shields, Mrs. C. V. Snyder, Anna M. Hunton, Ruth K. Gaylord, Abby M. Batson, Winifred P. Cairns and Charles A. Porter.

Four answered 12½ questions correctly—Ella M. Neblett, A. G. Brown, J. H. Hanstine and Anna B. Tipton.

Twenty answered 12 questions correctly—Mrs. L. M. Culver, Mrs. Chase Filer, Miss Emma L. Davis, Mrs. W. H. Bartholomew, Jennie Shields, Mrs. H. L. Abel, Mrs. G. A. Walker, Mrs. W. H. Gage, J. L. Perham, Mrs. Alex. Smith, Sallie Davidson, Mrs. William E. Camp, Mrs. H. N. Park, Eliza J. Fuller, Mrs. J. A. Tuthill, Mrs. O. C. Barnes, Mrs. George Livermore, Leanora L. Reese, A. A. Williams, and Mrs. Louise E. Goss.

Of the remainder, 11 persons answered 11½ questions correctly, 12 answered 11 correctly, 12 answered 10½, 15 answered 10, 13 answered 9½, 15 answered 9, 7 answered 8½, 4 answered 8, 5 answered 7½, 5 answered 7, 1 answered 6½, 4 answered 6, 4 answered 5½, 2 answered 4½, 3 answered 4, 1 answered 3, 1 answered 2, and 1 answered 1.

Anvil Sparks

..OVER-CAUTION is cowardice.

..RESTING on the promises is not making a bed of ease out of them.

..THE atmosphere of prayer invigorates for toil.

..THE hour of worship should be a time of refreshing to the soul, not a siesta.

..MANY a tongue that seems to be well bridled balks when it should speak out for God.

..AS YOU meet with others in traveling upon the highway of life, always turn to the right.

Keeping the Historic "Fourth"

A GREAT reduction of the numbers of those killed and injured throughout the country and a considerable cutting down of the fire loss marked the progress of the "safe and sane" Fourth of July idea this year. In comparison with 32 killed and 1,951 wounded in 1909 and 24 killed and 1,294 wounded in 1910 this year's record shows 20 killed and about 800 wounded. Last year the fire loss was reduced about $200,000, and it is believed that a similar curtailment will be disclosed when the completed records for this year come to hand. It was remarked far and wide that there seemed an astonishing falling off in the amount of gunpowder let off in the streets of the larger towns and cities. In many places where pandemonium has formerly reigned from midnight of July 3 till well into the following night the day passed with welcome quietude.

In a large number of places there was a return to the old-fashioned and truly patriotic way of celebrating "the Fourth." From dozens of the cities of the West and Middle West come reports of noiseless celebrations, historic pageants and patriotic programmes. Some of these included novel and interesting features. In Denver, Col., upon the booming of a great bell as a signal, every one stopped and sang "America"; so that the song was heard from about 100,000 people all over the city at once. No better example presents itself to us of the return to the village idea of celebration than that of our country's greatest city, New York. There the celebration was started at dawn by an official flag raising and military salute at old Fort Washington. Later official exercises took place at the five borough halls of the city.

The greatest gathering was at the old City Hall. As that building was first used in August, 1811, it was decided to incorporate the celebration of its birthday with that of the republic. At 9 o'clock the Mayor's reception room was crowded to the doors, among the throng being as many descendants of the city fathers of a hundred years ago as could be gathered together. When the meeting had been called to order Rev. Rudolph Grossmann uttered an eloquent invocation and Mayor Gaynor was called upon to speak. He said in part:

> This commemoration is the end of one hundred years since the opening of the Common Council of this city, I think, in this very room. One hundred years in the life of a city and in the life of a nation and in God's great time is a trifle. We think that we are now a settled nation because we are now over a hundred years old, but as a matter of fact that is a very short time.
>
> In looking over this programme I see that the names of the Mayor and the Common Council are given, and in reading it I find only Anglo-Saxon and Dutch names, which shows what the population of the city was at that time. De Witt Clinton was Mayor, and all through the list we find names of that kind, except I see here the name of John Moran, which seems to show that there were a few Irishmen around at that time. But since then all the peoples of the earth have come here in great numbers, this being the gateway to the Nation, and they have distributed themselves all over the country; but many lingered here.

Later the minutes of an aldermanic meeting of August 13, 1811, were read. It seems that after some deliberation that meeting authorized Mayor DeWitt Clinton to issue warrants to the extent of $4,881.82 and adjourned, comfortable in the knowledge that there was still $23.25 in the city treasury.

Then a commemorative resolution was passed urging the preservation of New York's City Hall Park from the further encroachment on its confines which is threatened by the erection of a building for the law courts. When tributes had been paid in verse and speech to the beauties and historic importance of the old building the Mayor and the official party led the crowd to the front of the building. On the green at the west of the Hall a brilliant assemblage had been collecting. The Sons of the Revolution in buff and blue and white were entirely eclipsed by the gorgeous hues of the costumes of the Chinese, Greeks, Swiss, Hungarians, and others who were to show in parade the diverse elements from which the nation of to-day has been constructed.

Mayor Gaynor and other special guests were escorted from the City Hall to their places on the reviewing stand by members of patriotic societies, garbed in the uniforms of the Continental Army, which had come down to them from their ancestors. On their right hand side were stationed the German singing societies, which later rendered a hymn to Liberty and America to an air suggested as a substitute for that of the British National anthem.

The Indian Contingent Leading the Procession of Nations Past City Hall, New York

The parade of nations was led off by a party of North American Indians. Braves marched alon in all the finery of feathered headpieces and buffa robes, and they were attended by squaws and p pooses with beaded moccasins and painted face To them succeeded the Sons of the Revolution to th sound of the fife and drum. Santo Domingo wa represented by a group of men and women in ord nary attire, but the Norwegians had donned the hol day dress of their land. The girls marched bar headed, some with hair streaming down their back Tight-fitting scarlet bodices and white aprons s off their trim figures, and their black skirts cleare the ground by a good six inches. The Finlander and the Irish followed, but were content with every day apparel, and then came the Tyroleans, who wor the short velvet jacket the tight-fitting kne breeches, and the feath ered felt hats so familia in the pictures of thes mountaineers. The Italian in part marched in th garb of gondoliers in th brightest of colors, whil their women folk wor white linen, folded flat o their heads and hangin down their backs. Th rear of this detachmen was brought up by a squa of Garibaldi veterans, wh marched proudly in thei red shirts. General Josep Garibaldi, their hero's nephew, was with them.

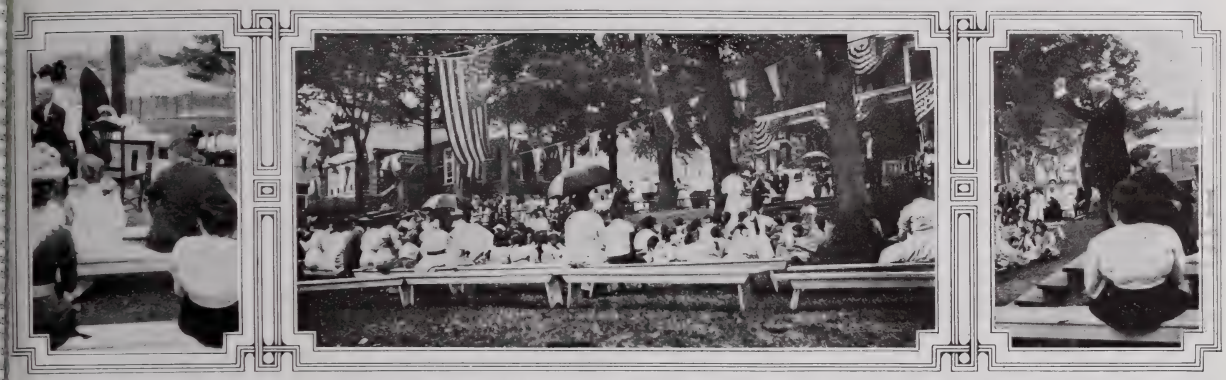
When the Greeks appeared a murmur of applause went along the stands. They represented both the Greeks of classical and of modern times. Athens passed in shining helmet with spear and target, and she was attended by men in the flowing white robes of antiquity, their arms laden with flowers. Then came a stalwart chieftain, his white dress half hidden by a red velvet cloak heavily embroidered with gold, who led the modern Greeks, each in the curious white kilts that still linger in the mountains of the Peloponnese.

The Swiss were the next in line, one wearing the dress of a burgher of the Middle Ages, and then came the largest and most spectacular company of all the parade, the Chinese. Every color of the rainbow appeared in their costumes, but they preferred the less gaudy shades. They marched to the sound of the tom tom, and bore amid them great triangular flags with marvelous dragons embroidered on them. To add special honor to the occasion the Merchants' Association of Chinatown had imported a dragon. The morning celebration closed after a programme of patriotic songs and speeches. There was no official celebration in the afternoon, but when evening came great crowds gathered at the various parks to witness the municipal fireworks displays.

A NEW TYPE OF AEROPLANE FOR THE NAVY

MR. GLENN H. CURTISS, one of America's pioneer aviators, has been engaged for a number of months on the final touches which would perfect a new type of aeroplane—one which could both start from and come to rest upon water. The new machine is called a hydro-aeroplane. Mr. Curtiss saw one of the recently completed models in flight for the first time only a week or so ago. Heretofore he has been the only aviator who has ever operated this new development of the flying machine, but recently at Lake Keuka at Hammondsport, New York, he watched from the banks while Lieutenant T. G. Ellyson of the United States Navy made a flight from the water and a landing upon the water. Mr. Curtiss viewed the machine in flight with a great deal of interest, remarking when it was over: "That's the first time I ever saw a flight from the water. Before, I have always sat in the aviator's seat when the hydro-aeroplane went up, and of course had no opportunity to view the machine from the standpoint of a spectator."

Lieutenant Ellyson, who has been at Hammondsport for the past month working with Mr. Curtiss on the hydro-aeroplanes which are being built for the navy, will continue practising flying from the water until the machines are ready for delivery.



On the same day upon which Lieutenant Ellyson made his flight on Lake Keuka, Mr. Curtiss carried several passengers in the hydro-aeroplane. For the convenience of taking passengers into this machine a dock has been built out into the lake, and the hydro-aeroplane is driven on the water up to the dock, much as a motor boat would come alongside, and the passenger steps into the machine as easily as getting into a boat. In taking aboard and letting off passengers, Mr. Curtiss did not find it necessary to stop the motor, but simply throttled it down until the passenger was aboard and then putting on full power was away on his flight. The new type of machine has, so far, been attended by signal success.

Lieutenant Ellyson and Mr. G. H. Curtiss in the New Hydro-Aeroplane

HOW MONT-LAWN CELEBRATED

Many Visitors at the Christian Herald Children's Home on the Patriotic "Fourth" ear-Admiral Sigsbee Speaking on the Lawn — Hon. Charles M. Pepper Addressing the Afternoon Gathering — Rev. C. H. Mead, D.D. Introducing the Speakers

NEVER was Independence Day more enthusiastically observed at Mont-Lawn than this year. Many visitors came from distant states to Nyack to share in the celebration, arriving by trains on the New York Central and Erie Railroads. Home stages and coaches met them at the depot and the Nyack ferry, and bore them through the village and along the beautiful country roads to "the Children's Paradise."

At the Home itself, the activities of the day began early. All the cottages, the Children's Temple, the Homestead and "Fort Plenty" were prettily decorated with flags and bunting. Old Glory floated to the breeze on the tall flag-staff and at 10 o'clock the children surrounded and saluted the flag in honor of the day and to the strains of patriotic airs by the Pickaninny Band of Charleston, S. C. This band of youthful colored musicians has been at the Home on many previous celebrations of the day. During the forenoon, arriving guests were welcomed by Matron Goering and a committee of ladies. At 12.30 over three hundred children marched to dinner in "Fort Plenty." While the children were at dinner, the visitors inspected the dormitories and Temple and strolled about the spacious grounds. There were many who had come for the first time to Mont-Lawn and they were delighted with the general arrangements and especially with the large, airy dormitories with their rows upon rows of snowy cots, each cot bearing at its head a placard with the name of the patron who supports it for the season. The outdoor gymnasium and the swimming pool were also visited. Groups of the visitors entered Fort Plenty while the children were dining. It was a novel and interesting sight to see these three hundred little ones of the tenements sitting in such perfect order and behaving so splendidly. They sang their grace with clear, bell-like voices in unison, and then their sharp appetites made quick work with the substantial holiday meal. At 1.15 the guests, to the number of several hundred, were entertained at luncheon in the Fort. At 2.30 the Memorial Endowment Tablet, erected in memory of the late Dr. Klopsch, and bearing the names of over one hundred and fifty patrons of the Home who had contributed to its endowment, was unveiled. The tablet was placed upon the walls of the Temple entrance, and was covered with the American flag, which was drawn aside by one of the children at the proper moment during the unveiling address. Rev. Ferdinand C. Iglehart, of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD staff, was the speaker on this occasion and made an eloquent and touching presentation of his topic. He referred to the life-work of Dr. Klopsch among the children of the poor and spoke warmly of the generosity of those who had co-operated with the founder in making Mont-Lawn the model institution of its kind, and who are now engaged in an effort to assure its permanency by endowment. His address was applauded by the hundreds of visitors. At its conclusion, Mrs. Stephen Merritt, Jr., a relative of the late Dr. Klopsch, sang very sweetly, "Hark, 'Tis the Shepherd's Voice I Hear," the children themselves singing the chorus in subdued voices:

Bring them in! bring them in!
Bring them in from the fields of sin.
Bring them in! bring them in!
Bring the little ones to Jesus.

Miss Ida Sidoli sang a solo in a remarkably clear and musical voice and was loudly applauded. Professor Noll presided at the organ.

Visitors and children then proceeded to the lawn in front of the Homestead building, where seats had been arranged in the form of a great semi-circle fronting the speakers' stand. Dr. Sandison, the editor of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD and President of the Home, introduced Rev. C. H. Mead, D.D., who kindly took charge of the rest of the programme.

Marching to the Children's Temple for the Unveiling of the Klopsch Memorial Tablet

The patriotic addresses were preceded by a stirring solo, "Unfurl the Glorious Banner," sung by Miss Grace Hildebrand, "the Gospel Nightingale," which awoke deserved applause. Dr. Mead then addressed the children and visitors and caused much merriment by his humorous talk and his anecdotes. He then introduced Hon. C. H. Pepper of Washington, D. C., chairman of the United States Board of Arbitration on Canadian reciprocity. Mr. Pepper gave a short and inspiring patriotic address, eminently suited to the occasion. After the applause had died away and when the Pickaninny Band had concluded its instrumental salvo, Rear-Admiral Charles D. Sigsbee appeared and got a rousing welcome from all present. The Admiral is an old friend of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD Home and has spoken at many a Fourth of July celebration to the enjoyment of large audiences. He never spoke better than on the present occasion and was repeatedly applauded.

Brief speeches were made by several others, including Rev. John McMurray, D.D., of Nyack, and Rev. Frederick F. Shannon, D.D., of Brooklyn. At the conclusion of the speeches, the Pickaninny Band played the national anthem, the entire audience singing the words. At 5 o'clock, the south lawn was given up to games and evolutions by the children under their instructors, and the skill and grace with which they went through their movements won much approval. "Twilight tea" with cake and ice cream was served by the children to the guests, after which many visitors took carriages to return to their homes. At dusk there was an excellent display of fireworks on the south lawn, to the intense enjoyment of the little folks, and long before 9 P.M. the last of the visitors had gone, the children had been tucked away in their snowy cots in the dormitories, and the hush of sleep had fallen upon Mont-Lawn.

Among the friends and patrons of the Home who shared in the celebration were: Mrs. Louis Klopsch, Mrs. Stephen Merritt, Mr. Otto Koenig, Mr. W. H. Aspinwall, Mrs. A. R. Baxter, of Brooklyn; Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Waters, Mr. Edward R. Johnstone, Miss C. E. Weis, of Roxbury, Mass.; Mr. G. M. Gillespie, New York City; Mrs. Susan Reeder, of Big Flats, N. Y.; Miss Esther B. Lozier, of Haverstraw, N. Y.; Miss Mattie C. Lange, of New York City; Mrs. L. R. Cleaver, of Brooklyn, N. Y., and friends; Rev. Dr. F. Shannon, wife and son, of Brooklyn, N. Y.; Mr. James McGee, of Brooklyn; Rev. W. H. Foulks, of New York; Stephen S. Haight and daughters, of New York City; Rev. R. J. Gates and wife, of Staten Island, N. Y.; Miss Annie E. Oldrey, New York, and many others. There was a large representation of friends of the Home who had contributed to the Endowment Fund.

The Memorial Tablet, which is a handsome plate 6 x 3 feet and beautifully framed, bears in sunken letters the names of over 150 contributors to the Endowment of the Home. It is the first of a series of such tablets which will adorn the walls of the Temple and testify to the generosity of the many good friends of Mont-Lawn and its work.

THE MOUNTAINS

O MOUNTAINS distant from my view, O mountains that I love!
Your rugged peaks they draw my soul to regions pure above.
They make me think of Him who sits on Zion's holy hill,
Whose love, like mountains round about, protects His people still.

Of Jesus, who, when here below, spent the long nights in prayer
Alone upon the mountains drear, with no intruder there;
Whom the disciples saw arrayed in raiment glistening white;
Transfigured on a mountain top, reflecting heavenly light.

Who from Mount Olivet went up to His fair home on high,
Though we in valley or on mount yet feel His presence nigh;
Upon Mount Zion He will wait for those He died to save,
Until with Him they gather there, and palms of victory wave.

I. H. B. H.

OUR EDITORIAL FORUM

OTTO KOENIG, President GEO. H. SANDISON, Managing Editor THEODORE WATERS, Secretary

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD is published weekly by "The Christian Herald," at the Bible House, Fourth Avenue, 8th and 9th Sts., New York City. The officers are: Otto Koenig, President and Treasurer, Bible House, N.Y. City; Geo. H. Sandison, Vice-President, Bible House, N.Y. City; Theodore Waters, Secretary, Bible House, N.Y. City.

Subscription Price, $1.50 a year, in advance.
Remittances should always be made in the safest manner available to the remitter. Register cash remittances.
Foreign Postage.—For each copy to be mailed outside the United States, Canada, and Mexico, add one dollar a year.

Change of Date.—It takes at least two weeks to change the date, after your subscription is renewed.
Expiration of Subscription.—The date on the wrapper indicates when your subscription ends.
Change of Address.—It requires three weeks' time to make the change. Give both old and new address.

Subscriptions may commence with any issue.
Letters should be addressed, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, Bible House, New York.

Entered at Post Office, New York, as Second-class Matter
Entered as Second-class Matter at the Post Office Department, Ottawa

Maeterlinck's Philosophy

IT IS but a little while ago since the reading public were discussing the views of Mr. Edison concerning the soul. In his researches the practical scientist had been unable to find the proof of the soul's existence. He might have said the same thing of the mind itself, for his most delicate apparatus could not have detected the origin or traced the flight of a single thought. Now we have another illustration of the result of an exploration into infinitude, but this time the investigator is not a scientist but a dramatic writer with the heart of a poet and philosopher. Any one who has read Maeterlinck's Life of the Bee can remember how his vivid imagination idealized the existence of a single insect—a literary product which, while it delighted the average reader, astonished and amused the trained naturalist by attributing so much wisdom and intelligence to the bee. Now Maeterlinck, like Edison, has ventured into a field wherein he is a stranger—the realm of the future world. Here, too, his inferences and conclusions are essentially those of the imaginative writer. Death, not life, he thinks is the one thing that counts; it is the climax of the human tragedy. He would divest death of its pain and the grave of its horrors, not through science or religion, but by a species of stoical fortitude and by the application of a philosophy which leaves God and religion out altogether. Holding annihilation to be impossible, he thinks that "the stranger within us," or the soul of man, will survive, but whether with or without its present consciousness he is uncertain. Then will begin what he styles "the glorious adventure," with a new ego to be developed in infinity. What will be the fate of mortals in infinity he considers undecided and it is probably as well to leave it undiscussed. Maeterlinck's essay on death is clearly an excursion into a field where, being without spiritual vision, he is not calculated to add to the world's stock of knowledge on the subject. In his own field of philosophy he is supreme; but there, beyond the ken of things material, he is simply lost in the immensity and takes refuge in an ocean of words that are but meaningless jargon to the spiritually minded.

The Poet and the Washerwoman

IF EVER there was a man who was bound down by official duties against his will and in rude violation of all his dearest desires and predilections, that man was Eugene F. Ware, late Commissioner of Pensions. Ware was a loyal soldier and saw a good deal of service; then he became a legislator and a practising lawyer, but he was perhaps more of a poet than anything else and his fanciful pen-name of Ironquill meant more to him than lawsuits and roll-calls. He wrote many pamphlets, legal essays, translations, etc., but the production by which he will be best remembered is a little poem, "The Washerwoman's Song," in which he tells of a poor working woman—

> In the suds and in the soap
> Worked a woman full of hope;
> Working, singing all alone,
> In a sort of undertone:
> "With a Saviour for a Friend,
> He will keep me to the end."

But the poet, whose vision did not take the same upward direction as that of the poor washerwoman, smiled incredulously at her song. He couldn't understand it; he simply couldn't conceive of a Friend who would permit a woman to work so hard and yet be so poor. So the poet, whose shorter vision could not see beyond the flowers and the fields and mere material things, tossed his cap in the air in mild derision of this Friend of the poor worker. He could not believe in the reality of such friendship; so he set down the washerwoman as simply a deluded being, and he wrote:

> It's a song I do not sing,
> For I scarce believe a thing
> Of the stories that are told
> Of the miracles of old;
> But I know that her belief
> Is the anodyne of grief,
> And will always be a friend
> That will keep her to the end.

The poor worker kept her faith and the poet doubtless clung to his agnosticism to the last; yet he had the wisdom and the justice to admit that the aged woman had a secret source of happiness and consolation from which he could not draw. She believed in that Friend and sang of him because she had taken him into her heart and life; and all the raillery and derision of genius could not shake her faith nor rob her of her happiness. As it was with Ironquill, so it is to-day with many whom the world regards as learned and distinguished. They look, as the poet looked on the washerwoman, from their height of intellectual superiority down upon the poor, whose simple faith holds like a sure anchor amid the storms and trials of life. They cannot understand it, because it belongs to an experience upon which they probably have never entered. Faith's highway is not luminous from end to end, like "the great White Way"; it is only visible step by step; but those who have once made trial of it know well its sure foundation and where it leads. It is not always lined with material blessings, such as the world gives in reward to those who serve it, but it sweetens life now, gives peace and assurance on the way, and joy unspeakable at the end of the journey. This was the theme of the washerwoman's song, which the poet, failing to comprehend, set down as sheer superstition; yet he was fain to admit that, whatever it was, it brought real happiness to the humble worker.

> I would not wish to strip
> From that washerwoman's lip
> Any song that she can sing,
> Any hope that song can bring;
> For the woman has a Friend
> Who will keep her to the end.

One of the happiest Christians we have ever known was a poor, uneducated woman of over ninety. She had been bedridden for nearly a third of her life and had no income; yet her needs were all supplied and her heart was a flowing fountain of genuine happiness, while grace and blessing poured from her lips. She had the same Friend as the washerwoman. So, too, had Bella Cooke, poor and bedridden, yet whose little tenement room became a sacred shrine, where earnest souls might always find spiritual refreshing. She, too, knew that Friend whose presence cheered the washerwoman and who is the Friend of all who put their trust in him. Like Madame Guyon, she could sing: "I find my Saviour everywhere."

> I tell Him all my sorrows,
> I tell him all my joys;
> I tell him all that pleases me,
> I tell him what annoys.
> He leads me in the path of light
> Beneath a sunny sky;
> And so we walk together—
> My Lord and I.

First Aid to the Baby

THAT wise fool, Louis XIV., used to say that if everybody knew the probable causes and probable consequences of every act, there would be no sickness and no sin; that it is the dense ignorance of the human race which is at the root of most of our errors and misfortunes.

This is, of course, merely a picturesque and exaggerated way, characteristically French, of putting a vital truth. We are most of us ignorant; and, equally, most of us are conceitedly unaware of our condition, and all too likely to decline enlightenment. Mr. Carnegie recognized keenly these common human traits, when he planted libraries thickly all over our land. Each library is a centre of life and light, and must help to scatter the shadows of ignorance.

But though we may refuse to be told a good many things that we ought to know and suffer from not knowing, there is one class among us which is usually ready to hear of new and good methods. This class is composed of the mothers of infants. Not so very long ago, it was computed that half of the human race die before reaching the age of five. The chief cause of this appalling mortality is alleged to be the ignorance of mothers.

When infants are fed by the natural method, it is estimated that they are many times more likely to live than if they are artificially nourished. But since this is necessary in many cases, it is of great importance that the mothers should know the best ways of doing it. The most trying season for infancy is now upon us. The New York Board o Health has spent enormous sums in order to arriv at the best methods of caring for infants in the ho weather. The highest authorities have prescribe for them. Even the most cultivated mothers amon our readers can learn something from these instruc tions. To the inexperienced mother, they will prov a priceless boon. We will forward a card containin a consensus of these instructions, to any one wh will send address and postage.

The Camera as a Historian

UNINTENTIONAL historians have thrown the brightest light upon the side of history which is now most absorbingly interesting to us—the life of the people. The "Domesday Book" was compiled so that William the Conqueror might tax his nobles and lords. Neither Chaucer, when he wrote the immortal Canterbury Tales, nor Samuel Pepys as he kept his delightful diary of the doings of his London, realized that they were writing history for future generations. The recording of the life and manners of the masses has now become as careful a study as the chronicling of the acts of a nation's leaders or of the intricate course of international diplomacy. The written word, and occasionally in more modern times the pictorial record made by some master of the brush and palette, have stood unsupported by any evidence from which the personality of the recorder could be eliminated. This is so no longer. King George V. of Great Britain took the final step in the recognition of the camera as a recorder of history when he commanded Sir Benjamin Stone to take photographs of the recent coronation, to be placed in the archives of Great Britain's history. This great historical photograph was printed in last week's CHRISTIAN HERALD. The glories of the court of Solomon are to us but a picture conjured by the imagination. All the pomp of Nineveh and Tyre is now but a shadow. It is an index of the wide development of our modern life that the recent coronation, which was probably the most gorgeous spectacle ever enacted in modern times, should be historically preserved by the camera for the generations of the future.

"Old Glory" in Missouri

Dear Christian Herald: We received through the U. S. mail, July 3, a beautiful American Flag, 4 x 6 feet, and besides it are to have an eight months' subscription for the dear old CHRISTIAN HERALD, and are looking for a copy of the Declaration of Independence to frame and hang up in our parlor. We mounted our Flag on a twelve-foot staff, and on the morning of the Fourth at the roar of the first cannon at five o'clock, we shoved Old Glory out to the Missouri breezes, and let her wave all day and up until midnight. It was the admiration of all passersby. It stands for Freedom, Truth, Right and Justice. It stands for one flag, one language, our free schools and open Bible. My wife says she would not part with our Flag. Success to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD and the American Flag both! Long may they continue to wave!

JAMES EDWARD RUTLEDGE,
A great-great-grandson of Edward Rutledge, a Signer.

Cameron, Mo., July 5, 1911.

Contents of this Number

Wednesday, July 19, 1911

	PAGE
Our Mail-Bag	718
July's Great Heat Wave (Illustrated)	719
Redemption of Rahab. Sermon By Bishop Wm. Alfred Quayle	720, 721
What's at the Other End? By Eugene Thwing	721
Keeping the Historic "Fourth" (Illustrated)	722
How Mont-Lawn Celebrated (Illustrated)	723
OUR EDITORIAL FORUM	724
THE BIBLE AND NEWSPAPER (Illustrated)	725
The House-fly a Disease-Carrier (Illustrated)	726
Among the Lepers of Hawaii (Illustrated) By Charles M. Pepper	727
In the Home Queen's Realm (Illustrated) By Margaret E. Sangster	728
Our Boys and Girls (Illustrated) By Miss Janet Porter	729
The Story of Joseph (Illustrated) By Wayne Whipple	730, 733
Finding Hidden Treasure Sunday School Lesson, by Dr. and Mrs. W. F. Crafts	731, 732
Thrift's Retired Pensions	734
Young People's Societies	735

THE BIBLE AND NEWSPAPER

Conducted by FERDINAND C. IGLEHART, D.D.

Locomotive Ran Away

A PHILADELPHIA AND READING locomotive driven by Charles Rhoades got on a spree in Philadelphia the other day and caused considerable damage. It was docile under the care of a faithful engineer and faithful in pulling its cars of freight. It seems that the engineer had left it on the track and that some switch had been left open and that in some unexplained manner it concluded to make a trip by itself and across lots. So Big Pete, as the engine is called, left the rails and started on the ground, ran through a fence, across the street and jammed itself into a freight car store, cracking the building and pushing it and the one next to it out of plumb, injuring itself, however, very little. Is there anything more grand and inspiring than a magnificent engine on the track under proper control, sweeping along at a mile a minute with passenger cars, or dragging a long line of cars with its heavily laden freight up the mountain? And is there any sight much more fearful than to see that engine leave the track, plough the earth, plunge itself and everything attached to it into a wreck? We have here a very good illustration of human endowments, propensities and character, which when on the right track and under proper control, accomplish their mission and bring prosperity and happiness; but which, off the track and out from under the proper control, make a wreck of themselves and that which is related to them. The Psalmist refers to this keeping of the life on the right path when he says:

He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for his name's sake. (Ps. 23:3.)

"Big Pete," the Railway Engine that Ran Amuck in Philadelphia

Sea Elephants Captured

Dr. Charles H. Townsend is in charge of the expedition sent to California by the Museum of Natural History and the New York Zoological Society. One of the results of the expedition was the capture of six young sea elephants on Guadalupe Island, off the coast of Southern California, the largest weighing 300 and the smallest 167 pounds. They were put in crates and sent by express from San Diego, Calif. During their six days of transportation they did not see a drop of water nor have a bite to eat, yet they arrived at the Aquarium in New York apparently as fat and healthy as when they started. The sea elephants or elephant seals get their name from the elongated proboscis of the adult male. They are the largest of the seal family, and the adult male reaches a length exceeding twenty feet. They are similar to sea lions, but have rounder heads and larger and more human-looking eyes. These creatures taken out of the great ocean sported in their tank like playful children and rising out of the water they looked with apparent interest and pleasure at the people who had gathered about them to see the curiosities. The rapid manner in which they become domesticated illustrates the truth of the Scripture:

Every kind of beast, and of birds, and of serpents, and of things in the sea, is tamed, and hath been tamed of mankind. (James 3: 7.)

Fortune in Onions

Mr. Edward C. Dodd, a lawyer of Laredo, Texas, on dying left to his widow a tract of chaparral-covered land which he had earned as a fee. The ground was thought to be worthless, and there was pity for the poor widow. She rode out one day to see the ground, which was situated a little distance from Laredo, and she made up her mind that it would raise a good crop of onions. She made a contract with a farmer to clear seventy acres and plant them in big Bermuda onions, he to have for his pay a share in the crop. The first year Mrs. Dodd cleared $32,000; the next year she planted more extensively, but the heavy rains left her $1,000 loss for the year. She took a part of her $32,000 and built warehouses for storing the onions and saving them from softness and ruin by the rain. The next year's crop was a failure from want of rain. The year following she installed an irrigating plant driven by electricity, and the profit on her crop two years ago was $50,000. Last year it amounted to the princely sum of $100,000. Mrs. Dodd was formerly a school teacher. She possesses great intellectual force and determination. The mixing of her brains with the soil made a handsome fortune for her. Her agricultural success reminds us of the model farming of olden times as mentioned by the prophet:

Give ye ear, and hear my voice; hearken, and hear my speech. Doth the ploughman plough all day to sow? Doth he open and break the clods of his ground? When he hath made plain the face thereof, doth he not cast abroad the fitches, and scatter the cummin, and cast in the principal wheat and the appointed barley and the rye in their place? (Isa. 28: 23-25.)

Buried Pies and Cakes

This story is told of a Pennsylvania preacher. The pastor, being an able and exceedingly popular young man, was the recipient of numberless favors, among them pies and cakes made by the women of his congregation and especially by the young ladies, who were very proud of their ability to make such things. The pies, cakes, tarts, muffins, etc., accumulated in the pantry, and the young pastor could scarcely do more than take a taste of each and then tell how delicious the articles were. Deluged by these gifts, he turned in desperation to his housekeeper. She and her husband, who was the sexton, suggested that he should dig a hole in the far end of the garden and bury the stuff. The minister agreed to this novel idea, swearing the sexton to eternal secrecy. Each evening they wrapped the picnic provender in heavy paper and buried it at the dead of night. This work had been going on for a long time until, the other day, some telephone men, who had been digging up an old pole, discovered the pie graveyard. The pastor was on a visit to Philadelphia at the time of the discovery, and there was great wonder in the community as to what the dear sisters in the congregation would say to their beloved pastor. The newspaper report may have exaggerated the facts, but whatever they were, the young man would have had less trouble if he had frankly told them that they were killing him with kindness, and the frankness would have been appreciated as it always is everywhere. If he had said, "Send in your sweetmeats and I will sample them and take them to the poor with your and my compliments," it would have increased their love for him. The resurrections in the pie graveyard remind us of the words of Christ when he ordained the first ministers of the Gospel:

There is nothing covered, that shall not be revealed; and hid, that shall not be known. (Matt. 10:26.)

Won Fifty Cents; Lost Life

A friend bet Foster Anderson of New York 50 cents that he could not climb to the top of a forty-foot flag-pole at the corner of a street. The man reached the top of the pole without any difficulty, and then to make sure of winning his prize he stood on top of it, lost his balance and fell head first, killing himself instantly. He leaves a wife and three small children in loneliness and helplessness. This young man's folly is matched by many who imperil limb and life for a paltry prize, and is more than matched by those who throw themselves down to spiritual destruction for earthly treasures, which are worth but a few cents in comparison with the value of the soul. Such a foolish barter suggests the question of the Saviour:

What shall a man give in exchange for his soul? (Matt. 10:26.)

State Should Support Toth

Mr. H. E. Simmons, of Hartford, Conn., by a letter to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, has asked a question which is of widespread importance: "In 'The Bible and Newspaper' in a recent issue, reference is made to the case of Andrew Toth, who has just been pardoned for being innocent of the murder for which he was serving a life sentence; having been convicted, upon false and lying evidence, of the murder of a fellow workman. If this were the only case of the kind, it might be passed over as an unusual thing; but there seems to be an epidemic of these things just about this time, and I am unable to see why the State that has wrongfully convicted any person, should not pay exemplary damages for the crime that has been committed. Within two years there have been half a dozen cases, not all for life sentences, but all unjustly imprisoned and proved to have been so, in various States, and yet nothing has been done in any case to compensate the victims of the blunder of the agents of the State for the years of agony; they have been simply kicked out of prison, 'pardoned for being innocent,' and left to take up the burden of life after being robbed of from five to twenty years of their life, and all because the prosecuting officers feel that a conviction is what they must have regardless of what justice may demand! Why should not the State compensate such men, giving them enough to live upon during the rest of their lives, as long as by the blunder of the State or its agents they have been deprived of an opportunity to secure a decent living for themselves? It is not very long ago that in England the Home Secretary compensated a man who had suffered seven years' penal servitude, when he was proved to have been wrongly condemned, by the payment of 5,000 pounds sterling; and if Pennsylvania would imitate this example in the case of Toth, it would be more decent than to beg Mr. Carnegie to repay the damage they had inflicted upon one who had committed no wrong; and the fact that he is poor ought to make the redress the more complete." This important question Mr. Simmons has answered correctly. The treatment of Toth by the State of Pennsylvania was a shame little short of a crime. The State should make a prompt provision for the poor old miner's support and set a good example for the other States to follow. Common honesty is obligatory upon society as well as upon individual men. If Toth had lost an eye, an arm or limb by the negligence of the State he could have collected damage by suit. The injury the State did inflict upon him was far greater than any physical loss he could have sustained, and justice requires that there should be an attempt to atone for the mistake, although complete reparation for the damage would be impossible. The command of the great lawgiver suggests itself just here:

Thou shalt not wrest the judgment of thy poor in his cause (Ex. 23:6.)

Negro Girl Wins Prize

The fly-fighting committee of the American Civic Association offered a prize for the best essay on the house-fly as a carrier of disease, the competition being limited to the school children of New York City. Wille Henderson, a little negro girl, thirteen years old, won the prize—a ten-dollar gold piece—for the best essay on the subject. Among other things she writes in a legible round hand: "If we only believed that the filthy fly was the germ-carrier we would not spend so much time disinfecting ourselves and avoiding the houses or streets in which disease may be found. Instead we would clean our rooms, make our homes sanitary and inspect the shops from which we buy our food." The prize that came to the little girl in her efforts to preserve the health and lives of others, suggests the rewards that through grace divine follow valuable deeds in this life and in that which is to come.

And, behold, I come quickly; and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his work shall be. (Rev. 22:12.)

The House-fly a Disease-Carrier*

IF ONLY one female house-fly should survive the winter and on April 15 lay only one batch of 120 eggs, the number of flies born from the succeeding generations would be in five months over five and a half trillions.

This in effect is the finding of Dr. L. O. Howard, Chief Entomologist of the United States Government, who has written a book on the house-fly, and who is earnestly striving to convey to the people at large the menace which the fly is to public health.

Dr. Howard urges a general change in the name from House-Fly to Typhoid Fly, because it has been definitely proved that the insect is a ready carrier of the dread disease. He says:

"The sense of smell of the typhoid fly must be very keen, although its selection of attractive odors undoubtedly differs from our own. It is very catholic in its choice of food — the milk jug and the freshly baked custard pie are apparently equally in favor with the slop bucket, the garbage pan, and all sorts of unmentionable filth. It knows the odor of cooking, and it flies unerringly towards the nearest kitchen, although the temperature of the kitchen stove may attract it almost as much as the possibility of something good to eat. Its food must be liquid, and when it lights upon a solid, a plentiful flow of a salivary fluid enables it to make some slight impression, and to gain sustenance. Everyone who reads this knows how in the old days, and even now in some places, the typhoid fly swarmed, or swarms in a certain class of public restaurants, and in poorly-cared-for eating places. The story of the man who entered a dimly lighted railway restaurant and asked for 'a piece of that huckleberry pie,' and was informed that it was not huckleberry, but custard, is literally true."

After pointing out the manner in which flies may carry germs of disease about on their feet, Dr. Howard states that:

"Certain authors believe that the danger from the disease germs that pass through the fly's body is greater than those which are supposed to be carried from foul substances on its feet. With the abundance of flies in the late summer, the number of fly specks becomes almost unlimited. Dr. Cobb states that he possesses actual counts made by the use of a little counter of his own invention, but that he does not publish these records for fear that he would be accused of sensationalism. He says that window panes with from 1,000 to 10,000 fly specks per square foot are not at all uncommon, and that from 10 to 50 per square foot is a common number in what are considered well kept homes. He states that on neutral tinted objects which are not cleaned so frequently, fly specks occur in millions, while on wall paper, chandeliers, outside veranda posts, on cornices, ceilings and window blinds the numbers are almost past computation."

Speaking of the general propensity which flies have for transmitting disease, Dr. Howard quotes many writers, among others, Simmons, who isolated cholera germs from flies which were captured in a post-mortem room, in which the bodies of persons dead of cholera were lying; Tissoni and Cattani, who obtained cultures from flies caught in cholera wards; Hamilton and Ficker, who found typhoid germs in flies caught in houses in which persons were lying ill of typhoid fever, etc., etc. He quotes Esten and Mason, who wrote as follows:

"The number of bacteria on a single fly may range all the way from 550 to 6,660,000. Early in the fly season the numbers of bacteria on flies are comparatively small, while later the numbers are comparatively very large. The places where flies live also determines largely the numbers that they carry. The average for 414 flies was about 1,250,000 bacteria on each. It hardly seems possible for so small a bit of life to carry so large a number of organisms."

Dr. Howard reviews the history of experiments made through many years, which prove conclusively that the fly is a determined carrier of typhoid infection, and enters into an exposition of the dire results in the nature of disease which may come from allowing the house-fly evil to go on unchecked. He says that among other diseases the fly is capable of transmitting cholera, dysentery, tuberculosis, anthrax, ophthalmia, diphtheria, small-pox, plague, parasitic worms, infantile diarrhea, etc., etc. But the most instructive part of the volume, which will be most appreciated by our readers, is that which refers to remedies and preventive measures against the fly. He says:

"To avoid only the danger from flies, you must destroy or protect from them all substances containing disease germs. This is done in large part, so far as intestinal diseases are concerned, by the water-closet system in cities, and it may be done by sanitary privies in villages and country houses and in mining and construction camps; and also by properly-cared-for trenches or latrines at temporary army posts. To avoid danger from flies in the case of lung troubles, the proper care of the sputa is essential.

"To avoid the nuisance of flies it becomes necessary practically to get rid of them, and in doing this of course we get rid of the danger at the same time. It has always seemed to the writer that the truest and simplest way of attacking the fly problem is to prevent them from breeding, by the treatment or abolition of all places in which they can breed. To permit them to breed undisturbed and in countless numbers, and to devote all our energy to the problem of keeping them out of our dwellings or to destroying them after they have once entered in spite of all obstacles, seems the wrong way to go about it.

"To the individual who has full control of the grounds for some distance about his abiding place, the former method is undoubtedly the best, and it would also undoubtedly be the best in any event, if, by co-operation of the residents or by the active efforts of a central body, like the boards of health in cities, it were possible to do thorough work with the breeding places.

"In cities and in towns, however, where the requisite co-operation cannot be obtained, and where boards of health are still indifferent, careful consideration must be given to the second method, namely, keeping flies out or killing them after they enter.

"Three years ago I made an attempt to estimate the amount of money spent annually in screening houses in the United States. As close an estimate as could conscientiously be made seemed to indicate that more than $10,000,000 are spent every year for this kind of protection against flies and mosquitoes. In fly-ridden localities the expense is undoubtedly justified since the majority of the flies are kept out by careful screening. No system of screening, however, seems to be so perfect as to keep them all out.

"The whole expense of screening, however, should be an unnecessary one, just as efforts to destroy flies in houses should be unnecessary. Their breeding should be stopped to such an extent that all these things would be useless."

The most thorough sanitary precautions are necessary in order to get rid of the fly. Manure piles must not be allowed near human residences. Screens, until we have learned to destroy the breeding-places of the insects, must be freely used. Fly-traps and fly-poisons are effective helps in the process of extermination. Most of those upon the market are good, and sticky fly-paper is especially recommended. Dr. Howard describes in detail several of the modern fly-traps and gives directions for their home manufacture. Formalin or formaldehyde, diluted six to one with water and placed in a shallow dish, is a good exterminator. Pyrethrum, carbolic acid, laurel oil, and other deterrents, used frequently and with care, will kill or keep out flies.

The treatment of their breeding-places with chemicals such as carbolic acid, chloride of lime, kerosene, etc., is strongly urged by Dr. Howard. The adult fly must be eliminated, not only in our houses, but as Professor Hodge says, "the war must be carried into Africa," and he must be chased away from the entire "out-of-doors."

Other harmful flies are fully described by Dr. Howard. His lucid and comprehensive book should awaken us all to the crying need of a general movement against this tiny but deadly enemy.

Copyright, National Geographic Magazine

Male House-fly Resting on Glass and Seen from Below

Courtesy F. A. Stokes Co., N. Y.

Colonies of Bacteria on a Sterilized Plate Rising from Fly Tracks

Copyright, National Geographic Magazine

Female House-fly Resting on Glass and Seen from Above

* The House-fly, Disease-Carrier. By L. O. Howard, Ph.D. Fred'k A. Stokes Company, New York.

TOPICS OF INTEREST THROUGHOUT THE WORLD

—ONE AND A QUARTER MILLION dead flies in one heap, being a pile three feet high and five feet wide, represents the slaughter wrought by the small boys of San Antonio, Texas, as the result of a fly-killing contest which closed there on July 4. Robert Basse carried off first prize of $10 with a record of 484,320 flies slain.

—A JOINT NOTE, signed by the diplomatic representatives of France, Great Britain, Germany, the United States and Italy, was handed to the Haytian government on July 4, requesting settlement of pending claims diplomatically within three months from that date, after which, if they are not settled, the ruling of the claims commission will be enforced. Pressure has been brought to bear on the Haytian government several times in the last ten years by the various Powers interested, especially Germany and France, with a view to obtaining a settlement of large claims of banking houses against the treasury of the so-called Black Republic.

—A RECENT despatch from Philippopolis, Bulgaria, reports that the damage done by the recent floods there is enormous. The monetary loss is estimated at $20,000,000. Many buildings were washed away by the rain-swollen streams, and crops and market gardens were ruined in wide areas. Now a water famine threatens the city, as the mains have been uncovered and so torn apart that a month will be needed to repair them. The inhabitants of many villages in the south of Bulgaria have sought refuge in the mountains.

—JAPAN AND THE UNITED STATES contemplate an exchange of university professors as the most effective method of dispelling war rumors and promoting a closer acquaintance. The idea meets with an enthusiastic response from wealthy Japanese, who are willing to defray the entire cost of the undertaking. It is expected Japan will inaugurate the plan this year by sending representatives to the Eastern universities.

—ON SATURDAY, JULY 1, California was shaken by a series of earthquake shocks, the heaviest since the disaster of 1906. Although the damage reported was trivial, there was a momentary panic in stores, office building, court rooms, etc. The shock was felt in San Francisco, Sacramento, San Jose, Santa Rosa and Fresno, and as far eastward as Carson and Reno, Nev.

—HOT WATER is being thrown high in the air by the pools south of Reno, Nev., known as Steamboat Springs. Their activity and the velocity of the water have greatly increased since the earth quake. For five years since the earthquake in April, 1906, in San Francisco, the springs had been quiet. When that shock occurred they showed activity, which later ceased. The earthquake also did considerable damage at Lick Observatory, on Mount Hamilton. The 36-inch telescope was moved three-quarters of an inch out of place on its concrete pier, but was restored without trouble.

AMONG THE LEPERS OF HAWAII

A Native Hawaiian Family at Home

The Home of Eleven Hundred Lepers on Molokai

By CHARLES M. PEPPER

RECENTLY the newspapers told of the troubles of the health authorities in various cities in providing for one of those of whom it was written in the time of Moses that they should dwell alone. Happily there are not many cases of leprosy in the United States, and usually when such are discovered it is possible to have some regard to the dictates of humanity. There are, however, countries where those who dwell alone are so many that, after all, they do not dwell alone, but in communities of their own. This is the case in the Hawaiian Islands. The newspaper paragraph recalled to me a visit that I had made several years ago to that tropical paradise, one of the incidents of which was a trip from Honolulu to the Island of Molokai, where the leper settlement is located. It seems horrid that in the midst of so much that is beautiful in nature, in the luxuriance of palms and all the wonderful vegetable growths of the torrid zone, there should be maladies which are so destructive of the human image. But this is one of the disagreeable facts of the tropics. There are few tropical paradises without their drawbacks and deformities.

A Hawaiian Wine Palm

The native Hawaiian race, as is well known, has been dwindling for the last half century, due to its contact with the vices of civilization, but I do not know that these vices, destructive as they have been in other ways, were responsible for the introduction of the blood-sapping malady of leprosy. It had existed in the Hawaiian Islands and spread among the people during a quarter of a century before the Mosaic policy of segregation was adopted and the Levitical law was put into effect, humanely and with proper regard for the sufferers and their families. Thus it came that the leper settlement was established on the prong or peninsula of the Island of Molokai. My own visit was made in company with some physicians from American warships which happened to be lying in the harbor of Honolulu. This was before the annexation of Hawaii to the United States. The authorities provided us with a sturdy little steam craft which made the voyage across the stormy channel between the islands of Oahu, on which Honolulu is located, and Molokai. It was a night of very great discomfort, and we all lay on the cabin floor in common misery. When morning came we crawled out on deck and saw the lofty cliffs which marked the peninsula and the village of Kalaupapa, which was the landing-place. It hardly could be called a port. We were landed in the small boats and were welcomed by the Superintendent, who was quickly satisfied that our permission was regular. In fact, some of the minor officials had come with us.

It was with a strange feeling of isolation that we noticed the two or three hundred natives who watched our arrival but stood at a respectful distance as we were led to the strangers' house, a comfortable bungalow set off by itself in the garden. It was here that the few visitors who were permitted to come to Molokai were lodged, and usually the authorities when they came over from Honolulu. It was Sunday morning and after an hour or so we saw the people thronging to the churches, both Protestant and Catholic. Kalaupapa itself was not unlike other Hawaiian villages, very picturesque, lying as it did at the foot of the cliffs and with native huts scattered along the winding streets. There were, however, other buildings not usually found in a Hawaiian village, and these were the hospitals. We all noticed the number of those who came in from the country on horseback. There were no buggies, but save for this, everything reminded me of a Sunday morning service in a New England or an Ohio village. There were Sunday Schools, and the singing of these Hawaiian children and their elders floated out in the atmosphere softly and melodiously. At the church we attended there was a very good sermon in the native language and some remarks in English. In all, there was nothing to remind one—except the appearance of some of the victims of the malady—that life was in any way different in Kalaupapa from what it was in any other Hawaiian village. We knew, however, that everything was regulated more strictly, for the sake of sanitation and for the welfare of the whole community.

In the afternoon we got horses and rode along the beautiful Waihanau Valley to the village of Kalawao, which was the scene of Father Damien's labors. All along the way were comfortable grass-thatched cottages. Kalawao itself was hardly as picturesque a village as Kalaupapa, yet it was attractive.

Some phases of the leper life which we saw that day in the hospitals and in some of the cottages were not good to look upon, yet everywhere there was cheerfulness and content, and everywhere was the evidence of the Christian charity and the heroic devotion of those who were voluntarily passing their existence among the lepers in order to minister to their wants. It was the twentieth-century interpretation of the Mosaic decree of segregation. There was no cry of "Unclean!" "Unclean!" No one fled from the approach of the afflicted, but instead the wants of the whole community were ministered to, and the isolation, instead of being that of outcasts, was simply that of one great group whose everyday life was made bearable by this humane intercourse.

We left Kalaupapa at night, and as our boat pulled away, the leper band came down to the landing and serenaded us. There was nothing of melancholy in the music, nothing of vain regrets, but good, robust notes on the instruments. Yet, as we looked back and saw some of those scarred faces, the pathos of it all was too much for several of us.

LITTLE STORIES OF FAMOUS MEN

A Christian Nobleman

A CHRISTIAN nobleman was the Earl of Carlisle, who recently passed away in the prime of life. He had served for twenty years—ever since his accession to the earldom—as a member of the House of Lords. A Conservative in politics, he was nevertheless very democratic in his views. He heartily seconded the public work of his able wife, the Countess of Carlisle, who is president of the World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union, founder and first president of the Women's Liberal League, and a power in the field of philanthropy.

The Earl has long been an active and consistent Christian temperance worker. He was associated in the United Kingdom Alliance with the late Sir Wilfred Lawson, his Cumberland neighbor, and like the later, cleared his estates of all public houses. This was done as soon as he entered upon his inheritance in 1889. All the Earl's family (he and the Countess have had nine children) have been equally active in reforms and politics, including the Viscount Morpeth, who now becomes the tenth Earl; Lady Mary Murray, who married a commoner; and Lady Dorothy Howard, who is an honorary secretary of the World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

George James Howard, J.P., Earl of Carlisle

J. A. S.

"Now, Then——!"

DR. JOWETT, the famous English preacher, who is now a New York pastor, is fond of anecdotal illustration in his sermons. He was preaching lately on the necessity of active obedience to the Lord's will, whatever the cost, whether it called us to labor in foreign lands or to work at home. "The crew of a coaling steamer," he said, "landed at Messina shortly after the terrible earthquake.

"The captain saw two little children crouched on the top balcony of a building eighty feet high, which had been wrenched from its support and threatened to collapse any moment. He got the children to fasten a string to the balcony, and he fixed a ladder to it, and then turned to one of his seamen with the words, 'Now then, Smith.' The sailor ran up the ladder, hoisted a rope by the string, induced the children or probably one of the older inmates to fasten it to the top balcony climbed up the face of the tottering building, and shouted when he reached it that 'there was a ton of them on the building,' and that he could not get them all down by himself. The captain turned to his second mate, 'Now then, Read,' and in a few minutes Read stood by Smith's side, and together the men lowered twelve cowering creatures by the rope. And the Lord is speaking to you and me to-day, and with reference to this great heroic work of saving the world—'Now then——!'"

IN THE HOME QUEEN'S REALM

By MARGARET E. SANGSTER

Summer Entertainments

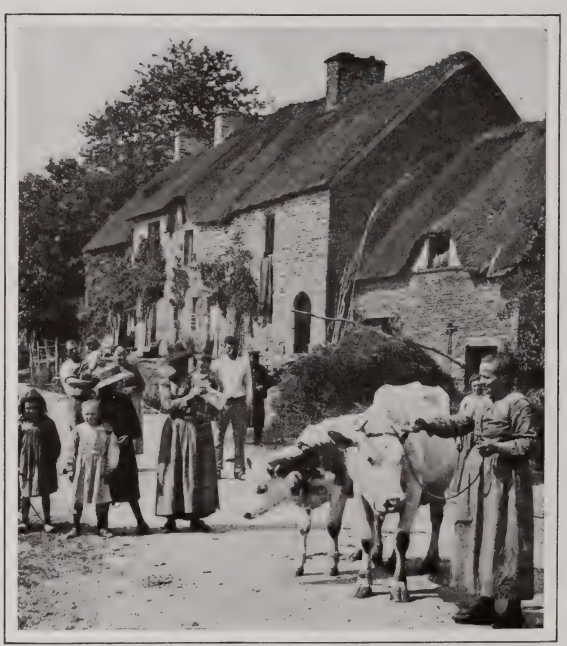
ENTERTAINING in summer means open-air freedom as contrasted with the indoor coziness of hospitality in winter. If one has a country home and a bit of lawn or garden an afternoon tea may be delightfully carried on. Spread rugs upon the grass, set small tables here and there and invite friends to come from four to six. Refreshments at this time of the year should consist of iced beverages in preference to hot tea and coffee, with dainty sandwiches and small cakes. Lemonade to which either grape juice or orange juice is added is easily prepared and is generally enjoyed. Iced tea and coffee are both palatable and ginger ale is to be recommended. No one should make a labor of an afternoon garden or lawn party.

If there are young people and they may play croquet or tennis, the hostess need think no more about them. As a rule, when friends come together for an hour or two in the afternoon, they have plenty to talk about and require no diversion beyond that of agreeable neighborly gossip. It is a compliment to a friend staying with one for a few days to invite pleasant people to meet her, and if cards are sent the only necessity is to write in the upper left-hand corner of the card "Tea at four" mentioning the day and date, with the words added, "To meet Miss Mary Blank." A house-party of young people or older ones requires more antecedent thought and a little more elaboration in getting ready than a party gathered for an afternoon.

The daughter at home for the summer vacation, the son returned from college, each naturally wishes to assemble a few congenial friends in the home for several days or perhaps for a week. There may be a good deal of doubling up as to sleeping quarters and some crowding at the table, but when a group of boys and girls come together under pleasant auspices they have a taste of paradise. When invitations for such a party are sent, minute directions should be given as to the arrival of trains or boats and the time limit of the visit should be distinctly mentioned. No guest should presume to overstay the time set by the hostess for the termination of the visit. When this particular formality came into vogue certain old-fashioned people rebelled against it as an infringement of true hospitality. It is, however, a safeguard to convenience and it sets both hostess and guests free to accept or decline other engagements.

* * *

A certain youth of whom I have heard once boldly invited himself to join a house-party in a country home on which he had only the slenderest claim. He barely knew the son of the house. Nevertheless, he wrote to the mother of the man whom he knew slightly saying that he had received and thanked her for her invitation, and that he would arrive on a specified day. No invitation had been sent him, but the lady, convinced that he had made a mistake, refused to embarrass him by declining his visit. He came accordingly and remained at his pleasure for a number of days after every one else had gone, having, as it seemed, an endless supply of changes of raiment which he had brought in a trunk that looked like a Noah's ark. This incident was unusual and its secret motive has yet to be unraveled.



* * *

A house-party of young people should not be undertaken if the hostess is an invalid, or if any one in the family is likely to be disturbed by the insistent merriment of the juniors. If there are opportunities for fishing, golf, tramping or outdoor sports of any kind, the youthful guests will take care of themselves and the hostess need trouble herself only in the direction of the commissariat. They will not be sufficiently fed on manna. They will need abundant supplies of wholesome food, and their appetites may be relied upon to consume it.

Summer camps are becoming popular with parents who wish to send either sons or daughters under proper chaperonage into the woods. A few weeks out of doors in camp life send the children to school in the fall with rosy cheeks and new zest in study.

* * *

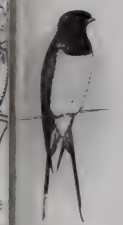
A VERY pretty and inexpensive way of entertaining an evening party in summer, provided one has a porch and a strip of lawn, is to give what is called a feast of lanterns. If a missionary society or a Ladies' Aid Auxiliary wishes to raise money for a hospital in India or a new carpet for the home church, an entertainment of this particular kind will prove convenient and profitable. The Japanese lanterns may be bought in whatever quantity is needed and they should be strung across the veranda or suspended from trees. When lighted the glimmer of the candle through the colored shade makes a soft illumination. Rugs should be spread on the lawn, chairs and tables set about at intervals, and the refreshments served are preferably ices and cake. A charge for admission will be in order if the entertainment is for benevolence. The hostess who invites her guests simply for a pleasant evening may depend upon them to entertain one another, but she should, if possible, have a little music. So many young people are performers on mandolin, guitar or banjo, and so many can sing, that the music may be arranged for without difficulty. If, among one's friends, there happens to be a person who can give a monologue or some other amusing recitation, this, too, will be appropriate.

Copyright, Underwood & Underwood, New York

Peasants of Normandy

THIS picture of a French peasant household was taken near the old city of Caen, in Normandy. These people are as typical of the hardy farmer-folk of Northern France as their city is of the ancient days of the Normans. They are very little changed from the type of their forefathers, who tilled the soil when William the Conqueror built the great castle which to-day, though in slightly altered form, serves as a barracks for the city garrison.

Women and Temperance



A CORRESPONDENT has recently written a strong indictment against a Woman's Club of Boston which has taken out a liquor license in order that it may be able to use wines and other stimulants at its social gatherings, and offer this doubtful form of hospitality to its guests of both sexes. The step is a retrograde one and should be condemned by public opinion and by the sentiment of good women all over the land. When we remember that our prisons are filled with those who have become criminals through intemperance, that the presence in the home of a confirmed inebriate, whether man or woman, means heart-break and continual distress to every one in the household circle, and that ruin follows in the trail of drink, we cannot but feel that women should combine against the liquor traffic. More than this, they should frown upon social drinking. It is far too common in these days to see apparently elegant women, women who at least bear the hall-mark of respectability, openly drinking beer and wine in restaurants. This form of degenerate indulgence ought to come under the ban. Women who practise a custom in such doubtful taste and of such low morality ought to lose social caste. The attempt made by members of the smart set to introduce cigarette smoking among refined women has not succeeded on American soil. Social dram drinking should equally be condemned, nor should the action of the Chilton Club of Boston be condoned by the press, the pulpit or the consensus of opinion among the mothers and daughters of our country. A great deal of criticism was hurled at the late Mrs. Carrie Nation, and her methods were not those which most of us approved, yet she was a pioneer and a reformer, and by her vehemence and indomitable courage roused the indifferent from their torpor and compelled the public to look a ghastly situation in the face. We need not imitate or emulate Carrie Nation, but it is the duty of women everywhere to show their colors, maintain the fight for total abstinence except when stimulants are prescribed by a physician, and to educate the children and young people so that they may understand that alcohol is never a food, and is frequently a poison.

* * *

Auto-Suggestion

"WHAT is meant by auto-suggestion?" writes a correspondent. The phrase simply signifies self-suggestion to good ends. For instance, if one particularly dislikes to do something one ought, one may conquer the disinclination by resolutely saying over words expressing the necessity of doing the thing at once and with pleasure. The person who is afraid to go upstairs in the dark may, it is said, overcome this fear by saying, "I am not afraid, darkness is friendly, nothing can hurt me." The underlying idea is that the mind is the real ruler of the body, and that by allowing the mind to take command of a situation from the higher and not the lower point of view, ill may be vanquished and good accomplished.

Our Boys and Girls

Mary Halliday, age 14
Swallow: "Visits us only in summer. Eats and drinks while on the wing."

"Our Little Sisters the Birds"

COZY CORNER boys and girls have done so charmingly with pen drawings of birds, and our page looks so especially pretty this week, that it reminds me to tell a very old and beautiful story about birds—a story that was so much loved in Italy that many years afterward the great artists liked to paint it on the walls of their churches. You may see those paintings still in many of the old cathedrals there: The good man Francis, who earned the title of "God's Troubadour," standing among a great company of birds, talking to them so simply, so beautifully, that it seems as if each tiny feathered piper might be understanding.

Kate Williams, age 10
Speckled English Song Sparrow: "Migrates from Central America to Newfoundland twice every year and back again."

Birds Without Number

'T was on a sweet summer day, when the Good Man Francis of Assisi, who by his great works and gentle ways had won for himself the lofty name of 'God's Troubadour,' stood up in speak to a multitude of people gathered out of doors and beneath the trees to hear him preach. He had not spoken long when sparrows and swallows and robins and wrens in great numbers came wheeling about, twittering and calling while they hunted their supper on the wing. Little by little they flew so low, were in such great numbers and so noisy, that Francis could no longer make himself heard for the din. Then suddenly, turning from his audience and speaking into the air, the good man said: "Be quiet and listen, little bird sisters, until I have finished here. Then shall it be my turn to talk to you." And the fine old legend says the birds flew all into the tree-tops, and remained very quiet.

Harold M Clarkson, age 14
Jay: "He is so clever in hiding among the leaves in the wood that it is not easy to see his gay coat of feathers striped with blue."

Wayne Hedges, age 11
Robin: "He likes to make his home near our home and to have a breakfast of crumbs when the weather is cold."

Many Blessings

Robert Harden, age 12
Sparrow: "Likes to build its nest under the roof, and I know as his first family is ready to fly, he sets to work to bring up another."

AND this is the sermon the good Francis preached to the birds: "My little sisters the birds, you are much beloved by God, your Master, and always you ought to praise him, because he hath given you liberty to fly everywhere; and he hath given you also clothing, double and triple. You are loved by the air which he hath given to you, and moreover, ye sow not, neither do ye reap, and God feedeth you and giveth you the streams and fountains to drink from; he gives you the mountains and the valleys for your refuge and the tall trees wherein to make your nests; God clotheth you and your children, wherefore God must love you very much since he gives you so many blessings. Because of all this and much more, ah, my little sisters, be careful of the sin of ingratitude and always seek to praise God." And all of the birds began to open their beaks and stretch their necks and spread their wings, and by many signs and glad songs showed that the gracious man had given them great joy. And Francis rejoiced with them and wondered at their vast number, their sweet friendliness, and thanked God for them, and he blessed the birds one and all. With glad singing they rose up into the air and flew to the north, the south, the east and the west.

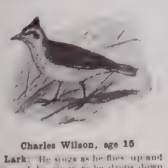
One reads in the life of the good man Francis many stories that reveal his great love for birds and animals. Once in the market place of Sienna, he bought a pair of pigeons, saying, "Little sister doves, you are simple and good and pure. I will save you from death. Fly away and make your nests for your little ones."

The Little Unseen Singer

ONE night, Francis, alone in the woods, heard a nightingale sing out in the clear sweet stillness. To Francis the song was a burst of radiant joy. His heart filled with the gladness of the high summer and his voice leaped up into the darkness, and all night long the man and the bird sang beautiful songs of praise and love; but even the Troubadour could not sing so long, so blithely as the little unseen singer, so at last the light-hearted man of God called out: "Little Brother Nightingale, thou art victor in this strange singing contest."

Almost the last we know of the gentle Francis of Assisi is that one morning, after he had been very ill for a long time, his friends heard the sweet voice of the tired Troubadour singing this song, that he was pleased to call "The Song of the Sun :"

O Lord, we praise thee for our Brother Sun,
Who brings us day, who brings us golden light,
He tells us of thy beauty, Holy One.
We praise thee, too, when falls the quiet night,
For Sister Moon, and every silver star
That thou hast set in heaven, clear and far.
For our brave Brother Wind we give thee praise;
For clouds and stormy skies, for gentle air;
And for our Sister Water, cool and fair,
Who does us service in sweet, humble ways;
But, when the winter darkens, bitter cold,
We praise thee every night and all day long
For our good friend, so merry and so bold,
Dear Brother Fire, beautiful and strong.
For our good Mother Earth, we praise thee, Lord;
For the bright flowers she scatters everywhere;
For all the fruit and grain her fields afford;
For her great beauty, and her tireless care.



Gertrude Fraser, age 12
Yellow Throated Vireo: "He is shy and builds in the hushwood of almost every American forest."

Should you ever go into the sweet Umbrian Valley in Italy, where he lived and worked, be sure to take with you the story of Francis, "The Little Good Man of Assisi."

Birds in Midsummer

MANY people think the spring is the time to make friends with the birds, but I have found the bird-people more friendly in midsummer, when the little ones are big enough to take their first journeys into the tree-tops. Unless they have been frightened, nearly all birds are trustful at this season. The best time to observe birds and make friends with them, is in the early morning and again at twilight. Orchards and gardens and lawns are better places for observing them than the woods. In Japan, where people especially love the birds, robins and pigeons are so tame that you can take them into your hand from the branches of the trees; and in Norway and Sweden, the birds fly in and out of the houses and are the playmates of little children.

Charles Wilson, age 15
Lark: "He sings as he flies up and up and he sings as he drops down and down."

A Prize Book

FOR the best true story of a bird in less than five hundred words, we will send a beautiful and appropriate story book, and publish the prize story in the Cozy Corner. Story to be sent on or before July 26.

Nettie E. Boynton, age 13
Starling: "He is a noisy fellow and chatters in the cherry trees when the fruit is ripe."

For our Good-Night to each other in the Cozy Corner, I am going to suggest to you that this week every one shall read (or ask to have read aloud) the beautiful 148th Psalm, and then choose for yourselves a verse from it to learn by heart. I have chosen the 7th, 8th and 9th verses, and I believe these verses that we are learning by heart in the Cozy Corner together will stay by us always.

The Tin Soldier

His chum was his little tin soldier,
With blue suit and musket of red,
His gun held so straight on the shoulder,
And the tall little hat on his head.

When Tommy went fishing for crawfish,
With a line and a funny bent pin,
He took his tin captain for comp'ny,
And forgot he was nothing but tin.

ELIZABETH BOWLES, age 14.

Market

On my way to market,
One big bright April day,
I took my littlest doll along
And tried to make it say:

"Mama, mama, do hurry up;
It is going to rain I fear,
For when great clouds go rolling by
The thunder must be near."

LUCY MEIKLE, age 12.

These little verses were crowded out of our last month's page of your own nice work. If you have not already done so, be sure to write and introduce yourself to me. I want to know everybody in the homes where THE CHRISTIAN HERALD goes.

With glad and hearty greetings to you, each and every one, my Cozy Corner boys and girls, believe me, faithfully and lovingly,

The Aunt in the Cozy Corner

Drop a cake of Ivory Soap in bath-tub or washbowl and up, up it comes to the surface of the water.

That is one of Ivory's advantages over other bath and toilet soaps—it floats.

Other advantages are: Ivory Soap is pure—purer by far than many soaps that sell at five times its price; it contains no "free" (uncombined) alkali; it lathers freely; it rinses easily.

Ivory Soap . . . It Floats

THE STORY OF JOSEPH

II—Continued

By WAYNE WHIPPLE

Author of "The March of Any Man," "The Lincoln Calendar," etc.

WHEN they reached the nearest city, where a grain storehouse had been built, they were referred to the first of the Egyptian officials, who had charge of selling the grain. Joseph had been looking for them, for he knew there was famine in his home country and had often whispered to himself, "Is my father hungry? Are my own family starving while I am feeding these Egyptians?"

His heart gave a great leap, and all the questions he had been asking himself came crowding into his mind when he saw his brothers come and prostrate themselves before him. "Are they kind to father? He must be alive. Grandfather Isaac must have died—but not father, no, not father! Do they hate Benjamin? No, the lad is not with them." His quick eye noted without counting that they are only the ten. He must not let them know him. How could he find out all the things he longed to know without their suspecting who he was? These thoughts thronged in upon him while they were approaching and bowing before him. He remembered the pit now, and the dreams that had enraged them so. The dream of the sheaves was nearly fulfilled. He had time to think out a plan while they were prostrating themselves talking through his interpreter. "They called me a dreamer and a spy. Now, I have it! I will call them spies. I will be very severe with them and test them until I find out all about them."

And Joseph said to them, "You are spies; and have come to see the barrenness of the land."

And they said unto him, "No, my lord, but we have come to buy food. We are all one man's sons; we are not spies."

"No, but you have come to see the barrenness of the land."

And they said, "We, thy servants, are twelve brothers, the sons of one man in all the land of Canaan; and the youngest is this day with our father—and one has passed away."

Joseph's heart burned at this. But he was relieved. "Father and Benjamin are both alive," he thought. In a stern tone he talked to them through his Hebrew interpreter:

"That is just what I said, 'You are spies'; by this you shall be put to the test: You shall not go away from here unless your youngest brother comes down. Send one of your number and let him bring your brother back, and you shall be bound, that your words may be proved, whether there you are telling the truth, or else, by the life of the Pharaoh, you are surely spies." And he put them all together into prison for three days.

The third day he ordered them to be taken from the prison where he had been confined for three years at least. He made a show of relenting and said to them:

"Do this and live; for I fear God. If you are true men let one of your brothers be kept in prison here; but you go, carry grain to your home and bring your youngest brother to me; so shall your words be verified, and you shall not die."

Joseph seems to have developed his little play to draw them out, as time went on. And the plan proved a success. He lingered near and overheard them saying among themselves in the dear language of his boyhood:

"We are, indeed, guilty about our brother, for we saw the anguish of his soul when he besought us, and we would not hear. Therefore this distress has come upon us."

And Reuben answered them, "Didn't I tell you, 'Do not sin against the child,' and you would not hear? Now, you see, his blood is required of us all."

Reuben had said, "I told you so!" so long that he had made himself believe that he had struggled harder to save Joseph that day long ago than he ever did.

And Joseph turned away from them and wept, and he returned to them and spoke to them, and took Simeon from among them, and bound him before their eyes. Then Joseph commanded that their bags should be filled with grain, to put every man's money back into his grain sack, and to give them provisions for the long journey home. And all this was done.

On their way home one of the brothers found his money in the top of his bag of grain.

And he said to his brothers, "My money is restored, look, it is now in my sack." And their hearts failed them, and they turned trembling to one another, saying, "What is this that God has done to us?"

And they came home to their father and told him all that had befallen them, saying:

"The man, the lord of the land, talked roughly to us, and took us for spies of the country. He said to us: 'Leave one of your brothers here with me and bring your youngest brother to me.'"

And it came to pass as they emptied their bags of grain that every man found his bundle of money, and when they and their father saw the bundles of money, they were afraid. And their father said to them:

"You have bereaved me of my children; Joseph is gone and Simeon is not here, and now you want to take Benjamin, too; everything is going against me."

Then Reuben said to his father, "Kill my two sons if I do not bring him back to thee; put him in my care, and I will bring him back."

And he said: "My son shall not go down with you; for his brother is dead, and he only is left; if anything should happen to him by the way in which you go, you would bring down my gray hairs with sorrow to the grave."

Still Israel would not let the "son of his right hand" go away. He clung to the lad with the grip of despair. Reuben's appeal did not move him in the least, for Reuben was ever unstable—"boiling over like water," with bad impulses as well as good. Besides, what father's heart could have been moved to slay his own grandsons, as Reuben had offered! But time went on and the hideous spectre of death haunted them all. At last the doting father was made to see that Benjamin and all the rest would starve to death if he did not yield. They all gathered around with their wives and little ones, in one last attempt to induce him to relent.

Judah, the sordid and calculating, had been chastened by the experiences of the past twenty years, and was now the leader among the brothers. Stepping forward, he addressed his aged father in these words:

"The man did solemnly protest to us, saying, 'You shall not see my face unless your brother comes with you.' If thou wilt send our brother with us, we will go down and buy thee food; but if thou wilt not send him, we will not go down."

And Israel said: "Why did you treat me so badly as to tell the man that you had another brother?"

And they said: "The man questioned us strictly about ourselves, and all the family, saying: 'Is your father yet alive?' 'Have you another brother?' and we told him. How could we know he would say, 'Bring your brother down'?"

And Judah said to his father: "Send the lad with me, and we will get ready and go; that we may live and not die, both we, and thou, and our little ones also. I will be responsible for him; if I do not bring him back to thee, then let me bear the blame forever, for if we had not delayed so long we might now have returned home a second time."

And their father said: "If it be so now, do this; take of the choice fruits of the land in your vessels, and carry down the man a present, a little balm, and a little honey, spicery and myrrh, pistachio nuts and almonds, and take double money in your hands, and the money that was returned in the top of your sacks, carry again in your hands; perhaps it was overlooked; take your brother, also, get ready and go again to the man: and God Almighty give you mercy before the man, that he may release to you your other brother and Benjamin. And if I should be bereaved of my children, I should be bereaved indeed!"

And the men took the present, and double money, and Benjamin, and went down to Egypt.

"And he put them all together into prison for three days"

III

The Man of Egypt

WHEN Joseph saw Benjamin with the ten he could scarcely refrain from falling on the young man's neck, then and there, and telling the whole story. But the time for revealing himself had not yet come, so he restrained the hot impulse of his heart, and made no sign of knowing his own brothers. Turning to his steward he gave his orders:

"Invite all these men to dinner at my house today," he said, "and we will entertain them right royally. Let the man out of prison, and bring him in to dinner with the rest."

Then Joseph gave minute directions what to have, how to cook and serve the different dishes, in what order the men should be seated, and so on. If the steward were not already in his master's secret, he must have been astonished to have a gang of uncouth, bearded shepherds brought into his palace to dine in the same hall with these haughty Egyptians, to whom the very sight of whiskered shepherds was more disgusting than any eleven dirty, evil-smelling immigrants would be today in the house of the most fastidious family. Aside from the disgust the Egyptians felt at the sight of the shepherds, their occupation was offensive in the extreme and their practice of killing and eating certain animals held sacred in Egypt was an abomination, about as cannibalism is considered by civilized nations to-day.

Besides, the brothers had never eaten or slept in a house of any kind in their lives, and would be as awkward and embarrassed as a gang of tramps dining with a royal family. If

Continued on page 733

Finding Hidden Treasure*

Sunday School Lesson by Dr. and Mrs. Wilbur F. Crafts

A Hidden Bible Found

KING JOSIAH for the first time saw a Bible when he was twenty-six years old. It was a musty looking object, for it was found in a dark corner of the temple when the men were cleaning out the idols by the command of the king. It had not been thrown aside, but it was found carefully concealed. No one knows how long it had been hidden. We must believe that some lover of the Bible had put it there to keep it from being destroyed by an idol-worshiping king. In appearance it was very different from any Bible we have ever seen. It had neither pages nor cover, but was written on a long strip of prepared leather, called "parchment," and it was rolled up, being fastened at either end to rods or rollers. Let us open our Bibles at the very beginning, and turn the leaves until we come to the end of the book of Deuteronomy. The old Bible certainly had no more than that in it. It may have had only parts of the book of Deuteronomy, chapters 5 to 26, and also chapter 28. Even in that long ago time, B.C. 621, it was a very old Bible, for it had been written by the hand of Moses more than eight hundred years before. It had without doubt been one of the chief treasures of the temple, and had been kept in the Ark of the Covenant. We are not told whose faithful hand had hidden it away to keep it from being destroyed. But we are told who found it: Hilkiah the high priest, whom King Josiah had appointed to take care of the money which the people brought to pay for having God's temple cleansed of the idol filth and made ready for the worship of God. We are told the name of the man to whom Hilkiah first showed the old Bible: to Shaphan the scribe. Hilkiah now saw that Shaphan would know more about the old Bible than any one else, because it was his business to copy the words of God, for there was then no printing. Then it was arranged that Shaphan should take the old Bible to King Josiah. Of course, King Josiah wanted to hear it read, and Shaphan read it all, or in part, to him, all about the ways God expected his people to obey him, and what sorrowful punishment they should have for not obeying him. King Josiah now knew, as he never knew before, how evil he and his people were in God's sight, and he was so filled with sorrow that he tore his beautiful cloak from the neck down the front (a usual sign of grief). Though the book was so old, it was all so new to King Josiah that he wanted to know more about it, so he sent the high priest Hilkiah and Shaphan, and others with them, to a very wise woman named Huldah, who was a prophetess of God. Now God had already told Huldah what to say, that they might tell the king. It was this: that because the people had turned from the worship of the true God, and had worshiped idols, they should be punished as Shaphan had read in the old Bible, even that they should be conquered by an army and taken away to a strange land. God said to Huldah: "Tell King Josiah that because his heart is right in God's sight, and because he has shown so much sorrow for all of the wrongdoing, the punishment of the people shall not come while he is king, but after he is dead. Then Josiah, good king that he was, had his people come together, and he stood upon a high place between the pillars of the temple, and read out of the old Bible to them, hoping to make them stop their wrongdoing, so that God would forgive them. Perhaps some of them did stop, but not many. As long as he lived—thirteen years longer—King Josiah tried to teach his people out of the old Bible that they must serve God and him only.

A Bible for King George V.

Let us put in contrast with this sad story a recent event in the life of King George V. of Great Britain. To commemorate the tercentenary of the Authorized Version—King James Version—a large deputation waited upon His Majesty and presented him with a specially bound Bible. It was bound in purple velvet, with silver clasps, corner-pieces, and two oval centre-pieces; on one of these centre-pieces appear the coat-of-arms of King George V. and the coat-of-arms of James I. The binding has been copied from an old book, which once belonged to King James, and is now in the British Museum. The king in receiving the Bible, said: "It has given me sincere pleasure to receive this deputation, and to learn that it represents the joint celebration by the English-speaking peoples of the issue in 1611 of that world-famous translation of the Bible in our tongue, which has ever since been known as the Authorized Version. The happily chosen words of the address which Your Grace has read bring home to us all the profound importance of that event. The labors of the translators, and of my ancestor, King James I., who directed and watched over their undertaking, deserve to be held in lasting honor. This glorious and memorable achievement, coming like a broad light in darkness, gave freely to the whole English people the right and power to search for themselves for the truths and consolations of our faith; and during three hundred years, the multiplying millions of the English-speaking races, spreading ever more widely over the surface of the globe, have turned in their need to the grand simplicity of the Authorized Version, and have drawn upon its inexhaustible springs of wisdom, courage and joy. It is my confident hope that my subjects may never cease to cherish their noble inheritance of the English Bible, which in a secular aspect is the first of national treasures, and is, as you truly say, in its spiritual significance, the most valuable thing which this world affords."

Another King's Bible

Emperor William expressed himself thus about the Bible: "I like reading the Bible often, the Bible which lies on the table at my bedside, and in which I have underscored the most beautiful thoughts. I cannot understand why so many people occupy themselves so little with the Word of God. Who, on reading the Gospels and other passages, is not impressed by the simple, living, proven and attested truth? How could Christ have otherwise set his stamp upon the world? In all my thoughts and actions I ask myself what the Bible says about the matter. For me it is a fountain from which I draw strength and light. In the hours of uncertainty and anxiety I turn to this great source of consolation."

The Soul's Guide-post

"I only buy useful things; what is that book for?" said a French peasant to whom a colporteur sought to sell a copy of the New Testament.

"What is a sign-post good for?" queried the man.

"To tell the way."

"Quite so. That is the use of the New Testament. The first directs the body, the second directs the soul."

The peasant purchased a copy at once.

It does not kill a Bible to bury it. Very much alive was the Bible which Hilkiah uncovered in the temple at

Continued on next page

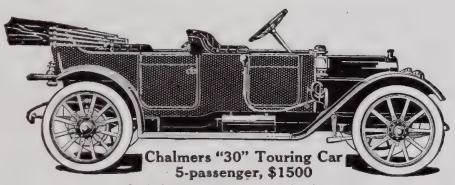
* The International Sunday School Lesson for July 30, 1911. The Finding of the Book of the Law. II. Chron. 34: 14-33. GOLDEN TEXT: "Thy word have I hid in my heart, that I might not sin against thee." Ps. 119: 11.

This monogram on the radiator stands for all you can ask in a motor car

You Can Now Buy the Famous Chalmers "30" Fully Equipped—$1500

This 1912 car, at its new price, including full equipment and all the 1912 improvements, sets a new standard of motor car values.

Last year this car sold for $1750, equipped with magneto, gas lamps, top and windshield. Think of it this year—refined and improved in every possible way, with thoroughly ventilated fore-door bodies, inside control, magneto, gas lamps, Prest-O-Lite tank, and including also Chalmers mohair top and automatic windshield—for $1500!



Please remember that this is the sturdy car that was driven 208 miles a day for 100 days in succession; that made the trip from Denver to Mexico City; that has never been defeated in any sort of contest by a car of its own price and power; that holds the world's light car speed record; that won the hardest Glidden Tour ever held.

Remember that this car has given satisfactory service to 15,000 owners; that it is backed by an absolute guarantee for a year.

We really believe, whether you buy a Chalmers or not, it is worth your while to see the new cars.

We shall be very glad to send you our new catalog, and an introduction to our dealer nearest to you.

Chalmers Motor Company, Detroit, Mich.

Chalmers "30" Touring Car 5-passenger, $1500

Including magneto, gas and oil lamps, Prest-O-Lite tank, top, windshield, fore-doors, horn, tools. Made also as 4-passenger Torpedo, and Pony Tonneau and Torpedo Roadster.

DON'T PAY TWO PRICES

Save $18.00 to $22.00 on

HOOSIER RANGES AND HEATERS

Why not buy the best when you can buy them at such low, unheard-of Factory Prices? THIRTY DAYS FREE TRIAL BEFORE YOU BUY. Our new improvements absolutely surpass anything ever produced. SEND POSTAL TODAY FOR OUR FREE CATALOG AND PRICES.

Hoosier Steel

HOOSIER STOVE FACTORY 164 State St. Marion, Ind.

WE SHIP ON APPROVAL without a cent deposit, prepay the freight and allow 10 DAYS FREE TRIAL. IT ONLY COSTS one cent to learn our unheard of prices and marvelous offers on highest grade 1911 model bicycles.

FACTORY PRICES Do not buy a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone at any price until you write for our large Art Catalog and learn our wonderful proposition on first sample bicycle going to your town.

RIDER AGENTS everywhere are making big money exhibiting and selling our bicycles. We Sell cheaper than any other factory. TIRES, Coaster-Brake rear wheels, lamps, repairs and all sundries at half usual prices. Do Not Wait; write today for our special offer.

MEAD CYCLE CO., Dept. L-71 CHICAGO

DAISY FLY KILLER placed anywhere, attracts and kills all flies. Neat, clean, ornamental, convenient, cheap. Lasts all season. Made of metal, cannot spill or tip over, will not soil or injure anything. Guaranteed effective. Of all dealers or sent prepaid for 20 cents.

HAROLD SOMERS 150 DeKalb Ave. Brooklyn, N.Y.

THE "BEST" LIGHT

Gives 500 candle power. Casts no shadow. Costs 2 cents per week. Makes and burns its own gas. Over 200 styles. Every lamp warranted. No dirt. No odor. No grease. Agents wanted. Write for catalog, now.

THE BEST LIGHT CO. 3-70 E. 5th St., Canton, O.

AGENTS My Sanitary Coffee Maker produces pure, sweet coffee, needs no settler and never wears out. Saves coffee, money and health. Every wife buys at sight; new invention; exclusive territory. Send 15c. for 50c. size, postpaid.

DR. LYONS, 430 Day St., Pekin, Ill.

ZOBO THE MUSICAL WONDER. YOU CAN PLAY IT Without Learning. Sing into the mouthpiece. Zobo does the rest. For Home, Church and Sunday School Entertainments. Full information FREE on request.

STRAUSS MFG. CO., 355 Broadway, Dept. 19, New York

Learn Music At Home

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD offers a Music Simplifier which will enable you to play the piano or organ without a teacher, and

Without Any Outlay of Money

It is a series of simple lessons in the form of twenty-four charts bound in a book, showing a complete set of chords in all keys, both major and minor.

So Simple Anybody May Learn

You may not know one note from another, but you soon wonder how it all came to you so easily. Highest authorities approve this method.

How to Obtain it FREE

Get one of your friends who is not now a reader of the CHRISTIAN HERALD to subscribe for the CHRISTIAN HERALD for eight months for One Dollar. Send us the subscription, together with the dollar, and we will send you by mail, postpaid, the twelve lessons contained in the Music Simplifier, without cost to you.

If you have no desire to learn music, you can probably think of some friend who would be glad to have twelve lessons, and you will therefore be doing that friend a good turn by bringing our offer to his or her attention.

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD
Bible House, New York

Sunday School Lesson

Continued from preceding page

Jerusalem. Read publicly by King Josiah, it produced a great arousement, so that the Passover which followed was more largely attended than any ever held. The Bible can not be buried. God will always bring it to light.

In Madagascar seventy Bibles were buried at one time, strange to say, by the missionaries. This is the way it came about: In 1820 missionaries from England went to the Island of Madagascar. They were kindly received by the king, and some converts were made. Two of the missionaries began to translate the Bible into the Malagasy language. The New Testament was finished in 1825, and the Old Testament in 1828. The king died, and Queen Ranavalona I. became his successor. She was unfriendly to the missionaries, and in 1835 issued an edict against Christianity, and making the possession of Christian books punishable by death. The missionaries had to leave, but before they left, they buried seventy copies of the Bible, and stored in several places boxes of New Testaments, the Psalms, and other portions. The Malagasy Christians possessed themselves of all these in great risk of their lives, and passed them from hand to hand, and the result was that after the persecution was ended, and the missionaries returned to the island, the little band of Malagasy Christians had increased from 200 to over 2,000. The Malagasy Bible had been its own missionary! One of those old Bibles is now to be seen in the library of the British and Foreign Bible Society.

Hidden Bibles in Our Own Land

Where? In the hearts of those who love God—hidden there that they may grow unto all good works. The more of the Bible we have in our hearts, the better Christians we shall be. Bible Christians are sure to wear well. In order to be a Bible Christian you must:

Buy a Bible—own one.

Investigate the Bible—read and study it daily.

Believe the Bible—trust its every word.

Love the Bible—love it as a friend.

Exemplify the Bible—live according to its teaching.

Hints for Teachers of Young Children

Show Bibles of different sizes, from a very small one to the large family Bible. Let the children tell which size they have in their homes. Tell them that, whether large or small, all Bibles have the same words of God in them; the very small Bible has as many words as the very large one. Ask them to tell, if they can, what makes the difference in size, and they will probably say that some have larger letters than others. Possibly some of the children may have Bibles of their very own; if so, let them tell who gave the Bibles to them. Perhaps the teacher may know of some story like the following to tell: A grandmother with beautiful white hair was going away to another city to live. She went to her room, and got a very large Bible, full of beautiful pictures, one she had read many years. She called her little granddaughter, only three years and a half old, and gave the Bible to her to keep and it made the little girl very happy. Get the children to tell what they think such a little girl could do with a big Bible. Then let the story be told of how the young King Josiah became possessed of the old, old Bible, the Bible which had been one of the treasures of God's house.

ANY READERS OF THE CHRISTIAN HERALD having correspondence and other biographical material of interest and value concerning the late Rev. Arthur T. Pierson are requested to communicate with his son, Rev. D. L. Pierson, 44-60 East Twenty-third Street, New York, who is now engaged in the preparation of his father's biography.

Answered Prayers

W. R., Gridley, Ill. "God has answered my prayer."

Mrs. O. H., Saegerstown, Pa., thanks God for answers to prayers.

Reader, North Dakota. "God heard my prayer and answered it."

L. M. G. F., Milwaukee, Wis. "I thank God for restoring me to health."

C. R., Pennsylvania, acknowledges God's goodness in answering prayer.

Mrs. W. P. A., Old Fort, N. C. "God has answered many prayers for me."

M. H., Coatesville, Pa. "God has lately answered several prayers for me."

A. G., Courtland, Kan. "I thank God for a recent direct answer to prayer."

Mrs. M. K., Grayson, Va. "I prayed when in great distress and God delivered me."

L. J. W., Superior, Wis. "I give God the praise for my answered prayers."

Mrs. Z. W. S., Trumbull, Neb. "I thank God for granting a special request."

Reader, Saratoga Springs, N. Y. "I have been restored to health through prayer."

Mrs. S. Z. J., Mexhoma, Okla. "I wish to acknowledge God's answer to many prayers."

P. J. L., Halifax, Va. "I thank God for what he has done for me in answer to prayer."

Mrs. K. T. M., Toms Brook, Va. "I return thanks to my Saviour for an answered prayer."

Physicians to Royalty Endorse the Sovereign Food-Tonic

King Edward's Physician

Dr. Ernest Ott, Marienbad: "I have been using Sanatogen for a number of years in my practice with excellent results. These results have been notably good in the case of elderly people when it was desirable to build up the strength, to stimulate the bodily functions, and to improve the circulation of the blood."

The Czar of Russia's Private Physician

Dr. Ferehmin: "My daughter, who was very nervous and anæmic, has been greatly benefited by the prolonged use of Sanatogen. Her appetite improved, her weight increased, and the color of her skin became healthier."

The King of Italy's Physician

Dr. G. Quirico: "I have used Sanatogen with marked benefit in the case of weakly children, and in convalescence after long illnesses. I consider Sanatogen a most excellent tonic food."

HEALTH of the monarch is of national—even universal—importance. His care is one of the nation's heaviest responsibilities. His medical adviser is always a man of highest scientific attainments and strictest integrity, who endorses only those preparations which beyond a shadow of doubt are safe and beneficial.

Here is the written opinion of the physicians to six of Europe's most influential rulers upon that wonderful brain and body revitalizer—

Sanatogen
THE FOOD-TONIC

These eminent authorities endorse Sanatogen because their investigations have satisfied them that it is the scientific and worthy preparation for tired, worn-out nerves and debilitated, over-worked bodies—a wonderful source of strength and endurance. And their endorsement but voices the sentiments of more than 12,000 practising physicians the world over. Such proof must be conclusive that Sanatogen is the logical food-tonic for you.

The King of Saxony's Private Physician

Surgeon General Prof. Dr. Tillmanns: "I am, and shall always be, a great admirer of Sanatogen."

The Late Emperor Frederick's Private Physician

Professor Tobold, M.D.: "My experience points to the fact that patients suffering from nervous exhaustion after influenza, a common occurrence, and who present the troublesome symptoms of neurasthenia, by using Sanatogen, in a comparatively short time regain strength and vitality."

Emperor of Austria's Private Physician

Surgeon General Dr. Kerzl, of Vienna: "I have been using Sanatogen with splendid results and recommend it continually and everywhere because I am thoroughly convinced that it is an excellent food-tonic."

Write for a free copy of "Our Nerves of To-morrow"

Written by a prominent physician-author—brimful of real information interestingly given regarding your nervous system. It bears a message of hope to those threatened with nervous breakdown and wise counsel to men and women who, because of their vocation, are compelled to overwork. Write for a free copy to-day.

If not obtainable at your druggist's, sent prepaid upon receipt of price.

In three sizes: $1.00, $1.90 and $3.60

THE BAUER CHEMICAL COMPANY, Everett Building, 4th Ave., New York

Six Extra Christian Heralds

IT IS a long time since we have received a communication from any of our subscribers on account of the amount of advertising which appears in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD. Time was when our friends thought it necessary to remonstrate with us for carrying advertising in our columns; but when we explained just what benefit our readers received from this advertising, the comments ceased.

As a matter of fact there never has been a time when the character of the advertising in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD was on so high a plane as it is to-day. This is of course the result of the constant scrutiny which is given each advertisement before it is accepted for insertion in our columns.

But more interesting than this is the direct benefit which the advertising has been even to those among our readers who haven't patronized our advertisers. As we have stated many times, the amount of reading matter which we are enabled to print in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD depends to a large extent upon the amount of advertising. For instance, whereas during the year ending with June, 1909, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD contained 3,278 columns of reading matter, yet during the year ending June 1, 1911, we printed 3,594 columns of reading matter—an increase in our reading matter of 316 columns or 79 pages. Now think what this means. We were enabled to give our readers during the last twelve months the equivalent of six extra CHRISTIAN HERALDS as far as reading matter is concerned, equal in number of words to two volumes as large as the Life-Work of Dr. Klopsch. This we were enabled to do because of the increased amount of advertising.

Whenever any of our subscribers is defrauded by an advertiser in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD we will make good the claim, provided that the subscriber, who must be of record, has mentioned THE CHRISTIAN HERALD in writing to the advertiser, and provided the claim is made to us within two months of the date of the appearance of the advertisement. This guarantee does not apply to investment advertisements.

YOUR PHYSICIAN
will tell you that
Sani-Tissue

¶ It is the Best Toilet Paper because it is Soothing and Healing.
¶ It is composed of long vegetable fibre which gives it a cloth-like texture and its treatment with Canada balsam and other emollients makes it the only strictly sanitary, hygienic and soft paper.
¶ Each roll is carefully wrapped in parchment excluding germs and gritty dust.

3 Rolls in a Carton for 25c.

at your Dealer's, or if he does not have it, send us his name, and we will send you a sample pocket packet FREE.

SCOTT PAPER COMPANY
662 Glenwood Ave., Philadelphia
Makers of "Scot-Tissue" Towels. Sc Waldorf Toilet Paper, and other Hygienic Paper products.

Linene COLLARS CUFFS AND BOSOMS

For Travelling

Linene collars are invaluable. They may be thrown away when soiled. Both sides being finished alike they may be first reversed and two wearings secured for the price of a single collar. Try them the next time you travel.

10 collars for 25 cents at the stores, or by mail 30 cents in U. S. stamps. Sample by mail for 6 cents.

STATE SIZE AND STYLE

REVERSIBLE COLLAR COMPANY
Dept. T, Boston, Mass.

RAPHAEL TASSO RUBENS ANGELO

PATENTS SECURED OR FEE RETURNED.
Free report as to Patentability. Illustrated Guide Book, and List of Inventions Wanted, sent free.
VICTOR J. EVANS & CO., Washington, D. C.

THE STORY OF JOSEPH

Continued from page 730

ver a man in altered circumstances ad a right to be ashamed of his fam- y, or an excuse for not introducing hem among his new acquaintances, hat man was Joseph, Viceroy of gypt. In spite of his brothers' icked treatment of him, his heart lways turned toward his humble ome.

When Joseph's steward, who must ave had a shrewd idea of the men's elationship to his master, gave them he invitation to dinner they were lled with fear, and asked one another hat this strange turn of affairs could ean. They were afraid the viceroy's alace would become their prison. Yet hey dared not refuse. They looked t one another in dismay and came nd prostrated themselves before the teward, protesting: "Oh, my lord, we ruly came down at the first time to uy food. We know not who put our oney back in our sacks."

But the good steward laughed at heir fears and said, reassuringly:

"Do not worry about that—do not e afraid. Your God and the God of our father gave you the treasure in our sacks. I received your money."

And he brought Simeon out to them, nd showed the men into Joseph's ouse, and gave them water, and they vashed their feet. And he gave their onkeys fodder. And they got the resent ready for Joseph's coming at oon.

The eleven brothers had quite a amily reunion while waiting the ar- ival of "the Man," as they had called im so many times in speaking of him t home, with their father's gift of istachio nuts and almonds, spices and intments, which the home country ould produce even in a time of famine. Of course, they told Simeon the story f their money so strangely returned; f the delay caused by their father's efusal to let them bring Benjamin lown with them, and of Judah's pledg- ng himself as a surety for the young nan's safe return, before their father gave his consent. And Simeon had a good opportunity to tell them that his ear or more in prison had not been nearly so hard as he expected, for "the Man" had given orders that he should be treated kindly.

All this time their wondering eyes roamed about the spacious hall. The palace was built of huge blocks of stone; the massive pillars were fluted and carved with lotus leaves and blos- soms; the walls were frescoed with scenes from Egyptian mythology, done in deep, rich colors, and much over- laying of gold; the stone floors were covered with thick Oriental rugs, much like those in use at the present day. The heavy, carved tables were loaded with dishes of silver, gold and crystal. One of these tables was set for them, and another for the Egyptians of Joseph's court. A special place was reserved on a raised floor or dais, com- manding a view of the long dining hall. This table was for the Grand Vizier himself, as became his rank and high official station. Those eleven pairs of Hebrew eyes had never be- held such splendor. Their taste and experience were too limited to appre- ciate it all.

At last there was a great commo- tion in the street. Official runners in bright uniforms stopped in front of the palace, shouting, "Abrech!"—"Abrech!" "Kneel!"—"Kneel!"—and a splendid chariot, drawn by many richly harnessed horses, came dashing up and stopped for the Viceroy of Egypt to descend before his own resi- dence among the kneeling populace. This magnificent arrival disconcerted the simple shepherds so much that they trembled and could scarcely arti- culate when they came clumsily for- ward to offer their father's modest present, and bowed down to the ground before him.

"Here are the whole eleven," ob- served Joseph to himself; "now the dream of the sheaves is fulfilled."

And he asked them of their welfare, and said, "Is your father well—the old man of whom you spoke? Is he still living?"

And they said, "Our father is well —he is still alive." And they bowed the head and made obeisance.

And he raised his eyes and saw Benjamin, his mother's son, and said, "Is this your youngest brother, of whom you told me?"

He seemed to understand their as- sent without the aid of the interpreter. After a little hesitancy, for he ap- parently found it difficult to express himself, the viceroy looked kindly to- ward Benjamin and said:

"God be gracious to thee, my son."

Then with a strange abruptness, he turned his back to them. And Joseph made haste; for his heart yearned over his brother. And he found a place to weep; and he went into his chamber and wept there. Prostrating himself, face downward, upon the bed in his own room, the viceroy shook with sobs, giving vent to his pent-up emotions; after a while he calmed him- self, arose, and washed his face, red and swollen with weeping. As soon as he thought he had removed all the traces of his tears, he came out into the dining hall again and gave the signal to serve the dinner. And they set a table for him by himself, and another for them by themselves, and others for the Egyptians that did eat with him, by themselves; because the Egyptians would not eat bread with the Hebrews, for that is an abomina- tion to the Egyptians.

When Reuben, Simeon, Levi, Judah, and all the eleven saw that they were assigned to seats at their table in the exact order of their births they mar- veled greatly, for they were now midd- le-aged and even older, and the differ- ence of a year or two in their ages could not be told by their appearance. They concluded that their entertainer, or some one in his service, must be able to divine. They had heard that some Egyptian magicians could read the past and future in a divining cup. Perhaps that was a divining cup now before him on his table. That, then, must have been what the viceroy was doing when he stayed so long in his private room, after he left them so abruptly.

During the dinner their host showed his Hebrew guests many personal at- tentions, sending them specially pre- pared dishes from his own table. To their surprise many of them received their favorite portions of this meat or that dish. This was even more won- derful than the order in which they were seated at table. But to Ben- jamin, he sent the best of everything —and five times as much as each of the others had, to show him greater courtesy. From his place above them he could see their faces. If they were envious of Benjamin, as they had been of him, they would have shown it.

So far as he could observe, they were all kindly disposed toward Benjamin. They seemed to have profited by their bitter lesson.

As he sat there alone he asked him- self, "Have I been acting this part long enough? Shall I tell them to-day before they go home? No, they are here under strange and favorable cir- cumstances; their excitement and the novelty of the experience may keep them from expressing that which might have displeased them if it had happened at home. I must still find out, if I can, how they would treat Benjamin if he were shown in an un- pleasant light, as I was, before them all."

So he decided to add still another act to the little drama he had con- ceived. To be continued

COMFORT and EASE FOR TENDER FEET

For every woman who will wear WHITCOMB'S "FLEXSOLE" SHOES. The most comfortable shoe for women ever made. Soft, flexible, perfect-fitting and handsome. Very durable. No tacks. No Lining to wrinkle and hold moisture. No seams.

An Iowa woman writes: "First leather shoe I have been able to wear in 20 years."

A Pennsylvania woman writes: "Enclosed find order for a friend. My feet are cured entirely."

Perfect fit guaranteed or money refunded. We refer to any bank anywhere.

Prices: LACE, $3.00 BUTTON, $3.25 OXFORDS, $2.50 } Prepaid.

Send outline of foot and give size usually worn.

Can be bent double.

Eastern Shoe Co., 55 Broadway, Beverly, Mass. Agents Wanted Everywhere. Special Inducements.

5% A Safe Investment Is Best for Idle Money

IT is possible to earn 6, 8, and 10% in unusual enterprises. But it is better to be sure of a liberal percentage, without risking your capital. This Company has paid 5% per annum, compounded semi-annually for eighteen years, and deposits can be withdrawn upon short notice at any time.

Assets of Over $2,300,000

Deposits received personally or by mail. Our mail-certificate system of deposit prevents the possibility of loss of bank-book. Our patrons, situated in all parts of the world, are careful investors.

Write for Booklet

INDUSTRIAL SAVINGS & LOAN CO. NEW YORK CITY

Industrial Savings & Loan Co.
2 Times Bldg, B'way & 42d St., New York

ALL FOR 20¢

Three beautiful 12-inch LINEN Centerpieces, Holly, Eyelet and Daisy designs, 4 Doilies and our catalog showing over 600 designs of art embroidery goods and 70 different EMBROID'RY STITCHES. All delivered for 20 cts.

P. W. KELLER CO., Waterloo, Iowa

BLYMYER CHURCH BELLS.

UNLIKE OTHER BELLS SWEETER, MORE DURABLE, LOWER PRICE. OUR FREE CATALOGUE TELLS WHY.

Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

YOU CAN WRITE A SHORT STORY

Beginners learn thoroughly under our perfect method many sell their stories before completing the course. We help those who want to sell their stories. Write for particulars.

School of Short-Story Writing, Dept. 44, Page Bldg. Chicago

"THOU FOOL!"

And Eleven Other Remarkable Sermons Never Before Published

BY THE LATE EVANGELIST

DWIGHT L. MOODY

THESE TWELVE GREAT SERMONS are replete with the spiritual fire and vigor of Moody in the prime of his evangelistic ministry. They form a connected Series and will be welcomed with genuine satisfaction by all who love the Truth of the Gospel Message. They were discovered recently by Mr. Moody's old stenographer, the Rev. W. D. Bridge, in long-forgotten note-books, and their genuineness is vouched for by Mr. Moody's family. They bring the reader to the very foot of the Throne of Grace, and speak to the heart with a strange and irresistible power concerning our duty here and the joys of the life beyond.

Rev. F. B. Meyer called Moody the "Uncrowned King of Preachers; rugged, terse, full of mother-wit, direct and sharp as a two-edged sword." The secret of Moody's power is revealed in these twelve wonderful sermons, which come at this time as special messages to a world that needs to be stirred from its spiritual apathy and deadly indifference.

Thousands have been brought from darkness to spiritual light through Moody's sermons. In these newly-discovered discourses he seems to speak from his resting-place on Round Top, Northfield, with the voice of a prophet and to sound forth anew the wonders of God's love. His sermons have an inspiration and a spiritual uplift possessed by those of no other preacher or evangelist of this age.

These hitherto unknown Sermons are now published by THE CHRISTIAN HERALD and offered on terms easily within the reach of all. They make a compact volume of 240 pages, printed on good paper in a clear, legible type, easily read. The Book is bound in semi-flexible covers, with gold stamp on front. The following are the titles of this Wonderful Series of Sermons:

Thou Fool	The Soul-Winner	Excuses
Power For Service	Working for Christ	Invitation and Altar Service
How Backsliders May Return	Trust	The Gospel
How to Deal With Inquirers	Instantaneous Salvation	God's Promises

How to Obtain These Sermons FREE

You may obtain this volume FREE, and have in your house a means of constant inspiration, merely by pointing out the good qualities of the CHRISTIAN HERALD to your friends, and having one of them take a trial subscription. Send us 50 cents for a four months' New subscription (17 weeks) mailed to any address in the United States or Canada, and we will send you this remarkable volume without charging you one cent. Address,

CHRISTIAN HERALD, BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK

The Permanent and Safe Investment of Surplus Funds

The investment of funds should never be undertaken except with the advice of a conservative and reputable bond house. The value of the judgment of such a house, gained through long experience in handling a wide range of securities under varying conditions, is not to be underestimated by an investor. Bond houses of the type mentioned do not hesitate to give their clients their advice upon financial matters, affording a protection which can be secured in no other way.

The bonds we offer have been subjected to the most exhaustive legal examination by our attorneys, and the properties securing them have been investigated by our expert engineers, copies of legal opinions and engineers' reports being available at our offices at all times. In addition to furnishing every detail concerning the bonds we are handling, we shall be pleased upon request to consult with investors regarding other securities which they may hold or be interested in.

Since its organization this house has been uniformly successful. It handles bonds for investment purposes only—it does not handle stocks. It is at all times ready to give its clients the benefit of its counsel.

Correspondence is solicited.

Write to Dept. V for our latest circular, giving brief descriptions of water works, hydro-electric, traction and general public utility bonds we are now offering

To Yield from 5% to 6%

Our Municipal Department carries at all times many attractive County, City and School Bonds to yield from 3¾% to 4½%. Send for latest list.

J. S. & W. S. KUHN, Inc.

Bank for Savings Building, Pittsburgh, Pa.

CHICAGO PHILADELPHIA NEW YORK BOSTON

GUARANTEED MORTGAGES

for Large and Small Investors

You can now invest small sums in first-class mortgage bonds. You can have the same advantages which for hundreds of years capitalists alone have enjoyed. Whether you have $10 or $10,000 to invest, you can have the same security and the same returns. Send for our booklet on yielding 5% to 6%, with the guarantee of this Company and the big est class New York and Suburban Real Estate back of them. The safest, surest, most profitable investment for earnings consistent with absolute security.

FIRST MORTGAGE TRUST BONDS

Under Supervision of New York Banking Department

Write for Booklet.

NEW YORK MORTGAGE CO.

Dept. D, 1475 Broadway, New York City

ONE-THIRD OF A CENTURY OF SUCCESS

has attended the investment business of this Company. During the past eighteen years we have loaned for one institution between three and four millions of dollars in First Mortgage Farm Loans, and since 1878 many millions of dollars for other institutions—financial, educational and religious—besides hundreds of individual clients.

We have prepared a very attractive and readable booklet describing our methods and the high grade service we render investors.

Write for Booklet A, which will be sent you free of charge.

WELLS & DICKEY COMPANY

Established 1878. Capital and Surplus $700,000.00

SECURITY BANK BUILDING - MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

Thrift's Retired Pensions

IT IS difficult to impress on the child the importance of knowledge, or at least the reason, the necessity for a study that is always difficult and usually meaningless. It is quite as difficult to impress on the young the necessity for accumulating through self-denial, and this difficulty is increased rather than lessened with increasing years.

What is the good of all this education? is a question often asked in one form or another by the young. Why should I deny myself by saving? is a question often asked, even by advanced scholars in thrift's school. This question is usually followed by another: "As I have only once to live, why shouldn't I enjoy life while it lasts?" Why not, indeed? But it is to point out, as best we may, the sanest way of enjoying life at its best that these articles are being thought out and published.

The Purpose of Thrift

Conceding that one has advanced, through training in thrift, to what we shall regard as the first high school class, without appreciating the value of this training to himself, it may be well to point out just here the two purposes of all such acquisition. There is first the saving and accumulation of money for its own sake, which implies the meanness and the methods of the miser, and which we do not propose to discuss at this or at any other time. The second, and only legitimate, purpose of this training is personal independence, and the fulfilment of our duty to those to whom we are bound by natural ties.

The man who is in debt cannot be independent, and therefore cannot enjoy life in the present; but there is more than the life of to-day to give thought to if this personal independence is to continue. Next to meeting the obligations of the present, which are forever knocking at our doors, there are the equally important, if not equally pressing, demands of the future to consider.

One of the most important lessons taught in the schools of thrift is the absolute necessity of providing for the unproductive days of old age, and this lesson should be repeated oftener and with more and more emphasis as the education proceeds. On every hand we see admirable illustrations of saving through a wholesome self-denial, which means that the effort costs no sacrifice of honest needs, or a proper enjoyment of the present. It is when we come to examine the ways in which so much of this saving is invested, and see the disappointments and wrecks that follow, that we realize how impractical has been the training and how useless has been the self-denial.

We pointed out in a former article that hundreds of millions, some authorities place the sum at billions, have been lost in the last ten years through an insane credulity in the representations of banded criminals who have used the newspaper, and still more the post office, for the exploitation of their schemes for plundering the unwary. Fortunately the post office authorities are warring on these criminals, and still more fortunately the masses with savings to invest are getting their eyes open.

Looking to the Future

"But," it may very properly be asked, "how is the average man or woman, unacquainted with the tricks of schemers, or even with the methods of honest financiers, to provide for old age through a safe and at the same time remunerative investment of savings?" To this we answer: There are many ways. To these we shall refer in turn from time to time, but one comes to mind as we write that is sufficiently worth while to warrant our giving the rest of this article to its consideration. It is Life Insurance.

At mention of life insurance, I can imagine some reader exclaiming: "That's a game where one has to die to win, and then he wins for his heirs. What provision does such a plan offer for the unproductive days of old age, of which you have been speaking?" If there were no choice in this, and one had to take the old, straight life policy or nothing, this objection would hold good. But life insurance has developed into a great science, and while the straight life is still resorted to as a wise provision for the dependent family, the old methods have been so modified for the better that to-day it presents provisions as a protection against old age that are well worth considering. This insurance may provide a fixed yearly income at a certain age and after a prescribed number of payments; the income to continue during life, or if death should come before the period for drawing the income, there is a prearranged sum that is paid by the company to the estate of the deceased, or the income may be continued to them for some time.

One advantage of this form of investment is that it can be so arranged that the payments may cease, and the returns come in while the productive powers of the insured are still unweakened. While these annuities are reckoned by the companies at so much a year, arrangements can be made for monthly payments, no matter how far the payee may be from the home office. So, too, during the period of payment by the insured, the policies can be kept alive by monthly payments, instead of yearly as formerly, and this has been found a great help to wage-earners, as well as to the many on small salaries who receive their pay monthly.

In some countries old age pensions exist in some form, but in a few, notably England, the old age pension is another and more acceptable form of poor-house or parish relief. In New Zealand this form of assistance is administered not as a charity, but as a right of the recipient.

Pension Yourself

Independence and self-respect must go hand in hand. It is eminently proper that the State, if need be, should care for the honest aged who have given their productive years to its upbuilding, but it is far better for the self-respecting to become their own pensioners, and to demand as a right what they have contracted for, instead of receiving what, in any other form, they must regard as a charity.

There is a form of policy, known as the "Endowment," whereby the insured after paying for ten, twenty or any number of years agreed on, is paid the full sum at the end of the period, or if he should die before the time agreed on his heirs get the full value of the policy. In many cases the endowment policy has great advantages, but where the money is looked forward to as a provision for old age, it may defeat the purpose intended.

If a man of sixty gets a payment of two thousand dollars on an expired endowment, what should he do with it? It will pay him, if deposited in a savings bank, eighty dollars a year. He cannot live on that sum, and, unless he has other resources, he must draw on his principal; and this, if four hundred dollars a year be required for the living, will be gone before the owner is sixty-five, the very period when his decreasing power for work will become as manifest to himself as it has been for some time to his friends.

However, life insurance as an investment is growing in popularity, as shown by the fact that $381,440,000 worth of death claims were paid in the United States and Canada during 1910. The beneficiaries were among the rich and poor alike and the policies ranged from less than one hundred dollars to more than $500,000.

Investments

This Company suggests to careful investors the advisability of dividing their funds among bonds of various classes, in this way obtaining a well diversified investment. Made in this manner, an investment will possess the individual qualities of the respective classes in combination, thus making it well balanced. For instance, we own and offer a 5% railroad bond, a 6% short term note, a 4½% equipment bond, and a 6% industrial bond netting at present prices

An Average Yield of Over 5.35%

We will furnish particulars of these on request.

Ask for our Circular 142

Guaranty Trust Company

of New York

28 Nassau Street

Capital and Surplus - - $23,000,000

Deposits - - - $163,000,000.00

Do You Want Your Money to Earn 5%

To be amply secured at all times from possibility of loss—

And to be where you can get it on demand any time you may need it?

You can open an account with this Company with any amount from $25 to $5000. You can add to it at your convenience or withdraw as you wish.

It will earn 5 per cent. for every day that it is in our hands.

It will be amply protected by first mortgages on improved real estate and will be in the hands of an institution that in sixteen years has never been a day late in the payment of either principal or interest.

Ask for the booklet telling all about it.

The Calvert Mortgage & Deposit Co.

1046 Calvert Building, Baltimore, Md.

6% NET INTEREST

and the best security in the world!

Principal and interest secured by select Mortgages on Pittsburg Preferred Real Estate

Amounts of any size ($25, $50, $100, $200 or multiples) can be invested, temporarily or permanently. Your money available when wanted. Endorsed by highest financial authorities everywhere.

Our Booklet explains how 6% Interest is possible on such preferred securities.

If your Savings, or any other money, is drawing less than 6%, read our booklet. Copy free on request.

A. C. LESLIE CO.

Suite 117, Bakewell Law Building, PITTSBURG, PA.

TYPEWRITERS ALL MAKES

VISIBLE WRITERS or otherwise

L. S. SMITHS, OLIVERS, UNDERWOODS, Etc.

¼ to ½ M'F'RS PRICES

Shipped ANYWHERE for Free Trial, or RENTED allowing Rent to APPLY

PRICES $15.00 UP

First class Machines Fresh from the M'f'rs—Write for Illustrated Catalog

Typewriter Emporium, (EST. 1892) 92-94 LAKE ST., CHICAGO

PATENTS That Protect and Pay

Advice and Books FREE.

Rates Reasonable. Highest References. Best Services.

WATSON E. COLEMAN, Patent Lawyer, WASHINGTON, D.C.

Young People's Societies

An Upward Way*

FREQUENT self-examination used to be advised by our preachers and religious writers, but in these latter days much more stress has been laid upon altruism. To forget one's self in labor for others, seems to be the watchword of this generation.

And yet we must sometimes "tumble up and down our chests, and see what we have there," as George Herbert says. Suddenly we may find that we are far afield from the right path, unless we watch ourselves closely.

Thus an excellent woman was one day ill and her doctor prescribed for her a spoonful of an intoxicating beverage. Some months later she told a friend that she had found this medicine so efficacious that she was using it for everything.

"Why," said the horrified friend, "you will become a drunkard if you do not look out."

"How absurd!" laughed the lady. "I use it only as medicine."

"Many drunkards begin their downward career that way," said her friend seriously.

The thoughtless woman confessed later that these words so impressed her that she stopped using the "medicine," and was amazed to find that she had already acquired such a taste for it that she missed it and had to use much strength of will in order to refrain from it. Unless we examine ourselves sometimes our feet may get so far started down the path to destruction that we cannot turn back.

The faith which we often see in mature Christians is seldom so strong in youth. The higher Christian graces increase and become a habit only by long and earnest practice. We do not need to worry over them nor search far and near for ways to acquire them. By the simple doing of duty every day, by humble prayer, by gratitude to God, and dependence on him, the virtues develop within us and we move upward.

Phillips Brooks wrote: "Be sure that God has so much more for the soul as it goes on, becoming richer and richer; that each new relationship of the soul with God is not merely a sign of thankfulness for that which is past, but a new opening of our nature, into which God shall pour more and more of himself. In each new consecration some new gift becomes possible, and for that new gift some new consecration becomes necessary, and in that new consecration comes some new gift. So the soul goes on entering into God, and receiving God unto himself."

This is one of the greatest compensations for the losses and trials which form our heaven-sent discipline here below. Every grief, if taken in a proper spirit—the spirit of patience—truly begets godliness, as the apostle tells us. Then from this loving spirit of godliness, the fruit usually of suffering, arises the capacity for sympathy, which the apostle calls "brotherly kindness." The man who has not felt the pangs of loss cannot enter fully into his neighbor's mourning. We should never know the full measure of sweet sympathy if it were not for this, and yet some of our newer sects deny the existence of sorrow and will not give way to it, though otherwise the greatest Christian graces can hardly be born in our hearts.

And as they come, one by one, noiselessly and imperceptibly, they furnish us, as it were, with wings which carry us near to the Source of all good. A great poet has voiced it in these words:

> What is left us save, in growth
> Of soul, to rise up far past both—
> From the gift looking to the Giver,
> And from the cistern to the river,
> And from the finite to Infinity,
> And from man's dust to God's divinity?

*Topic of the Epworth League for Sunday, July 30. TEXTS: II. Peter 1: 5-8; Heb. 6: 1.

Burma and India*

"I CAN still hear," said the sainted Mrs. Baldwin, a short time before her death in this country, "the wails and the anguish of the child-wives of India and the miserable sobs of her widows. One who has not seen them can appreciate how pitiable and deplorable is their condition and what an outrage it is upon modern civilization.

Every one of us should be doing something to alleviate the sufferings of these unfortunate creatures. If we cannot go ourselves to give them personal service, we can at least contribute our mite to the support of a missionary who does give that service.

Perhaps a single story may throw more light on the sort of work our missionaries are doing than would any mass of statistics. Here is a true incident, taken from the account of Mr. E. A. Powell:

It was during the cholera epidemic of 1909 that Miss Annie Budden, a girl missionary among the Himalayan foothills, found to her dismay that the dread disease had invaded her mountain station. The instant it was discovered, the European residents and all the native officials fled in terror. They begged her to go, too, but her sense of duty would not let her.

"The only way to save my people," she said, "is to move them up to that higher mountain."

It was twelve miles away. There were several scores to be moved, most of them women and children, but she managed to move them all, to provide canvas coverings for them, to establish proper sanitary conditions, and to minister to the sick; for the village doctor had run away and had "left his job" with her.

Suddenly she was sent for to treat a very sick woman twenty miles away. The coolies had all fled, but she found an Indian pony and rode six hours alone through the torrid heat till she reached the woman's home. It was too late. She was dead. There were no men to be found, but a few Christian women lived in the neighborhood, and they helped Miss Budden to carry the body to the outskirts of the village and dig a grave. At noon, the brave young missionary read the burial service there; then she started for her own camp.

She had gone but eight miles when a snake frightened her horse and she was thrown off. He ran away and she walked the remaining twelve miles. At nightfall she was with her own people again, but only to find that one of her women had died during her absence. Immediately another burying squad had to be organized, and with her own hands she helped to lay her poor friend in the grave. But this was the only death that occurred among her people, and she was able to conduct them all back to their homes when the danger had passed.

In southern India, the average duration of life is twenty-four years, against nearly forty-four in England. The great mass of the natives are passive, submissive, fatalistic.

"We are a subject race," said Protap Chunder Mozoomdar. "We are uneducated. We are incapable."

Imagine the difficulties of working among such people—and yet, when asked in America what were the "discouragements" in the missionary work, Dr. John Scudder, (founder of the Ascot mission, where eight of his sons and many of his grandchildren have done a noble work) replied, "I do not know the word. I long ago erased it from my vocabulary."

That was the spirit which animated the saintly Carey, Judson, Boardman, Vinton, Thoburn, and others. Read their lives and you will be inspired as you never were before.

*Christian Endeavor Topic for Sunday, July 30. TEXT: Acts 17 : 16-31.

Around The World On Post Cards

TAKE a Picture Trip FREE and visit famous historical scenes, great buildings, beautiful scenery and unique people of different countries without leaving your own fireside. A novel way to entertain friends.

Starting with New York the cards take you across the continent, stopping on the way at the great cities, through Yellowstone Park, the Canadian Rockies, across the Pacific, and so on around the world. There are views of Manila, Honolulu, Shanghai, Australia, India, Jerusalem, Morocco, Egypt, and many countries in Europe—Fifty Cards in all.

On the reverse sides are short histories of the features pictured. Printed in colors and shipped carefully packed in a mailing carton, and we guarantee them all to be in perfect condition when received.

Think of having in your home the means of viewing the important places of the world without ever moving from your fireside!

How to Obtain these Cards and Take these Trips FREE

You may obtain these cards FREE, and have in your house a means of constant entertainment, merely by pointing out the good qualities of the CHRISTIAN HERALD to your friends, and having one of them take a trial subscription. Get only one of your friends to send us fifty cents for a four months' new subscription (17 weeks), mailed to any address in the United States or Canada, and we will send you a complete set of these Around the World Post Cards without charging you one cent. Address:

CHRISTIAN HERALD, Bible House, New York

A SPOON SHAKER

Straight From Coffeedom

Coffee can marshall a good squadron of enemies and some very hard ones to overcome. A lady in Florida writes:

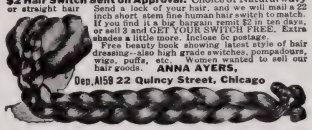
"I have always been very fond of good coffee, and for years drank it at least three times a day. At last, however, I found that it was injuring me.

"I became bilious, subject to frequent and violent headaches, and so very nervous, that I could not lift a spoon to my mouth without spilling a part of its contents.

"My heart got 'rickety' and beat so fast and so hard that I could scarcely breathe, while my skin got thick and dingy, with yellow blotches on my face, caused by the condition of my liver and blood.

"I made up my mind that all these afflictions came from the coffee, and I determined to experiment and see.

"So I quit coffee and got a package of Postum which furnished my hot morning beverage. After a little time I was rewarded by a complete restoration of my health in every respect.



"I do not suffer from biliousness any more, my headaches have disappeared, my nerves are as steady as could be desired, my heart beats regularly and my complexion has cleared up beautifully—the blotches have been wiped out and it is such a pleasure to be well again."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

I TRUST YOU TEN DAYS. SEND NO MONEY.
$2 Hair Switch Sent on Approval. Choice of Natural wavy or straight hair. Send a lock of your hair, and we will mail a 22 inch short stem fine human hair switch to match. If you find it a big bargain remit $2 in ten days, or sell 3 and GET YOUR SWITCH FREE. Extra shades a little more. Inclose 5c postage.
Free beauty book showing latest style of hair dressing—also high grade switches, pompadours, wigs, puffs, etc. Women wanted to sell our hair goods. ANNA AYERS,
Dep. A159 22 Quincy Street, Chicago

Amazing Profits
MADE IN MUSHROOMS
Easily grown entire year in cellars, sheds, barns, tents, etc., in spare time. I furnish cash buyers who pay you highest prices at all times. Write today for Free Illus. Instruction Booklet.
HIRAM BARTON
326 West 48th St., New York

Ideal Folding BATH TUB
Pat. Pending
For houses without tubs, campers, sportsmen, cold water flats. Use in any room. Light, lasts years. Write for Low introductory offer.
N. O. Y. BATH MFG. CO.
103 Chambers St., N. Y.

Corns No more trouble with corns if you use A-Corn Salve. Takes them out by the roots, and is easy, quick and painless. 15c at druggists' or by mail.
Giant Chemical Co., Philadelphia

Agents Wanted For Security Products
High grade made-to-order Dress Skirts, Petticoats, Specialties. Liberal commission. Exclusive rights. Write to-day for catalogue.
SECURITY CO., Dept. 5. Weedsport, N. Y.

A WAY TO MAKE MONEY

IF YOU desire to increase your income so that you can earn more, have more, and save more, you will most likely be interested in our Plan.

It isn't a plan that will start you up in business and immediately produce large profits. Those opportunities are still as scarce as ever. It is, however, a straightforward opportunity that is worth looking into. It isn't a "something for nothing" scheme. But it has splendid possibilities. There is no catch about it; it is plain, simple and easy. There is something to sell and some talking to do. But it's good work—fine, glorious work! You'll enjoy it! And you'll be making money every time you take an order. We don't want to tell you all about the Plan in this advertisement; we prefer to make it a personal arrangement between us.

Just write your name and address on a postal card, and say, "Send me the Plan for those who want to make money." Particulars will be sent to you gladly without cost. Do it now.
THE CHRISTIAN HERALD AGENCY DEPT.,
Bible House, New York City

Dolly—"I know you're there!"
Jimmy—"How can you tell?"
Dolly—"Because I smell the nice, fresh, green mint leaves."

The fragrance comes from the pure juice of fresh crushed mint leaves.

If you insist on this beneficial tid-bit and persist in chewing it, your teeth will be white and your breath will be right.

Look for the spear!
The flavor lasts!

Christian Herald

SUBSCRIPTION, $1.50 PER ANNUM
PUBLISHED 52 TIMES A YEAR

COPYRIGHT, 1911, BY THE CHRISTIAN HERALD

NEW YORK, JULY 26, 1911

VOL. 34—NO. 30. PRICE 5 CENTS
OFFICES: BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK

OUR · MAIL · BAG

Questions and Answers

J. E. G., Okemah, Okla. I notice in an article with reference to Dr. John Clifford that the writer speaks of proofs of the life to come, as advanced by Sir Oliver Lodge. What is his theory? In talking with a learned man not long since, he stated that there was a stage of psychic development in which much of the life beyond is revealed to man. Is this Sir Oliver Lodge's theory?

Sir Oliver J. Lodge has long been an inquirer in the field of psychic research. He has written interestingly on the subject and believes that spiritual communication with the other world will yet be proved to be a possibility. We are not familiar with his theories, but believe they have been set forth in the Hibbert Journal.

Mrs. E. G. D., Yarmouth, Me. 1. What is the meaning of Rom. 9: 18? 2. In Ps. 23: 4 why is the rod necessary when anyone is nearing the shadow of death? 3. If a young person is trying to seek religion, and if he should not find assurance and be taken away by death, would he be saved?

1. It means that when God's Holy Spirit is withdrawn from an unrepentant sinner, the latter is judicially abandoned to the hardening influence of sin itself; also that God's mercy comes as a free gift and not as the result of any human merit (see Heb. 3: 8-13). It is a warning to those who, resisting the influence of the Spirit, at last may be left to their own deserts. 2. This does not refer to the rod of affliction, but of assurance, guidance and support. 3. God's mercy is boundless. If a sinner forsakes his sins and strives, ever so feebly, to win the Divine forgiveness, he will be met half-way (see Neh. 9: 17; II. Pet. 3: 9 and other passages).

J. M. O'D., Paterson, N. J. Who was the author of the poem entitled "The Place to Die"—Thomas Barry or Barry Cornwall?

Neither. It was written by Michael J. Barry. The last lines of the poem have made it immortal:

"But whether on the scaffold high,
Or in the battle's van,
The fittest place for man to die
Is where he dies for man!"

R. S., Chicago, Ill. By a firm and reasonable effort on your part, an ineradicable church custom could be established everywhere, that an invitation to join God's army should be extended at every church service and never omitted. If a preacher is anything, he is a recruiting officer. If he withholds the invitation, he is dishonoring his office. Sinners know that God wants them to be invited, and when they go to church and listen to the preacher's eloquence and oratory and see that he does not offer a simple, courteous invitation even, they do not want to hear that preacher again.

It is the duty of a preacher of the Gospel to hold up Christ and to give the Gospel invitation. Our correspondent is right in his statement that a failure to do this—and more especially a frequently repeated failure—is a serious defect and one not to be overlooked. We ourselves confess to a liking for the old-fashioned Gospel appeal or invitation, which should issue from the pulpit with the utmost freedom and cordiality and which should never be omitted from any regular service. "Woe is unto me if I preach not the Gospel" (I. Cor. 9: 16).

W.H.S.T., Pipestone, Man., Canada. 1. I have been reading a history of Christianity which gives a general outline of what the Christian life has been since Christ was here. The information has been drawn from various authors who wrote of the times in which they lived, as Josephus, Justin Martyr, and many others; and other names are mentioned, such as Plato, Aristides, Longinus, Aristotle, etc., and I am so much interested in those things that I am anxious to know what books can be bought which throw light on times contemporaneous with the Bible. 2. Can I buy a Bible with the four or five books in it which are omitted from our Bible, Maccabees, etc.? What was the reason for discarding them? I am one of those who have been called, but who has not yet filled the conditions, but who believes that, through prayer, he will yet accomplish more than he could otherwise have done. I know that I am in touch with the fount of all good things, and draw liberally every day from it.

1. Josephus gives a good deal of history that is contemporary with Christ's sojourn. Tacitus, Pliny (the younger), Lucian, Suetonius, and several other secular writers also contain references to Christ and the times in which he lived and taught. The Jewish Talmud (the Gemara) up to a date as late as 1631, contained the history of Jesus, his life, mission, and death, treated from the Jewish standpoint, but it is now omitted, although there are very old copies of the book in existence that still contain it. All of our great modern Bible scholars — Lightfoot, Lardner, Muenschen, Wuensche, Poffer, and others—know of this. 2. You can procure a Bible with the Apocrypha through any bookseller. The apocryphal (or doubtful) writings were excluded by the church councils as being unauthoritative. To your other question we would reply by referring you to Matt. 24: 36.

T. S. B., Elmhurst, N. Y. What is the meaning of the passages in Matt. 25: 46 and Rev. 20: 12-15?

The passage in Matthew means that the decisions of that day will be final and enduring. It teaches, also, that negative wickedness—the sin of doing nothing for Christ or our fellow-man—will be punished. The passage in Revelation describes the last and general resurrection in which both righteous and wicked have their portion; when the books of "God's remembrance" will be opened and all will be judged. Verse 14, in which death and hell are personified, is held to mean that those who are Christ's will never more die. The second death is interpreted to mean "everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord." Many volumes have been written giving different views on this group of verses, with marked differences in the interpretation of the same, though nearly all agree on what is given above.

Copyright, American Press Association

Wrecking Crews at Work Immediately After the Great Train Wreck at Bridgeport, Conn. (See Page 745)

Free A COMPLETE COURSE OF Shorthand at Home Free

A SPLENDID OPPORTUNITY FOR A LIFETIME EQUIPMENT FOR BUSINESS

THE following extraordinary offer is made by The Christian Herald in order that all of its readers who desire to take up a delightful and profitable summer study may do so. It is a study which, with an hour's application every other day, will soon produce surprising results. No such offer has ever been made by any other publication, and we hope to see many thousands of our readers and their friends and acquaintances take advantage of it.

It should be the ambition of every boy and girl, every young man and young woman, to acquire such a training as will enable them to take an active part in the battle of life and to be self-supporting and independent. In every branch of business all over the world there is a constantly increasing demand for Stenographers. The man or woman who, having a fair public school education, adds to such training the ability to write a good, legible Shorthand, is in a position to command employment in any community wherever business is done.

Some time ago, The Christian Herald put to test the Standard System of Shorthand, which is the Pitman-Graham System, now universally used in the business world. Nearly 2,000 readers of this journal took a course in this System with the utmost satisfaction. Many of these students are now themselves teaching Shorthand, while hundreds of others are filling well-paid positions.

Now, in order to put a thorough training in Shorthand within the reach of every one of its readers who desires it, The Christian Herald has prepared, in compact book form, a "Complete Course of Standard Shorthand at Home." This Course consists of 24 graded lessons, all of which are stated so clearly as to be easily understood by any average boy or girl, man or woman.

There is no mystery about Shorthand. When the first outline forms are acquired, the study becomes at once fascinating and delightful. All the lessons are simple and self-explanatory. Every student can be assured that, with due diligence, he or she can finish the "Course at Home" successfully.

The Christian Herald takes pleasure in assuring its readers that all the claims it makes for this Course have been thoroughly tested by the Editor and may be relied upon. As a gift to some young friend it is one of the most valuable that could possibly be made. But young folks and grown folks of either sex could not spend their summer leisure to better purpose, or with equal certainty of advantage, than by getting this practical book and acquiring a business equipment. Ordinarily, the price of a course in Shorthand is from $25.00 to $50.00. The Christian Herald "Course at Home" is a Free Course. As set forth in this book, it carries the student up to the point where he or she can take a good Shorthand dictation, after which practice is all that is necessary to become an expert.

The "Complete Course of Shorthand at Home" is contained in a handy volume of 107 pages, 4⅝ inches by 6 inches, with flexible cloth cover—just the right size for the pocket. It contains, in addition to the Lessons and Keys, exercise pages for every lesson in the Series, so that when the Course is finished, the student has in this volume a complete record of the progress made from the first exercise to the last.

The complete Course will not be sold, but will be mailed FREE to every one who will secure for us one New four months' subscriber to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD. Simply get one of your friends or neighbors to agree to take THE CHRISTIAN HERALD for four months; send us 50c. with the name to pay for the subscription, and we will send you the Shorthand Course FREE.

Address, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, 92 BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK

Mrs. C. M B., Millwood, Ga. Please explain I. Cor. 14: 34, 35.

Paul evidently considered that for women to speak in churches would have been an act of independence, as though they were not subject to their husbands. It evidently was not the custom for women to take a speaking part in the services in the early Christian Church. See also I. Tim. 2: 11, 12. The ancient attitude toward women has undergone great modification.

S. J. W., Harris, S. D. What was the belief of the Antinomians?

The Antinomians rejected the moral law as not binding upon Christians. Wesley defined it as "the doctrine which makes void the law through faith," and declared its error to be that Christ repealed the moral law. It may be called briefly the doctrine of faith without works.

G. C., Portland, Ore. Was Joseph's wife converted from the heathenism of Egypt to the worship of the true God before he married her?

Presumably not. She was the daughter of the priest of On, and was no doubt a believer in the religion of her fathers. She was even named after one of the Egyptian deities, Neith. It is fair to presume, however, that after marriage she took the religion of her husband. She became the mother of Ephraim and Manasseh. For your second question see John 19: 39, 40. Doubtless Joseph, and possibly Nicodemus, also had assistants at hand, either friends or servants.

Apropos of a recent paragraph in THE MAIL-BAG concerning the "Haystack Meeting," F. W. P., Brooklyn, N. Y., sends this additional note: "The Haystack prayer meetings were held at Williamstown, Mass., where the famous Haystack Monument now is in Mission Park. The four students who started the meetings, Mills, Richards, Rice and Hall, afterward entered Andover Seminary."

Miscellaneous

D. D., Leechburg, Pa., writes that the denomination known as the Covenanters has 120,000 adherents in this country.

A reader who is conversant with the Arabic language draws attention to the fact that in a recent issue the name of the town of Deir el-Bahri was incorrectly printed, as it appeared Deir eb-Bahri.

F. J. B., Hampton, Ia. See the genealogies in Matt. 1 and Luke 3, the one on the maternal, the other on the paternal side. See also the prophecies that the Messiah would be of the line of David. The statement you mention is a mere quibble.

A. H., Andover, O. Rev. 16: 13, 14. The three unclean spirits have been thought by some commentators to be infidelity, lawlessness (or anarchy) and false spiritualism, "working miracles" (or producing "signs"), and "preparing to strike at Christianity. The "gift of tongues" has already been discussed in THE MAIL-BAG.

Mrs. M. E., Grantham, Pa. There is no comparison between the two. The sin of Peter in denying Christ was committed impulsively in a moment of panic, and was immediately repented of. The crime of Judas in betraying his Master was a deliberate one, duly planned and carried out. It has been called the "blackest sin of all the ages."

J. S. B., Lexington, Ky. The contention of certain critics that several of the incidents in the Gospels had historic parallels has been very definitely settled in the negative. Professor Gunkel of Giessen, an eminent scholar and authority, has refuted the recent claim of Professor Steinmetzer, alleging a Babylonian mythological origin of the divine birth and also of the massacre of children in Bethlehem. Professor Gunkel declares that neither of these events, nor the incident of the boy Jesus disputing with the doctors in the temple, has a parallel in Babylonian, Egyptian or Greek literature.

In further reply to the inquiry of Mrs. S. H. D., Tyler, Texas, as to the commission form of government for cities the following facts might be added to those already published: The commission form of government for cities and towns is not a system of commissions to regulate public utilities entirely. Under it city councils and boards of aldermen are eliminated, the city government being vested in five or six men, each of whom is responsible for some one department. It is the application of modern business methods to city government. The five or six men, without regard to party, who receive the highest number of votes, are elected. If a man does not administer his office properly he may be recalled at a special election; that is, the voters may discharge him and select another man.

NEW YORK, JULY 26, 1911

THE · CHRISTIAN · HERALD

A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED NEWSPAPER FOR THE HOME

The Milkman as He Appears in Havana

El Prado, Havana's Most Fashionable Promenade

The Notion Peddler and His Pack

A SUMMER VISIT TO HAVANA

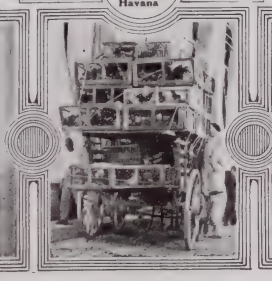
THE raising of the battleship Maine has drawn many Americans to Havana this year. It is a port of much interest to the traveler. When a steamer anchors in Havana Harbor, it is immediately surrounded by curious little craft called bumboats, whose owners offer to row you ashore for a dollar, but as passengers can—and must—go on the boat sent by the Customs, the business of the bumboat folks would not seem to be a very lucrative one. The usual crowd of hotel representatives, who have come out on the Customs lighter, call out the merits of their respective hotels, and there is a good deal of bustle and confusion, which, added to the unaccustomed sounds of a foreign language, are apt to make the traveler feel rather stranded if it is his first experience of the sort. Light hand-baggage is taken ashore on the Customs boat, but trunks and heavier baggage come on later, and, consequently, it is necessary to go through the Customs twice, or wait anywhere from one to two hours for your trunk to come to land.

I was unfortunate enough to make my second visit to the Customs wharf after every one else had come and gone. The inspector who was assigned to me, apparently feeling that he had all the rest of the day before him, dug into the depths of my trunk and opened every single package, wrapping them up loosely and laying them here, there and everywhere after he had satisfied himself as to their contents. I have been through the Customs many times elsewhere, but never had such an experience as this before, and hope never to again.

After passing the Customs the visitor is driven to his hotel in a light four-wheeled rig or coche. Many of the streets are so narrow that there is only just room for the carriage to pass comfortably between the sidewalks. These in turn are narrow in proportion, and when a street car comes along, which it does very frequently and very rapidly, the motorman yanking a bell above his head the while, pedestrians stand still and crowd themselves against the walls of the buildings to let the car pass.

An Avenue of Palms, Colon Park, Havana

Havana shops usually have no windows, but open right out on the street, and are frequently situated under the cool portales of buildings which overlap the sidewalk. The goods are arranged on shelves reaching from floor to ceiling around the three walls of the store. At night, the large open space is protected by sliding screens, padlocked at the bottom.



Cuban hotels are not quite like hotels in America, nor anywhere else. The bedrooms are very large, with ceilings fully fifteen feet high, and a great big bed covered with a snowy white canopy is pretty sure to form part of the equipment. There are no windows, but folding screen doors open out on a small veranda. The entrance to the room is closed by what we call Dutch doors. The panels reach but half way up the doorway, however, which extends nearly to the ceiling.

The Cubans have but two meals a day, breakfast at eleven o'clock in the morning and dinner at five to seven in the evening. It is the custom of the well-to-do to rise about ten, dress leisurely, partake of a still more leisurely breakfast, and then attend to the business of the day with a minimum of hurry and worry, for it is warm in Havana. Between ten and four o'clock the heat is intense and the streets are more or less deserted. All who possibly can, get under cover, except perhaps a few colored folk, who take siestas on the benches in the parks under the full glare of a tropical sun. There is no time limit, and these siestas have been known to last all day. Those who go to Cuba will find that a little knowledge of Spanish is not only very

Continued on page 746

Flower Sellers under the Portales of Tacon Market

Bringing Chickens to Market

Carromatos, or Cuban Country Carts, at Tacon Market

The American Pulpit

A SERMON BY

Rev. D. J. Burrell, D.D., LL.D.*

The Church in the House

TEXT: Rom. 16:3-5—"Salute Prisca and Aquila . . . and salute the church that is in their house" (R.V.)

THE Church is a fact, an obvious and potential fact, a fact that must be reckoned with by any who would comprehend the logic of events. It was because David Hume was unwilling to recognize the Church in its relation to progress that his History of England is like a labyrinth without a clue. He might as well have undertaken to prepare an exhaustive treatise on Light without a reference to the sun.

The franchise of the Church is given in the Scriptures. On reading the record we cannot but be struck by its close adherence to the lines of domestic life.

At the outset we have the Church in the house of Adam and Eve. An altar stands in the midst of the family circle, the religious life of which is centred in the prophecy of the Seed of Woman who is expected to come in the fulness of time to bruise the serpent's head. As we follow the history of the Church along the centuries we shall find a continuance of this seminal idea, which found expression in the blood stained altar and the hope of the coming Christ.

The Church Before Christ

In the reconstruction of things after the Deluge we find the Church in the house of Noah. On the summit of Ararat "he builded an altar unto the Lord and offered burnt-offerings upon it." The altar was spanned by a rainbow, which was the token of a covenant between God and his people for the transmission of the Messianic hope along the succeeding ages.

And then came the Church in the house of Abraham. He heard the Voice and as he journeyed along, he built an altar at every resting place to perpetuate the rudimental thought of blood atonement, and receiving ever and anon a renewal of the prophecy of Christ as "his Seed, in whom all the nations of the earth were to be blessed." He saw Christ afar off and was glad. John 8: 56.

As time passed, the simplicity of the primitive Church was succeeded by an elaborate ceremonial code. At its centre stood the Temple, around which was formulated the most magnificent system of rites and ceremonies that the world ever saw. This, however, was merely temporary; its purpose being to carry on the Messianic hope until the advent of Christ. At his appearing these provisional expedients were destined to vanish as shadows disappear at the break of day.

The first Church of the Christian era was the Church in the house of Joseph of Nazareth. The great promise was now fulfilled. Behold the manger in the midst of the household and over it the shadow of the Cross!

A little later we have the Church in the house of Mary of Jerusalem. In an upper room sits Christ himself in the midst of his disciples. Not far away is the Temple, the "house magnifical"; but over its doorway is written, "The glory is departed." The Church is not there. The Church is in this upper room with its informal welcome and loving salutations.

A Comparison

A little further on we come upon the apostolic group of Churches, like this in the house of Aquila and Prisca. Our first acquaintance with these itinerant tent-makers is at Corinth (Acts 18: 1-3). A year later they were at Ephesus, where there was not only a Church but a modest Theological Seminary in their house (Acts 18: 24-26). After this they drifted to Philippi, where mention is again made of the Church in their house (I. Cor. 16: 19). And still later they were settled at Rome, where our text mentions the Church in their house. Other examples of like character are "the Church in the house of Philemon" at Corinth (Philemon 2), and "the Church in the house of Nymphas" at Laodicea (Col. 4: 15).

As the centuries pass we note a departure from the admirable simplicity of the Churches. We have pomp and pageantry, cloisters and cathedrals and tinsel canonicals; but have we anything to show that outvies the unpretentious beauty of holiness which marked the beginnings of Christian progress? It is worth considering whether it would not be wise to surrender somewhat of our elaborate display in exchange for the sweet simplicity and rare fellowship of those early days.

I believe there is something significantly important in this original idea of "the Church in the house." Let us see.

To begin with, observe the emphasis which it puts on the simplicity of an acceptable approach to God.

Our word "Church," by the way, is not found in the Scriptures. It is a pagan word, kuriakon, used by the Greeks with reference to the altars of their false gods. The Scriptural word for the Church is ecclesia, which means simply a company of people called out of the world for divine service. It contains no suggestion of elaborate form, but rather of plainness and informality. The God whom we worship is a Spirit and must be worshiped in spirit and in truth.

There is also in this phrase, "the Church in the house," a suggestion of the oneness of the historic Church.

As there is only one God, there can be only one religion; and as there is but one religion there can be but one Church. It is a mistake to speak of the Jewish Church and the Christian Church as if they were essentially different, or as if one had supplanted the other because they were somehow at odds. There never has been, and there never will be, but one Church in this world of ours.

The Church in the house of Adam and Eve gathered about an altar that was eloquent of the Lamb of God; and the same is true of every assembly of true worshipers at this day. It is an error to speak of the Day of Pentecost as "the birthday of the Christian Church." On that occasion the Church, which had been from the beginning, received a baptism of fire and power, by the descent of the Spirit, for the carrying on of the great work of the kingdom of God.

We have, also, a side light here into the normal diversity which prevails in the Church of these days.

I have a friend who built for himself, years ago, a home on the upper Hudson. As his children grew older and were married, one by one, he declined to receive them under the paternal roof but, instead, built for each happy pair a separate home near by. And therein he showed himself a wise man. For it is a true proverb, "Fences make good neighbors." A man of less discernment might have insisted that his children and grandchildren should abide under the same roof with him; just as there are people who clamor for ecclesiastical uniformity, and mourn because the denominations are called by different names. But this was not the thought of our Father when he "set the solitary in families."

Agreeing to Differ

We are made, like sheep, to segregate. Like seeks like. "Birds of a feather flock together." We never shall all agree; but in the good time coming we shall agree to differ. There is room for a difference of opinion in matters of doctrine; not as to the great fundamentals, indeed—such as the virgin birth of Jesus on which rests his Messianic claim, or the vicarious atonement on which rests the world's hope of salvation, or the miracle of Christ's resurrection by which life and immortality are brought to light—but on minor points which are in no wise essential to the integrity of our faith.

And there is room also for a difference of opinion in matters of polity. There must be law and order in the Church, of course; but Scripture has little to say of forms of government; these are most largely left to us. Some believe in prelatical, others in presbyterial and still others in independent forms of government. Why not let them suit themselves? It is the way of the world. Do we lament the fact that some secular States are monarchical and others republican and still others democratic? Are we foolish enough to urge that this interferes with the solidarity of the race? Why, then, should we be troubled on account of minor divisions in the Church or endeavor by mechanical compression to bring about abnormal uniformity instead of falling in with the sensible view of the household of God?

We are, furthermore, reminded here of the true fellowship which should prevail in the Church. And with this bond of fellowship goes the thought of equality.

There are no "holy orders" in the true Church. The word "laity" is not found in the Scriptures. There is indeed a distinct call to the ministry; but it permits no pride of station, as if men in canonicals were appointed to "lord it over God's heritage." The true idea of the ministry was set forth in the Master's words, "The Son of man is come not to be ministered unto but to minister"; and it was exemplified in the upper room where he girded himself with a towel and washed his disciples' feet, saying, "I have given you an example, that ye should do as I have done to you." The supercilious affectation of greatness and pontifical precedence on the part of certain functionaries of the Church is at an infinite remove from the conception of their office which was in the mind of Christ when he said, "He that would be greatest among you, let him be servant of all."

The Church, the Household of God

As there is no distinction between clergy and laity in point of superiority, so there is no room in this atmosphere for the adventitious distinctions of social life. This is the one place on earth where rich and poor should meet together and acknowledge the Lord as Maker of them all. For the Church is a family circle; it is the household of God. The recognition of that fact is not always easy, in view of certain conditions which prevail among us; but it is always wise, because it prepares us for the fellowship of our Father's house. We are fond of speaking of the recognition of friends in heaven; whereupon it is remarked that there might profitably be more of such recognitions here and now.

Still further, in this domestic conception of Church life we best realize the thought of co-operation.

The ultimate purpose aimed at is the conquest of the world. To that end we are trying to persuade the world to come and worship with us. This is one of our great problems; how to get the people everywhere to honor the ringing of the church bell. But suppose we return to the thought of Christ himself, which was not to get the house to the Church, but to get the Church to the house.

His great word was, "Go." He was constantly urging his disciples to go out as fishers of men. He had little or nothing to say about "the regeneration of society" or of the community, but much to say about the rescue of one. Welcome the day when the people shall no longer stand in their church doors with words of welcome, but venture forth to the capture of prisoners of hope!

A Church operating from one great centre or from a few splendid centres of radiating power is not calculated to bring the world to God. I remember when it was thought that the best illumination for our cities was furnished by a great arc-light shining from a steel tower in some central square; but we have learned that the best street-lighting is by lamps at frequent intervals, or by lights shining from many windows and open doorways. It is not the great temples and cathedrals of the world that are controlling the enterprises of Christ's kingdom. The saving factor of Christian progress is in "the back districts," where congregations gather in humble places of worship, often in schoolhouses at the cross-roads. Here descends the promise, "Where two or three are met together in my name, there will I be."

So here is our coign of vantage in the work of the kingdom. Let us realize that the Church is the family of God. Let it be understood that he cares little for elaborate form and ceremony, but much for the simple beauty of holiness. The man who issues from the Church in the house with a sickle in hand and his face toward the harvest-field is greater in God's sight than a procession of hierophants in purple canonicals. I believe that a truer conception of the Church along the lines originally marked out for it would mean a mighty impulse in universal evangelization.

We are looking forward to the millennium when Christ is to reign from the river unto the ends of the earth. Its coming will be heralded by the descent of the tabernacle of God. The dreamer in Patmos saw no Temple in heaven; and he saw no Temple on earth in the latter day; but he heard a voice prophesying that the Tabernacle, the old "tent of meeting," should descend upon the earth; and that the God of glory would abide therein, saying, "The tabernacle of God shall be with men and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people and God himself shall be with them and be their God."

* Minister Marble Collegiate Church (Reformed), New York.

THE GIFTS

LOVE halted at my door—
"My burden's great, and I'm footsore,"
Said he.
"Then come thou in!"
I cried.
"Whatever's mine,
Is also thine"—
Love put his burden down,
And stepped inside,
And parting gave a gift to me—
The magic gift that none can see.

Life halted at my door—
"My burden's great, and I'm footsore,"
Said he.
"Then come thou in!"
I cried.
"The fire's alight
To cheer the night,"
Life put his burden down,
And stepped inside,
And parting gave me ere he went,
The rarest gift of his—Content.

Grief halted at my door—
"My burden's great, and I'm footsore,"
Said he.
"Then come thou in!"
I cried.
"The supper's spread,
The sweet rye-bread."
Grief put his burden down,
And stepped inside,
And parting, left a gift with me—
The world-wise gift of Sympathy.

Death halted at my door—
"My burden's great, and I'm footsore,"
Said he.
"Then come thou in!"
I cried.
"The night is nigh,
And lonely I—"
Death put his burden down
And stepped inside,
And parting gave a gift to me,
The gift of Immortality!"

RENA CARY SHEFFIELD.

New London, Conn.

Thirty-six Missionary Brides

IN THE old days, the missionaries went forth with wives, it is true; but the wife was then supposed to go chiefly for the purpose of taking care of the missionary himself. She was only an annex, as it were, as an ordinary minister's wife is at home. We have changed all that. Our girls are now prepared to do aggressive work in the mission field as well as their husbands. They are quite as bright, as well educated and as highly trained for special service.

This fact was plainly visible to the large annual conference of the Board of Presbyterian Foreign Missions the other day, as they gazed upon the earnest faces of the 101 young people whom they are sending forth into the foreign field. These brave young folks posed in a big group in front of the old First Presbyterian Church on lower Fifth Avenue. The girls looked fresh and dainty in their simple summer costumes. The men wore ordinary street suits. There was nothing especially ministerial in their appearance.

An interesting feature of this notable gathering was, so to speak, its honeymoon character. Thirty-six of these young missionaries go forth as brides and grooms, and one, Miss Ruby Clare Cook, just graduated from Park College, Mo., will marry, as soon as she reaches the Philippines, the Rev. James P. Eskridge, already stationed there.

The Rev. D. Coe Love and his wife, both recent graduates of great institutions, go to Africa. The Rev. and Mrs. Paul J. Allured and Rev. and Mrs. Roy M. Allison go to China. To India are assigned the Rev. and Mrs. C. Hezlep, and Mr. and Mrs. Mark Eldredge. Korea is to receive Mr. and Mrs. Roy K. Smith and Dr. and Mrs. James H. McClanahan. The Rev. and Mrs. Raymond R. Gregory have chosen Mexico as their field; Guatemala claims the Rev. and Mrs. Linn P. Sullenberger; while the Rev. and Mrs. Charles A. Carriel will work in Brazil.

Many are not yet assigned. They are ready to go wherever the wise directors see fit to send them. With trained minds and courageous hearts, and filled with a high enthusiasm, they venture forth in God's strength to help in winning the world for him.

Like a Tree by the Waters

By EUGENE THWING

ALL the world loves a tree, and even by heaven itself trees are highly regarded; so much so that the four angels, holding the four winds of the earth, were commanded to hurt not the trees; and when the powers of the bottomless pit were released upon the earth, they, too, were commanded not to hurt the grass of the earth, neither any green thing, neither any tree.

It would seem, however, that some of these hostile powers had ceased to obey the command, because enemies almost without number are now making a war of destruction against the trees. Men are spending millions of dollars in the battle to save the trees from insect pests and disease, though not so much to save them from the ruthless destruction of the pulp and paper mills and the lumber men.

. . .

A HEALTHY, well-rooted tree has a very strong hold on life, stronger in some cases than any other living thing. In California there are redwood trees more than three thousand years old, that were standing there in full vigor of life while Moses was wandering with the children of Israel through the wilderness on the other side of the globe. In Africa, the baobab tree is said by Dr. Adanson to live to be five thousand years old; and the explorer De Candolle tells of a tree, the taxodium distichum, which lives to even a greater age.

Just think of the wonderful volumes of world history, what stories of the rise and fall of the countless nations and races of the earth, are stored away in the trunks of these ancient monarchs of the forest who have lived, serene and unmoved, with heads proudly lifted to heaven, through every age of man! What shall we think of the two-legged animal, only two or three score years old, who with a few blows of an ax destroys the majestic patriarch for the sake of a few dollars' worth of lumber? None of the mighty convulsions of nature, and none of the changing affairs of nations, have disturbed these wonderful living beings through scores of centuries.

. . .

AS WE venerate the age of trees, and admire their strength, their durability, and their beauty; as we realize that the earth would indeed be stripped of its loveliness if the trees were removed, we may for a moment give ourselves up to the finer emotions which they inspire, and take some of the lessons they whisper as we rest in their cool shade.

Just beyond the door-sill is a great, spreading tree. It was not brought to the house—the house was brought to it and built there under its branches. The little child who first played around the door is now the grandfather who sits close to the old tree for companionship. His little grandchild may one day take his place, and the tree may whisper of the changes, but the tree stands ever in its own place, never desiring to go away, always content with its own work.

"They also serve who only stand and wait." Some lives must be lived out in one place while others roam the world. The stationary life need never be a restricted life. It may be rich in blessing to all who come to it and feel its quiet, inspiring influence. When restlessness provokes a desire for wider and more active participation in the work which seems to win results in the world, it is necessary sometimes to consider the trees, how they stand, every one in his own place, yet fulfilling a living mission of blessing to mankind far more important than they could do if taken away and, as lumber, made to do a little more varied and active work for a few years in trade and commerce.

. . .

A TREE which is to live long, with strength and endurance throughout its giant frame, must be deeply rooted; it must be able to hold on to firm ground; it must reach the deep, unfailing water courses, as the tree of which Jeremiah spoke, that "spreadeth out her roots by the river, and shall not see when heat cometh, but her leaf shall be green; and shall not be careful in the year of drought, neither shall cease from yielding fruit."

In the pine forests of Michigan there were wide stretches of country where the rich top-soil lay in a shallow covering over the hardpan. The trees, standing thickly crowded together, grew tall and straight. Their roots spread out in the thin soil where moisture was plentiful. There was nothing to compel them to strike down deeper into the hardpan. When the great forest fires came and licked up the carpet of needles over their roots, and dried up the moisture, and denuded the branches, they were left bare and defenseless. The tornado, following the fire, swept down thousands. They could not withstand the first hard blow of an adverse wind.

Out on some bleak hillside is a sturdy oak standing exposed to every gale that blows. No pounding nor tugging of the storm can throw it down. It is established. Its roots spread wide, but they also strike deep; they twine themselves around a rock, they pierce the hardpan. All this didn't happen at once. It has been a process of years. Every time the tree has felt the storm tugging, it has sent its roots a little deeper into the subsoil, or has gripped a little tighter upon the rock. The limbs are mighty and full of rugged strength, because they have been through many hard battles. The strength to withstand and conquer has grown with the very act of withstanding and fighting. It is the need itself which has produced the strength to meet it; and nothing but the need could have forced the tree to do that which would find supply for the need.

. . .

IN EVERY particular this is a picture of the Christian's life. There is no strength, no safety against sudden stress and trial, in a life which is all ease, and which never feels the storm—which is all self-sufficient and never is driven to a deeper source of supply. When we feel the storm tugging and buffeting it is good to feel that we are rooted and grounded in the love that never fails in the extremest need. When the fierce foes of our soul try to tear us away from our foundation, it is good to let the deep roots of our faith twine themselves yet more firmly around the Rock of Ages which cannot be moved.

When all the little springs of pleasure and profit which trickle from the world in times of plenty seem to dry up, and we can gather from them no refreshment, it is good to know that our supply is deeper, and fuller, and never failing; that, indeed, we are "like a tree planted by the rivers of water, that bringeth forth his fruit in his season; his leaf also shall not wither; and whatsoever he doeth shall prosper."

ONE SUMMER DAY

THE rising sun gilds bud and flower,
And makes the old world new and gay:
He fills with joy the passing hour,
And takes my borrowed cares away.

The little birds sing in the trees,
Or flit from bough to shady bough;
The softly blowing southern breeze
Smoothes all the wrinkles from my brow.

The sparkling rill runs dancing by,
And sings its tenor as it goes;
I change to mirth my long-drawn sigh,
And live my life in sweet repose.

The meadow yields its varied sweets,
And swings aloft its lily bells;
And busy bee seeks these retreats,
To fill with nectar waxen cells.

The meadow-lark with haste upsprings,
With limpid notes pours forth her song;
The quails, in flocks, with sounding wings,
Their sudden flight not far prolong.

The skies above are heaven's own blue;
The air below is heaven's own breath;
'Tis all of God, and therefore true,
For without Him it all were death.

The apple-blossoms fall like snow,
And cover all the earth with white;
The children frolic to and fro,
Intoxicated with delight.

The farmhand drives his team afield,
And with his plow breaks up the soil;
The fertile furrows quickly yield
A rich reward for all his toil.

Led by Moody's Sermons

REV. H. ELLIS LININGER, a Nebraska pastor, relates this incident which took place a few summers ago:

One day, while waiting at a little junction in Minnesota, I saw through the window the agent searching through a pile of cheap paper-covered books. At once I knew he was hunting a book that he had not read. I took the opportunity to ask if I had guessed it, and found that I had. I told him that I had a few for sale and that that was part of my business, as a colporteur of the Bible Institute of Chicago. I produced from my bag several books, including Moody's Sermons. I told him that the price was forty cents, but I would give them to him for thirty cents, if he would promise to give the volume a reading. He promised by saying that he would read it because it was Moody's. Soon I left on my train, saying to him: "Don't forget about the books."

It was my lot to be at that place again about three months later. The first thing I noted was a big black-covered book on the table. After the rush was over I said to him: "I see some one else has been selling you books, too."

"Are you the man who sold me those 'Moody' books?" he asked.

"I am," I replied.

"That book of sermons led me to Christ," he said. I requested that he tell me about it.

"It was this way," he began. "I started in on it as soon as the train pulled out and got so interested in it that I read it twice before going to bed. I re-read it the next day, and finally said to myself: 'Why not settle with Jesus now?' Then and there I did the greatest deed I have ever done. Have you any more of them?"

I had and he bought them all. I have never seen him since, but I am sure that I will meet him in the kingdom after a while.

Anvil Sparks

..EVEN arguments for a good cause should be honest.

..IT IS no trouble to find excuses for the sins we cherish.

..DON'T embalm your failures; let them perish as quickly as possible.

..IT IS all right to change your mind, but not to have a changeable mind.

..STOP bewailing your ill fate, and try being thankful for the misfortunes you have escaped.

THE INDIAN WHO "MADE GOOD"

THE recent death of this famous "White Comanche Chief" has brought to my mind the story of his life as heard during the passing years from friends in the Southwest who knew him well. About 1834, a band of eight hundred Comanche warriors, led by their chief, Nocona, left their camping ground upon the Elk River and moved southward into Texas, for the purpose of attacking a white settlement. This was conducted according to their usual methods, the tomahawk and firebrand being freely used, and a number of captives were taken away. One, a little girl of seven years, named Cynthia Parker, won the affection of her captors by her gentle ways, and was adopted into the tribe. She became an Indian in language and habits, and grew to womanhood idolized by them; later she married the chief Nocona, and was the mother of two boys — one named Quanah.

Quanah Parker, Chief of the Comanches

When Quanah was six or eight years old, while the Comanches were away on a hunt, General Ross of Texas, with a company of United States soldiers, visited the camp, recognized Cynthia as a white woman, and carried her to the nearest military post. Although she was not known in that locality, and could not talk English, she had not forgotten her father's name and her own, and she was soon restored to her parents after twenty-five years or more of separation. When asked if she wished again to live with the Indians, her reply was always: "No; want children."

Many efforts were made to find the children, but in vain, and the poor mother lost hope and died broken-hearted.

Nocona deeply mourned for his lost wife. When he felt his strength failing, he called Quanah, his son, to his side and told him his mother's story, and admonished him to be brave in battle, excel all others, and thus be happy. Then he passed away.

Quanah was about sixteen years of age when he first saw white men. It was at a council held on the North Fork of the Red River, between the United States Government and the Comanches. He was called to the conference, and designated as one of the missing boys, sons of the white woman, the other not then living. His hair was light and complexion fairer than an Indian's, and he was more fully identified by a scar on his arm. The officers offered to take him to his mother's people; but he told them that the other wives of his father were as mothers to him, the Indian boys were his brothers, and he wished to stay with his Comanche friends. Quanah in a short time succeeded his father as chief of the Comanches. For years he fought battles with United States soldiers, Mexicans, Texans and unfriendly Indians, until the name of Quanah Parker became a terror in the Southwest. Many times peace propositions were made to him, but declined until about twenty-five years ago, when a message reached him asking that he come with his Indians to Fort Sill, where they would receive government aid and live in peace. Quanah replied: "All right; I come; I give up war." An important treaty was signed by the Indian tribes. At that time, Quanah was a blanket Indian. "I no wear clothes; no eat at table; no ride in wagon," he said. He now strove earnestly to change his ways and habits of life, and the result was a wonderful transformation. He proved a capable business man, and became a large landowner. He built his home near the base of one of the Wichita mountains—a large two-and-one-half-story house, with wing; the red roofs dotted with large white stars, visible for miles. Here in this well furnished home, with his three wives and sixteen children, Quanah hospitably received his numerous white visitors. His Indian guests frequently brought their camp equipment and pitched their tents within his fields. He was ambitious for the education of his people. His own children went to the Indian school at Carlisle. Several became teachers, others were employed successfully in banks, offices and stores.

Quanah made frequent visits to Washington, and broadcloth and linen were not too good for his wear when interviewing the "Great White Father" in the interests of his people. He made his last journey to Washington last June, on a three-fold mission, one of his objects being to secure the passage of a bill for the removal of the bodies of his mother and brother from Texas to a burial-ground near his home. His loyalty to the memory of the mother, whom he dimly remembered, was a beautiful feature in his character.

It was Quanah's pride that he had been obedient to every order of the government since coming under their charge. The white settlers near him respected and esteemed him, while his sovereignty over the Comanches was absolute. He was to them as a father; his home was the spot towards which each Comanche set his face when he needed advice; they knew him as honest and just in all his dealings, therefore his word was their law. Now that he has gone, it must be admitted that one at least of the too often despised race "made good," and deserves the tardy commendation, "well done."

E. M. BUCKHOUT.

A Typical Indian Encampment at Cantonment, Oklahoma

THE FIRST MOSLEM CONGRESS IN EGYPT

THE unrest in Egypt, caused by the assassination of the Coptic Prime Minister fifteen months ago, broke out afresh last February when the Copts—the members of the native Christian church—called a Congress at Assiut to consider the wrongs they were enduring at the hands of the Mohammedans. This Congress met, deliberated and passed a set of resolutions. Among these resolutions were two which attracted general attention and met with spirited opposition on the part of the Moslems. The first asked that the Christians in government employ be allowed to observe Sunday as a day of rest, and the second requested the government to give the Copts their share of government positions.

In order to counteract the influence of this Coptic gathering the Mohammedans resolved to call a Congress of their own to discuss national problems. Although the delegates were all Moslems, the assembly was known as the National Egyptian, rather than as the Islamic Congress. From April 27 to May 3 the Congress met in the immense hall of Luna Park at Heliopolis, the fashionable residential suburb of Cairo. At each session the hall was crowded with delegates and spectators. The President of the Congress was Riaz Pasha, ex-Premier, a notable figure in Egyptian politics. One of the most prominent speakers was the notorious Sheik Abdul Aziz Shawish, the leader of the Nationalist Party—a man who has had to suffer imprisonment for political crimes more than once. Another leading debater was Sheik Aly Yusef, the leader of the less radical Islamic movement. He is the editor of the Mouiyud, a daily paper which is known as the Times of the Moslem world. The excitement at the Congress grew greater at each sitting. Each day the president had difficulty in keeping order, but the climax was reached in the final session. While the minutes were being read, the clerk was interrupted by applause every time he came to the names of Sheik Aly Yusef or Sheik Shawish. Disorder reigned supreme almost through the entire sitting. Whenever a vote was taken, the members stood on chairs, and shouted their arguments in the direction of the president. Everybody spoke at the same time, and no one was heard. Even when a speaker, with great throat effort, succeeded in obtaining permission to speak, he was cut short by a yell from the audience. President Riaz Pasha looked disgusted. At one time he arose and declared that unless the confusion came to an end he would leave the hall. Later, he threatened to close the Congress unless order was restored. The greatest confusion occurred when the following resolution was offered:

"That the Congress urge the government to stop men from marrying more than one wife unnecessarily, and to prevent divorce as far as possible."

Opposition to this measure was practically unanimous. The uproar was indescribable. Pandemonium seemed to have broken loose among the delegates; the members were evidently determined that there should be no restrictions upon their polygamous privileges and divorce facilities. The resolution was immediately withdrawn.

The resolutions finally approved by the Congress were absolutely antagonistic to the Coptic claims. Voting was by acclamation, the only method possible in the midst of such wild disorder. The following are some of the more important resolutions:

Does the Congress deem it possible to divide political rights in Egypt into two divisions according to religious creeds? The answer was unanimously in the negative.

Does the Congress think that it is within the rights of any community to demand Sunday rest, or rest on any other day? Answer. No.

Or that the Congress deems one day for rest sufficient, and that day Friday? Answer, Yes.

Does not the Congress think that the Copts have already more than their share of the government posts? Answer, Yes.

Does the Congress not deem it necessary to draw the government's attention to the fact that most of her posts are occupied by Copts, when there are capable Moslems to fill them? Answer, Yes.

Before its adjournment the Congress appointed a permanent committee to carry on its work.

CHARLES HADDON NABERS.

Copyright by Underwood & Underwood, New York

A View of Cairo, Egypt, Looking Southwest Across the City

A Record Sunday School Conference

A Flashlight Picture of One of the Foreign Groups at the International Sunday School Convention at San Francisco

THE most impressive feature of the International Sunday School Convention, which was held in San Francisco during the last week of June, was a great parade of Sunday School workers who marched from the St. Francis Hotel, which formed the headquarters of the visiting delegations, to the Colosseum, where the meetings of the Convention were held. Five thousand men, of whom three thousand were from San Francisco and vicinity, gathered in Union Square, San Francisco, on the evening of June 23, for the parade. The line of march was lined by other thousands who cheered this greatest religious demonstration which has ever been witnessed on the Pacific coast. Representatives from twelve different countries and of all the various shades of yellow, brown, black and white appeared among the marchers. Each man in the procession carried a Bible, either held loosely in his hand or high above his head. Banners and transparencies announcing the mottoes of the various organizations and countries, added color to the great demonstration. On the Monday following the parade, the Gideons distributed the Bibles which were carried to the various hotels in the city to be placed in the guest rooms, as they did not long since in Chicago.

"The Open Bible and the Uplifted Cross" was made the keynote of all the sessions of the Convention. The fact that this is the tercentenary year of the King James Version of the Bible, was used largely by the various speakers at all the sessions. The many speakers and leaders whose presence had been promised and whose names appeared in the forecast of the Convention published a few weeks ago, made the doings of the Convention extremely brilliant and unflagging in their interest.

On Saturday morning the Convention broke all records for the rapid subscription of the necessary funds for the carrying on of the work of the Association during the next three years. One speaker after another had emphasized the idea that "money is the cutting edge of the Gospel." The response to the call for funds was immediate and enthusiastic. Within forty minutes pledges aggregating $42,000 per annum until the next Convention in 1914, were collected. Besides the large donations from individual members of the Sunday School organization, contributions ranging all the way from a few dollars a year to more than $1,000 were made by every State and Territory of the Union, every Province of Canada, and most of the foreign countries which were represented. W. H. Hartshorn, the newly elected president of the Association, was the largest donor to this fund. His pledge was for $15,000 for the three years.

The session of Thursday afternoon at the First Congregational Church, was devoted to the discussion of the graded lessons and the qualifications of teachers for Sunday School classes. The entire assembly united in praising the graded lessons, even though they agreed that they had not as yet entirely passed the experimental stage, having been out only about two years, and just now coming into more universal use. That teachers that are bad—bad in the sense that they are not properly prepared to teach a Sunday School class—are not wanted, was the general verdict of the Conference. Some very pertinent questions were asked during an hour's "round table," which was conducted by Mrs. J. W. Barnes, of New Jersey, as to how the untrained teacher and the careless teacher should be awakened to his or her responsibility.

During the Conference session proper on this subject, the training of teachers, as well as the best type of instruction for them, was discussed before an audience that overflowed the church building. Such subjects as "The Necessity of Grading Religious Instruction," and "Training of Teachers for Graded Schools," were taken up. The first was spoken on by Dr. Henry F. Cope of Chicago, General Secretary of the Religious Education Association, while Professor George Albert Coe of Union Theological Seminary, New York, read an interesting paper on the latter subject. "We must have some non-Biblical material for use in Sunday School instruction," said Professor Coe. "The only question is how we should use it wisely. Much material not taken from the Bible is splendid food for children. Talks on everyday life, applying Bible quotations to it, make interesting, helpful talks to scholars."

The purpose of graded lessons was described by Rev. B. S. Winchester, of Boston. "The first aim of graded lessons," he said, "is to meet the needs of the children as fully as possible. A child under six years old needs the interpretation of religion in home terms. That is about all we can do. But over six the child starts to school and there enter into his life the complex relations with teachers and strangers. Our object must then be to extend the home instruction so the child may experience an understanding of religion in the larger sense. The intellectual stage begins at twelve years. What we need to give the child then is that which will make strong character. We need to teach him of the men of history and instil into him a great personal ideal. At eighteen begins the final adjustment, and now we must introduce him gradually toward the adult training, teaching him of the great possibilities and responsibilities which very soon must settle upon him."

The Association appointed as chairman of the International Executive Committee for the period from 1911 to 1914, Mr. Fred A. Wells, of Chicago, who has been for the past five years treasurer of the committee. Mr. William Hamilton of Toronto, Ontario, was re-elected first vice-president, and the second vice-president will be C. C. Chapman, of Los Angeles. Rev. Dr. George R. Merrill, of Minneapolis, will continue to serve as secretary of the committee.

Although a great deal of splendid, enthusiastic and serious work was gotten through by the Convention, it was not without its lighter side, and times devoted to social enjoyment. The members of the Presbyterian Ministers' Union of the bay cities tendered a luncheon at the San Francisco Y. M. C. A. to the clergymen of their denomination, who were attending the Convention. Many receptions were given by private individuals and by various denominational organizations to their visiting brethren. On Wednesday, June 28, a special train carried hundreds of the visitors from San Francisco to Santa Cruz Grove, where a "big tree" was dedicated in honor of the International Association. The tree is one of California's giant evergreen Sequoias, and stands beside the great Cathedral Group, which was once dedicated to the late Colonel Ingersoll. Dr. G. A. Bangs, one of the leading Sunday School workers of Santa Cruz, said of the tree, "I selected it because of this location, believing that the International Sunday School Association is the greatest channel through which infidelity will be wiped off the earth and supplanted with the Gospel of Jesus Christ."

General Notes

—VLADIMIR DE PACHMANN, who is regarded by some as the foremost player of Chopin's music, of which he makes a specialty, arrived recently in New York on the Mauretania for a concert tour, which will begin some time next fall. When de Pachmann was over here last, several years ago, he said he would never return, as his fear of an ocean trip is great. He was prevailed upon to change his mind only on condition that he should sail in the summer, when the sea is likely to be calm. He will pass the hot season at some summer resort.

—TRUSTWORTHY ADVICES have been received in Vienna from Albania stating that the situation there is extremely critical. Turkey has amassed 50,000 troops within a day's march of the Montenegrin frontier. Charles R. Crane, of Chicago, who has just arrived at Vienna from Cettinje, after traversing Albania, describes the conditions as absolutely intolerable. The Turks, he says, are devastating whole districts, killing prisoners, refugee women and children, burning houses and crops, and blowing up churches. Numbers of Albanian women and children, he says, have been caught between two wings of the Turkish army and escape is impossible. Faik Bey Konitza, representative in the United States of the Albanian revolutionary party, recently said: "We must keep up the revolution, at all costs, until we are helpless, or Albania is free from the Turkish yoke. I wish it to be understood that Montenegro has helped us, from a charitable point of view, as human beings in distress, and not as insurgents against Turkish rule. The loss of Albania to Turkey means the ending of that empire, as it always depended on the Albanians in the hour of need, when all other nations were against Turkey. That is why the stubborn fight has gone on for three years."

OUR EDITORIAL FORUM

OTTO KOENIG, President — GEO. H. SANDISON, Managing Editor — THEODORE WATERS, Secretary

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD is published weekly by "The Christian Herald," at the Bible House, Fourth Avenue, 8th and 9th Sts., New York City. The officers are: Otto Koenig, President and Treasurer, Bible House, N.Y. City; Geo. H. Sandison, Vice-President, Bible House, N. Y. City; Theodore Waters, Secretary, Bible House, N. Y. City.

Subscription Price, $1.50 a year, in advance.
Remittances should always be made in the safest manner available to the remitter. Register cash remittances.
Foreign Postage.—For each copy to be mailed outside the United States, Canada, and Mexico, add one dollar a year.

Change of Date.—It takes at least two weeks to change the date, after your subscription is renewed.
Expiration of Subscription.—The date on the wrapper indicates when your subscription ends.
Change of Address.—It requires three weeks' time to make the change. Give both old and new address.

Subscriptions may commence with any issue.
Letters should be addressed, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, Bible House, New York.

Entered at Post Office, New York, as Second-class Matter
Entered as Second-class Matter at the Post Office Department, Ottawa

Pressing Forward

THERE is probably no movement of modern times that can be contrasted in far-reaching scope and concentrated devotion, under wise and practical direction, with the Student Volunteer Movement. Its growth has been phenomenal and is only explainable on the ground that the hand of God is in it. Beginning at Mount Hermon, Mass., in 1886 with a little group of earnest workers under the leadership of a few able consecrated men, it has now attained the proportions of a great army of trained and educated men and women who are carrying into the work of world-evangelization the best talent, the noblest influences and the wisest methods that have ever been applied on a large scale to such a task. In reviewing the foreign missionary work of the Movement for the last twelve months, we find these striking statistics:

Student Volunteer missionaries sent out in 1910....	368
Student Volunteer workers now in mission field in twenty countries.....	4,784
Mission study classes organized in 1910.....	2,379
Institutions where classes are conducted.....	596
Total enrolment of students.....	29,332
Increase over last year's enrolment	6,082
Gifts to Home Missions in 1910.....	$37,708
Gifts to Foreign Missions in 1910.....	$96,053
Institutions represented in these gifts.....	447

This, however, represents only a fraction of their operations, which now include almost every missionary field in the world. In Africa they have 503 workers, in China 1,389, Japan 400, Korea 219, India, Burma and Ceylon 924, Mexico 150, Oceania 58, Philippines 145, South America 288, Turkish Empire 175, West Indies 146. They also have workers in all the Latin and Greek countries of Europe, in Central America, and Arabia. These are not poorly equipped, but splendidly qualified men and women, capable of carrying on large enterprises, directing industrial schools, teaching, preaching and practising medicine, dentistry and a variety of other useful callings. The Movement wisely recognizes not only the need of spiritual uplift, but of introducing in mission lands the benefits of Western civilization and of such improvements as go to make life fuller and better for all with whom they come in contact.

But it is in the spiritual work that they have produced the best results. The movement is a dynamic one, both for applied Christianity and the dissemination of civilized blessings. It appeals in the most direct manner to men and women of culture and gives a "splendid challenge to every Christian man and woman for testing their devotion to Christ." It calls out not only the highest intellectual qualities, but the best type of religious life. God has already blessed it mightily, and will bless it more and more to the enlightenment and inbringing of the unevangelized millions. We hail the Student Volunteer Movement as one of the greatest modern accessories Christianity has yet known and as destined to make a yet more glorious record in the years to come.

The July Hot Wave

NO SUCH protracted period of intense heat has visited this country for many years, as July has given us. In New York City, the official temperature ranged among the nineties for many days and nights. The nearby beaches and the piers along the rivers offered the only comfortable sleeping-places for the crowded millions of the metropolis. One observer complained that he could see neither sand nor water at Coney Island. One black mass of humanity covered the beach and the water, as far as the life-boats. The parks were opened for the relief of the suffering poor, and thousands spent the night there. Ambulances were busy carrying to the hospitals men, women and children prostrated by the heat, while almost every mile which one might travel in any direction throughout the city, held its quota of dead or dying horses. In extreme and dangerous weather, it is wise to take unusual precautions against prostration. Eat sparingly and of the plainest food. Dress as lightly as possible. Especially let us guard our tempers. The "family jar," even in the best regulated homes, is more likely to be developed during July and August, than during the other ten months of the year put together. There are unfortunately many to whom the heated term affords no avenue of escape. They suffer and swelter and succumb in the close, densely packed, airless tenements. Would that it were possible to transfer the multitudes of underfed and overworked tenement dwellers to the open country through these weeks of overpowering heat; but since that is out of the question, the next best thing we can do is to help save the little children by taking them from the super-heated, oven-like cities and sending them out into the fresh air of the country. Mont-Lawn, with its happy family of little waifs, is a striking contrast to the scenes of child-suffering in our densely-populated cities. We only wish we might be able to take not 3,000, but ten times that number of these tiny charges and make life pleasant and healthful for them while the torrid heat endures and while the sun counts his victims by the hundreds in the big cities, especially among the poor.

The World Expects Maine to Do Her Duty

THE Maine legislators who voted to resubmit constitutional prohibition to the people on September 11 did not know that the International Lesson Committee had long before appointed the day previous as temperance Sunday in the Sunday Schools of many denominations in many nations. That ought to spell victory, bringing in the heavy artillery of world-wide prayer. But God will not do the citizens' part, which includes right now, persuading the doubtful ones to stand by prohibition by voting "No" on the proposal to repeal it. The chief reason why some of those who a few years ago put prohibition in the Maine constitution are now half persuaded to repeal it is that so many drug stores and hotels have been allowed by perjured officials and cowardly politicians to break the law. But are there any sober voters so dull that they expect these lawbreakers to become suddenly obedient, and these cowardly officials suddenly faithful if their lawbreaking is condoned and their crime is made a legitimate business? Ex-Congressman Jas. M. Miller of Kansas, in a speech in Congress, March 4, 1911, showed there were more speak-easies in the high license State of New Jersey than in Maine and Kansas, both prohibition States. And the legalized saloons are also lawbreakers, as even the Model License League has admitted in a vain effort to save the saloons by making them law-abiding. Why doesn't some one ask for repeal of the laws against smuggling which have been violated by otherwise respectable people? Let Maine find a Loeb to make its law respected, when it has been once more reaffirmed that Maine will not admit to the ranks of legitimate business those whose object day after day is to induce others to drink. Many who have no strong convictions against drinking will vote against repeal, that by keeping the question in the constitution they may save the State from the necessity of fighting the liquor question over every year whenever the Legislature is neglected, with the saloons seeking by every mean device to dominate politics. Maine is known everywhere because of its moral leadership. To turn about would wreck its reputation. It will rather fire a "No" heard round the world.

The Case of Dr. Wiley

DR. HARVEY W. WILEY, the government pure food expert, who has rendered the country valuable service from the standpoint of the Pure Food Law, is accused of exceeding the limits of his official powers in the employment of experts for chemical laboratory work. Three dollars a day is the regular allowance for such work; but Dr. Wiley, who seems not to have been able to secure efficient help at that price, incurred an expenditure of $20 per day. This expenditure, while not of such magnitude as to deplete the government treasury, was still a violation of a recently passed law, and has bee declared unpardonable. Attorney-General Wicker sham and the Department of Agriculture have unite in recommending to the President that Dr. Wiley b requested to resign. Were this the whole of th matter, it would be of little importance; but there i something more in it than merely the violent twis which Dr. Wiley has given to the sensibilities of re tape officialdom. Remembering the recent sacri fice of Pinchot and the astonishing results it pro duced on the public mind, it is to be hoped tha President Taft, in whose hands Dr. Wiley's fate ma be said to rest, will not permit a good and faithfu public servant to be degraded and dismissed fo what seems at most a technical indiscretion. Publi interests should receive paramount consideration and a failure on the part of the President to uphol the opinions of any cabinet officer would be of les consequence to the whole country than a failure t do justice to one who has served the people s faithfully as Dr. Wiley has done. While it i doubtless true that there may have been technica insubordination, and that Dr. Wiley, as a leadin chemist in America and a man of fearless honesty may have been untactful in expressing opinion that differed with those of his superiors, the case i surely one that calls for something less than a sacri fice so sweeping as official decapitation.

Emblems

THE superb gown worn by Queen Mary at he coronation a few weeks ago was embroidere with the rose, the shamrock and the thistle, whil the star of India was blazoned on the front of it shimmering breadths. The rose seems very appro priate to England, because it is the queen of all the flowers that bloom and because English girlhood s often has the rare tinting of the rose in the beauti ful complexions that testify to outdoor living an the proximity of the sea. However large an islan may be, however extensive a group of islands, the ocean that surrounds them sends its influence in the air currents and the atmosphere near and far. The rose of England is sweet and gracious. The thistl of Scotland well typifies the sturdy strength an tendency to argument and contention that belon to Highlanders and Lowlanders alike. And as fo the shamrock of green Erin, who that has eve loved the old country and left it, who that has eve watched an Irish procession on St. Patrick's Day fails to admire the dainty leaf, though he may no have a drop of Irish blood? Queen Mary, it is said will accompany her royal husband on a tour t India, and the princes of that empire in the East may have the pleasure of seeing her Majesty ar rayed in the gorgeous coronation robe which is a marvel of needle-craft as well as a triumph o artistic skill.

Contents of this Number

Wednesday, July 26, 1911

	PAGE
Our Mail-Bag	738
A Summer Visit to Havana (Illustrated) By A. W. Cutler	739, 746
The Church in the House. Sermon By Rev. D. J. Burrell, D.D., LL.D.	740
Like a Tree by the Waters By Eugene Thwing	741
The Indian Who "Made Good" (Illustrated) By E. M. Buckhout	742
The First Moslem Congress in Egypt (Illustrated)	742
A Record Sunday School Conference (Illustrated)	743
OUR EDITORIAL FORUM	744
THE BIBLE AND NEWSPAPER (Illustrated)	745
Some Insects that Impersonate Flowers (Illustrated)	746
The Story of Joseph (Illustrated) By Wayne Whipple	747, 750, 754
In My Veranda Easy Chair (Illustrated) By Margaret E. Sangster	748
Our Boys and Girls (Illustrated) By Miss Janet Porter	749
Organize for Peace	751
How to Be a Hero Sunday School Lesson. by Dr. and Mrs. W. F. Crafts	752, 753
Successful Woman Pastor (Portrait) By I. B. Marshall	753
Young People's Societies	755

THE BIBLE AND NEWSPAPER

Conducted by FERDINAND C. IGLEHART, D.D.

Ship Given to Dr. Grenfell

MISS BEATRICE CLUETT of New York had the honor, a few days ago, of christening the new schooner rigged vessel which is her father's gift to the work of Dr. Wilfred Grenfell in Labrador. As the trim little ship slipped from the ways at the yard of her builders, A. C. Brown & Sons, at Tottenville, Staten Island, N. Y., a bottle of sparkling water was broken over her bows and she was given the name of her donor—George B. Cluett. The new vessel is constructed to meet every requirement of Dr. Grenfell and his associates as a deep sea craft. She is designed to carry not only the mission workers on their trips from one settlement to another or the sick and injured they may wish to take to one of the hospitals, but is fully able to transport a good-sized cargo as a frieght boat. Though in the exigencies of the strenuous work on the Labrador coast she will find herself used for many purposes, it was primarily as a freight and working schooner that she was needed. Despite the large carrying capacity which Bowes & Mower, the naval architects of Philadelphia, have planned for in the boat, the lines of her hull are such as will make her unusually fast under sail and very easily driven by her auxiliary power. She thus combines the elements of a working schooner with the seaworthiness of a modern fisherman, and has at the same time the graceful sheer and well proportioned overhangs of a sea-going pleasure yacht. Special provision has been made in her construction for strength in case of stranding or contact with the ice packs of spring and early summer in the northern latitudes. The George B. Cluett is 135 feet over all, 115 feet on the waterline, 26 feet in beam moulder and 12 feet in depth moulder. She is rigged with three masts and has as auxiliary power a 75-horsepower Wolverine kerosene engine which will drive her at about six miles per hour. The owner's and officers' quarters are aft under a raised deck and consist of a cabin and a messroom, a pantry, a bathroom and six staterooms. The completed ship was delivered to Dr. Grenfell during the present week. One of the most fascinating stories of modern mission life is that of Dr. Grenfell's life and labors for the bodies, minds and souls of the people of the nearer North. It is because godly men and women at home stand behind such men and projects as his with their sympathy and gifts that they are enabled to do their work at all, and in the last day of accounts those that carry the Bibles and preach out of them and the medicines for the sick and administer them will have no greater reward than the faithful ones who furnished the transportation and the means of support. The record of the heroic missionary in the North and the friends that support him remind us of the words of Scripture:

I will say to the north, Give up; and to the south, Keep not back: bring my sons from far, and my daughters from the ends of the earth: every one that is called by my name; for I have created him for my glory, I have formed him: yea, I have made him. (Isa. 43:6, 7.)

The "George B. Cluett" as She Left the Ways at Staten Island

Bad Boy Apprenticed

George Cohan, fifteen years old, is counted by the authorities and recorded by the newspapers as being the worst schoolboy in New York City. He has been on probation time and again, always breaking his vows. He lies, steals, runs away and fights, and Dr. M. G. Schlopp, the alienist of the Children's Court, says that he is morally insane, and that there is no hope for him. The boy's father, who is a machinist and inventor, is going to try the old-fashioned remedy for juvenile wickedness by apprenticing George to the machinist's trade. Dr. Schlopp, in referring to the Cohan case, declared that there were 12,000 morally insane children in New York. It is quite the thing now to minimize sin by calling it a hereditary tendency or the expression of intellectual irresponsibility. There is more or less of insanity in all sin, to be sure, and the boy's badness can be traced much to the evil tuition of the city street with its vile attendants as well as to the wicked impulses within. It is more than likely that the good influences that might have been employed for the boy's salvation were lacking, and those that were offered may have been spurned by the boy's determination to do wrong. The father is right in the idea that steady hard work is likely to take some of the "moral insanity" out of the boy; but the only real cure for George or any other sinner, little or big, is Jesus Christ and his salvation. What a fearful responsibility there is on some one to take Christ to George and upon society to furnish an environment friendly to virtue! With an open Bible and a living Christ let the church never admit that there are 12,000 children in one city who are morally insane and for whom there is no hope.

Wherefore he is able also to save them to the uttermost that come unto God by him, seeing he ever liveth to make intercession for them. (Heb. 7:25.)

All-World Steel Combination

There was a memorable gathering of steel men at Brussels recently composed of 160 delegates representing the steel interests of America, Canada, England, France, Germany, Belgium, Austria and Spain. They formed an international association which is the most colossal business enterprise ever conceived or carried into effect in the history of the world. Judge Elbert H. Gary of the United States was chairman of the convention that formed the association and was made chairman of the permanent executive committee of that association. The latest available statistics on the iron and steel industry in the United States are as follows: number of mills, 14,239; capital employed, $2,331,498,157; average number of wage-earners, 857,298; total wages paid, $482,357,503; value of products, $2,176,739,726; exports in 1910, $179,133,186. It is stated that the Steel Trust controls 80 per cent. of the entire raw products of the United States, 50 per cent. of the manufactured products, 70 per cent. of the manufacture of steel rails, 90 per cent. of the making of steel tubes, 80 per cent. of the steel, iron and tin plate business; that it controls the transportation, steamship and rail, from all points where there are blast furnaces, and that it dominates the coke and cement business of the country. And yet this is only one of the great steel corporations from the various countries that made the memorable business combination in Brussels. Congress through its investigating committee is still scuffling with the United Steel Trust, but it is generally understood that this all-world combination will enable the United States Steel Corporation to provide for any damage that a reduction or removal of the tariff might make. Now that the forests are being exhausted man has made use of steel for building houses, ships, cars and almost every instrument of industry. The earliest history records the use of iron, brass and the baser as well as the more precious metals, silver and gold. Their use is recorded in the Scriptures as early as in the fourth chapter of Genesis. The prophet to illustrate a moral lesson thus refers to the manufacture of metals:

As they gather silver, and brass, and iron, and lead, and tin, into the midst of the furnace, to blow the fire upon it, to melt it. (Ezek. 22: 20.)

Terrible Railroad Accident

The Pennsylvania Express from Washington to Boston over the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad, jumped the track and plunged down a thirty-foot viaduct into the street below within the city limits one and one-half miles west of the station of Bridgeport, Conn., on July 11. The locomotive and six cars fell to the pavement, killing twelve persons and injuring forty-seven more. The locomotive was thrown 200 feet beyond the first of the cars, while the mail car, baggage car, day coaches and Pullmans were piled up in a tangled mass. Local physicians and ambulances were soon on the ground, and the dead were removed to the morgues and the wounded to the hospitals. A much greater loss of life was prevented by the quick action of the chemical engine which extinguished the fire caused by a burning car. The Cardinal ball players, who were on their way to play with the Boston team that afternoon, were in the last two Pullman cars which were the only cars that did not leave the track; and though all were badly shaken none was injured. This is one of the most appalling accidents the New York, New Haven and Hartford road has ever had, but it and other such casualties remind us of life's uncertainty, as expressed in these words:

There is but a step between me and death. (I. Sam. 20: 3.)

War Threatens Venezuela

In December, 1908, Juan Vicente Gomez, then vice-president of Venezuela, turned traitor to his friend and business partner, General Cipriano Castro, and seized the presidency with which Castro had temporarily entrusted him while he went to Europe for medical treatment. Since then Gomez has acted as executive and Castro has been counted an exile. General Castro is reported to have reached his native land with the intention of assuming the presidency from which he had been deposed, and the world is looking for warm times and fierce contests between the leaders. It is generally thought that if Gomez, after deposing his former friend and benefactor, had measured up to the demands of the hour Castro would have fared badly; but it is claimed that Gomez fell into the same unpopular ways that made Castro feared and hated, and that he has even done worse. It is said that Gomez has outdone Castro in giving his friends a monopoly on most of the country's leading industries. Only a few weeks ago he granted a concession for the greatest monopoly Venezuela has ever known, including in its scope the navigation of important streams and development of rich mineral resources. The rights were sold to an English syndicate, which provoked widespread popular revolt. It is thought that Castro's return at this time was because a better opportunity was afforded him and because he claimed some personal interest in the properties involved. Some of the friends of the deposed president are very influential, and it is likely that a revolution of some proportions will be undertaken against the present administration of the government. It is pretty generally claimed that both Gomez and Castro have been selfish and despotic in their administration, and that the revolt against both of them is not unnatural. It would be well for the rulers of Venezuela and all other nations to heed the advice of the prophet:

Thus saith the Lord God, Let it suffice you, O princes of Israel: remove violence and spoil, and execute judgment and justice: take away your exactions from my people, saith the Lord God. (Ezek. 45: 9.)

Sang Sweetly Before Dying

John P. Jones, a Welsh composer and singer, died the other day in Chicago at the age of four score and ten. His four maiden daughters, all teachers in the public schools of Chicago, and several relatives and friends surrounded his dying bed. At his suggestion his seventeen-year-old granddaughter went to the piano to play a number of tunes of his own composition, while the children and relatives sang to the accompaniment. When they came to "Congress Street," Mr. Jones' favorite, he took up the words and sang louder than the rest. "Play again, child," the old gentleman would say, until one after another of his favorites had been sung. After having sung "Eva," named after one of his daughters, in which the aged composer joined, he almost instantly fell into his long sleep. It is a beautiful thing to go through the gateway of death with songs on the lips and with melody in the heart. Those who pass through the gates washed in the blood of the Lamb, go into a world of melody and song.

I heard a voice from heaven, as the voice of many waters, and as the voice of a great thunder; and I heard the voice of harpers harping with their harps; and they sung as it were a new song before the throne. (Rev. 14: 2, 3.)

Some Insects that Impersonate Flowers

SOME years ago, the children attending a school in the city of Rochester, in the State of New York, discovered a number of pretty light-brown objects formed of many bands of scales overlapping each other like the bands of a fish.

They appealed to their teacher to tell them what they were, but she was as much at a loss to know their nature as were her pupils. A small paper bag of the curious growths came into the hands of a nature student who sent it to the Cornell Experiment Station for examination, where the objects were identified as the egg cases of an insect, the praying mantis, as it is usually called, of the common European species. No one was able to guess how they came to be in and about Rochester. We have an American species of this insect, but it never goes as far north as any point within several hundred miles of Rochester.

Unlike almost every other emigrant of the insect tribes from the old world that finds its way to America, any species of mantis that can live and winter in the North must be a very valuable importation, for all members of the genus are rapacious destroyers of insects, killing far more than they can completely devour, and not restricting themselves to any particular kind. They prey indiscriminately upon grasshoppers, flies of every sort and description, mosquitoes, caterpillars, and in short every living and creeping thing that comes within reach, and that is not too large for them to tackle.

Hermann Burmeister, the German naturalist, who traveled in South America from 1856 to 1860, describes a species, Mantis Argentina, of Buenos Ayres, which seizes and eats small birds.

Some of these insects are green and some brown, and it is often quite difficult, however large and showy they appear when separated from their usual surroundings, to distinguish them from the leaves or bushes where they lie in ambush for their prey—remaining in one position for hours together, waiting for some unwary insect to come within reach. Sometimes, however, they stealthily and with almost imperceptible movements approach their victim, which when within reach, with a motion too rapid for the eye to follow, they seize firmly with their strong spine-armed fore limbs and devour at their leisure.

Even the ordinary mantis, with the preposterously long, necklike section of its body, which it lifts at a sharp angle with that part which is furnished with its wings and its legs—with its triangular head and prominent eyes and its two front limbs held up exactly as if the creature were saying its prayers, is without doubt a sufficiently queer looking object, but imagination's very self cannot conceive shapes stranger than those exhibited by some particular species of the Mantids in tropical countries. Of these, perhaps the most remarkable, curious and interesting group is that in which the insects comprising it can, at a moment's notice, transform themselves into the quaintest and loveliest of orchids.

Professor Kurz, the eminent botanist, the author of The Forest Flora of British Burmah, while at Pegu, a division of British Burma, chanced upon what appeared to him to be a new orchid of a very distinctive character, of great beauty, and of a species unknown to him. The discovery of a new orchid, especially one exhibiting such peculiarities of color and form as the one before him, meant both pecuniary profit and distinction. Delighted, he hastened to examine the flower, which to his great astonishment and no doubt equal disappointment, he found to be no flower at all but an insect—a mantis masquerading as an orchid—a mantis of the genus Gongylus, of which several species, it seems, exist in India.

"These curious creatures do not exhibit any very striking peculiarities when looked at from above except the leaf-like dilation of the prothorax and the foliaceous appendages to the legs, all of which together with the rest of the upper parts of the insect are green." Their form and color are both protective, and as they rest upon and among the leaves of a growing plant give them the power of invisibility.

On turning the insect over and looking at its underside one is amazed to see how completely its appearance is changed. It is no longer an insect, but a flower—an orchid. The species seen by Professor Kurz has a bright violet blue dilation of the thorax before which its fore legs, banded with violet and black, extend like petals, mimicking the corolla of a papilionaceous flower so perfectly as to deceive even the practised eyes of this expert botanist.

An account is given in the Proceedings of the Asiatic Society (Bengal, 1877, p. 193) of a number of specimens of a mantis similar to this though probably of a different species, Gongylus gongyloides, which is also a native of Southern India. This species is reported to select rose bushes on which to light, and is called by the natives by a name meaning "rose bush insects." In fact they exhibit, as far as their upper sides are concerned, little that is peculiar except the small leaf-like expansions of the prothorax just behind the head and those of the legs and the rear part of the body. The whole upper surface of the insect is green, but presents an entirely different aspect when the under surface is brought to view.

The leaf-like dilation of the prothorax seen from this side assumes a light lavender blue tint with a pale pink bloom along the margin so that this portion of the creature presents a perfect appearance of the corolla of a blossom, a floral simulation that is wonderfully enhanced by a dark, dusky brown spot in just the proper place, in the centre over the prothorax, to be mistaken for the opening to the tube of the corolla. Upon alighting upon a plant, the insect, turning its underside to view, hangs upside down nearly motionless but at intervals sways gently back and forward like a blossom touched by a gentle breeze.

The Insect-Orchid Discovered by Professor Kurz in Pegu

This insect, in impersonating the flower, hangs head downward, the long body representing the stem and the forelegs the petals.

Navy Solicitor Killed by Lightning

TRISTAM B. JOHNSON, Solicitor of the Navy Department, was killed by lightning on Sunday afternoon, June 16, while playing golf on the Chevy Chase links, six miles outside Washington, D. C. He had gone about half way over the course with Francis B. Poe, of Washington, and two caddies, when a terrific bolt stunned the entire party and prevented the others from rendering immediate aid to Mr. Johnson, which might have saved his life.

When they started over the course the sun was bright. Soon after they were out a storm broke. The two men with their caddies were seeking what meagre shelter could be found when the bolt came. Mr. Johnson and his party were hidden from view, and the first intimation others on the links received was from one of the caddies, who came rushing across the field crying for help and calling out that some one had been killed.

A SUMMER VISIT TO HAVANA

Continued from page 739

desirable, but almost necessary. The Cubans are extremely kind and courteous, however, and a limited knowledge of Spanish—just enough to make yourself understood—goes far. On one occasion a boy walked fully a mile out of his way to put me straight. I could make him understand where I wanted to go, but could not understand his replies. The traveler, however, who cannot speak Spanish, may always extricate himself from his difficulty by hailing a coche (he is sure to stumble across one before long) and presenting to the driver a slip of paper with his hotel written thereon. It costs but twenty cents to be driven to any part of the city.

Havana policemen look as if they were made to order. They are all about five feet seven inches in height and of slender build. Each rejoices in a blue cotton uniform, and carries a club and a revolver conspicuously displayed. To disperse a crowd they simply rap on the curb with their clubs, and the signal is at once understood and obeyed.

There is a good deal of horseback riding in the city. The horses have a peculiar hobble-like lope and take very short steps. Like the Deacon's horse in David Harum, the Cuban horses "stand without hitching." A man will jump off his horse and leave it standing, while he transacts his business some distance away, perhaps, or enjoys a chat with a group of friends at the corner café. The horse never attempts to take advantage of his freedom, and will remain almost motionless for a whole hour, undisturbed by the passing traffic.

Oxen are used for hauling, and not infrequently one meets in the quaint old streets of Havana a team of oxen attached to a wagon loaded with timber. Down at the docks, a whole row of these primitive ox-teams may sometimes be seen backed up against a ship which is discharging her cargo. Oxen are often harnessed to the old-fashioned Spanish country carts, called carromatos, which come to the great Tacon Market. This market, by the way, is well worth a visit. Early in the morning it is thronged with the colored servants of the better class, come to purchase the day's supply of fruit, meat and vegetables. These commodities are placed more or less indiscriminately in large round wicker baskets, and are finally carried home on the dusky heads of their respective owners. All kinds of tropical fruit are for sale here, and there are cartloads of goats, pigs and chickens, the latter especially finding a ready market. Flowers are sold under the cool portales of the market, also lottery tickets.

The street cries of Havana are very musical. There is the milkman, who goes his rounds on horseback and dispenses the milk from tiny tin cans carried in bags on either side of the saddle; the bread man, whose long rolls of bread tower from the top of the basket which he supports on his head; the mango-seller, with his little cart thatched over with palm leaves; the man with the portable dry-goods store, his goods displayed in lavish profusion inside and on the top of a large glass case; the notion merchant, who carries his wares on his shoulder, and patrols the island from one end to the other; the flower sellers with huge trays of potted flowers on their heads; the sponge merchant, and the dealer in bananas. They all have their different cries, some resembling snatches of song, some sad and mournful, some mellow and sonorous, but all harmonious and pleasing to the ear.

Havana windows have no panes, but are protected by vertical and horizontal iron bars, that reach from the level of the sidewalk to a height of eight or ten feet. In the evenings whole families gather at their windows, where they sit and talk by the hour, while the children roll on the floor or climb up the horizontal bars of the window. Friends come and chat through the bars on the outside. The inevitable first impression is that everybody is in prison and it is "visitors' day."

After dark the really gay life of Havana begins. In the cool evening the city bands play, the cafés and restaurants are filled to overflowing, the benches in the small parks are all occupied, newsboys rush around crying out the evening papers, caballeros on horseback clatter along the stone-flagged streets, and carriages with bells on the harness move in a steady stream down the Prado in the direction of the Malecon. Here is situated the principal bandstand and the best restaurant in town, the latter commanding a magnificent view of Morro Castle and the harbor. The Malecon is the great social centre of outdoor life. Rich and poor alike come here every evening, enjoying the ocean breezes and each other's company until far into the night. Everybody is out for a good time. Incidentally this involves quite a little noise, but it is all very fascinating until one comes to go to bed with some doubt in his mind as to the propriety of some of the things they do in Havana.

A. W. CUTLER.

THE STORY OF JOSEPH

III—Continued

By WAYNE WHIPPLE

Author of "The March of Any Man," "The Lincoln Calendar," etc.

JOSEPH'S object in applying these tests was to "catch the conscience" of his brothers, to learn whether they were truly repentant of their conduct toward him and for their years of deceit toward their father. He no longer cared on his own account, but for his father's sake, and Benjamin's—yes, and for their own souls' sakes most of all—he would make one more test.

So Joseph commanded the steward of his palace, saying: "Fill the men's sacks with food, as much as they can carry, and put every man's money in the top of his sack. And put my cup, the silver cup, in the bag of the youngest, and his grain money," which the steward did as directed.

The brothers were all up early the next morning and Joseph's servants helped them, so that they started off about daybreak on their way home. No misfortune had happened to them this time and Simeon was with them, so they were happy. On the way they talked about "the Man"—how kind he had been. They wondered why a man in his position should care to invite them to his house. They spoke of the order in which they were seated at the banquet and of their receiving, some of them, their favorite dishes. They had even noticed that he sometimes seemed to know what they were saying before the interpreter began to translate for him. One of the brothers thought "the Man's" questions about their father were rather strange, and he repeated now as the interpreter had done, but in "the Man's" tones: "Is your father well?—the old man of whom you spoke? Is he yet alive?" "If he is 'well,' of course he is 'yet alive.' He would not be well if he were dead!" They all laughed at this sally, for they were happy in going home to their wives and little ones without mishap, with plenty of food and a good story to tell their father. Best of all, Simeon and Benjamin were with them. While they were jogging along beside their donkeys, chatting in this cheerful strain, suddenly they heard a noise of hoofs behind them. With their habitual expression of terror they glanced over their shoulders and saw men on horseback galloping at a mad pace, in a cloud of dust, and shouting after them. They stopped beside their beasts and waited for the cavalcade to come up.

It was the friendly steward with a posse of Egyptian police. With a stern countenance he accused them of stealing his master's silver cup.

"Why," he asked, "have you paid back evil for good by taking that in which my lord drinketh, even his divining cup? You have done very wrong."

The brothers, dumbfounded, looked from one to another. They felt that some terrible blunder had been committed. One of them, probably impulsive, passionate Reuben, answered him:

"Why doth my lord speak like this? Far be it from us, thy servants, that we should do this thing! See, the money, which we found in the tops of our sacks, we brought again to thee out of the land of Canaan. Why then should we steal out of my lord's house silver or gold? If the cup is found upon any of us, let that man die, and we will all be my lord's slaves."

In Egypt it was against the law to put a man to death for stealing, but the thief might be made the slave of the man from whom he had stolen. So the steward replied:

"Very well, let it be as you say; he with whom it is found shall be my slave, but you shall not all be held guilty."

Then they hastened and took down every man his grain sack to the ground, every one of them opened his sack. The steward made a search, beginning with the eldest, and left off at the youngest; and the cup was found in Benjamin's sack! Then they rent their clothes and every one put the load back on his donkey and returned to the city.

It was a crestfallen company. Their poor old father's worst fears had been realized after all! Benjamin would now be kept in Egypt and his father would die of a broken heart.

Judah and his brothers came into Joseph's palace; "the Man" was still there. They fell before him on the ground. Joseph said to them:

"What deed is this that you have done? Do you not know that such a man as I can see what is done in secret?"

Judah answered, "What shall we say to my lord? How can we explain this? How shall we clear ourselves? God hath found out the wickedness of thy servants; see, we are my lord's slaves; we and he especially in whose hand the cup is found."

The ten saw that appearances were against them. They stood convicted on circumstantial evidence. If Benjamin had stolen that cup they did not seem to blame him. It was a terrible mistake for which they must all be equally guilty. The offer, for each to share alike in the penalty, as well as the blame, convinced Joseph that their hearts were right towards their youngest brother. But, as a final test, he proposed to release the rest and send them home without Benjamin, to their father. This brought Judah forward to make this tender, loving plea on behalf of his poor blind father and the favorite child of his old age:

"Oh, my lord, let thy servant, I pray thee, speak a word in my lord's ears, and let not thine anger burn against thy servant; for thou art even as Pharaoh. My lord asked his servants, saying:

" 'Have you a father or a brother?'

"And we said unto my lord, 'We have a father, an old man, and a child of his age, a little one; and his father loveth him.' And thou saidst to thy servants, 'Bring him down to me that I may set mine eyes upon him.'

"And we said to my lord, 'The lad cannot leave his father, for if he should leave his father, his father would die.' And thou saidst unto thy servants, 'Except your youngest brother come down with you, ye shall see my face no more.'

"And it came to pass when we came up to thy servant my father, we told him the words of my lord. And our father said:

" 'Go again and buy us a little food.'

"And we said, 'We cannot go down: if our youngest brother go with us, then will we go down; for we may not see the man's face, except our youngest brother be with us.'

"And thy servant my father said to us: 'You know that my wife bore me two sons: and the one went out from me, and I said, 'Surely he is torn in pieces,' and I have not seen him since; and if you take this one also from me, and mischief befall him, you shall bring down my gray hairs with sorrow to the grave.'

"Now, therefore, when I come to thy servant, my father, and the lad is not with us, seeing that his life is bound up in the lad's life; it shall come to pass, when he seeth that the lad is not with us, that he will die: and thy servants shall bring down the gray hairs of thy servant, our father, with sorrow to the grave. For thy servant became surety for the lad to my father, saying:

" 'If I bring him not to thee, then shall I bear the blame to my father forever.'

"Now, therefore, let thy servant, I pray thee, remain as thy slave instead of the lad, and let the lad go up with his brothers. For how shall I go up to my father, when the lad is not with me?—lest I see the evil that shall come on my father?"

"Joseph fell at his father's feet, throwing his arms around him"

IV

"I AM JOSEPH YOUR BROTHER"

FROM the beginning of Judah's heart-broken plea the viceroy manifested the keenest sympathy, forgetting his own role in the drama they were acting, for he showed at once that he could understand their words without the interpreter, and by nodding assent to the opening references to himself and his desire to see their youngest brother. When Judah, choking with emotion, spoke of his aged father's grief over his lost son, the Man of Egypt covered his face with his hands, and from that moment to the end of the recital, betrayed as much feeling as Judah himself. Before the touching appeal was ended the Egyptian official turned his back upon them as he had done before dinner on the previous day, and with tears streaming down his face, began to signal to all the Egyptians to leave the hall. Judah's voice had scarcely ceased before he commanded in Egyptian:

"Make every man go out from me."

The order was instantly obeyed, including the interpreter and all the slaves. He was no sooner alone with his brothers than he was overcome by a storm of weeping. The brothers, forgetting their own troubles for the moment, stared at him until he had controlled himself enough to speak to them for the first time in the beloved tongue of his childhood:

"I—am—Joseph—your brother!"

As if stunned by a thunderbolt, the ten brothers reeled and fell back. Ghastly fear was in all their faces. This man who had accused them of being spies, who had put them in prison, who had forced them to bring Benjamin down to prove that they were the sons of one father—his father!—this terrible being who held the power of life and death over all Egypt and over them—with whom they were even now pleading to accept them as slaves—this monster—Joseph? In a sudden accession of horror their dry lips whispered the name "Joseph!"

Twenty years of guilt and remorse were crowded into that one little word. They saw it all now. For more than a year he had been playing with them, as a cat does with a doomed mouse it is about to devour. Their consciences told them they deserved everything—torture and a lingering death. At last they were in the toils, and retribution would be sure, if not swift. They shrank from him with increasing dread as they thought of the anguish of his soul when, more than a score of years before, they had no mercy in their hearts for him!

Joseph could not understand their terror. He thought they did not believe him, the change in him was so great.

"Come near me," he pleaded, "I am Joseph—see!"

With a few quick movements he threw off his Egyptian mantle, and the garment which covered the upper part of his body, which, as a member of the priestly caste, had just been shaved. He looked as white and boyish as when they had torn off his coat of many colors twenty-two years before.

Continued on page 750

IN MY VERANDA EASY CHAIR

Women in Council

By MARGARET E. SANGSTER

ONCE in a while a reminder comes that this is a big country, and that we cannot write in terms of description at any season and be sure of meeting every situation. In Northern New Jersey, for example, the June of this year was so beautiful, the rain was so abundant and the markets were so plentifully supplied with fruit and vegetables, that summer smiled upon the people with her most benignant and beatific expression. One who wrote of summer sitting by a window and looking forth on fields of green grass, on children gathering daisies, or trees waving with verdure, could not gauge the feeling with which the enthusiasm thus invoked would be received in Connecticut, for example, where gardens were perishing in the drought, or in Missouri, from which our first correspondent sent the letter of protest which leads our columns this week.

. . .

The Seamy Side of Summer

"MAYBE you will not be pleased to have me butt in at your Women in Council, inasmuch as I am a mere man. This effort is inspired by your opening paragraph in a recent number of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, where you are contemplating summer with 'its affluent splendor.' Your characterization of summer is quite ideal, and I do not wish to find fault with it. My object in writing this is to describe the real thing as we are having it here right now. We are in the midst of a terrific dry spell, and corn should be beginning to tassel, but instead is but from six to twelve inches high, and a hill will frequently be found entirely dead; dried up. Our early potatoes have failed to make for lack of moisture. We have practically lost our gardens and you say, 'Everywhere grass is green upon hillside and meadows.' I think it would make you feel sick to see the meadows here. My raspberries, of which we would have had a plentiful supply, are but little dried up knots. I have a family of a wife and five children, and no income except what I raise on my little farm. How would you like to face the coming year with us? You say, 'to-day we meet on the veranda, . . . and nature whispering to us her everlasting secret of joy and blessing.' I also discern a harsher note occasionally, yet we do not yield ourselves to gloomy thoughts over the prospect, but are ever optimistic, doing what we can and simply trusting for the rest.

"W. M. T."

One thing I acknowledge with admiration, and that is the strain of courage in this realistic letter. It takes a lot of downright grit to be cheerful and hopeful when conditions are so disheartening as those on this farm and many like it.

. . .

Again the Family Income

"IF HUSBAND and wife are really one why must the money question forever crop up for discussion? If the two are one why should a wife say, as so many do, 'My husband is generous with me. He allows me five dollars a week'? Why should a wife speak of 'My husband's money' at all? It should be as much hers as his. When did one ever hear a man say, 'My wife is so good to me; she cooked my dinner today and didn't wait for me to ask her to'? Suppose the situations were reversed, or that just as hundreds of wives are beggars, hundreds of husbands should be the same. The wife has to ask for every penny. Let us imagine the husband lying awake half the night wondering in what terms he could persuade his wife to prepare breakfast, or coming home after a hard day's work knowing that he would have to humble himself deeply before she would consent to let him have supper. I am not overstating the troubles some women are forced to bear. One wife of my acquaintance does all the sewing for a large family and is often at her wits' end to get five cents with which to buy a spool of thread.

L. F."

In justice to men, it must be said that most of them would welcome a different way of managing than the common one, if they could be sure that it would work well in the end. No doubt there are miserly men, but they are in the minority. No doubt there are extravagant women. They, too, are in the minority. As for the relation of husband and wife, it implies sacrifice on both sides. I once knew a man who was an eminent educator and the superintendent of a large school. He had a pretty wife whom he idolized, a wife of the Dora Copperfield type. He would come home at the close of a hard day, prepare his own evening meal and hers, and put the children to bed. He did not actually do the family sewing, but he cut out the little frocks and aprons. Whatever was done in the house or out, this model husband did. After a while the little child wife, for though she was a mother, she never got far beyond the dependence of childhood, faded out of existence. In due time the widower remarried. His second wife was a marvel of capability. There was nothing she could not do. She relieved him of every possible care. She was like the woman in the Proverbs who is the pattern of discretion for the women of every age. The children now had plenty of clothing, and the husband's shirts were never frayed at the wrists, nor did he find holes in his stockings. Here, however, is the peculiar contradiction in the whole affair. To the end of his days this good man idealized his departed baby-wife, often tactlessly referred to her when he might better have been silent, and he worshiped her memory. He was a faithful husband, but by no means a lover, to the practical woman who surrounded him with material comfort.

. . .

A Mother's Problem

"I HAVE taken board for the summer at a pleasant house in the country. With my four children I have spent two previous summers in this particular house. When the landlord met me at the station we all crowded into the stage and presently we started off on a six-mile drive. He informed me that among the boarders this year there was a family from the city with children whose ages corresponded with mine. 'You will not like the mother very much,' he said, 'she is a little rough and brusque, but they are good people and she makes her children mind her the instant she speaks.' I pondered this description in my mind. My children are obedient and well-bred, but I have never aired my discipline in the presence of outsiders, and I felt certain that I would not find this mother agreeable. Here I am, and here she is, and here are our respective children. Hers are rude, ill-mannered and furtive. She herself is of the termagant type, and her loud, noisy speech and continual scolding are making the inn veranda a place to shun. If I keep my children away from hers, there will be trouble. Already my Mary is imitating the bad English of her Katie, and my Jimmy is not improved by intercourse with her Tom. I cannot now seek other quarters, and I am not a little bothered and perplexed. Suppose it were your case?

M. D."

Turn yourself into a home missionary. Meet this woman of the rough tongue and uncultivated speech with friendly but not patronizing kindness and try if you cannot influence her in the direction of gentleness. Twice a day gather your children in your room, read with them, talk to them and pray with them. Hold up your own ideals. They will not be very much injured by the children who are less refined than themselves. In choosing a place to board one cannot be entirely sure that everything will be ideally perfect. Can our friends throw light on this mother's perplexity?

. . .

The Teacher's Vacation

NOT one of the entire host of working people who are beginning their vacations in these midsummer days deserves so complete a holiday as the teacher. The work of the teacher all the way from the kindergarten to the professor's chair in the university exacts conscientious thought, continual outgiving of vitality and ever repeated intellectual effort. The teacher's part in the building up of the Republic is as important and essential as that of the preacher. Morning after morning when the children assemble in the classrooms the teachers meet them with bright cheery faces and encouraging words. If there are those who imagine that the teacher's work is done when the children go home in the afternoon they are in error. Few teachers drop their work before five or six in the afternoon. There are exercises to correct, work to be arranged for another day and faculty meetings to attend, and the teacher is emphatically one of those who have a long and not a short day of labor. Individual cases weigh heavily on the teacher's mind, and much home visitation is done without a thought of payment in dollars and cents. The summer holiday of the teacher should be one in which brain and heart may be refreshed, in which care shall be forgotten and health stored up for the work of another year.

An East Side Ice-Peddler in New York City

DURING the summer, and specially through such periods of violent heat as that of early July, the tenement districts know no more popular person than the ice peddler. The necessity of the people of these poorer sections of buying in small quantities is the reason of his existence, and it is very largely through just such dealers as the one here photographed that the great East Side population is supplied with ice.

THE COZY CORNER

Daffodils

LITTLE THINGS

SUPPOSE the little cowslip
Should hang its golden cup,
And say, "I'm such a tiny flower,
I'd better not grow up"—

Suppose the little breezes,
Upon a summer's day,
Should think themselves too small to cool
The traveler on his way—

Who would not miss the lightest breeze,
The dew and flowers that blow,
And think it was a great mistake
To have been talking so?

Suppose the glistening dewdrop
Upon the grass should say,
"What can a little dewdrop do?
I'd better roll away"—

For how many deeds of kindness
A little thing can do,
Although it has so little strength,
And little wisdom too!

Adapted from Fanny Van Alstyne.

Flag-Lilies

Once Upon a Time—With Boy Heroes

JUST at this time of the year, nearly seven hundred years ago, one of the most thrilling and dramatic events in all the long history of the world, happened, and the strange part of it is that almost no little people and comparatively few "olders" ever have heard very much about it.

Every one, big and little, should certainly know the story of Stephen of Cloyes and Nicholas of Cologne, the principal boy leaders of the army of children over one hundred thousand strong, that in the burning heat of the summer of 1212, made its way from Southern France and Germany, over the Alps and Apenines to Genoa, at which point they believed the waters of the Mediterranean would, at the command of God, separate and build up into great walls in order that a God-commanded army of little children might pass over on dry land into the Orient on the march to Palestine, where the bravest kings, knights, warriors and soldiers of the world had fought in the Holy Wars.

Minstrel Songs and Hero Tales

NEVER has there been so strange, so heroic a delusion followed so sincerely. Think of it! Barely twelve years old, Stephen of Cloyes, like Joan of Arc, tending his father's sheep on the hills near his native village in France, listened to songs and wonder-tales of the heroes who had fallen in battle in the Holy Land; stories told and sung by minstrels wandering in the nearby hills. The bounding hopeful heart of the shepherd boy was set on fire with determination to be a hero in the Holy Land too. So, never realizing the vastness of his undertaking, and like the voice of one crying in the wilderness, he went among neighboring hamlets and villages, and with strange, almost uncanny eloquence, he gathered crowds about him in the market places, where he retold the stories the minstrels had recounted to him.

Nicholas of Cologne

IT WAS the age of superstition and of deep ignorance among the peasant classes, to be sure. They listened with bewildered interest, and were stirred by the power of the boy's earnestness, which acted upon them like a miracle. New boy leaders sprang up, and the movement spread like wildfire. First and foremost among the boy leaders of Germany was Nicholas of Cologne, the fourteen-year-old son of a watchmaker, who in his earnestness and enthusiasm was a match for the French boy Stephen. The country soon echoed with the story of the boy leaders. "Follow us into the Holy Land! Miracles will happen there!" was the war-cry. The strange undertaking grew so amazingly that in many places business was suspended and the inhabitants crowded in curiosity to watch the children irresistibly led on by the earnest boy leaders. The kings and many nobles, parents, priests and ministers openly and actively took sides against the children, but all in vain. Nothing could be done, because too many of the people believed the children were following some divine command.

All Along the Way

SO LONG as the summer lasted the children were joyously happy, and if any of them were persuaded by anxious parents or guardians to leave the ranks, they would steal back again or grow very ill at the thought of being detained. This was surely some midsummer madness that possessed those boys and girls. People along the way opened their houses and cared bountifully for them, just as "olders" will always look out for "youngers," whether or no.

Altars made of stones were built in every stopping place. Heaping them with wild flowers, together with song services and story hours, were a part of each day's programme, and at many a ruined tower, stronghold or castle in the Alps, these children lived over again the hero tales that had started them off on their strange, inconsequent errand. The story of the Children's Crusade is a long one. You must surely read it some time. Unlike fairy tales, it ends very sadly.

The summertime passed and in its wake came the cruel winter. Of the army of the hundred thousand boys and girls who left their homes to follow the banners of the pitiful, misguided Boy Crusaders, ninety-five thousand died along the streams and roadways of the Alps. Barely five thousand sturdy, determined little souls reached the seashore, and when the water did not heap itself up into high walls in order that they might pass over it as they expected, disappointed and broken-spirited, they were beguiled into embarking on Italian merchant ships bound for the Orient.

They were shipwrecked or sold into slavery, poor brave dears, and not one ever reached the Holy Land. Of all the children's stories of history or fiction, this one seems to me the strangest, the saddest, and one of the most beautiful. It is all historic fact, and perhaps the reason I have told it here is this: That we may all learn together, right here in the Cozy Corner, the foolishness of pitting boy and girl opinions against the experience and wisdom of those who are older, and by whose advice we should be guided.

"Billy and Me" From a painting in the Stuttgart Gallerves

A BOY'S SONG

WHERE the pools are bright and deep,
Where the gray trout lies asleep,
Up the river and o'er the lea—
That's the way for Billy and me.

Where the blackbird sings the latest,
Where the hawthorn blooms the sweetest,
Where the nestlings chirp and flee—
That's the way for Billy and me.

Where the mowers mow the cleanest,
Where the hay lies thick and greenest;
There to trace the homeward bee—
That's the way for Billy and me.

Where the hazel bank is steepest,
Where the shadow lies the deepest,
Where the clustering nuts fall free—
That's the way for Billy and me.

Why the boys should drive away
Little maidens from their play,
Or love to banter and fight so well.
That's the thing I never could tell.

But this I know: I love to play
Through the meadow and among the hay,
Up the water and o'er the lea—
That's the way for Billy and me. James Hogg.

Postscript

I want to remind you once again, for the benefit of newcomers into the Cozy Corner, that if you have not already received them, you may send for our Friendship Post Cards. And, if you will send me the names and addresses of your friends, I will gladly sign your name and send a beautiful souvenir Post Card to each one. There is never any price put on the souvenirs and other nice things that are planned and gotten up for you in the Cozy Corner. I am sure that you agree with me, however, that it is only courtesy to enclose a stamp to cover postage. For next week we have a delightful treat in store for you—an exceptionally interesting puzzle.

Our Good-Night Verse

To our bountiful Father above,
We will offer our tribute of praise,
For the glorious gift of his wondrous love,
And the blessings that hallow our days.

If you have not already done so, be sure to write this week and introduce yourself to yours very

Lovingly and faithfully,

The Aunt in the Cozy Corner

FALSE HUNGER

A Symptom of Stomach Trouble Corrected By Good Food.

There is with some forms of stomach trouble, an abnormal craving for food which is frequently mistaken for a "good appetite." A lady teacher writes from Carthage, Mo., to explain how with good food she dealt with this sort of hurtful hunger.

"I have taught school for fifteen years, and up to nine years ago had good, average health. Nine years ago, however, my health began to fail, and continued to grow worse steadily, in spite of doctor's prescriptions, and everything I could do. During all this time my appetite continued good, only the more I ate the more I wanted to eat—I was always hungry.

"The first symptoms of my breakdown were a distressing nervousness and a loss of flesh. The nervousness grew so bad that finally it amounted to actual prostration. Then came stomach troubles, which were very painful, constipation which brought on piles, dyspepsia and severe nervous headaches.

"The doctors seemed powerless to help me, said I was overworked, and at last urged me to give up teaching, if I wished to save my life.

"But this I could not do. I kept on at it as well as I could, each day growing more wretched, my will-power alone keeping me up, till at last a good angel suggested that I try a diet of Grape-Nuts food, and from that day to this I have found it delicious, always appetizing and satisfying.

"I owe my restoration to health to Grape-Nuts. My weight has returned and for more than two years I have been free from the nervousness, constipation, piles, headaches, and all the ailments that used to punish me so, and have been able to work freely and easily." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

Boston Garter

is chosen by men because it is durable, comfortable, and reliable. Ask for Boston Garter by name, and glance at the loop for the trade-marks "Boston Garter" and "Velvet Grip" stamped upon it.

Sold Everywhere. Sample pair postpaid.
Cotton, 25 cents. —— Silk, 50 cents.
GEORGE FROST CO., Makers, BOSTON

WANTED

Pupil Nurses at the Ellis Hospital, Schenectady, N. Y. A thorough three-years' course is offered to desirable applicants in all branches of nursing except contagious diseases. Apply to Supt. of Nurses, Ellis Hospital, Schenectady, N.Y.

New York, New York City Avenue A, 63d and 64th Sts.

Have You Chosen a Profession?

There are Opportunities in Medicine especially Homeopathic Medicine. Send for Catalogue of New York Homeopathic Medical College and Flower Hospital. Both Co-Educational. A. M., M.D., Dean.

THE STORY OF JOSEPH

Continued from page 747

He stepped to the edge of the dais, on which he had stood as their judge, and knelt, throwing wide his arms toward them in mute appeal, just as he had done at Dothan that evening long ago. Transfixed, as if in a nightmare, and hoarse with horror, they gasped:

"Joseph!—the pit!"

"Behold, your eyes see, and the eyes of my brother Benjamin, that it is my mouth that is speaking to you. And you shall tell my father of all my glory in Egypt, and of all that you have seen. And you shall hasten and bring down my father hither." Then Joseph put his arms about his brother Benjamin's neck, and wept; and Benjamin wept upon his neck.

Then, with one arm around Benjamin, and the other extended in the direction of the ten, he pleaded with them, and slowly convinced them of his good-will toward them, so that, one after another, they came to him, Simeon last of all.

Joseph kissed all his brothers and still weeping embraced them, and after that his brothers talked with him.

The first thing now was to plan for the future in which he, they, and their father should be near together in Egypt. He went on to explain:

"For these two years there has been famine in the land; and there are yet five years in which there shall be neither plowing nor harvest. And God sent me before you to preserve you a remnant in the earth, and to save you alive by a great deliverance. So now it was not you that sent me here, but God; and he has made me like a father to Pharaoh, and lord of all his house, and ruler over all the land of Egypt.

"Hasten and go up to my father, and say to him, 'Thus saith thy son, Joseph: Come down to me, tarry not; and thou shalt dwell in the land of Goshen, and thou shalt be near to me, thou, and thy children; and there will I nourish thee; for there will yet be five years of the famine."

Joseph's loud weeping was overheard by the Egyptians who had been ordered out of the audience chamber in such haste. Of course, every one wondered what business the viceroy could have with a band of Canaanitish shepherds—talking with them in their own language. After making himself known to them, Joseph lost no time in acknowledging them as his brothers.

When the king heard the story of the eleven brothers, and how Joseph had received them, he was mightily pleased and insisted on sending a royal invitation to the viceroy's aged father to come down and live in Egypt with all his children and grandchildren. He added, "I will give you the good of the land of Egypt, and you shall eat the best of the land." He also ordered wagons, which were a new invention, never before seen in Canaan, to be sent for the aged father and the women and children instead of having to walk or ride their poor, starving camels and donkeys.

So Joseph equipped his brothers for their return journey, giving them ample provisions, changes of raiment and to Benjamin an extra present, three hundred pieces of silver—the price of ten men-servants. He charged them to make haste and to come back as soon as possible, for now, after all the long years of separation, he could hardly possess his soul in patience only a few weeks longer before embracing his dear old father. As they were starting off he gave them a parting injunction:

"See that you do not fall out by the way!"

Although Joseph had fully forgiven his brothers, he well knew they could never forgive themselves. He remembered what a quarrelsome set they had always been, and that this sudden prosperity might be the cause of much discord among them. Moreover, they had a very painful duty to perform, in confessing their cruelty toward their young brother, so long ago, and their hideous hypocrisy toward their father for all those years. When they arrived at their home in Canaan they told their father:

"Joseph is yet alive and he is ruler over all the land of Egypt." Jacob's heart fainted, for he did not believe them.

They told him, again and again, the story of Joseph's test, why he wanted to see Benjamin, and how he had asked them always, and over and over, if their father were yet alive and well. Different sons rehearsed the whole story at different times, and it was always the same story. They could not have agreed so well if they had made it up just to please him. His shattered mind slowly received the dazzling truth. At last, the sight of the wagons seemed to strengthen his faith and he exclaimed:

"It is enough; Joseph my son is yet alive; I will go and see him before I die."

Then all was hurry and bustle in the quiet Vale of Hebron. Their families numbered seventy souls. Poor old Israel was afraid every day that death would overtake him, so terrible was the longing to embrace his son. "If I could only look into Joseph's face once more," he quavered, "I would be content to die in his arms."

At last the queer caravan of donkeys and camels and the strange looking wagons, surrounded by the reduced and bony herds, got under way, and the journey was made as fast as was consistent with the old man's comfort. When they came to the borders of Egypt, Judah was sent ahead to tell Joseph that his father was near, and the viceroy ordered his chariot, and set out with a royal retinue, to meet Israel with as great pomp as if he were going to welcome the king of Assyria. When the cavalcade came and stood before Jacob's camp the old man rose and gazed at the august personage in the chariot, who, he thought, must be the king himself. He cared nothing then for his son's glory, he wanted only to hold his Joseph, his boy, in his arms—to lay his hand upon his curly head and gaze into that sweet, open face as he used to do in the long ago.

There was an awkward pause, but the grand vizier understood. His loving heart had foreseen and prepared for even this. Descending from his chariot, he, with the aid of two attendants, removed his Egyptian headgear, mantle and tunic, and, bounding across the space between, Joseph knelt at his father's feet, throwing his arms around the old man, and burying his face in his lap. During the intervening weeks, he had let his hair grow, and his father's hands, falling upon his son's head, felt the same curls as of yore, and his failing eyes were able to discern the brightness of "the coat of many colors," for Joseph had ordered a duplicate made of the princely tunic of his boyhood, which he had put on under his official regalia.

The recognition was complete. The happy father clasped his boy to his heart again and whispered in ecstasy:

"Joseph! it is Joseph my son that was dead and is alive again!"

And the two wept on each other's neck a good while. Then the patriarch, with his eyes streaming with joy, lifted the viceroy's tear-stained face and said, in broken accents:

"Now let me die, since I have seen thy face and thou art yet alive."

"Nay, nay, dear father," exclaimed the Man of Egypt, joyously. "Thou must live many years yet, for my sake, to be near me—as many years as we have suffered in this cruel separation."

When the viceroy told the king that

Continued on page 754

EVERY MEAL CALLS FOR MAPLEINE
The "Flavor de Luxe"

Begin with Breakfast—Add a few drops of Mapleine to sugar syrup and you have an irresistibly delicious home-made syrup to pour over the hot cakes or corn muffins.

Then at Lunch—For flavoring icings and fillings for cakes, for flavoring ice-cream and milk puddings, in baked beans and other things, you will find that Mapleine adds a rich, mild mellowness of flavor.

And at Dinner—Every course, from soup to custard, may be varied at will and improved upon by adding a few drops of Mapleine as a flavoring or a sauce.

Mapleine is a delightful flavoring that every housewife should have on hand. Grocers sell Mapleine—35c 2-oz. bottle (in Canada 50c). If not, send to Dept. F.

Crescent Mfg. Co.
Seattle, Washington
Let us send you "Mapleine Dainties," our recipe book.

AGENTS BIG PROFITS

should be easy selling our guaranteed hosiery for men, women and children. Cotton, lisle and silk, every style and grade. All must wear 4 months without holes or new pair given free. Fine profit. Good repeater. Easy seller. Write for terms. Free sample to workers.
THOMAS CO.
9324 Wayne Street Dayton, Ohio

Buy the Original
ZIMMERMANN "AUTOHARP"

"The Nation's Favorite" None genuine without our trade mark "Autoharp." A musical instrument adapted to all classes. At all music stores or direct from us "Easy to play, Easy to Buy." Send for Free catalog. THE PHONOHARP CO., East Boston, Mass.

MARVEL SOLDER
INSTANTLY MENDS ALL LEAKS

In all kinds of household utensils—enameled, tin, iron, copper, brass, etc. Solders Without Heat. Just squeeze from tube and spread over hole or crack with fingers. Hardening, it makes solid, smooth surface. Useful in all machinery. Fine for motorists. Send 10c for trial tube. AGENTS WANTED.
MARVEL SOLDER CO.
1937 Broadway Dept. 8 New York

LADIES EASE YOUR FEET

A customer writes, "You could not have fitted me better. For the first time in years my feet are comfortable. The soft glove-like feel of PILLOW SHOES
is simply charming."
$3.00 Post-paid in U. S. A.
Soft, easy, durable, neat, stylish; genuine hand-turned shoes of Vici Kid. No lining to wrinkle and chafe; no breaking in necessary. Absolute comfort and fit guaranteed or money refunded. Price includes rubber heels. All styles. Write for free catalog and self-measure blank. Customers everywhere.
PILLOW SHOE COMPANY
184 Summer St., Dept. 3, Boston, Mass.

Ideal Folding BATH TUB
Pat. Pending

For houses without tubs, campers, sportsmen, cold water flats. Use in any room. Light, lasts years. Write for Low introductory offer.
N. O. Y. BATH MFG. CO.
103 Chambers St., N. Y.

FOR INDIGESTION
MURRAY'S CHARCOAL TABLETS
Once Only, for trial
A 25c box for 10c
A. J. Ditman, 2 Astor House, N. Y.

ORGANIZE FOR PEACE

IT IS with feelings of pardonable pride and an honest confidence in the solidarity of our constituency that we take this earliest moment to thank our readers for the enthusiasm with which the plans for a Peace Campaign have been received. Already many CHRISTIAN HERALD Peace League Circles have been organized and are accomplishing excellent work in many States and countries. We are now thoroughly confident of the ultimate power of our united efforts. This spontaneous co-operation of great numbers of our readers has made of our determination to take up arms of Peace against the arms of deadly warfare and bloodshed, a sacred obligation. Peace is not a policy, it is a principle. It shall henceforward be our untiring purpose to present through the pages of this magazine the latest reports of progress of the Peace Movement, and to blaze a direct and practical Peace Trail in the hearts and minds of the business men, legislators, sociologists, economists, diplomats, ministers of the Gospel and women and children who are our loyal supporters.

The most recent organizers of CHRISTIAN HERALD Peace League Circles are: Mrs. T. A. Allen, Oklahoma; William Russell, Arkansas; Rev. James F. Goodman, Michigan; Mrs. Martha Mertz, Indiana; Rev. W. F. Porter, North Carolina; Mrs. James M. Knowles, Iowa; Dr. T. J. Merriman, Nebraska; Dr. John E. Evans, Florida; Rev. H. H. Thoren, Illinois; Rev. C. Detling, Ohio; Rev. E. F. Gillette, Kansas.

Suggested Programme for Second Meeting After Organization

After Roll-Call, Initiation Pledge, Officers' Reports, Reading of Minutes, Unfinished Business, Announcements (business and social), Reading of Matter from Headquarters (by the Secretary) and a brief current exposition of the Main Topic by the Leader, the following subjects may be presented for discussion:

The Mission of the United States in the Cause of Peace

Salient points: The President of the United States and many foremost statesmen and leaders are actively engaged in promoting the cause of Peace.

The great producing classes of the United States are almost to a man in favor of International Arbitration.

Vast sums of money have been subscribed to the cause in this country. The placing of these funds to best advantage is an especially interesting and important point of discussion.

The American Peace Society, numbering thousands of members, is at present leading in the proposed plan to co-operate with other nations for the purpose of celebrating the Centenary of Peace between Great Britain and America in 1914.

There are three great forces in our American civilization, each one of which is more potent as a Peace factor in this country than elsewhere.

First, the business interests. Nowhere are there more varied and larger business enterprises carried on than in the United States. American business men representing these interests dread the prospect of war and the destruction of business alliances and general unsettling of conditions. When Mr. Andrew Carnegie said that if any controversy arose between Great Britain and the United States it could be entrusted to the merchants of London and New York, who would settle it peacefully and with honor to both nations, he expressed the longing and faith of all business interests.

Second, the laborers. The great mass of American people are toilers, and their votes determine the policy of government. The workingman realizes that the cost of armies and war is enormous and knows that that cost is met by taxes of which he pays a large proportion. Nowhere else in the world is the working man such a power, such an intelligent force, so fully understanding the curse and cost of war.

Third, woman. Whether voting or not, woman has become an active and vigorous force in our national life. Nowhere is she a more potent factor in public life than in this country, and we may be sure that her forces will be ere long concentrated on a steadfast opposition to war.

For those who wish to follow this subject further we will gladly supply, in pamphlet form free of charge, the address of Hon. David J. Brewer, former Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, before the New Jersey State Bar Association at Atlantic City on June 12.

Further Suggestions for Discussion

What is the next great step in the forwarding of the Peace Movement?

The International duty of the United States and Great Britain.

Notes. There is little or no opposition in this country to the Peace Movement.

All present information points to the conclusion that American diplomacy will, before the end of the present presidential term, frame a Peace Policy that will win the plaudits of the world.

Summing up of the situation by the Leader or chosen spokesman.

Music, recitations, refreshments. Some suggested hymns and recitations and The Peace Hymn herewith published may be used in this part of the programme.

Announcement of next place of meeting.

Announcement. Pamphlet for the third meeting of the Peace League Circles will be "Union for World Peace," from the speech of Sir Edward Grey in the British House of Commons on March 13, 1911. This pamphlet contains, too, the interesting report of Baron d'Estournelles de Constant on "The Limitation of Armaments," also Hon. Elihu Root's speech at the recent New York Peace Congress and the famous speech of President Taft in New York City on March 22, 1910. This pamphlet will be forwarded on application free of charge to the Secretaries of all CHRISTIAN HERALD Peace League Circles.

All who propose to be identified with the Peace Circle Movement and who desire to organize Peace Circles in their communities are asked to communicate with the Secretary of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD Peace League, Bible House, New York City.

A new hymn of international peace was sung recently in some of the New York churches. It was written by George Huntington and is sung to the tune of "America" or the British national anthem. The words are:

Two empires by the sea,
Two nations great and free,
One anthem raise.
One race of ancient fame,
One tongue, one faith, we claim
One God, whose glorious name
We love and praise.

What deeds our fathers wrought,
What battles we have fought,
Let fame record.
Now vengeful passion cease;
Come victories of peace:
Nor hate, nor pride's caprice,
Unsheath the sword.

Though deep the sea and wide,
'Twixt realm and realm, its tide
Binds strand to strand.
So be the gulf between
Gray coasts and islands green,
With bonds of peace serene
And friendship spanned.

Now may the God above
Guard the dear lands we love,
Both east and west,
Let love more fervent glow,
As peaceful ages go,
And strength yet stronger grow,
Blessing and blest.

There Is a Church In Which No Wedding Or Funeral Can Be Held

In which a sermon is never preached: which has no minister: no organ: no altar. Yet people from all over the world come to the church and love it and speak of it with gratitude. It was all the idea of one woman.

No one can read of this church but feels that there is a tremendous thought here.

Oddly enough, the church has hardly been written of. That is why the story, by the man who knows it better than any one else, strikes one with such a fresh interest.

It is in the August LADIES' HOME JOURNAL.

For 15 Cents You Have It

A Woman Refused to Marry a Man

Yet she loved him: she loves him today. And it was all because she found she couldn't sit in a room with him except on a sofa beside him. But she believes she avoided the Divorce Court. And she sees there are scores of folks, some engaged and some married, who should do or should have done what she did.

She feels now she has found an "insurance against divorce:" she even calls it "my cure for divorce." It is a point of view on marriage that is unusual but marvelously true.

It is worth reading: this woman's story. She tells it herself. It is called "Why I Did Not Marry: and Why I Think Some Other Folks Shouldn't, Either."

It is in the August LADIES' HOME JOURNAL.

For 15 Cents You Have It

HOW TO BE A HERO*

Sunday School Lesson by Dr. and Mrs. Wilbur F. Crafts

Two Kinds of Courage

THERE is physical courage, and there is moral courage. The first is shown by effort to save life, regardless of personal danger; the second by unflinching bravery in standing for the right when opposition makes it difficult to do so. Both kinds have their heroes. If we should compare them, we would say that the moral hero is the greater, because his courage is formed through the discipline of judging between right and wrong in the light of God's truth, thus confirming him in every good thought, word and work. The hero of physical courage is largely made by the circumstances which suddenly confront him. He actually rushed into danger, and afterwards has been heard saying: "I don't see what else I could have done." Dr. Richard S. Storrs, in an address to the students of Union College, described moral heroism as "strength of heart; strength to endure as well as to resist; to pursue and achieve as well as to attempt; to sacrifice self altogether, if need be, on behalf of any justified conviction; a thorough consent of judgment, conscience, imagination, affection, all vitalized and active; and a certain invincible firmness of will as the effect of such a consent—this is implied in a really abounding and masterful courage. It is not impatient. It is not injurious. It is not the creature of fractious and vehement will-power in man. It is associated with great convictions, has its roots in profound moral experiences, is nourished by thoughts of God and the hereafter. It is as sensitive, kindly, gentle in spirit as it is persistent and highly resolved. A chivalric manner is natural to it, especially toward such as are weak or alarmed; as natural as is his carol to the song bird, or its interplay of colors to the flowering tulip."

The hero of physical courage is often dashing, spectacular. He may endure only for one occasion, but the praise of men will be his for all time. The world does not always love the moral hero; it has scoffed at him, it has imprisoned him, it has put him to death.

Jeremiah a Moral Hero

Jeremiah was a born hero, for even before his birth that was God's purpose (Jer. 1: 4, 5.) Like Samuel, he began his work as a prophet of the Lord in his boyhood. When God first laid a prophet's duties upon him, he replied: "Ah, Lord God! Behold, I cannot speak, for I am a child." And the Lord answered him: "Say not, I am a child; for thou shalt go to all that I shall send thee, and whatsoever I command thee thou shalt speak. Be not afraid of their faces; for I am with thee to deliver thee" (Jer. 1: 7, 8). Jeremiah began to prophesy in the thirteenth year of the reign of the youthful Josiah, and he continued to speak for the Lord through forty-two years. We must know he had no easy task, for his field was the same nation, the kingdom of Judah, to whom Isaiah and Micah and other prophets had pleaded time and again to leave their idolatry and turn to the living God. After King Josiah died, Jeremiah lived through the reigns of three weak and wicked kings, three sons of the good king Josiah. One day the word of the Lord came to Jeremiah that he should go and stand in the court of the temple and tell the people again that if they would stop their wrongdoing, God would freely forgive them, and would not punish them by letting them be taken away to a far-away land as prisoners. But if they would not love and serve him, their beautiful city, Jerusalem, should become a place of ruins, broken like Shiloh, which had once been their holy city when they first entered Canaan.

These words made the people very angry, and they even proposed to kill Jeremiah, probably by stoning him. If Jeremiah had been a moral coward, instead of a moral hero, he would have been frightened, and perhaps would have said: "I did not mean just what I said." But he did nothing of that kind. When the great men, the priests and the princes, all came together, Jeremiah was brought in as a prisoner before them, and still he was not afraid. He answered them that he had spoken the words which God gave him to speak, and they might do with him as they pleased, either kill him, or save him alive—that he would not change his words. Jeremiah was so brave, doing just what God told him to do, that the priests and the princes themselves became afraid to do any harm to Jeremiah and so they told the people: "This man is not worthy of death." And they let Jeremiah go free.

Another Moral Hero

John Kant, a minister of God, was riding through a gloomy forest when night was coming on. It was very still, for even the little birds had gone to sleep. John Kant was an old man with white flowing hair and beard. As he rode along alone, he suddenly heard the noise of many feet, and presently fierce and wicked-looking men stood in front of him. "Give us your money! Everything, now!" The old man got down from his horse, saying: "I am at your mercy. Here is my purse, my gold chain, my ring, my prayer-book. See, I give them all; but I pray you spare my life." Perhaps you think I am telling you a story of a coward instead of a hero. "Is it true that this is all? Have you no more money?" asked the leader fiercely. "It is indeed all I possess," answered the minister. "Then you may go." And the robbers made way for the old man, and he started away on foot, for they had taken his horse.

As he walked along, something hard struck against his arm, and he opened his cloak. "My gold!" he exclaimed joyfully. "Oh, I had forgotten the gold which I had stitched in the lining of my robe. It will buy food and shelter for me." But in the next breath he said: "I have told a lie. I must go back and confess." Then he went back and found the robbers, and holding out the gold he said: "I have told you a lie, but not intentionally. Fear and anxiety confused me, therefore pardon me." The robbers looked in amazement at the white-haired, defenseless old man; then one man stepped forward, and put back the purse which they had taken away, and into which they put the gold he had brought; another robber put his gold chain around his neck; another put the gold ring on his finger; another gave him back his prayer-book; and then they told him to go safely on his journey. But first Dr. Kant stood among the robber band and prayed to God for them all; then he left them. We must believe that it was not so easy for the robbers to steal from any one else after that, and perhaps they gave up stealing altogether.

It might be thought in the beginning of the story that the old minister was a coward; but in the end we saw he was indeed a hero, a moral hero.

An Indian Moral Hero

His name was Walla Tonaki, and he belonged to the Navajo tribe. He had been guilty of some offense for which the Indians said he should be put to

Continued on next page

*The International Sunday School Lesson for August 6, 1911. Jeremiah Tried and Acquitted. Jer. 26: 7-19. GOLDEN TEXT: "The Lord is my light and my salvation; whom shall I fear?" Ps. 27: 1.

The Good Road For Universal Service

Every man's home faces on a road which connects with every other road and leads to every other home throughout the whole land.

Main highways connect with cross-roads so that a man can go where he chooses easily and comfortably if conditions are favorable. But the going is not always the same; some roads are good—some are bad.

The experts in the South illustrate the difference by showing four mules drawing two bales of cotton slowly over a poor, muddy cross-road, and two mules drawing eight bales of cotton rapidly over a first-class macadam highway.

The Bell Telephone lines are the roads over which the speech of the nation passes.

The highways and by-ways personal communication are 12,000,000 miles of wire conne ing 6,000,000 telephones in hon on these highways. Steadily lines are being extended to ev man's home.

The public demands that all roads of talk shall be good roa It is not enough to have a syst that is universal; there must macadamized highways for talk the way to every man's home. single section of bad telephone l is enough to block communication confine it to the immediate locali

Good going on the telephone lir is only possible with one poli and one system. Good goi everywhere, at all times, is the a of the Bell system.

AMERICAN TELEPHONE AND TELEGRAPH COMPAN
AND ASSOCIATED COMPANIES

One Policy One System Universal Servi

For 18 Years We Have Paid 5%

THE earnings of our patrons are compounded semi-annually, or remitted by check if preferred, and are paid upon funds from the day of deposit to the day of withdrawal. Our depositors have the excellent combination of thorough safety of capital, liberal earnings, with the privilege of withdrawal, whenever desired upon short notice.

Depositors in All Parts of the World

In 18 years this Company's assets have increased from $9000 to over $2,300,000. Loans and investments are made, following conservatively the stringent regulations of the New York State Banking Laws; deposits are secured by mortgages on the best class of New York and Suburban Real Estate, the strongest security.

Write for Information

INDUSTRIAL SAVINGS & LOAN CO. NEW YORK CITY

Industrial Savings & Loan Co.
2 Times Bldg., B'way & 42d St., N.Y.

"RANGER" BICYCL
Have imported roller chains, sprocket pedals; New Departure Coaster-Brake Hubs; Puncture Proof Tires; highest equipment and many advanced features sessed by no other wheels. Guaranteed
FACTORY PRICES are less others ask for cheap wheels. Other re models from $10 up. A few good sec hand machines $3 to $8.
10 DAYS' FREE TRIAL bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone price until you get our big new catalog special prices and a marvelous new A postal brings everything. Write it now.
TIRES Coaster Brake Rear Wheels, parts, and sundries half usual pr Rider Agents everywhere are coining money selling cycles, tires and sundries. Write today.
MEAD CYCLE CO. Dept. L-71, CHICA

AGENTS! 100% PROFIT

Can be Retailed at $2. Fully Guaranteed

New patented Automatic Razor Stropper. Automatically puts a perfect edge on any razor, old style or safety. Big seller. Every man wants one. Write quick for terms, prices and territory.
C. Brandt Cutlery Co., 84 W. Broadway, N.Y.City

MANAGER wanted every city and county, handle good paying business, legitimate, new, exclusive control; no insurance or book canvassing. Address C. Halstead, 43 W. 34th St., New York.

"DON'T SHOUT"

"I hear you. I can hear now as well as anybody. 'How?' Oh, something new—The MORLEY PHONE. I've a pair in my ears now, but they are invisible. I would not know I had them in, myself, only that I hear all right."

The MORLEY PHONE for the DEAF

makes low sounds and whispers plainly heard. Invisible, comfortable, weightless and harmless. Anyone can adjust it. Over 0 Hundred Thousand Sold. Write for booklet and testimonia
THE MORLEY CO., Dept. 754, Perry Building, Philadelph

YOU CAN AFFORD to have a new Song Book in your Church or Sunday School, and one for every person when you can get "FAMILIAR SONGS OF THE GOSPEL" for $3 for 100. Words and music, 83 very best songs. Sample copy 5 Cents. E. A. K. Hackett, 100 North Wayne St., Fort Wayne, Ind.

Successful Woman Pastor

HE Friends' Church of Mount Airy, N. C., is distinguished by the fact at it has a woman pastor, Rev. eanah Henderson Hobson, who has e largest congregation in the city. he has been a minister for seventeen ars, and during that time has trav-led in twenty-eight States and from ea to sea as an evangelist. She has nade hundreds of converts, married ver fifty couples, conducted more than hundred funerals, and has been astor of several churches in Indiana nd Illinois. She has many calls o evangelistic work in other churches, is she is considered safe and sound in doctrine.

Rev. Leanah Henderson Hobson

Her messages of repentance, faith in Christ, consecration and divine guidance are strong, simple and practical. Mrs. Hobson speaks in a strong, clear and sweetly intoned voice. She is master of a splendid vocabulary and illustrates with great aptness. These qualities render her preaching extremely popular with both young and old of all classes.

In the pastoral work of her church Mrs. Hobson has met with unique success. The deep interest of a woman who is pastor, wife and mother in one is a new experience for her congregation, and this, coupled with a charming personality, is winning her a very warm place in the hearts of the people.

I. B. MARSHALL.

Sallie's First Victory

IN THE foothills of Kentucky there is a great deal of interest in Presidential elections, and numerous queer bets and promises are made in connection with them.

One old man, Mr. H., said that if a certain candidate was elected, he never would take off his shirt. The candidate was elected, and the old gentleman kept his vow in letter as well as in spirit for several years, until his oldest daughter, Sallie, went up into Ohio, and had some experience in ways of doing things there.

She was a strapping girl, as big as her father, and as filled with determination. After her return, when she realized for the first time the condition of her father and her home, she went to work to clean things up, and began with her father.

She went to the poles which hung across the room to hold the clothes, and got a clean shirt, then taking the shotgun, she went in search of her victim, and insisted that he put on the clean garment she presented him. Still intent on his vow, he refused to do so, until realizing that she was able and apparently willing to use the gun, he reluctantly donned the clean shirt, saying as he did so, "Wall, Sallie, I reckon you beat me that time; but the next time you won't get the gun."

Sunday School Lesson

Continued from preceding page

death, according to the Indians' rule. He begged leave first to go and fulfil a promise he had made to some far-away friends. The Navajos had such confidence in him that they permitted him to go hundreds of miles without a guard to bring him back. He simply gave them his promise that he would return to be shot at the set time. And he was there, the tribe was in waiting, and at the very hour set Tonaki appeared and quietly faced them ready for death.— (Condensed from the Youth's Companion.)

All military men know about the two-o'clock-in-the-morning courage. It is claimed that at that hour vitality is at the lowest ebb, and if soldiers are found to be brave in battle, or in case of attack, at that hour, they should be counted among the bravest of the brave, safe to be trusted at any time. True courage knows no times for weakness.

A Small Moral Hero

Boys do not need to wait to grow up before they can become moral heroes. The probability is if they do not start out on that line early they will never be heroes at all.

Fred was missing one night about sunset. His mother was getting anxious, for she always wished him to be home early. A neighbor, coming in, said a number of boys had gone to the river to swim, and he thought it likely Fred was with them. "No," said the mother, "he promised me he would not go there without my leave, and he always keeps his word."

But seven o'clock came, then eight, and mother was still listening for Fred's step; but it was half past eight before his shout and whistle were heard when he ran in at the gate.

"Confess now," said the neighbor, "that you have been to the river with the other boys, and so kept away till late."

How the boy's eyes flashed, and the crimson mounted to his cheeks!

"No, sir; I promised my mother that I would never go there without her leave, and do you think I'd lie about it? I helped James to find the cows that had strayed into the woods, and did not think I should stay so late."

"I think," said the neighbor, turning to the mother as he took his hat to go home, "there is comfort in store for you with that boy. Such a boy as that will make a noble man."

He was a moral hero before he was grown to be a man, and it is almost certain that he will be a moral hero as long as he lives.

A Hint for Teachers of Children

It would be well to begin the lesson with the last story—that of the boy who was true to his mother. Then tell the story of the Indian boy, Walla Tonaki. Afterward tell the story of Jeremiah as an example of the kind of man brave and true boys grow up to be, or would have been in the case of Tonaki if he had been allowed to live. Let the Golden Text be taught as a reason why no one should fear to say and do the right anywhere he may be, or however dangerous the circumstances seem to be: "The Lord is my light and my salvation; whom shall I fear?" It would be well for the teacher to make a simple banner, with these words cut out of paper and pasted on, to hang in the class-room. Call it the "Never-be-afraid motto," and have the children repeat it every Sabbath for several weeks, perhaps for a whole quarter.

Good Jewelers Everywhere Endorse Our Campaign for Reliable Watch Cases

TRADE MARK. CRESCENT GOLD FILLED Reg. U.S. Pat. Off.

TRADE MARK. JAS. BOSS GOLD FILLED Reg. U.S. Pat. Off.

Of all merchants the jeweler is most dependent on a reputation for integrity. He sells upon honor. He is held responsible for the quality of his goods.

That is why good jewelers everywhere are writing us and pledging their hearty support in our campaign for "legitimate gold-filled" watch cases and our fight on spurious "guarantees."

Our Crescent and Jas. Boss gold-filled cases are standard with the fine jewelry trade and have been for fifty years.

Look for our trade marks when you buy. They insure the quality you pay for, the thickness of the gold, the depth and richness of the design, and the service you have a right to expect.

The Keystone Watch Case Co.
Established 1853
Philadelphia

BONDS
Secured by Selected
NEW YORK REAL ESTATE
Yield 6% Net Annually.
(Payable Semi-Annually)

An issue selected by careful investors, who for many years have recognized their unsurpassed combination of

SECURITY and INCOME

SEND FOR FREE BOOKLET 14.

15 YEARS' RESULTS:
Assets over $3,000,000
Surplus nearly . . . $1,000,000
Repaid Investors, over $1,000,000

New York Realty Owners
489 FIFTH AVENUE NEW YORK

KEEP YOUR RAZOR SHARP

3-IN-ONE

Don't blame the razor if it dulls quickly. Maybe it's your fault. Rub a few drops of 3-in-One oil on your razor strop. When leather is pliable strop as usual. Any razor will cut easier, better and stay sharp longer. After using, draw blade between thumb and finger moistened with 3-in-One. This prevents rust, keeps edge smooth and keen, always sharp and ready for immediate use. Don't scrape your face. Use 3-in-One on your razor and shave right.

FREE Write for liberal free sample and special scientific circular. Try it yourself. 3-IN-ONE OIL COMPANY, 54 Broadway, New York.

I Was Deaf 25 Years
NOW I HEAR PLAINLY

with this artificial EARDRUM in my ears. I never feel them—they are perfectly comfortable, and no one sees them. I will tell you the true story, how I got deaf, and how I made myself hear.

Medicated Ear Drum Pat. July 15, 1908

ARTIFICIAL EAR DRUM COMPANY
2 ADELAIDE STREET DETROIT, MICH.

STAMMERING HABIT
permanently corrected. Natural speech taught. Reed Method being introduced into public schools. Department for training teachers. Endorsed by highest authorities. Special summer classes for children. Trial Week Free.
REED SCHOOL 367 Hubbard Ave., Detroit, Mich.

The Story of Joseph

Continued from page 750

the whole family had arrived the Pharaoh gave the province of Goshen to the clan of Israel, and asked Joseph to pick out any of his brothers fitted for the position to be appointed shepherds of the royal flocks and herds. It was a proud day in the life of the grand vizier when he took his venerable father to call on the young king of Egypt. After complimenting Jacob on his great age, the greatest monarch of his time bowed before Israel, the "prince of Jehovah," and received his blessing.

Jacob lived in Egypt seventeen years. The grand vizier visited him many times in his home in the land of Goshen, bringing his sons Manasseh and Ephraim to receive their grandfather's parting blessing, before the grand old man died, at the age of one hundred and forty-seven years, after bestowing his prophetic blessing on all his sons. Joseph had his father's body embalmed and placed in a coffin like those of the royal Egyptians, and the Pharaoh ordered the court to go into mourning as if Israel had been his own father. When the burial occurred in the burying ground of Abraham and Isaac, the natives in Canaan named the place where the longest ceremonies were held Abel-mizraim, or "Mourning of the Egyptians."

When the brothers had returned from their father's funeral they began to think Joseph had been kind to them only because of his love for his father. They talked the matter over among themselves. Never having forgiven themselves, they could not comprehend the forgiveness of the brother who had suffered so much at their hands. They saw how completely they were in his power, as he had once been in theirs, and now the father, the family intercessor, was gone. So they said to one another, "It may be that Joseph will hate us now and pay us back for the great wrong we did him." So they sent this word to him, as if it were their father's dying message:

"Thy father commanded us, before he died, to say to Joseph: 'Forgive, I pray thee now, the sin of thy brothers, for they did thee a great wrong.' So now we pray thee to pardon the transgression of the servants of the God of thy father."

Joseph sent for his brothers once more and they grieved his great heart by falling upon their faces before him like criminals begging for their lives. He talked to them again in soothing words as he had talked on that memorable day when the Man of Egypt knelt before them as their long-lost brother.

And Joseph said to them: "Do not be afraid, for I am not God to pardon and give life. Though you tried to do me a wrong, God meant it for good, to bring to pass what has really happened, that I might save the lives of many people. There now, do not feel sorry any more. I will go on taking care of you and your little ones."

THE END

A Friend to the Down and Out

IN 1894 a mechanical engineer was introduced to the Bowery Mission when Superintendent Childs was in charge at 105 Bowery. This engineer, Mr. Charles W. Knight, there met "Mother" Bird and was inspired by the beautiful work of this woman of culture, who was devoting her life to uplift men. He assisted her in Sunday services and became a worker among the men at the Mission. He has since served in various churches without salary in uplifting the fallen. He continued as a volunteer worker, doing what he could alone until he met Mrs. A. J. Fox and her sister, Miss M. L. Stebbins, who encouraged him to open the "Knight Home" on West Fourth Street, New York City. This name was afterward changed to the "West Side Aid for Friendless Men." In the Knight Home no attempt had been made to lodge the men, its founder seeking rather to feed the hungry, get them properly clothed, and help them to get work, using the lodging houses when necessary.

Mr Charles W. Knight

At the West Side Aid, a similar Samaritan work is done, but on a much wider scale. Men whom the churches cannot reach are inspired to take courage and begin a new life. Multitudes have been helped spiritually and physically. No applicant is turned away, and relief and advice are cheerfully given. No appeals are made to the public, the workers, who serve without salary, seeking in a quiet way to relieve distress.

About a year ago Rev. Ezra T. Sanford, pastor of the North Baptist Church, New York, who had known Mr. Knight several years, became interested in the work. He had already had much experience in dealing with the problem of the poor and needy. Dr. Sanford was soon deeply interested in the work of the mission. Mr. Knight is an Episcopalian, and other denominations are represented in the corps of workers, all of whom, even the housekeeper, give their services gratuitously and willingly. On Thanksgiving, Christmas and New Year's, turkey dinners were served to cheer friendless men. Last year about 300 free meals were served per month, and 100 homeless were supplied with beds and with respectable clothing to make them presentable for employment.

Mr. Knight understands the needs of men who have been separated from God, and knows how to deal with their troubles. In his younger days he was separated from his own friends and passed through an experience which qualified him to understand and to sympathize with the sufferings of others. A few good friends are helping him in this work. Any reader who desires to know more about the West Side Aid and its benevolent work can do so by addressing Mr. Knight at 243 West Eleventh Street, New York City.

Called Higher

Mrs. Clara U. Hart, of Lyons, Ia., passed to her reward on March 14. She was a constant reader of this paper for many years.

Abby P. Hastings (84), Lunenburg, Mass., a lover of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, entered into rest March 4, after a life of loving service.

Mrs. Susan L. Martin was called to a better world December 8, 1910, aged 87 years, 6 months. She was a life-long Christian.

Huntington Powell was called to the heavenly home March 8, 1911. He was a reader for fifteen or more years of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD.

Mrs. Sophia Keck (85) passed on to the great beyond from her homestead at Oakwood, O., on March 18. "She was beloved of the entire countryside."

Don't Worry— There Are Beans That Do Digest

Much is said nowadays about beans not digesting. But remember the reference is to home-baked beans.

They are hard to digest—that fact is notorious. They simply ferment.

But, shall we go without beans—Nature's choicest food? Shall we forfeit this national dish?

Beans are 84 per cent. nutriment—richer than beef. They are cheap and delicious—everyone likes them. Why not get beans that do digest?

That's why we bake in steam ovens, heated to 245 degrees. That's why we bake in small parcels so the full heat goes through.

Your home-baked beans, below the top, rarely get heated above 100 degrees. That's why they don't digest.

Beans call for fierce heat, applied for hours. To apply without crisping, without bursting the beans, one must use ovens cased in superheated steam.

With this dish, factory baking is an utter necessity. But think what else it means.

The beans come ready to serve. And they come to your table as fresh and savory as the moment they came from the oven.

The beans are all of one size—all baked alike. All are nut-like, mealy and whole.

The sauce is made of whole, vine-ripened tomatoes. And the sauce, like the pork, is baked with the beans. The delicious zest goes all through.

We have spent many years in perfecting this dish, and nobody has ever approached it. Don't you think it worth while, with this premier food, to serve the best that's baked?

Do you think that it pays to bake beans in hot weather when our cooks, with steam ovens, are at your disposal?

Tell your grocer, before you answer these questions, to send you a few Van Camp's.

"The National Dish"

Van Camp's BAKED WITH TOMATO SAUCE PORK AND BEANS

"The National Dish"

Three sizes: 10, 15 and 20 cents per can.

Van Camp Packing Company (Established 1861) Indianapolis, Ind.

(155)

Young People's Societies

The Divine Purpose*

SOMETIMES it must have seemed to Paul's congregations, if we may judge from his letters, as though he pressed almost too forcibly the matter of good works; but this was simply because he knew it was necessary to emphasize that point. Most of them knew how to be good, just as most of us know how to be good; but it is the practice of these fine theories which is the hard part of our religion. "If to do were as easy as to know what were good to do, chapels had been churches and poor men's cottages, princes' palaces. I can easier teach twenty what were good to be done, than be one of the twenty to follow mine own teaching."

Thus spoke one of the wisest of the characters of our greatest poet, and it is just as true to-day as ever.

The result of a religion which produces merely a flow of fine feelings and a glow of virtuous excitement within; and which does not manifest itself in active efforts to make the world better and help the unfortunate, simply brings discredit upon the whole cause of religion.

"A man may be very active," says Horace Bushnell, in The New Life, "in warnings, exhortations, public prayers, plans of beneficence, contributions of time and money; but suppose him to be a stranger to the patient virtues of Christ—railing at adversaries, blowing blasts of scorn upon those whom he wishes to reform, impetuous, wilful, irritable—how much good is that man going to do by all his activity? What can he do but irritate and vex, and, as far as he is concerned, render the very name of religion odious?"

The great sins are quickly recognized. A man knows that if he breaks any one of the Ten Commandments outright he is failing to practise his religion; but there are a thousand subtle forms of irreligion and of inconsistency to which pretty good Christians allow themselves to become victims, often half unconsciously. Professor H. B. Wright names (in his book, The Will of God) some of these "minor sins." Are you in danger of committing any of them?

"Do you brood over your sorrows, thus throwing a cloud over all around you? Are you personally untidy? Are you discourteous to those who, you think, are beneath you? Do you give way to anxiety and nervousness, as no Christian should? Are you fond of show and display? Do you indulge in suspicion, prejudice, conceit, envy, pride? Do you overeat or overdrink? Are you boisterous and rough in manner? Are you impatient with physical pain?

There are none of us who do not at some time or other err in these ways. In so far as we do, we show ourselves not "redeemed from iniquity," not "zealous of good works." Let us watch and "purify" ourselves.

*Topic of the Epworth League for Sunday, August 6. TEXTS: Eph. 2 : 10; Titus 2 : 14; Heb. 6 : 10-12.

Great Lives: Job*

MARTIN LUTHER, in his introduction to his translation of the book of Job, says that the author proves in it the righteousness of God. In another work he says: "I look upon the book of Job as a true history, yet I do not believe that all took place just as it is written, but that an ingenious, pious and learned man brought it into its present form."

The best modern critics believe also that the story rests on facts, but that its form and the reasoning and characterizations in it are the product of creative genius. It is impossible for any one to determine where fact ends in the book and the embellishments of tradition begin. We must simply accept its wonderful poetry and its ethical lessons as inspired for the especial help of God's people, and be thankful that we possess them.

Many theories have been advanced regarding the authorship of the book. The best authorities are inclined to attribute it to Moses, who during his long sojourn in Midian had time to do it, while his education and natural genius fitted him for it. It may have been revised later by Solomon or by some scholar of his time.

Philosophically, it may be said that the chief lesson taught in it is one that was needed not only in Job's day, but long after, if indeed it is not needed still: the lesson that afflictions in this world are not sent as punishments for sin.

To all of the accusations and confident explanations of his false comforters Job replies with dignity, that though he cannot understand why such miseries have been allotted to him, since he has honestly tried to serve his God, yet he will not accuse his Maker of injustice.

"With him is wisdom and strength. Though he slay me, yet will I trust in him."

But he bitterly pleads with God that he would show to him wherein he has erred, if indeed, which he clearly doubts, sorrow like his is inflicted solely as a punishment for sin. The wrath of his friends that he should question the long-received theory to that effect, knows no bounds. They call him conceited, even blasphemous, yet still Job reiterates that, in spite of the destruction that has come upon him, he knows that his Redeemer liveth. He adds, "Wherefore do the wicked become mighty in power and the tabernacles of robbers prosper?"

How do you account for it?

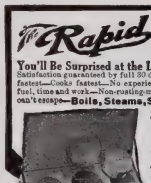
No doubt Job's friends were right in insisting that he had sinned. No doubt he was wrong in asserting so vehemently his perfect integrity; but God assures him in the end that his good intentions are accredited to him as virtue and implies that the theory which Job has tried to impress upon his friends is true—that sin is not always punished nor virtue rewarded in this world, but that in infinite wisdom our lot, whatever it may be, is meted out to us in the way that is best.

*Christian Endeavor Topic for Sunday, August 6. TEXTS: Job 6 : 1-11; 42: 1-6.

The War in the Heart

TAKE the war from out our hearts,
Take the flame from out our eyes,
Heal the hatred of our souls
With the sunlight of the skies.
Take the swords from out our tongues,
Take the bitterness of speech,
That the world may walk in love
Sea to sea and beach to beach.

What's the congress, what's the cry
Of the eloquent, the great,
For the peace, if in the eye
And the heart abideth hate!
Take the lightning from our thought,
Take the thunder from our word,
That the voice of love may hide
In our bosoms like a bird.



Take the anger from our breasts
And the envy from our creed,
Take the lightning from our thought,
Till the hearts around us bleed.
Take the selfish, foolish pride
From our bosoms, and the sin—
For there cannot be a peace
Where the mortal passions grin.

All the while, at times, we go
With a smooth and smiling tongue,
But the furnace fires below
With the smoke of war are hung.
Take the shard and take the shell
From our bosoms—not till then
Can we take the flags of white
To the parliaments of men!

Baltimore Sun.

The Rapid Combination Roasting and Boiling Fireless Cooker

You'll Be Surprised at the Low Direct Price I'll Make You
Satisfaction guaranteed by full 30 days' trial or no charge—Pays for self fastest—Cooks fastest—No experience necessary—Saves 8⁰ per cent on fuel, time and work—Non-rusting-metal-lined—Perfect insulation—Steam can't escape—Boils, Steams, Stews—Roasts, Bakes, Fries.

30 FULL DAYS' FREE TRIAL
Complete, With Genuine Aluminum Cooking Utensils Free. Also Metal Composition Heat-Radiators. Can't Break or Crack.
Cover completely protects cooker from dust, and makes it useful as a seat. Send name today for Over-125-Splendid-Recipe Book and Catalog Free, and low direct-to-you factory prices.
Wm. Campbell Co., Dept. 2 Detroit, Mich.
BOOK FREE

UNLESS IT'S Duplex RICHMOND, VA. D E TRADE MARK IT'S AN IMITATION

Specify "Duplex-Richmond"
We have made as many permanent customers for the Duplex Envelope System of Church Collections
by the excellence of our service as by the excellence of our system.
DUPLEX—Richmond, Va.

CHILDREN who drink Hires are happy—rosy cheeked. That's because of the stored-up goodness of roots and herbs and berries. With a package of you can make five gallons of the best old-fashioned home-made temperance drink—sparkling, refreshing, healthful—and such fun to make.

Hires Household Extract

Sold everywhere—or a package sent by mail on receipt of 25 cents.

CHARLES E. HIRES CO., 202 N. Broad St., Phila., Pa.

"THOU FOOL!"

And Eleven Other Remarkable Sermons Never Before Published

BY THE LATE EVANGELIST

DWIGHT L. MOODY

THESE TWELVE GREAT SERMONS are replete with the spiritual fire and vigor of Moody in the prime of his evangelistic ministry. They form a connected Series and will be welcomed with genuine satisfaction by all who love the Truth of the Gospel Message. To pastors, evangelists, Sunday School teachers, Christian workers, Bible students, and lovers of the Word everywhere, they will be found invaluable.

These sermons were discovered recently by Mr. Moody's old stenographer, the Rev. W. D. Bridge, in long-forgotten notebooks, and their genuineness is vouched for by Mr. Moody's family. They bring the reader to the very foot of the Throne of Grace, and speak to the heart with a strange and irresistible power concerning our duty here and the joys of the life beyond.

Rev. F. B. Meyer called Moody the "Uncrowned King of Preachers; rugged, terse, full of mother-wit, direct and sharp as a two-edged sword." The secret of Moody's power is revealed in these twelve wonderful sermons, which come at this time as special messages to a world that needs to be stirred from its spiritual apathy and deadly indifference. His sermons have an inspiration and a spiritual uplift possessed by those of no other preacher or evangelist of this age.

These hitherto unknown Sermons are now published by THE CHRISTIAN HERALD and offered on terms easily within the reach of all. They make a compact volume of 240 pages, printed on good paper in a clear, legible type, easily read. The Book is bound in semi-flexible covers, with gold stamp on front. The following are the titles of this Wonderful Series of Sermons:

Thou Fool	The Soul-Winner	Excuses
Power For Service	Working for Christ	Invitation and Altar Service
How Backsliders May Return	Trust	The Gospel
How to Deal With Inquirers	Instantaneous Salvation	God's Promises

How to Obtain These Sermons FREE

You may obtain this volume FREE, and have in your house a means of constant inspiration, merely by pointing out the good qualities of the CHRISTIAN HERALD to your friends, and having one of them take a trial subscription. Send us 50 cents for a four months' New subscription (17 weeks) mailed to any address in the United States or Canada, and we will send you this remarkable volume without charging you one cent. Address,

CHRISTIAN HERALD, BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK

—B-CORY KILVERT—

I can't help it, Willie, when you bring home a box of Post Toasties

—A sweet, crisp food for any meal.

"The Memory Lingers"

Postum Cereal Company, Limited
Battle Creek, Mich., U. S. A.

Canadian Postum Cereal Co., Limited
Windsor, Ontario, Canada

Christian Herald

SUBSCRIPTION, $1.50 PER ANNUM
PUBLISHED 52 TIMES A YEAR

COPYRIGHT, 1911, BY THE CHRISTIAN HERALD

New York, August 2, 1911

VOL. 34—NO. 31. PRICE 5 CENTS
OFFICES: BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK

OUR · MAIL · BAG

Questions and Answers

W. K. C., Wilson, La. Please explain the origin of the word "Jew."

The word "Jew" was a name formed from that of the patriarch Judah, and applied in its first use to one belonging to the tribe or country of Judah, or rather, perhaps, to a subject of the separate kingdom of Judah. During the Captivity the term seems to have been extended to all the people of the Hebrew language and country, without distinction; and this loose application of the name was preserved after the restoration to Palestine, when it came to denote, not only every descendant of Abraham in the largest possible sense, but even proselytes who had no blood relation to the Hebrews.

A. C. H., Lancaster, Pa. Please explain the connection of verses 21 and 22 with verse 18 in Mark, chapter 2.

The discourse on fasting ends with verse 20. The discourse is recorded by the three first evangelists immediately after the feast which Matthew made to his Lord, and it was probably delivered on that occasion. See the division of topics in Luke 5: 36, showing that it was not a continuation of the previous subject but a slight digression, the one subject leading naturally to the other.

B. B., Denver, Colo. What Scripture is there forbidding one to take his own life — to commit suicide?

The passages bearing most directly on the subject are Job 14: 14 and Acts 16: 28. Murder, according to the divine Word, is a crime against which all nature revolts, and self-murder, though not separately specified, is included in this characterization. In the early Christian church suicides were regarded as criminals, denied Christian burial and deprived of all memorial honors. It is now considered a form of insanity. Certainly there is no other way of explaining the act of one who rashly casts off the burdens and responsibilities of life and rushes unprepared and unbidden before his Maker.

A. D. B., Adrian, Mich. Please define "baby incubator."

This is an apparatus containing a padded and ventilated chamber, usually having a transparent glass top, which is provided with heating arrangements that preserve a uniform temperature and humidity. The lives of prematurely born children are often saved by the use of these machines.

S. T. R., Middletown, N. Y. 1. In your answer to E. F. C., Ellenville, N. Y., you say, "Of course, one of the first duties, which should be invariably observed, is to worship in the temple." In the country, some of us live several miles from any place of worship. To do the necessary or permissible work, and walk several miles to worship, would be as laborious as to follow the plow all day. We are also commanded not to work the horse. Would it not be unmerciful to compel him to draw us to church, and thus deprive him of his needed rest? 2. Are saloons permitted to shield their places of business from outside view with curtains, in every State in the Union?

1. Where the distance between home and church is so great as to make attendance difficult, and in bad weather impracticable, an excellent plan adopted by many thousand is to have the church in the home. There can be no happiness nor blessing in a home where God is neglected and religious duties forgotten. A gathering of the home circle, with possibly a few neighbors added; an earnest, simple service, including Bible reading; a hymn or two, and a prayer, no matter how lame and simple the language, constitute acceptable worship. You must be the judge as to whether you are justified in considering the obstacles sufficient to prevent church attendance. There are many who think nothing of a ten-mile walk or drive to church, but this is a matter for the individual conscience, as there may be reasons that make it impracticable. 2. The saloons to which you refer are probably acting in violation of the law. You should refer the matter to the local district attorney.

W. L. K., Mercer, S. D. I hold that the truest patriot is he who will uphold every point and principle in our Constitution; and similarly we can also claim that the most loyal to God are those who contend for all the truths in Scripture. All kinds of reform work are going on in our country to-day. The end sought for is better social and political conditions.

Our correspondent contends that he who is truest to God and his laws is the best patriot. While this is doubtless true, we would not slight those whose patriotism and good citizenship lead them to do battle for better social and political conditions. Jesus himself took note of the social conditions of his time, and he did not hesitate to rebuke those who were guilty of abuses, who impoverished the poor and oppressed the weak. His sympathies were always with the suffering. It is therefore no mark of an inferior Christianity that a man should be an advocate of purer politics and social betterment; nor need it detract from his spiritual interest and usefulness. It is quite a different thing, however, where a preacher becomes a partisan in politics and uses his influence as such. He should rise above partisanship and speak and act for the general good. Thoughtful people naturally feel that partisanship is sadly out of place in the Christian pulpit. Although a minister should do his share at all times in denouncing public abuses, he should stand clear of and rise above entanglements. A preacher who does not hesitate to plunge recklessly into party politics is almost certain to narrow his spiritual influence and lose the confidence of a large number of his congregation.

W. V., Texas. Does the Bible condemn gambling? If not, why is it sinful?

The Jews do not seem to have known games of chance until they learned them from the Greeks. The soldiers who cast lots (perhaps with dice) for Jesus' garments were Roman soldiers. The "casting of the lot," which is frequently mentioned in the Bible, was in a sense a kind of gambling, but its use was restricted to balloting and for deciding questions in dispute or debate. (See Josh. 18: 11; Acts 1: 26; Lev. 16: 8; Num. 26: 55, etc.) There are many things which, though not specifically mentioned in Scripture, are condemned by the Church and held as sinful by all right-thinking people. Gambling is one of these. It has brought multitudes to ruin.

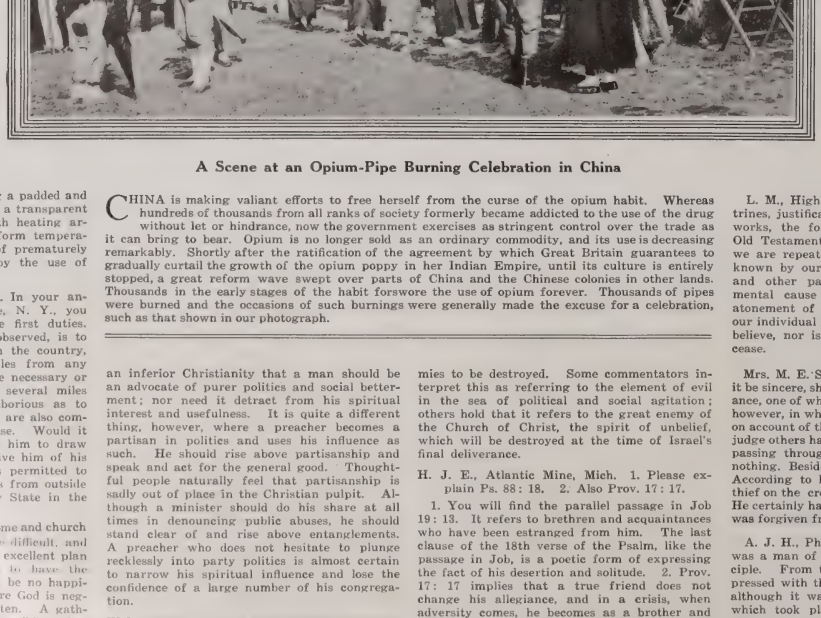
W. J., St. Cloud, Fla. What are the results and effects of putting alum in bread?

The effect on the bread itself is to preserve its whiteness and render it lighter by causing a greater expansion of the gas generated by the yeast. As alum is a powerful astringent, its effect upon the human stomach is to close the capillaries of the lining and thus prevent the secretion of the gastric juices. Indigestion is sure to follow its continued use or its use in large quantities. It will in time cause atrophy of the glands of the stomach.

Mrs. B. H., Triadelphia, O. Please explain Isa. 27: 1.

The chapter is a continuation of the three preceding ones. "Leviathan" is a name applied to potentates hostile to Israel, and also to the spiritual forces of evil, anti-typically to Satan, the "old serpent," the last of the enemies to be destroyed. Some commentators interpret this as referring to the element of evil in the sea of political and social agitation; others hold that it refers to the great enemy of the Church of Christ, the spirit of unbelief, which will be destroyed at the time of Israel's final deliverance.

H. J. E., Atlantic Mine, Mich. 1. Please explain Ps. 88: 18. 2. Also Prov. 17: 17.



1. You will find the parallel passage in Job 19: 13. It refers to brethren and acquaintances who have been estranged from him. The last clause of the 18th verse of the Psalm, like the passage in Job, is a poetic form of expressing the fact of his desertion and solitude. 2. Prov. 17: 17 implies that a true friend does not change his allegiance, and in a crisis, when adversity comes, he becomes as a brother and makes any sacrifice for your sake. See last clause of Prov. 18: 24 for an illustration of the idea.

J. L. C., Great Falls, Mont. What did leaven, which was forbidden at the Passover and required at Pentecost, typically represent?

Leaven is the ferment of yeast, applied to either liquids or solids. It has a penetrative and diffusive power and in this respect was emblematic of good or bad moral influence. Our Saviour adopted it as illustrating the growth of the kingdom in the individual heart and in the world at large. The ordinary leaven of the East is dough, kept until sour. It was also the type of corruption and of evil desire. The Jews were especially prohibited from its use during the seven days of the Passover, and even from having it in their houses. The sacrificial cakes of the meat offering were also required to be unleavened. On the other hand, the loaves used at the Pentecostal Feast were leavened, as they represented the usual food of man.

W. K. Q., Spencer, N. C. Why do the great Powers, including the United States, allow Turkey to slaughter women and children? Is it legitimate warfare?

Our correspondent's question is prompted by the critical situation in Albania, where outrages by the Turks are reported. If the Powers were in accord, such outbreaks could easily be prevented; but they rarely are in accord, and the slaughter-loving Moslem continues to abuse and slay his weaker Christian neighbors and his own Christian subjects. It has long been a disgrace to our so-called civilization that Turkey should have a free hand when any one of the three leading European governments could check it, were it not for the jealousies and the selfish interests of international politics.

A Scene at an Opium-Pipe Burning Celebration in China

CHINA is making valiant efforts to free herself from the curse of the opium habit. Whereas hundreds of thousands from all ranks of society formerly became addicted to the use of the drug without let or hindrance, now the government exercises as stringent control over the trade as it can bring to bear. Opium is no longer sold as an ordinary commodity, and its use is decreasing remarkably. Shortly after the ratification of the agreement by which Great Britain guarantees to gradually curtail the growth of the opium poppy in her Indian Empire, until its culture is entirely stopped, a great reform wave swept over parts of China and the Chinese colonies in other lands. Thousands in the early stages of the habit forswore the use of opium forever. Thousands of pipes were burned and the occasions of such burnings were generally made the excuse for a celebration, such as that shown in our photograph.

Miscellaneous

S. G. A., South Boston, Va. There is no such passage in the Bible, but you may possibly find its equivalent in the Apocrypha.

X. Y. Z., Westfield, N. J. The question is one for the individual conscience. It is very easy to cross the line where Sunday necessity ends and pleasure-making begins, but whatever is essential to health is not forbidden.

If Mrs. N. W. H., Soderville, Ore., will write to Dr. Sylvanus Stall, care of the Vir Publishing Company, 200 North Fifteenth Street, Philadelphia, Pa., to whom we referred her letter, she will receive a full reply. Dr. Stall is the author of What a Young Boy Ought to Know, and other excellent works in the same line.

L. M., Highland, Ill. Of the two great doctrines, justification by faith and justification by works, the former preponderates in both the Old Testament and the New Testament. Yet we are repeatedly told that our faith must be known by our works (see Rom. 4: 2, 3, 4, 5, and other passages). Faith is the instrumental cause of justification, and even the atonement of Jesus is not accepted for us, to our individual justification, until we individually believe, nor is it operative if our faith should cease.

Mrs. M. E. S., Perrydale, Ore. Repentance, if it be sincere, should lead to the works of repentance, one of which is restitution. There are cases, however, in which restitution may be impossible, on account of the lapse of years. We are not to judge others harshly. The repentant one may be passing through a struggle of which we know nothing. Besides, judgment belongs to God alone. According to human standards, the repentant thief on the cross would have died unforgiven. He certainly had no time for restitution; yet he was forgiven freely.

A. J. H., Phœnix, Ariz. Peter, it is believed, was a man of middle age when called as a disciple. From the first, he must have been impressed with the genuineness of Jesus' mission, although it was not until his second calling — which took place on the Sea of Galilee near Capernaum — that he became a "fisher of men" and left all to follow the Master. There is no reason to doubt the genuineness of Peter's conversion, although his denial of Jesus was a sad incident, yet one quickly repented and fully atoned for by Peter's later life. Had he not been a thorough believer, he could not have held his Lord's confidence and the first place among the apostles.

NEW YORK, AUGUST 2, 1911

THE · CHRISTIAN · HERALD

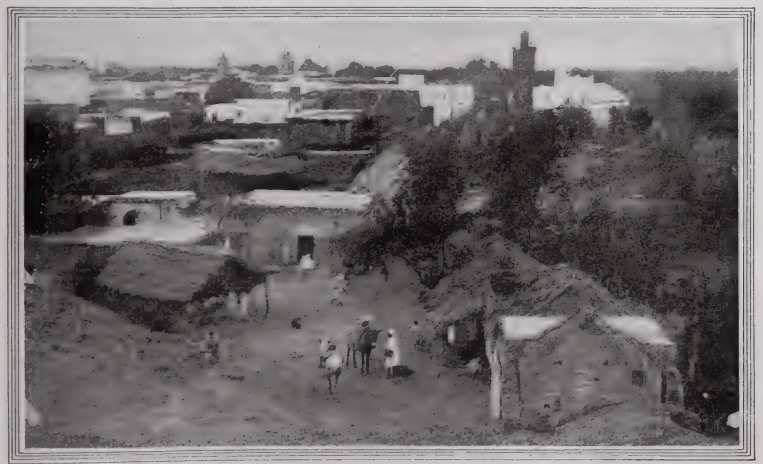
A WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED NEWSPAPER FOR THE HOME

Sultan Muley Hafid Ali and His Bodyguard

The Sultan Going to the Mosque

A Moroccan Sheik Leading His Command Toward Fez

Copyright by Brown Bros., 1911



RATTLING THE SABRE IN MOROCCO

WHILE the world in general has been aroused to the deepest indignation by the treatment which the Sultan of Morocco, after the relief of Fez by the French column, accorded to a neighboring tribe which had always remained loyal to him, the diplomats of Europe were engrossed in a consideration of the possibilities of international complications in North Africa, resulting in open hostilities. So keen was the fear of immediate trouble in Morocco, that the transactions upon the London Stock Exchange were practically suspended for a whole day.

As, according to the Algeciras agreement, France and Spain were to divide the supervision of the Moroccan Sultanate with equal responsibility, the other European countries had not felt any great personal responsibility or danger from the fact that France and Spain seemed to be playing at cross purposes there. While the Sultan was attempting by public manifestoes to quiet the indignation aroused among his people by his calling in foreign aid in the shape of French troops to aid him in ousting the Berbers, who had besieged his capital city for ninety days, the French and Spanish troops were advancing to different points in the country where their respective governments felt that their national positions needed strengthening. Though quite threatening enough, those developments had not disturbed the general calm to such an extent that the balance of affairs was destroyed, when Germany, to the intense surprise of all Europe, dispatched a gunboat, the Panther, to Agadir, a "closed" port on the Atlantic coast of Morocco. Germany announced to the world that this was only for the protection of her national interests in that locality. The importance of Agadir rests in the fact that, though a small town of not more than 400 inhabitants, it has the best roadstead on the Atlantic coast of Morocco, and with development, would form an ideal naval station. This move was immediately the occasion of communication between the French and German Governments. The indignation of France was raised to white heat when Germany, recalling the gunboat, replaced it by a much larger vessel, the cruiser Berlin. The entire country immediately transferred its attention from the possibilities of trouble with Spain to a consideration of this aggression on the part of its ancient enemy, Germany. For a few days it seemed as if all Europe was likely to be embroiled. Great Britain has made public no statement of her position, but it is generally understood that she would fulfil her treaty obligations to France if necessity should arise. This opinion is given added plausibility by the fact that there can be little doubt that Britain would regard the establishment of a naval base by any foreign country so close to Gibralter, as a serious menace. Russia has also signified quite plainly her intention of preserving her treaty relations with France. The details of Germany's reasons for her disposition of a war vessel on the Moroccan coast just when its presence would be sure to cause great excitement in European diplomatic circles have not yet been explained.

A few days before the official conference between France and Germany was held in Paris, the attention of the French public and press was recalled to Spain by what they chose to term "provocations" from that country. The extension of Spanish military operations in Morocco was the first of these, and although that was considered sufficiently serious to rouse a storm in the French papers, it could not vie with the excitement caused by the dispatches which announced the capture and mistreatment of two Frenchmen by Spanish troops. A further dispatch from Tangier, which stated that the French consular agent at Alcazar, Morocco, had been temporarily arrested by a Spanish patrol, roused the Parisian papers almost to a frenzy. The French Government immediately instructed its chargé d'affaires at Madrid to furnish explanations not only of the mistreatment of the two citizens, but of the arrest of the consul. Spain upon its side is attempting to pass over and minimize the incident. One of the most widely circulated newspapers of the Spanish capital said in this connection: "France is trying to charge a mine, the explosion of which is apt to be followed by serious consequences." The entire situation is at the present time in a very badly mixed state. All the great Powers of Europe are watching the developments with the keenest interest, and all seem ready to resent any infringement of their territorial or protective rights. An attempt was made to involve the United States in the situation by calling Germany's move a trespass upon our interests; but these reports from France and England were met with an unqualified denial of any participation at Washington.

Official information has been kept secret to a great extent, and the resultant unrest in Europe is of itself likely to stir up a great deal of ill feeling. The present strained diplomatic relations are the most serious which have presented themselves in Europe since the Russo-Japanese War. The consultations between the representatives of France and Germany are still in progress, but there is little doubt that a peaceable settlement of the difficulties will be reached through the usual diplomatic channels.

A View Near Fez, Morocco, the Scene of the Greatest Disturbance in the Recent Revolt

The American Pulpit

A SERMON BY

Rev. Richard W. Jungfer*

FAITH IN CHRIST

TEXT: John 14:1—"Ye believe in God, believe also in me."

THE sermons of Christ always made a deep impression upon all who heard them. Never was this more the case than when he preached his last discourses. His disciples were deeply moved when the Master spoke of his sufferings and death. They showed it plainly in their faces. The Lord is not one who can look at their grief with indifference. He is one who feels with them and who shares their troubles. Like a true friend he comforts them. "Let not your heart be troubled: ye believe in God, believe also in me." Yes, they were lacking in faith. That this was the case with them they well knew. As they once asked the Master, "Lord, teach us how to pray," they also petitioned him, "Increase our faith." They were in need of this increase, for the Lord asked them when he calmed the angry sea, "Where is your faith?" Jesus said to Peter when he warned him to take care, "Simon, Simon, behold, Satan hath desired to have you, that he may sift you as wheat: but I have prayed for thee, that thy faith fail not." Our faith is not what it should be. This is clear when Jesus says, "Verily, verily, I say unto you, he that believeth in me, the works that I do shall he do also: and greater works than these shall he do." Again he says, "What things soever ye desire, when ye pray, believe that ye receive them, and ye shall have them."

If the works do not occur to-day as they did at that time, it is for the same reason that none occurred in Nazareth; for it is written, "And he did not many mighty works there because of their unbelief." When the Lord healed the lunatic, his disciples asked him, "Why could not we cast the devil out?" Jesus answered them, "Because of your unbelief: for verily I say unto you, if ye have faith as a mustard seed, ye shall say unto this mountain, Remove hence to yonder place; and it shall remove; and nothing shall be impossible unto you." He called those who brought the sick man to him, "O faithless and perverse nation." Therefore we should pray with the man in the multitude, "Lord, I believe, help thou mine unbelief." The enemy is always ready to take our faith away from us. He tried to do this even with our Master in the desert when he tempted him the first time.

"Let not your heart be troubled"

I. If you believe in Christ your heart will not be troubled. When the Lord said to his disciples that he would go from them and that they could not follow him, when they heard that Peter would deny the Master, they were troubled. Jesus said to them, "Let not your heart be troubled." If we believe in him our hearts will be quiet, come what may. One day Jesus went across the Sea of Galilee. Being tired he lay down to sleep. Suddenly a storm arose, throwing the boat violently about. They never thought of the Master, and even if they did, what did he know about the managing of a boat? He was a good preacher and a great physician, but surely they knew more about their old trade than he. Therefore let him sleep. But the storm raged more and more. Wave after wave washed into the small vessel. All their skill was in vain to keep the boat afloat. It was sinking. In this moment of greatest despair they called, "Lord, save us, we perish." The Lord arose and with one motion of his hand and with one word of his mouth he calmed the tempest and the sea. As long as they only believed in themselves their hearts were troubled, but as soon as they believed that help could only come from him, their trouble ceased. Life is like a sea. Our life's boat is often thrown about very violently; our troubles are great.

But if we believe in Jesus and call upon him peace will come into our hearts. There are cares and troubles which cause us worry. But Jesus speaks so beautifully of the fowl of the air which sow not, neither do they reap, nor gather in barns. How beautifully he speaks of the flowers in the field! They toil not neither do they spin, but God feeds and clothes them all. Should he not do this to us, as we are worth more than these? I know it is agonizing when a father must send his children hungry from the table. I know that it pains a mother when she cannot give her child sufficient clothing. I know it is hard when there is no money in the house. One is almost despaired, but I do know that a sublime peace will take possession of our hearts when we bring our troubles in prayer to Jesus and believe that he alone can help. The multitude had been with Jesus three long days. They had followed him a long distance from all human habitation. They were all nearly famished and were without food. The Lord could not dismiss them lest they should faint by the roadside. The multitude felt no anxiety; they had faith in Christ that he would help.

And oh, how beautifully was their faith rewarded! He helped them in a wonderful way. All received more food than they needed. The Master can help us in the same miraculous manner. A brother of mine in the ministry, speaking of his experience, had this to say: "My first charge was small and so was my salary, and I received it very irregularly. Once we sat down to dinner of black coffee and bread with preserves. I had not a cent of money. O God, help us! Towards evening I heard a rap at the back door. A man was standing there having a bag of potatoes at his feet and a ham in his hand. 'It was always my intention to come,' he said, 'but I have been putting it off and off. To-day I felt that I simply must come, and here I am.' The tears stood in my eyes, and also in my friend's, when I explained to him the situation." Beloved, have faith in Christ and your heart will not be troubled. We are distressed if death approaches us. This was the case in our text. The Lord had announced his death to his disciples. They were troubled. But he said, "Believe in me."

It is terrible when death threatens a member of a family. It seems impossible to give up the beloved. What is to become of those left behind when death takes away father or mother, or brother or sister or friend? Oh, how dark the future does seem! But do not despair. Believe in Christ. He has promised to be with us all the days, even to the end of the world. He provided a supporter for his mother when hanging on the cross in great agony. He will take care of you, mother. He had compassion for the widow of Nain who had lost her son. He helped Martha and Mary who had lost their brother. Christ said to Martha, "I am the resurrection and the life; he that believeth in me shall never die. Believest thou this?" Believest thou this, my dear Christian? Oh, would to God you could say with Martha, with your whole heart, "Yea, Lord, I believe." Then peace will come into your heart. Even if God's ways are sometimes unintelligible, a sincere Christian will always say from his whole heart, "Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above and cometh down from the Father of light, with whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning." Blessed is he who believes in Jesus and who heeds his words, "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." Godly people are always at peace.

Several years ago there was a collision on Long Island Sound at midnight. The night was cold and dark and a fierce wind was blowing. Many were drowned in the sinking vessel, others escaped upon a raft. All of these were despondent save a few Salvation Army girls. They sang and prayed and encouraged the others, saying, "We are not afraid to die." Believe in Christ and your heart will not be troubled, come what may.

Faith's Answers

II. Believe in Christ and you will have your questions answered. The Lord says in the fourth verse, "Whither I go ye know, and the way ye know. Thomas saith unto him, Lord, we know not whither thou goest, how can we know the way? Jesus saith to him, I am the way, the truth, and the life; no one cometh to the Father but by me." Every one has questions to ask, why is this and why is that? We would like to have an explanation for everything. It is for this reason that man investigates. Men search the uttermost regions of the heavens with their telescopes, with the microscope they study the secrets of nature. There is nothing too far, nothing too difficult; no fear is shown; health and life are sacrificed to satisfy the thirst for truth. In philosophic thought we find the same thing. "What is truth?" was the question Pilate asked Jesus when the Master said, "To this end was I born, and for this cause came I into the world, that I should bear witness unto the truth. Every one that is of the truth heareth my voice." Philosophers sought the truth But where did they arrive? They came to that point where they doubted everything. But still man wants the truth.

Yes, and we may have it only if we believe in Christ and in the Bible which testifies of him. In the Scriptures you will find the answers to the questions which have occupied man since his creation, such as, Whence is life? Whence is sin? Why so much misery, poverty and illness? We shall never fathom all, but we shall be satisfied with the knowledge received, and exclaim with Paul, "O, the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God: how unsearchable are his judgments, and his ways past finding out." One who does not believe in Jesus goes through life in darkness. Without faith in Christ, Scripture is to us but foolishness. "But the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God, for they are foolishness unto him; neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned."

The Reward Which Fadeth Not Away

III. Those who believe wander heavenwards. In the sixth verse we read, "No man cometh unto the Father but by me." One day Jesus was walking on the water. The disciples thought it was a spirit, and screamed for fright. Jesus spoke to them. Peter asked Jesus to allow him to come to him. Jesus consented. As long as Peter looked up to Jesus he remained on the surface, but as soon as he took his eyes from him he sank. Only those wander heavenwards who keep their thoughts fixed upon him. As long as the Jews followed God through the desert they were on the right road to the promised land. Jesus is the way that leads up to heaven. He is the strait gate; no one can enter by any other. He is the Good Shepherd. He will lead them to good pastures and to the fountains of living water. He will protect them from every harm. Let us only follow Jesus, the Good Shepherd. Let us only heed his voice. Let us close our ears to the world. Jesus says, "No man having put his hand to the plow, and looking back, is fit for the kingdom of God."

IV. Believe and you will have a sure inheritance. In the second verse we read: "In my Father's house are many mansions. I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself, that where I am, there ye may be also." Our Lord says very clearly that we have an inheritance. But only those have this promise who believe in him. Man is not for this world. He is not born only to live a certain length of time and then to die and disappear; no, his chief office is to save his soul. Christ says, "Many, I say unto you, will ask to enter in and shall not be able." And what is our inheritance? Oh, it is indescribable, beautiful. We read of it in Revelation, where it goes under the name of the heavenly Jerusalem. This city has wonderful avenues and streets lined with magnificent houses and palaces and temples, where the jewels and most precious things of earth are used for the building material. But such a beautiful place need not be a pleasant one! There can be just as much misery in a palace as in a shanty. Stay, here are the words of true beauty: "God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain: for the former things are passed away."

Oh, how much is there of pain in our lives! How all should rejoice to know that there is a land where this will be no more! Still one may not be happy even in such a place. One may die of ennui; life may be unbearable for its monotony. But such will not be the case up yonder. The Lamb of God will lead those who have kept their faith from one day to another. It will lead them to the fountains of living water. There they will serve God and sing his praise with the angels and archangels.

This is the inheritance. It cannot be gained by good works, but only by grace through faith. Peter says, "Neither is there salvation in any other, for there is none other name given among men whereby we must be saved." Let us believe in Christ. I pray that we may all be able to say with Paul, when the hour of death arrives, "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith." May God grant it. Amen.

* Rev. Richard W. Jungfer is pastor of the Lutheran Church at Sharpsburg, Pa.

hy Maine Should Vote "No"

By Rev. Wilbur F. Crafts, Ph.D.

HE first reason why every good citizen of Maine should vote "No" September 11 is that constitutional hibition is in harmony with the est and largest wave of world prog-s, the movement for real popular ernment, which expresses itself in wish to curtail the power of the use of Lords in Great Britain, in establishment of a new parliament China, and in the insurgent revolt inst vested interests in the United tes.

The second reason for voting "No" s given to the writer by a Maine ngressman as one that would be de-ive with many a man who had only secondary interest in temperance, mely, that to keep the liquor law in constitution is the best way to ep it out of politics; for if the ate's attitude to prohibition could be anged by the election of the legisla-e, the liquor dealers of Boston uld tamper with every legislature they won both before and after the ction.

A third reason why Maine will vote o" was given the writer by a New gland statesman at Washington, mely, that "to repeal prohibition ter approving it for sixty years uld be to confess to the world that e people of the State have been all at time a lot of fools." The sons of aine sometimes boast that some of r pine trees are "so tall that it takes o men and a boy to see the top." ohibition has been approved by two d a half generations of people who ve known something of how license s worked in other States, including al option, and how State prohibition as worked at home, both imperfectly, e all things human, but they have ncluded that it is better to have pro-bition with violations of the law, an to have as much or more law-eaking plus the licensed and attrac-ve saloon. Congressman Miller of ansas showed in a speech in Congress at there were more speakeasies in gh license New Jersey under one e best governors than in both Maine d Kansas.

And that calls up the fourth reason r voting "No," namely, that the na-on at large, a traveled people who now prohibitory laws are not fully arried out, and who know that license ws come short yet more of their wer standard, after half a century f experimenting with both systems nd trying government ownership ainly in South Carolina, and doxology aloons in New York, have settled own to the conviction that prohibi-ion in any of its various forms is bet-er than license in any form.

Another reason for voting "No" is hat if prohibition was changed to icense in Maine it would be the habit-ual lawbreakers of the present speak-easies who would be rewarded by the egalizing of their crimes. Does any one suppose they would obey a new law better than the old one? The proposal o eliminate lawlessness by making the rime legal is as foolish as the course of he mother who said, "Tom, come in." 'I wont." "Then stay out. I'm bound you shall mind your mother."

Another reason for voting "No" is that an evil shut into alleys and attics and cellars cannot draw young men into its toils as it could if it should by getting legal standing capture from better trades the best locations on the principal streets.

It should be borne in mind that no prohibition ever yet enacted forbids men to drink. It only refuses legal standing on its streets to men whose living is made by inducing others to drink. We forbid men to sell in our town or State; we persuade men not to drink.

The Medicine of Generosity

By EUGENE THWING

THE strenuous, self-seeking business life of the present day is claiming victims more rapidly than the summer heat or the great white plague. Millions are swept away by the contagion without realizing that the fever of money-making and power, is rapidly burning out in them their natural traits of kindness and consideration of others. The disease of selfishness, if neglected, soon becomes chronic, and very hard to cure; but if its approach is warded off by definite daily doses of the medicine of generosity there is little chance for it to gain a foothold.

. . .

ONE of the busiest, shrewdest men in New York, prominent in the trade, hard as nails in driving a business bargain for his house, strict in the enforcement of rules, successful in making money, has the following habits, known only to a very few of his most intimate associates: At Christmas time, with a pocket full of small bills, he goes through some of the most wretched tenement districts, hunting out sick and tired mothers, speaking a few words of cheer and encouragement, giving a friendly hand-shake, and leaving a little money to provide comforts and Christmas joys. Then he goes home to celebrate the season with his own family.

During the year he is a friend to be counted on by any employee who is sick or in trouble, often supplying emergency funds to meet sudden needs, or making loans without any conditions of repayment. His help is given, usually unasked, at the very moment when it will do the most good. Often it comes anonymously. Sometimes a hardworking clerk will find on his desk, unexpectedly, a pleasant little note with a check enclosed; sometimes, when money seems not to be needed, a gift for the home will take its place—a set of china, a silver service, or a clock, and the recipient will be left to guess who has watched him and given such a token of appreciation.

. . .

GENEROSITY has wonderful power in curing trouble which by any other means would seem incurable. The story is told of a poor blind woman in Paris who put twenty-seven francs into the plate at a missionary meeting. A friend remonstrated: "You cannot afford so much out of your small earnings." "Oh, yes, I can," she answered; "I've figured it out and know just what I can afford to give." When asked to explain, she said: "I am blind, and I said to my fellow straw-workers: 'How much money do you spend in a year for oil in your lamps when it is too dark to work at nights?' They replied: 'Twenty-seven francs.' So," said the poor woman, "I found that I saved so much in the year because I am blind and do not need a lamp; and I give it to send light to the dark heathen lands."

. . .

SOMEWHERE I read of a crowd of little street Arabs who were gathered at the door of Clark Street Mission, Chicago, one afternoon, waiting for their teacher. They were ragged and dirty; many of them doubtless were hungry; all of them were familiar with hardships. In the crowd were swarthy, black-eyed girls with shawls pinned over their heads, and boys with toes peeping out of ragged shoes. Presently another boy appeared, leading by the hand two children a little more forlorn looking than the others.

"Hey, fellers," the leader exclaimed, "dese kids ain't got nobody to take care of 'em. Dey sleeps in a box, an' ain't had nuthin' to eat to-day. Can't we do sump'n fer 'em?"

The crowd stared at the newcomers; then one boy suggested, "Le's take up a c'lection," and there was a chorus of assent.

Grimy hands plunged into the recesses of tattered garments for pennies and the collector announced the result, "seven cents." A committee, a large one, was appointed to go to the nearest bakery and invest the funds. Some small cakes were bought which were thrust into the hands of the children, and they were told to eat. When the teacher arrived she found the "two orphans" the centre of an admiring group, contentedly munching their cakes, and with much satisfaction the case was turned over into her hands.

. . .

THE medicine of generosity is not always taken voluntarily. Sometimes it is administered, unthinkingly, by one who has no idea of the good it will do to others.

You may have heard of the effort a minister was making one Sunday night to raise money for a mission church away off in the mountains. He appealed earnestly to his rich congregation, but no interest seemed to be aroused, and the contributions were few and small. In his great desire to raise the needed money he went down personally among his people in the pews, only to find refusal after refusal, or gifts entirely inadequate to the requirements.

In almost the last pew near the door sat poor little crippled Katie. She loved Jesus and had given him her heart. Now she was eager to give him more. It seemed that he was asking her to respond to the appeal of the minister for money to help carry the story of her blessed Jesus to the boys and girls far away in the mountains that had never heard of him. She had no money. What could she do?

Suddenly a happy thought flashed across her little mind. She had promised Jesus that all she had she would give him. She had nothing she could give but her little crutches by her side. She looked at them for a moment and then she said: "I'll give my crutches." The minister took them forward, and laid them on the table in front of the people. He was deeply stirred with emotion. Tears were in the eyes of many. After a little, he said: "Who will help me buy these little crutches back for little Katie?" Katie in her earnestness had forgotten all about how she would get home, or how she would move about without her crutches. One man spoke up and said: "I'll give a hundred dollars," and thus they kept on giving, one after another, till the little crutches were covered with money and promises, and that night the preacher raised over $500 for his mission church in the mountains, all because little Katie had been ready in the emergency with the medicine of generosity.

"NEVER MIND"

WHAT'S the use of always fretting
O'er the trials we shall find
Ever strewn along our pathway?
Travel on, and "never mind."

Travel onward; working, hoping,
Cast no lingering glance behind
After trials once encountered,
Look ahead, and "never mind."

What is past is past forever;
Let all fretting be resigned;
It will never help the matter—
Do your best, and "never mind."

And if those who might befriend you,
Whom the ties of nature bind,
Should refuse to do their duty,
Look to Heaven, and "never mind."

Friendly words are often spoken
When the feelings are unkind;
Take them for their real value,
Pass them by, and "never mind."

Fate may threaten, clouds may lower.
Enemies may be combined;
If your trust in God is steadfast,
He will help you, "never mind."

Lincoln's Faith in Prayer

THE faith and power in prayer of Abraham Lincoln were illustrated by a personal reminiscence which General Daniel E. Sickles gave in Plymouth Church, Brooklyn, recently. President Lincoln visited General Sickles in the military hospital in Washington to which the General had been carried with one chance in five hundred to live, after a bullet at Gettysburg had shattered his right leg.

"Sickles, I couldn't help coming to see you as soon as I heard of your arrival," President Lincoln said. "I never prayed so fervently for anything in my life as for success for our arms at Gettysburg. As I prayed, a feeling of peace came over me and I rose sure of victory, for I knew that God had answered 'Yes' to me and would be with us on the field. Now, I am in prophetic mood. The doctors say you have one chance in five hundred to recover. I say you will get over this trouble, that you will outlive the war and will be able to serve your country in years to come."

Anvil Sparks

..HEAVEN never rates a man above nor below his true value.

..PRACTICE also what you praise of the other man's preaching.

..MEN who attempt to drown their sorrow are sure to go under.

..A CHURCH leader should do more than merely lead people to church.

..THE young man who moves in church circles will come around all right.

..FLATTERY is one kind of falsehood some people are always ready to accept as truth.

..SPEAK not of your enemies, but be sure to speak to your enemies when you meet them.

..THE man who doesn't mean more than half he says is mean, whether he says anything or not.

..DON'T believe all you hear—or better still, don't hear much of that which you do not believe.

..GOD is not only a present help in the time of trouble, but a great help in keeping out of trouble.

A Traveler's Appreciation

How I have learned to love you, dear CHRISTIAN HERALD! Nearly five years ago I left the United States of America for a trip to Australia. Some of my friends brought on board the liner a large bundle of papers for me to read, among them was THE CHRISTIAN HERALD. After a few days I packed up all my papers for my next trip to Liverpool, and how gladly they were read, yours taking the lead. I remember reading about a gold mine in Bendigo, the Needle Mine, 6,000 feet deep, and the Alexandria, 3,400 feet deep. I visited them, but could not be persuaded to go down into either one of them. God bless THE CHRISTIAN HERALD in all its workings, and also all its workers.

Brooklyn, N. Y. E. W.

Many Help Our Mont-Lawn Waifs

OUR Children's Home at Mont-Lawn has become, in the largest sense, a national benevolence. In every State it has found friends and supporters who take a warm interest in the physical and spiritual welfare of the three thousand poor little tenement boys and girls who are sheltered and folded at our "Children's Paradise" every summer. Contact with the work gives both to the patron and the protégé a genuine pleasure and a satisfaction which cannot be found in any other form of benevolence, for it recalls the approving words of the Master who said: "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of these little ones ye have done it unto me." Our missionary and church workers who seek out the poorest children in the tenements to send them to Mont-Lawn, have had many trying experiences during the prolonged "hot wave" this summer. Hundreds have applied where only a few—the very neediest—could be taken from any one locality. From the very first day of opening, the Home has been full, and hundreds of others have been registered and are awaiting their turn to get away from the hot, sweltering city to our beautiful Fresh-Air Home on the Hudson.

If those good friends who have helped Mont-Lawn with their gifts could spend an hour or two there, in these bright midsummer days, and see our crowds of happy little folk romping at their games on the great lawn, or witness their march into the big dining hall of "Fort Plenty," where they sing their simple grace before doing justice to the good, nourishing food, they would understand the charm which the Children's Paradise holds for every one who has ever been there. And, listening to the songs of the little folks in the beautiful Children's Temple where the sweet, clear voices swell out in Summertime has come with joy at last, they would feel something of the joy that comes to the heart of those waifs to whom the gates have swung open to give them ten long, golden days of delirious happiness, such as they had never dreamed of before. We wish it were possible for every reader of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD to be represented by one little protégé at the Home this year.

Letters have been received this season from many friends of Mont-Lawn, containing contributions for the support of the work and expressing the kindest wishes for its continued success. "A Friend of the Children" writes from Bethel, Conn., sending $10, "so that some poor child may have an opportunity to enjoy it in that beautiful Home. There is no other object in which I am more interested than this Home for the children." A "Friend" in Washington sends $3 for "an outing for some worthy child," and adds: "I hope to enjoy my own vacation even better by thinking that even one other has the same privilege." The Inasmuch Circle of King's Daughters, Flatbush, N. Y., sends $6 through Mrs. A. L. Burke, who writes: "May God bless you in this mighty work." A little country Sunday School at Scales Mound, Ill., sends, through E. S. Bray, Superintendent, $1.80, being "an offering from country children to help others who have not the country privileges. May God bless Mont-Lawn!" The Girl's Guild of the Old Dutch Church, Brooklyn, sends, through Miss Bessie Underhill, President, $21 to endow a cot for the summer. "For the benefit of two poor waifs, and a prayer goes with it that it may be an inspiration toward a purer life and helpfulness to others," is the beautiful sentiment which comes with a letter from Mrs. J. C. B. and daughter, of Northeast, Pa. ($6). A Sunday School class of New Brunswick, N. J., sends, through Miss Katherine Buckelew, President of the Sunday School, $12, the result of a social, with the injunction that it is to be used for the most needy. This generous gift will make four little waifs happy. The Union Sunday School, a little company of homesteaders at Karinen, S. D., sends, through Miss L. H., $1.75 to help send some little tenement waif to Mont-Lawn. This is a specially precious gift, as it represents much self-denial, and is greatly appreciated. Mrs. Hulley's class, First Congregational Church, Allegan, Mich., sends a second gift for the Home ($3) "to give some needy little girl a vacation." There are fifteen willing workers in this class. The pupils of the Rose Music Studio, of Richmond Hill, N. Y., cleared $10 at a lawn party, which they have sent through Mrs. S. M. Rose-Bogert, director. This will more than pay for three little waifs. A Children's Day offering from the Odell Union Sunday School, Hood River, Ore., of $6 is sent with the request to give some poor child an outing at Mont-Lawn. It will provide outings for two little protégés of our Oregon friends. The "Busy Bee Club," of Tillson, Ulster County, N. Y., sends $3 to support a protégé at the Children's Home. And C. C., of Calais, Me., ($2) writes "to give a 'little mother' and her babe a few days at Mont-Lawn. We hope they will enjoy every moment of the time." The Neighborhood Sewing Society, Morristown, N. J., sends $21 to endow a cot for the season—thus providing for seve little waifs. "I trust this ($42) will make a fe little people happy and may God bless all your efforts for good," writes W. L., San Francisco, Cali The Sunshine Society of Summit Hill, Pa., an organization of eleven little boys, sends $12, the resul of a house social, to give four little ones a ten days' outing. These young Sunshiners certainly mak their light shine. The Bethel Club of Walla Walla Wash., through Miss Nellie Stack, Secretary, send $6 "to give two children a summer vacation a Mont-Lawn." Miss Leola Perry's class of young girls, East Liverpool, O., sends $3 These earnest young people are giv ing a tenth of their spending money to Mont-Lawn. The Riverside Sun day School at Mason City, Ia., sends $3.76, the offering of Children's Day to give a vacation to some poor child Mr. G. M., Stony Creek, N. Y., sends a contribution of $41.40 to Mont Lawn in memory of a dear one gone Four little girls in Miss Burnett's Sunday School class, Montgomery N. Y., brought their pennies from week to week until $3 were gathered, which they have now sent to Mont-Lawn. Their kind hearts deserve a rich reward. The Glenila Presbyterian Sunday School of Calvin, N. D., sends its annual gift of $21. This is the third year that they have done so. Mrs. D. J. Porter, the Secretary of the Sunday School, writes: "We use the money out of our birthday box for this cause." The little girls of the Agoman class of the First Baptist Church, Syracuse, N. Y., have sent for the second year $21 to endow a cot at Mont-Lawn. They earned this money by making and selling home-made candy. They are a band of true little home missionaries. The Minnie Laird Circle, Washingtonville, N. Y., sends $3 to enable "some child to enjoy life at Mont-Lawn this summer." An old lady of eighty, Mrs. H. W., of Cavendish, Vt., sends $1 through her pastor. She is an earnest Christian and a member of the Baptist Church, and says: "I want to do something to help, for I won't be here long." Miss M. E. A., of Pomona, Calif., sent $6 as a memorial to her mother, now passed over, "who loved to help the children." A little struggling Presbyterian Sunday School in Princeton, Kans., sends $7.25 through B. D. Davis, as an Easter offering to make some little boy and girl happy at Mont-Lawn. "I hope some little one will have a chance to see God's beautiful country and be benefited by it," writes Mrs. M. E. P., of Rochester, N. H., who sends $3, the gift of the Sunday School class at Stratford Corner. "This is sent in loving memory of my precious son, who lost his life in that horrible disaster in the Los Angeles Times building. He was an intense lover of little children. No one ever passed him without receiving a kind word. May God's blessing go with the mite" ($21), writes Mrs. S. D. S., Los Angeles, Calif. "This money was given to my dear mother, who passed away last October, as a Christmas gift the year before. She was always deeply interested in your work for the children, and I know she would be happy to have the money used this way," writes Elizabeth M., New York City ($21). M. M. F., North Woburn, Mass. ($21), writes: "May this bring a section of heaven into the heart of some poor little waif," and we believe it certainly will.

"Can't we go to Mont-Lawn, too, please?"

An East Side Missionary in New York Talking to Little Applicants in a Tenement Courtyard

CONTRIBUTIONS IN AID OF OUR CHILDREN'S HOME

Allen, Mrs R A .. 6 00
Bain, Charley E ... 3 00
Barnes, B W .. 3 00
Berge, Mrs John .. 10 00
Bishoff, Mrs S M .. 1 00
Brawner, Clara M 5 00
Buckingham, R C .. 1 00
Burnham, Mrs C A 1 00
Busch, Roland .. 1 00
Byles, Miss Eugene 1 00
Campbell, Mrs M A 21 00
Chambers, Mrs R C 3 00
Boggs, Mrs Gordon 1 00
Bohne, Jr, Mrs H 2 00
Boice, M D 1 25
Bolton, Mrs A S .. 1 00
Borland, Mrs. M. 3 00
Bossing, Sr, Mrs L 1 00
Boucher, Mrs B .. 1 00
Boughton, Mrs H M 20 00
Bouton, Martha .. 3 00
Bowlsby, C E ...25 00
Boyd, Mrs V F .. 3 00
Boynton, Luther 1 00
Braby, Lulu 1 00
Broadway, Amy A 3 00
Bragg, Alice H & ..
Edith L 5 00
Brain, Geo N ... 3 00
Brandt, Mrs G E 3 00
Breed, Mrs Emma 1 00
Brelsford, Nellie L 3 00
Bremer, P A 2 00
Brennaman, Mrs S 6 00
Brendlinger, A V 1 00
Brett, F L 1 00
Brewster, S W .. 2 00
Bridge, Mrs Geo. 1 00
Briggs, Mrs Lila 3 00
Brightbill, Mrs J 1 00
Brinker, Mrs Jno 1 00
Brinker, Mrs L. S 6 00
Brooks, Mrs A 3 00
Brooks, C D 1 00
Brooks, Mrs M A 1 00
Brooks, Miss M.. 1 00
Brookshier, Mrs V 3 00
Brown, Miss A M 1 55
Brown, Mrs F .. 1 00
Brown, Flora ... 1 00
Brown, G C 5 00
Brown, Mrs G E 3 00
Brown, G F 3 00
Brown, Mrs L D. 6 00
Brown, Victoria . 1 00
Brownson, Mr & ..
Mrs O M 2 00
Browster, Miss E.. 1 00
Brundage, Mrs L. 1 00
Brundige, T W.. 6 00
Brush, Ida A.... 3 00
Bryant, C W.... 1 00
Buchner, Misses C ..
& M E 6 00
Buechner, A H.. 1 00
Buckingham, Mrs ..
H W 3 00
Buffum, Mr & Mrs ..
D M 3 00
Bullock, Mrs H F 1 00
Bunney, Jr, Alex 2 00
Bunting, Mrs E.. 3 00
Burbidge, Amelia 3 00
Burd, Mrs M H.. 3 00
Burkholder, Mrs M2 00
Burns, Mrs A J.. 1 00
Burns, Mrs L E.. 3 00
Burns, Lorena C 5 00
Burrow, Mrs 3 00
Burrowes, Kath'e 5 00
Burt, Mr & Mrs ..
J L 6 00
Burtis, Zilpah S 1 00
Burton, Mrs J E. 6 00
Bushong, Mrs J W 6 00
Butler, C E 3 00
Butler, J F 6 00
Butterfield, Mrs E 1 00
Byron, Myrtle .. 6 00
Caldwell, R E .. 2 00
Calkins, Mrs Geo 3 00
Calkins, Hart P 3 75
Cameron, A 1 00
Campbell, A J .. 3 00
Campbell, Kate E 5 00
Campbell, Mrs TJ 3 00
Carley, Mrs Edith ..
& Son 5 00
Carlisle, Miss S H 5 00
Carmichael, Mrs ..
L A 3 00
Carpenter, Adda 3 00
Carpenter, Mrs DC 1 00
Carpenter, Miss I 1 00
Carpenter, Mrs P 1 00
Carpenter, Miss R 1 50
Case, Mrs A G.. 3 00
Case, Miss J M.. 5 00
Caswell, Nancy.. 6 00
Cecil, Mrs May.. 6 00
Chadwick, MaryT 1 00
Chahoon, Edw ..10 00
Chalker, Mrs L J 3 00
Chamberlain, Mrs ..
V S 1 00
Chambers, Mrs RC 3 00
Chapman, Mrs CF 5 00
Chappuis, Marc.. 1 00
Charles, Mrs 1 00
Chester, Hr O. ..10 00
Chester, Mrs S C 3 00
Chisholm, Wm.. 2 00
Chittenden, Mrs ..
M F 21 00
Chittenden, R L 2 00
Christy, Helen & ..
Florence 2 00
Clark, Alice G & ..
Sister 1 50
Christie, Mrs J F12 00
Clark, Mrs Eugene ..
& Myrta A 3 00
Clark, Margaret A 5 00
Clarke, K C 1 00
Clemens, Mrs S H 6 00
Clifford, Mrs N A 6 00
Clifford, N M .. 3 00
Cline, Mrs A E.. 3 00
Close, Miss F H. 2 00
Coffman, Blanche 5 00
Coggeshall, Mrs ..
Countryman, E S 1 50
Cole, Alvie A.... 3 00
Cole, Mrs C E .. 3 00
Coleman, Ella M 2 00
Collinson, MissAH 5 00
Colville, R E ... 4 00
Comstock, MrsRW 3 00
Conrod, MissAM 10 00
Contant, Mrs C M 5 00
Converse, Mrs C C 3 00
Cook, Miss B C 2 00
Cook, E A 1 00
Cook, Mrs Mary E 1 00
Cool, Mrs S M.. 5 00
Cooper, Lena.... 2 00
Cope, Edward M 15 00
Copeland, Wm A 3 00
Copeland, Mrs SR 3 00
Cornelius J & S D 2 00
Cortelyou, MrsWL 3 00
Couffer, Mrs S.. 10 00
Countryman, Blanche 5 00
Cowell, Mrs ..
L H 5 00
Cox, Mrs W A .. 2 00
Craig, J R 1 00
Craig, Mr & Mrs ..
T B 6 00
Cramand, Mrs E 1 50
Crane, Mrs&Miss 3 00
Crankshaw, S E.... 1 00
Crawford, J M 3 00
Crook, Floyd R.... 5 00
Croswell, L G .. 3 00
Cummings, Miss ..
Curry, Dr. G P M 3 00
Curry, John B.. 5 00
Curtis, Helen & ..
Hazel 3 00
Curtis, Mrs G R. 3 00
Curtis, Sylvia L. 3 00
Cuyler, Mrs M L 2 00
Cyrus, Emma A. 5 00
Dains, Sophie .. 2 00
Dale, Mrs J C .. 3 00
Daniels, Miss R 2 75
Darr, Mrs S E.. 1 00
Datrs, Mrs J R.. 3 00
Dater, Mrs M P 2 00

And several hundred others to be acknowl'g'd later.

THE SEARCH FOR THE LOST ARK

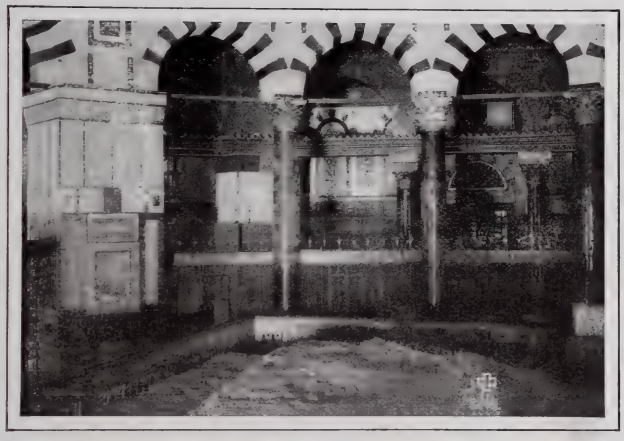
By NAJIB K. JAMAL, Jerusalem

A CAPTAIN of the Coldstream Guards and former aide-de-camp to the late King Edward had, with a few intimate associates, been excavating for the last two or three years on the eastern slopes of Mount Moriah, or more correctly speaking Mount Ophel, overlooking the village of Siloam. The excavations consisted of several perpendicular shafts. One shaft ended in the old rock-hewn conduit along which water flows underground from the Virgin's Fountain to the Pool of Siloam. The excavated shafts communicated with each other by means of burrows and tunnels, so that the section of mountain was simply honeycombed with underground diggings and passages.

A cloud of mystery hung over these excavations, which extended over a period of nearly three years. The strictest secrecy was kept by the captain about his movements, and a strong Turkish military guard was posted night and day to keep the curious away from the field of operations. Finally the captain decided to alter his tactics. This was no less than the bold venture of carrying the excavation work in the temple area itself. With the connivance of certain officials, it is said, he began the work of excavation some time about the beginning of last April. For twelve nights, under cover of darkness, large gangs of workmen dug away with astonishing rapidity. The excavating was begun beneath the "dome of the rock" and down into the hollow rock-hewn chamber known by the Moslems as the "Well of Souls," so-called because of the belief that the spirits of departed saints hover there to await the judgment day. It then branched off in different directions underground.

On the thirteenth day some one betrayed the whole secret to the civil government, whereupon the alarm spread like wildfire. There was tremendous excitement and indignation on the part of the Moslems not only against the Englishmen, but also against the officials who so craftily allowed them to desecrate the mosque grounds unchecked.

This list of articles supposed to have been stolen included the following: The crown of King David, King Solomon's jeweled sword of state, the Ark of the Covenant, the Urim and Thummim, the two tables of the Mosaic law and even relics of the prophet Mohammed. For a time the situation assumed a serious and menacing aspect. On the first alarm being given, the explorers took their departure to England. The civil governor and chief of police were deposed and recalled to Constantinople, while several other officials were sent to jail for examination.



A court of inquiry appointed by Constantinople, composed of six Turkish high officials, sat for several days in Jerusalem investigating the affair. Its findings affirmed that nothing of any importance whatever had been taken away from the mosque. This, however, did not allay the suspicion of the populace, which kept firm to its first belief that the captain did actually take away many valuable articles of antiquity.

It is estimated that not less than $500,000 were expended in the undertaking. Knowing this, the people believed that the captain must have deemed the goal for which he strove so strenuously, well worth his while. Consequently, one principal query became the centre of dispute and uncertainty: Did the captain reach that goal or did he not?

The expedition's search, it is said, was based on a cipher which purported to show the spot on Mount Ophel (or Mount Moriah) where lie buried treasures in the tombs of David and Solomon, as well as other kings of Judah. The cipher was furnished by documents said to have been recently unearthed in Ireland. These documents are ancient Hebrew records in Samaritan characters. It is conjectured that when Zedekiah and the children of Judah were carried away into captivity by Nebuchadnezzar, 588 B.C., some princely fugitives may have turned their eyes westward and eventually found themselves in Ireland. The unearthed Irish records were supposedly left by some of those Hebrew refugees. It was intimated by them that although the majority of the sacred utensils and vessels of brass and other precious articles were taken to Babylon, still a goodly number, including the Ark of the Covenant and its contents, escaped the general pillage through having been secretly concealed in some underground tunnel or chamber below the temple on the eve of the city's surrender to the Babylonian king. It is argued that the secret of this concealment must have died with the passing of the first generation of Hebrews in the Babylonian captivity.

That the Ark ever left Jerusalem since the day of King Zedekiah is improbable, for there is no record, sacred or secular, indicating such an occurrence. There is no reason to suppose that it has been destroyed.

It is said that the English explorer, on reopening a shaft first discovered by Sir Charles Warren forty years ago, had not driven tunnels far under Ophel before he struck natural caves and human remains on natural shelves of rock. These were believed to be the remains of Jebusites buried before David took Jerusalem, and probably date about 3,000 years back. The English explorer absolutely refused to give any more particulars; but it is said he positively denied that he had unearthed any valuable treasures or any finds of historical importance. It is now even said that he intends to revisit the scene of his late activities with a view towards resuming his investigations.

The Rock in the Mosque of Omar, Jerusalem. Removable Slab Marked ✠

TOPICS OF INTEREST THROUGHOUT THE WORLD

—TO HONOR HIM AS A Britisher, because of his birth under the British flag, and as an American because of his services in leading the first American armies and in founding the Republic, a movement has been started by the Peace Centenary Celebration Committee to purchase and preserve Sulgrave Manor, the home of George Washington's ancestors in England. The home is to be purchased, according to the project, by a joint subscription of American and British funds. The purchase is to be made as the principal permanent accomplishment of the proposed celebration of the one hundredth anniversary of peace among English-speaking peoples.

—THE ESTABLISHMENT of a great medical school in China which will aim to train the Chinese to the necessity of adopting Western systems of medicine and hygiene is about to become a reality, and next February the doors of the big college will be thrown open in Shanghai. The project is one which has as sponsors physicians connected with the Harvard Medical School, one of whom, Dr. Martin Russ Edwards, will head the new school. He will have a corps of fifteen Harvard assistants. Among those interested in the project are President Taft and President Emeritus Eliot of Harvard. Dr. Edwards believes that the establishment of the school will be the beginning of the end of the dread bubonic plague, of cholera, and leprosy.

—BY THE TERMS OF the seal treaty signed at Washington, July 7, pelagic sealing is prohibited in the seas of Behring, Okhotsk, Kamchatka, and Japan. The convention arranges for the apportionment among the signatory Powers of the annual proceeds of the several seal herds in which they are interested, as follows: Thirty per cent. of the skins annually taken from the American and the Russian herds, respectively, is divided equally between Great Britain and Japan; thirty per cent. from the Japanese herds, divided equally among the United States, Great Britain, and Russia, and thirty per cent. from any herds which may hereafter resort to the breeding grounds under British jurisdiction in the North Pacific Ocean is to be divided equally among the United States, Russia and Japan. In connection with this apportionment the United States will make an advance payment of $200,000 to Great Britain and Japan each. These payments are to be refunded to this country out of the proceeds of the British and Japanese share of skins taken from the American herds. The convention also prohibits the hunting of sea otters on the high seas. The treaty will extend for fifteen years and thereafter, until terminated by one year's notice by any of the Powers concerned. It will now be submitted to the governments whose representatives have signed it, for ratification. Aside from ratification by the Senate, it will also be necessary for Congress to pass some legislation to carry its provisions into effect.

—WOMEN'S FEET ARE bigger than they used to be, and still growing, say the shoe manufacturers of America, who held their fifth annual fair in Boston not long since. A canvass of opinions among the dealers revealed that the average size of shoes that women wear to-day is from four to five, whereas twenty years ago the average was from three to five. The No. 2 size in women's shoes has practically disappeared. Only one in twenty retailers handles them. It was also said that many firms are sending their products out with a code number in place of the actual size number. Women refused to wear the number that fitted them. Now, whatever size they ask for, whether it be two, four, or six, the dealer gives them the shoe that fits them, and he alone knows what size they wear.

The Descendants of the Signers of the Declaration of Independence

THIS group gathered in Philadelphia from all over the country, to meet in Independence Hall on July 4. The officers of the society who are seen standing in the front row are from left to right: Miss Watson, Mrs. Mary May, Mrs. Warren Fisher, Major Moses Veale, Dr. Henry Morris (president), J. S. Hooper, Dr. George Washington Dame (chaplain), Mrs. Amos D. Draper, Henry W. Bache, John S. Braxton, H. Morris Husband.

OUR EDITORIAL FORUM

OTTO KOENIG, President — GEO. H. SANDISON, Managing Editor — THEODORE WATERS, Secretary

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD is published weekly by "The Christian Herald," at the Bible House, Fourth Avenue, 8th and 9th Sts., New York City. The officers are: Otto Koenig, President and Treasurer, Bible House, N.Y. City; Geo. H. Sandison, Vice-President, Bible House, N.Y. City; Theodore Waters, Secretary, Bible House, N.Y. City.

Subscription Price, $1.50 a year, in advance.
Remittances should always be made in the safest manner available to the remitter. Register cash remittances.
Foreign Postage.—For each copy to be mailed outside the United States, Canada, and Mexico, add one dollar a year.

Change of Date.—It takes at least two weeks to change the date, after your subscription is renewed.
Expiration of Subscription.—The date on the wrapper indicates when your subscription ends.
Change of Address.—It requires three weeks' time to make the change. Give both old and new address.

Subscriptions may commence with any issue.
Letters should be addressed, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, Bible House, New York.

Entered at Post Office, New York, as Second-class Matter
Entered as Second-class Matter at the Post Office Department, Ottawa

Wanted, a Peacemaker

HAITI, the "Black Republic," continues to supply the dramatic background to the course of events in the West Indies. It is now in the throes of the latest revolution, but disturbances of this sort are so frequent in Haiti that the outer world fails to keep count of them. Dark, silent tragedies; guerrilla street fighting that is rather massacre or assassination than war; valuable property pillaged or swept away for the sheer love of destruction—these are the features of the ever-recurring revolutions that sweep over the island. Haiti, lying midway between Cuba and our island possession of Porto Rico, is clearly within the zone of our pacifying influence. There are American citizens and American interests there requiring protection. In a broad sense, we are as responsible for the preservation of order and the protection of foreign interests there as in any other part of this continent. Yet at the crisis, these interests have as sole protection a private American yacht. And all this is happening at our doors while our magnificent battleships and cruisers are playing a marine "war game" off the Atlantic coast. It is only a little while ago since a large section of the army was lined up along the Mexican frontier, and a squadron of our warships lay in the Gulf in readiness for service. The presence in Haitian waters of a single American cruiser, which could easily have been spared from the summer tactics, might have meant much for peace and order in the neglected negro republic. But better late than never.

A Familiar Contrast

IN THE course of discussion both here and abroad concerning the question of full and empty churches, many very brilliant minds and pens have taken part. One of the ablest of these writers, himself a consecrated and successful pastor, has conceived a little allegory in which the principal characters are two ministers diverse both in temperament and method. One of these he calls "Mr. Fritterday," and the other "Mr. Fullday"; and as the pair are typical of the same two classes the world over, they are worth knowing. Pastor Fritterday reads but little and that desultorily, while Pastor Fullday enriches his mind and his discourses with the best books obtainable. Pastor Fritterday piles up his desk with note-books, scraps, clippings, envelopes for the storing of sermonic material without method or stint, and with the inevitable result that it is chaotic and unavailable when required. Preacher Fullday, on the other hand, uses his head rather than his scissors, and considers it more important to have his heart full than to have a lot of miscellaneous clippings hidden out of sight in drawers. He finds the writers that appeal to him and who give him inspiration and enthusiasm.

But it is less in books than in pastoral work that the two differ. Preacher Fritterday, when he visits, calls only at the houses among the pleasantest people and his visits seldom have a religious purpose, being almost wholly social. Pastor Fullday is a real shepherd to his flock. Every call he makes is a helpful ministration. He does not neglect the poor nor the sick nor the lonely; he loves his people and shows it by his care and solicitude for them, and they love and respect him in return.

The sermonic efforts of Mr. Fritterday are usually ornate and frequently dazzling, catching the ear but leaving little to be remembered, and his people usually go home from church without any spiritual impression. Conscious that their minister is clever, many of them ask themselves whether it really was a Gospel sermon after all. They miss "the corn and wine" of the old Gospel, and naturally many of them drift to other churches where their hearts' longings will be better satisfied. Thus in time, Pastor Fritterday finds himself speaking to almost empty pews.

If you look in at Pastor Fullday's church, you see the "rich and the poor met together," probably mostly the poor. He has not only chosen his subject prayerfully, but he has wrestled with the spirit in his devotions and pleaded that he might be made a vessel of light and helpfulness in setting forth the truth to these people. He is not afraid to reprimand and rebuke sin; he thinks his duty as a faithful minister should make him, though at all other times gentle and considerate, inflexible in his characterization of everything that is wrong and wicked. Yet withal he holds up the Cross of Christ in such a winning and persuasive way that even the sinners rejoice and listen. He is of the type of preacher for whom the whole world is longing, and whether his field is cast in village, city or metropolis, he will always have an audience, because his Gospel is a Gospel of divine and human helpfulness—just such a Gospel as the world needs. There are many ministers, but these two types include practically them all. A faithful, consecrated pulpit makes a full and appreciative pew, and this is the lesson of the allegory.

Cholera Carriers

WARNED by the appearance of cholera at Naples and other Mediterranean ports, our health authorities in New York and elsewhere are taking every precaution to prevent the disease from obtaining a foothold here. Investigation of quarantine methods at the port of New York has disclosed defects and abuses which, had they remained undiscovered, might have produced serious results; but these are now being remedied and with the cooperation of federal, State and civic authorities, rigid safeguards are now in operation which give assurance of protection from any outbreak. The few cases that have already appeared, being brought here from Naples, have been isolated, and even the "cholera carriers" or suspects are secluded and guarded. These "carriers" are persons who, though immune themselves, yet have in their bodies the germs of the disease, which they are capable of communicating to others even after the lapse of weeks. There is not the slightest ground for anticipating any danger of a more serious nature than that which has confronted our quarantine authorities every summer since the great influx of immigration from southern Europe began. If necessary as an additional precaution, all passenger traffic from infected ports may temporarily be discontinued. One gratifying outcome of the present situation will probably be a sweeping improvement in the New York quarantine system, which has been shown to be crude, costly, ineffective and unbusinesslike. It is a good time for a thorough cleaning up of that important branch of the public service.

Preventable Accidents

PROBABLY half the accidents in life are really preventable. It is hard to repress an expression of resentment and exasperation when one reads the story of accidents here and there that need never have happened, yet each of which results in a train of sorrow and wretchedness wholly without excuse. The motor-car has added a new pleasure to those who can afford its luxury and speed as a means of recreation, but its reckless abuse fills many an obituary column, and makes it a formidable peril to unwary pedestrians. How often in our daily newspaper do we read of the expert motorist taking the street and the highroad, whirling along as fast as he chooses to send his machine and colliding with something else on the road, dashing into a ravine, turning a somersault, hurling his victims into the air or crushing them under the car's weight. A little care, a moment's reflection would have saved the lives that are swept out in an instant by an ill-considered dash across some grade crossing. It is the same with other casualties. A large percentage of calamitous fires may be directly attributed to heedlessness and lack of thought on the part of those who use matches. A match is supposed to have burned itself out and is thrown recklessly down into a heap of shavings, a waste basket or an oiled mop. In a recent conflagration resulting in deplorable loss of life, a pail of turpentine left standing on the floor of a boat-house was supposed to be water and was thrown upon the flames by some one with the good intention of putting them out.

Many of the gruesome accidents that attend the operation of the wheels of our country's great industries are undoubtedly within the category of preventable calamities. Unguarded machinery and that familiarity of the operative which is so apt to breed contempt for the dangers of whirling wheels and flying belts are here the chief sources of peril, and there is little doubt that one is responsible for as many maimings and fatalities as the other. The reckless use of boats in the holiday season and of guns or rifles in the hunting months are outstanding examples of carelessness where caution should pervade every action. Though cupidity and heartlessness must take a large share of blame, lack of forethought and common sense is responsible for many sad happenings which we mistakenly lay at the door of Providence.

Ministers by Mail

EVEN in this age of extraordinary educational development, when almost everything, from engineering to equestrianism, is "taught by mail," one cannot repress a feeling of natural surprise to find theology now included among the accomplishments or professions to be learned through the post office. This announcement will be greeted with an incredulous smile by those who know the value of a systematic training in a well-equipped theological institute. Since the days of the ancient schools of philosophy (the forerunners of our modern university), personal contact between teacher and disciple has been regarded as essential to intellectual training. This necessity is emphasized in theological education. While one at a distance may get a superficial smattering of things and may even follow a prescribed reading course in the text-books, all the real work, the spiritual inspiration, the joy and enthusiasm and zeal that are kindled by personal contact with noble, spiritual minds and that are a valuable part of the preparatory equipment of a minister, are wholly lost. As well try to raise flowers without the sunlight, as to train the mind and heart in spiritual paths without personal contact with godly, spirit-filled preceptors. Next we may expect to hear of schools for conducting revivals by mail, and for converting the heathen. Could absurdity go further?

General Notes

—THE RACE TRACK BILL, known as the Gittins bill, to absolve directors of race tracks from personal liability for violations of anti-gambling laws, met defeat in the New York Assembly, July 20. This is a signal victory for the anti-gambling element and, for the present at least, puts an end to the hopes of the betting fraternity of re-establishing race track gambling in the Empire State.

—THE POLITICAL GAME of shuttlecock and battledore goes on actively between the British Lords and Commons. On July 20, the Lords passed the Veto bill on a third reading, but so transformed by amendments as to be almost unrecognizable. It now comes up in the Commons, where all the amendments will probably be stricken out. Should the Lords insist on their amendments, the government may proceed to create enough new peers to force the bill through the House of Lords.

Contents of this Number

Wednesday, August 2, 1911

	PAGE
Our Mail-Bag	758
Rattling the Sabre in Morocco (Illustrated)	759
Faith in Christ. Sermon By Rev. Richard W. Jungfer	760
The Medicine of Generosity By Eugene Thwing	761
Many Help Our Mont-Lawn Waifs (Illustrated)	762
The Search for the Lost Ark (Illustrated) By Najib K. Jamal	763
OUR EDITORIAL FORUM	764
THE BIBLE AND NEWSPAPER (Illustrated)	765
Gospel Work in the Open Air (Portraits)	766
Hundreds Killed in Forest Fires (Illustrated)	767
Vacation Joys and Problems (Illustrated) By Margaret E. Sangster	768
Our Boys and Girls (Illustrated) By Miss Janet Porter	769
Other People's Money	770
The Indestructible Book Sunday School Lesson, by Dr. and Mrs. W. F. Crafts	771, 772
John Sherwood's Pledge By Lollie Belle Wylie	773, 774, 775
Young People's Societies	775

THE BIBLE AND NEWSPAPER

Conducted by FERDINAND C. IGLEHART, D.D.

President Gave Atwood Medal

HARRY N. ATWOOD, the Boston aviator, who started on June 30 from that city to fly to Washington, reached College Park, eight miles from the nation's capital, the morning of July 7, covering the 568 miles by aeroplane. He thought the Government Aviation Field at College Park was in the District of Columbia, and that his trophy, offered by a newspaper, had been secured. Before he was able to reach the capital, however, his own aeroplane was wrecked on the government field, but he showed great pluck and by the purchase for three thousand dollars or more of an aeroplane, which he had been unable to borrow, he went triumphantly into Washington. He flew around the Capitol building like a bird, and was seen and cheered by the members of the Senate and House of Representatives. He sailed around the Government buildings, over the residences and around Washington Monument as by magic, and went back to College Park. The next day he flew to the White House, where he was received by the President, and in the presence of members of the Aero Club and others, was presented with a beautiful gold medal by President Taft. After his call, with the eyes of the world upon him, he flew back to his starting-place at the Government field. The overcoming of the law of gravity and skill in navigating the sea of air by the bird-men of our time, is a symbol of the manner in which the Christian overcomes the gravitation of earth and sin and masters the currents of temptation, and with wings of faith, propelled by the motor of love, sails the high seas of duty, happiness and life. This mastery of the leaden weights and fickle winds of time by the participation of the divine life, is thus beautifully expressed by the prophet:

They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run, and not be weary; and they shall walk, and not faint. (Isa. 40 : 31.)

Copyright by Harris & Ewing

Harry N. Atwood Leaving the White House After a Call Upon the President

An Outside Explosion

The process of removing the water from the wreck of the Maine is practically finished, and now begins the unexpected difficulty of removing the mud in which the battleship is embedded. The remains of the ship are fastened in mud from a minimum depth of thirty-seven feet to a maximum that can only be guessed. The engineers now propose to erect foundations for cranes and derricks with which to extricate the heaviest parts of the wreckage, after which the tremendous task of removing the mud will be begun. These extensive excavations may consume several months. It looks as though the mystery enshrouding the destruction of the battleship has been solved. The structure of the bow, as far aft as frame 18, is now exposed, permitting an analysis of the plates, beams and ribs, and it has been shown conclusively that they originally belonged to the structure of the double bottom, which is now elevated to a height forty feet above normal position, confirming the evidence of a tremendous exterior explosion. There is great disappointment in the failure thus far to find the remains of the brave men who were carried down that February night in 1898. Most of the crew were asleep, and all but four of the thirty officers were aboard. Father Chadwick, the chaplain, in a graphic description of the catastrophe, says: "Captain Sigsbee was on the poop deck. He was giving orders calmly, and a handful of men who had escaped the explosion were obeying them." A court of inquiry convened on the United States ship Iowa, rendered an opinion March 29, 1898, that the Maine had been destroyed by the explosion of a submarine mine, which caused the partial explosion of two or more of her forward magazines. Experts think that the discovery of the second bottom, forty feet above its normal position, substantiates the opinion of the court of inquiry thirteen years ago. The unveiling of the mysteries of the Maine attests the judgment of Admiral Sigsbee as expressed in an article contributed to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD February 16, 1910. In that article the writer regarded the disaster to the Maine as similar to that to the Russian flagship Petropaulovsk, which ran against a Japanese mine off Port Arthur, the explosion of which communicated with the magazines of the ship. Who was responsible for the exterior explosion which destroyed the Maine may never be clearly shown until the day of final reckoning.

And the sea gave up the dead which were in it. (Rev. 20 : 13.)

Helpless Without God

A mechanic came from a Western city to New York in search of employment. He tramped the streets and pleaded in vain for work. In a moment of deepest depression he sent a bullet through his brain, which killed him instantly. On the table of the room where his body lay was found a letter which said: "My dear Wife and Children: This letter you expected would bring joy and hope to you containing the information that I had found work and could take care of you all, whom I love better than I do my life. But the letter will bring disappointment and sorrow, as it will carry you the news of my last act. I confess that I am a coward to do this awful thing, but God is not with me and I shiver." The account of the tragedy did not indicate whether the man had been addicted to bad habits and on that account had gotten down and out and had weakened the force of his will or dulled his conscience, nor did it suggest that his overwhelming disappointment at his inability to care for his family had driven reason from its throne and caused his suicide; but his letter indicates that God was not with him with wisdom to guide him in his plans or with strength to execute them, and hence the tragedy is pitiable beyond all description. What a world of disappointment and sorrow we would have if it were not for a personal, present Christ, who helps the tempted soul to battle with evil habit; who gives wisdom and energy in the pursuit of earthly employments; who assists the husband in caring for wife and little ones, and who holds one up amidst the disappointments and misfortunes that are incident to this life. Those who lack this present Christ are thus described by the apostle:

Ye were without Christ, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope, and without God in the world. (Eph. 2 : 12.)

Grave Held Only Body

Among the thousands of victims of the recent heat wave was that of the wife of a leading citizen. Exhausted with ceaseless watching over a four-months-old baby that had never had a day of health, and racked by a chronic malady of her own, she was overcome by the heat and in a fit of insanity destroyed herself. The husband took his beloved wife to a Western city to put her away to sleep in the beautiful city of the dead among the graves of her people. The father said to his thirteen-year-old son, "My boy, we have put mother under this beautiful oak tree, which she loved so well, so that she may look out on the coming morn." The boy answered quickly, "Papa, mama is not here. That which we put in the ground is her body, only the house in which she lived. She is beyond the clouds and stars. I had a great battle in my mind yesterday to make certain that she was still alive, and just as they put her in the casket in the front room at home I felt sure that the coffin contained only mama's body, and that she had gone on to heaven; and a great load went off my heart, and a joy filled it." And the daughter still younger had the same living faith in the crucified and risen Saviour and of immortality through him.

And this is the promise that he hath promised us, even eternal life. (I. John 2: 25.)

Teaching Regard for Law

At the first session of the National Council of Education, held recently in San Francisco, an important committee reported on the widespread disregard of law in all departments of life, and the necessity of a more careful instruction in the public schools with reference to obedience to law. Among other things "the pernicious practice of giving rebates and discriminating against shippers; the prevalence of graft, boodling, and bribery; the white slave traffic, mobs, riots and lynchings," are cited as instances of lawlessness. To meet this situation, the report says, "certain elemental virtues must be inculcated in childhood and youth," and a tentative course of instruction to this end is offered. This course begins with the teaching in kindergarten of tidiness, obedience, and self-sacrifice; in the grammar grades the inculcating of individual virtues like patriotism, courage and determination; and concludes with a high school course covering the relations of the individual to society, to a vocation and to the State, and the study of the family as the foundation of society. Fortunately, the teaching in the public schools against the use of alcohol and the saloon, the most lawless institution in American society, is good for the public morals of those who are soon to rule the State. The National Educational Association, in the report of its committee, is good as far as it goes, but it stops short of the most important thing, and that is, the necessity of a knowledge of and obedience to God's revealed law as a basis of regard for human law. Those who do not obey God's revealed will cannot be relied upon to keep the laws that men will make. The jurisprudence of the ruling empires of the world to-day is based upon the Bible, and the education of no child or older person can be complete without a knowledge of and an obedience to the Holy Scripture.

Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path. (Ps. 119 : 105.)

Mosquitoes Nearly Kill Him

Aaron Kennedy of Clinton, N. J., was out blackberrying the other day. In leaping from one bog to another he sprained his ankle fearfully, so that he could not walk. He undertook to crawl on his hands and knees, but the pools of water made progress impossible. Swarms of mosquitoes set upon him and tortured him so that he screamed with the pain and for help. Thursday night came on, and finding a dry place he lighted a fire in the hope of driving the pests away with the smoke. But they did not mind the smoke, and continued to feast on him. Friday, Saturday and Sunday he passed in that wretched condition, without a bite to eat and nothing but polluted swamp water to moisten his lips. Two boys in search of blackberries found him on Monday in an unconscious condition, stung almost to death by mosquitoes. He could only have lasted a few hours longer. This young man's condition reminds us of the soul lost in the bogs of evil, stung by the poison of sin, and of the relief that is furnished by divine grace. A prayer for delivery from this moral condition is expressed by the Psalmist:

Deliver me out of the mire, and let me not sink. (Ps. 69: 14.)

Gospel Work in the Open Air

W. FLETCHER DAUM

STEPHEN BAKER

REV. NELSON PAGE DAME

REV. S. F. GORDIANO

OPEN air meetings are the conspicuous feature of religious activity in New York this summer. Noon services and evening meetings are being held in numbers nearly every day of the week at many locations throughout the city. The Sunday evening outdoor services are attracting especial attention because of the fact that some of the oldest and most conservative churches of the metropolis have allied themselves with the movement.

Seven years ago, Mr. Orin C. Baker, assistant superintendent of the Evangelistic Committee of New York City, in conference with Mr. William F. Rea and Mr. C. I. Allison, respectively president of the City Union and president of the fourth district of the Christian Endeavor Union, agreed upon a plan by which the Evangelistic Committee and the various young peoples' societies should co-operate in the holding of outdoor meetings. The experiment proved successful, and from year to year there has been an increase in the number and effectiveness of these "auxiliary meetings" held in New York City. This year the number of such centres of this co-operative work has grown to fifty. Christian Endeavor Societies, Epworth Leagues, and young people's societies of various other denominations have united with brotherhoods from many churches and are doing a splendid work in this direction. In many cases the meetings are held in front of a church, in the church yard perhaps, or on the front steps. The Evangelistic Committee furnishes a cornet and a chorus of voices to lead the music, sends speakers, and generally aids and stimulates the efforts of the young people to bring the crowds from the street to the church. One of the newest features of this outdoor campaign is a series of meetings which is being held in various sections of the city by Bradford Williams, the "auto-evangelist." Mr. Williams has inaugurated automobile services in many States, including Iowa, Massachusetts, New Jersey and New York. He is making it his special mission to show Christian owners of autos how they may put their machines into God's service.

As from the beginning of its work, the Evangelistic Committee holds noon meetings on week-days throughout the summer on Wall Street. For several years the speaker here was the Rev. William Wilkinson, who earned for himself the sobriquet of "Bishop of Wall Street." When Dr. Wilkinson became associated with an important mission of Trinity Church, the Rev. Nelson Page Dame took the Wall Street work. His eloquence and personal charm as well as his sound exposition of fundamental Scripture doctrine, have secured for him a cordial support from his down town hearers. Hundreds of men in the busy financial centre attend reverently these noon services, which are conducted with the utmost simplicity and straightforwardness.

One of the greatest opportunities in the city for preaching the Gospel to the unchurched is offered at Fort George, where services are held on Saturdays and Sundays each summer. It is difficult for those unfamiliar with the place to imagine just what Fort George offers on a Sunday afternoon. It is an amusement resort similar in character to the popular recreation centres found in the vicinity of all large cities, but characterized by the peculiar atmosphere attending New York pleasure resorts, which cater to the foreign elements of the population. It is frequented by such motley thousands as can be found in few other places on earth. The East Side empties itself; all those who can raise ten cents for carfare there and back—Russian, Jew, Italian, German, Irish and American, flock to the place by the thousands. At the end of the line of cheap amusements, the crowds find a green hillside where free entertainment may be had. A cornet, a baby organ, a woman's voice in song, a man's voice presenting a message seldom if ever heard before cause the crowds to pause and listen. Some pass on, others linger, many sit down in the grass and remain to hear it all. Good news, indeed, it is. The message of deliverance from sin, power to resist temptation, of divine guidance and gracious forgiveness, of a loving Saviour and a heavenly Father.

This is the message, "the old, old story of Jesus and his love," which for the seventh season the Evangelistic Committee is presenting to the people in tents, shops, and open air all over the city, with special leaders for Russian, Spanish, Italian, German and Norwegian, as well as English services.

Converts frequently attend the Monday morning conferences at the headquarters, and in broken English give heartfelt testimony to their new found happiness and expressions of appreciation and gratitude for the Committee's work. All sorts and conditions of men and women from foreign lands express anxiety to know more about Jesus and the Christian life. The drunkard, the gambler, the ex-convict are found among the inquirers. The lad of tender years, the youth at the turning point of life, the man or woman burdened with years of sadness and sin, all these are among the many varying types to whom the Committee aims to carry the Gospel.

The photographs reproduced are those of some of the men who are most actively engaged in this summer's programme. Mr. Stephen Baker, who is President of the Bank of the Manhattan Company, has succeeded the late John S. Huyler as treasurer of the organization. The number of foreign names amongst the workers shows the polyglot nature of the work. Rev. S. F. Gordiano, who is pastor of the Spanish branch of Calvary Baptist Church, is in charge of the Spanish shop work, which largely takes the form of noon meetings in cigar factories. Rev. Julius F. Hecker, who is a Russian by birth, is in charge of the Russian and German work. Rev. Peter Di Nardo, who is specially fitted for the direction of shop work by years of experience in contact with Italian shop hands, is general director of that branch of the work. Rev. F. E. Smiley, D.D., evangelist, assists in the general outdoor preaching.

REV. FRANCIS EDWARD SMILEY D.D.

REV. PETER DI NARDO

JULIUS F. HECKER

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN BUTTS

THE LARGEST EGG IN THE WORLD

THE largest egg in the world has recently been on exhibition in the Museum of Natural History, New York. It is the egg of the gigantic extinct bird called Epyornis, which formerly lived in considerable numbers on the island of Madagascar. This was a huge wingless creature, the largest and most formidable bird that ever trod the earth. In life it has been variously estimated to have stood from seven to twelve feet in height, possessing massive and powerful limbs. This great bird surpassed the ostrich, the king of modern birds, both in size and herculean strength, though it closely resembled in build all the members of the family of which the ostrich is a type, such as the emu of Australia, the extinct moa, etc.

The enormous size of the epyornis egg may be imagined from the accompanying photograph. By way of realistic comparison, on the right is seen an ordinary hen egg, on the left the egg of an ostrich. The epyornis egg is six times larger than that of the ostrich, having a capacity of two gallons, or the capacity of 150 hen eggs. Here are some of the astonishing dimensions of the big egg: The shell is about one-eighth of an inch thick, the lengthwise circumference is two feet eight inches, and two feet two inches round the middle. Though termed a fossil egg, it is not petrified or turned to hard stone as in the case of dinosaur bones. It is in a surprisingly perfect condition, unbroken, and has a yellow color, although finely pitted in places. The contents have not been removed, as they have turned to a fine dust which comes out when the egg is handled through a small natural perforation on one side.

The epyornis that laid this colossal egg has not been seen in the life of the present generation of the inhabitants of Madagascar. In former times, several centuries ago, they were quite abundant; several incomplete fossil remains of the bird have been discovered, but no complete skeleton has yet been found. These show that the bird was not only of massive proportions, but short-winged; and it has been classed as a distant relative of the moa and the apteryx, fossil birds of New Zealand. The natives of Madagascar have for many years used the great egg-shell for various domestic purposes, for carrying water and jars for storing and holding food. Only two or three of these huge eggs have been obtained by Europeans, and most of those yet discovered have been in fragments. They were usually found in the sand-beds of torrents where they have been washed from the surrounding soft soil in which the bird is supposed to have laid them. The present egg is said to be one of the largest and most perfect ever brought into civilization.

The Egg of the Extinct Epyornis in Comparison with an Ostrich's Egg or a Hen's Egg

LILLIAN E. ZEH.

Reciprocity Bill Passed

THE United States Senate on July 22 passed the Canadian Reciprocity bill by a vote of 53 to 27. The measure did not go through without strong antagonism, but the majority stood steadfast in its favor. An analysis of the vote shows that the bill was supported by 18 regular Republicans, 3 insurgent Republicans, and 32 Democrats. President Taft has expressed his deep gratification at the passing of the bill, and says: "I should be wanting in straightforward speaking, if I did not freely acknowledge the credit that belongs to the Democratic minority in the Senate for their consistent support of the measure." He also expressed the belief that similar action would now be taken by the Dominion Parliament. That body has not yet acted on the agreement, and the bill, as passed by Congress, will not become effective until the President announces Canada's ratification.

Hundreds Killed in Forest Fires

FROM many widely separated parts of the country have come reports of the most fatal and devastating forest fires which have been reported for many years. On July 11 the town of Oscoda, Mich., was completely wiped out by fire and the town of Au Sable, just across the Au Sable River, was also practically destroyed. The 1,800 inhabitants of these two towns were taken on board a steamer which arrived at Au Sable, and a train which was made up of freight cars from the railroad yards of both towns and rushed to a place of safety. The bridge between the two towns was entirely destroyed; thus preventing the people of Oscoda from making their escape as readily as they might otherwise have done.

No life was lost when the burning bridge fell into the stream, while two other deaths were caused by the fire. Spreading from these centres the fires have destroyed thousands of acres of splendid timber. The towns of Lewiston, Roger, and Turner all escaped the fire by the narrow west margin, and it was only after a day and a half of hard fighting that the fires near those towns were brought under control, so that no further damage was feared. The thousand or more homeless survivors from Oscoda and Au Sable were promptly supplied with food, and tents were provided for shelter as soon as arrangements could be made.

The same date brought reports from the Cobalt and Porcupine mining districts of Northern Ontario telling of terrible destruction of timber and property and great loss of life in that section. When a final accounting is possible the loss of life will undoubtedly reach well up into the hundreds, while millions of dollars worth of property was destroyed. The advance of the flames through the tinder-dry forests was phenomenal in its speed. In less than four hours it had destroyed the towns of South Porcupine, Pottsville, and part of Golden City, as well as all the small buildings along the lake front. While part of the loss of life occurred in the vicinity of Porcupine Lake, the greatest havoc was wrought about the main mines, West Dome and Big Dome. Here the entrapped miners, cut off from escape by the flames, were forced to take to the shafts for safety, and, being hemmed in, perished. The scenes described as having taken place in the streets of some of the smaller towns are positively appalling. Along the highway between West Dome and South Porcupine were found six charred bodies, while in the streets of South Porcupine there lay the bodies of horses, dogs and cattle, as well as of the unfortunate human beings who had been unable to escape.

Many of the American companies which were engaged in mining in this district have lost very heavily from the fire. Only a few days after the conflagration, when the damage was but roughly estimated, five of these companies stated that their losses would range anywhere from $25,000 to $100,000.

The Ruins of the Burned Bridge Connecting Au Sable and Oscoda

As soon as the dispatches bearing the news of the crisis in the fire-swept country reached the railway centres, trains were rushed in to bring out as many as possible of the inhabitants. One train brought out 600 women and children from the town of Cochrane, which was entirely destroyed by the flames. The laborers employed on the Ontario Government's new railway line from Golden City west, reached a place of safety only after a desperate fight with the flames, in which many were badly burned.

A young man from New York who was prospecting for one of the gold mining companies of Porcupine, had his tent pitched in the wilderness about 600 miles north of Montreal. He describes how, while getting his evening meal, he was surprised to find himself practically surrounded by the flames. Stopping only to secure his knapsack, containing an axe, a knife and a blanket, he ran for a lake which was about two miles distant. Upon reaching it his clothes were burned in many places where the sparks had settled upon them. He plunged into the water, and wetting his blanket, placed it over his head. Presently a man he had never seen before ran from the forest and, plunging into the lake, swam out and silently placed himself under the corner of the New Yorker's protecting blanket. It was not long before the two discovered looking down upon them from the shore, a big black bear which, though apparently frightened at the sight of humanity, was not to be stayed from saving his life. Entirely disregarding the human occupants of the lake, he plunged in and remained floating with only his eyes and nose above water, about a hundred yards from the two men. While they were in the water a moose and a large number of small deer swam across the lake within a short distance of them.

The exact number of those who have perished in the fires in Wisconsin, Michigan, and Ontario will never be known, as a number of prospectors and hunters may have been in the forests unknown to any but themselves.

From the Province of Quebec comes a report that the village of St. Jerome was entirely wiped out by fire on July 12. The forest fires in the Maine wilderness and New Hampshire mountains have consumed great stretches of valuable timber lands. The village of South Waterford, Me., was practically destroyed by fire on July 12. Thirty families, nearly half the population of the town, were driven from their homes and are being cared for by their more fortunate neighbors. A hurried estimate of the loss of property, exclusive of timber lands, places it upwards of $100,000.

The Canadian Government, the railway companies which operate lines through the fire-swept districts, as well as the State Governments of Wisconsin and Michigan, are taking steps to relieve the suffering of those who have been left homeless by the fires.

THE CREEDS OF THE CUMBERLANDS

ALTHOUGH there is a diversity of beliefs in the Appalachian region of America, the Baptists possess the mountains to a remarkable degree. The old-fashioned "Hardshell" or Primitive Baptist is slowly being replaced by the "Missionary Baptist," whose ideas of predestination are not so absolutely fixed. Denominationalism is strong in the mountains, and a sectarian school rarely has pupils whose parents belong to another church. Even small communities are strongly separated in belief. Sometimes a settlement of less than two dozen families have alternate services at the rude, poorly equipped schoolhouse.

Mormonism is making headway in the mountains, for the Mormon missionary is ever alert in communities where there is least knowledge and intelligence. To combat this growing evil, a minister in the Christian Church who has traveled over the Cumberlands establishing Sunday Schools and building churches, edits the Sword of Laban, the only paper in the world devoted to the suppression of Mormonism. The loneliness of the mountain silences impresses the "furriner" more and more as he follows the creek beds or crosses the ranges meeting only a solitary horseman or an ox-team with a bark wagon. The cabins are full of shy children, perhaps kin to the one who said pathetically: "Nobody never comes in here and nobody never goes out. My paw jest growed up an' never knowed nothin', an' so did his paw afore him. Sometimes when I be hoeing corn on the mountain side, I look up the creek an' down the creek, an' wonder ef thar ain't nobody never comin' to learn me nothin'."

Baptizing an Eighty-four-Year-Old Convert in "Hell-for-Sartan" Creek

Christianity and education hand in hand must possess the Cumberlands. They are the home of three million loyal citizens, and from them have come men of genius and ability who are a credit to their nation.

FLORENCE LILIAN BUSH.

VACATION JOYS AND PROBLEMS

The Long Vacation

By MARGARET E. SANGSTER

WHEN the heat of midsummer is abroad in the land teachers and pupils feel that they have earned a right to a long vacation. The work of the school year is strenuous and exacting, and when school closes for the summer every one concerned draws a free breath. To the city children and especially to those from whose ranks are chosen the boys and girls who have a happy recess at Mont-Lawn, the summer vacation is not all that it might be under better conditions. Where, for instance, shall the Little Mothers and Little Fathers of the thickly populated tenement regions go to play? In truth they do not know much about play. One who visits in the homes of the very poor in such a city as New York finds children of six and seven years who are already bent under the burdens of life. Some of them help their weary mothers in the everlasting struggle to get enough bread to eat.

If they can do nothing else the small claw-like fingers can pull out basting threads. Wherever there is a baby an older child must take care of it, and I who write have seen at a neighborhood settlement in New York a little girl of ten break into a perfect storm of tears when told that her mother whom she had left in the morning had twin babies to show her when she went home. The Settlement friends had cared for the little girl that summer day, and had helped her and children like her to know something of the meaning of play. The arrival of the twins brought no satisfaction to this forlorn Little Mother.

. . .

SOMETHING is done in our town life for the children of the very poor, in furnishing them with places where they may play and in providing them at times with a halfway sort of school where they may spend part of the day under the care of a teacher who shows them most of all how they may be happy.

Many high school boys spend a portion of their long vacation in outdoor work in the country. A boy who is fortunate enough to secure occupation on a farm may return to his school work greatly invigorated and may have to his credit a little sum in the savings bank, the beginning perhaps of a fund that later may be to his advantage when he shall go to college.

. . .

THE tendency among the comfortable and well-to-do families of the community is just now to establish both girls and boys in summer camps. A well equipped camp in charge of a responsible and competent instructor with a corps of faithful assistants is an ideal place for a growing boy and has much to recommend it for the young girl. A daily schedule is arranged to which the young people gladly conform. They learn wood-craft, if they are in the forest, get near to Nature's heart, tramp, picnic and explore to their content, and if they are near a lake, swimming and boating are added to their pleasures. Accidents are almost unknown in well organized camps, and the young people return from this charming vacation-life ready to attack books and study with renewed zest.

Summer schools attract advanced pupils and ambitious teachers in the bright days of August, and much may be said in their favor. A portion of the day is always devoted to recreation. The social aspect of a summer school is peculiarly agreeable. A teacher who cannot afford to drop work for a year in order to sharpen tools that have grown rusty, or make preparation for a different kind of work may profitably spend from four to six weeks of summer weather at one of the numerous schools that offer courses under distinguished professors. For the tired teacher as for every other fagged and exhausted brain worker, it may be a mistake to do anything except rest in the long vacation.

. . .

WHAT about the mothers, sisters and grandmothers who must feed the hungry, if not clothe the naked, during vacation? One such mother told me last September that she had spent the entire vacation in cooking three meals a day for a family of half-starved young people who could never, it seemed to her, be quite filled up with appetizing food. Her boys and girls at home from college raved over "mother's cooking." Her little men and women were always tearing their clothes and needing to be patched up and made presentable. When the long vacation is over, mothers and caretakers ought to have their turn and take a holiday of their own.

. . .

A Life-Saving Dip in the Surf

AMONG the efforts of the various charitable organizations of the great cities to relieve the suffering of the children of the poor during the summer months the "fresh air" work is one of the most important and by all odds the most interesting. In addition to that form of the benevolence typified by Mont-Lawn, there is in New York what one might call the "Day's Outing" work. The object of this is to give the little tenement dwellers and sometimes their mothers a day's trip on a steamer or a day on the sands at the seaside. The above photograph shows such a group at Coney Island.

Cold Desserts for Summer

THE most fastidious epicure must pay a compliment to a berry pie or a pie made with fresh sliced apples, if it is served as a dessert in summer. It should be cold, but is in perfection only on the day when it is made. Fruit ices, blanc mange and soft custards are better than hot puddings in midsummer. Meat should be eaten sparingly and only once a day, and if the children ask a second helping of ice-cream or floating island do not refuse it.

What Not to Talk About

AT THIS season do not talk about the he Comment on the height which the mercu reaches, on the percentage of humidity a the general discomfort of the situation will aggr vate your inconvenience, but not make you mo comfortable. Do not dwell upon your ailments n tell the history of a present or past malady or di cuss this or the other position. Recommend neith allopathy, homeopathy, osteopathy or any oth department of healing to your neighbors. Perm them to choose for themselves the medical scien they prefer. Eliminate references to surgic operations from your daily conversation.

Do not talk about the impossibility of securir good help in the kitchen, nor entertain a caller by description of the ill temper, incapability and u faithfulness of your maid. No doubt the tempt tion to compare notes with other employers on th commonplace topic assails most of us, but it is a indiscretion and an inva sion of good form to a such trials in the hearin of friends.

Do not talk about th children, nor take pains t bring forward their cleve sayings and doings for th admiration of indifferer strangers. Little childre are original because the are in a new world, an they are charming becaus they have no self-conscious ness. Parents usually mak haste to rob them of spon taneity and make ther forward by continual repe tition of their bright say ings. "When are yo going to talk about me? a little girl said irritabl after waiting in vain t hear mother and aunti relate the last story abou her to the minister wh was politely listening to al that they said.

If you leave out of ordi nary conversation queries and criticisms about th neighbors, chat about the servants, complaints o the weather and descrip tions of illness what shal remain to be said? You will be surprised to dis cover that there are num bers of interesting and useful subjects left. A cultivated woman ought to rise above the trifling in felicities of the hour and to think about affairs more important than the superficial details that too often force themselves to the front. One of the best things done for women by a woman's club is the uplift they receive when in their usual meetings they resume old studies, glance at current events and remember that though they are housekeepers and homemakers they are also human beings with the privilege of expressing opinions on whatever is important to the wide world.

. . .

Table Furniture; A Definition

THE term table furniture is inclusive of the flat silver used on the ordinary table, of forks, spoons, knives of various sizes, small salt and pepper cellars and everything else that goes to the setting of a dainty table. Bread and butter plates are supplied with small knives of their own. As nearly every article of food is at present eaten with a fork, there are forks of several sizes and shapes which are convenient for the purposes designed. A well-equipped establishment prides itself on having an abundance of table furniture.

THE COZY CORNER

Verda Widger

A Bevy of Cozy Corner Girls
Mildred Boyd, age 13

Dorothy Bangs

ALL-DAY-CAMPING

ONE of the most delightful ways of spending August, "least loved month of all the year," is in all-day-camping. I am sure of this, because only last summer we tried it out, our lively schoolboys, three stalwart out-of-door girls, and I. It was in a mountain village in the White Hills of New Hampshire. The exquisite little lake near by, where we fished and feathered water lilies, the woodsy walks and mountain climbs, the deep streams rambling through a sweet green interval along which we paddled in birch bark canoes, the meadow where the daisies and closed gentians grew, the quaint New England village homes, made of this rare section an ideal place for an outing with a family of hearty girls and boys; but it was the

"Pussy and I"
Edna Schofield, age 16

"Picnic on the Lawn"—Juliette Cove, age 11

"Our Baby"
Valerie Torpadie, age 13

"Jane Is So Motherly"—M. Gill, age 13

and we calculated on three apiece. We filled them variously with lettuce nicely seasoned, peanut butter, thin sliced cucumber with green peppers cut very fine, or hard boiled eggs rubbed to a paste and seasoned with red pepper or with a dash of curry. Fruit we always found in plenty. Blueberries, raspberries, blackberries grew in abundance on the mountain sides, and one of the best parts of the all-day-camping was gathering them in the tin pail and serving them in large grape leaves for saucers.

The Campfire

DIRECTLY on arriving at our selected spot, we made the fire. From a book called Two Little Savages, we learned instructions for laying a campfire.

First a curl of birch-bark as dry as it can be;
Then some twigs and soft wood, dead from off the tree;
Last of all some pine knots, to make the kettle foam,
And there's a fire to make you think you're sitting right at home.

Remember to always make a campfire to leeward or down-wind of your picnic table or rock, so that the smoke from the fire will not blow into the food. The great thing for a cooking-fire is plenty of red-hot wood ashes. If you get three medium-sized logs, and place them on the ground in the shape of a star, with the ends centred in the fire, you will always have plenty of red-hot ashes. If, as the logs burn away, you will keep pushing them toward the centre of the fire, red-hot ashes will constantly form, and the meeting-place of the three logs is the point upon which to balance your cooking-kettle.

In the afternoon, away the boys went, swimming or spooring. After supper, which was a pail of baked beans that we served cold with plenty of gingerbread and coffee, we sat around and told campfire yarns, as the boys loved to call them. Then the boys would dig a small pit about eighteen inches deep, bury the scraps, and clean up the camp. And at last, good and tired out with the splendid day of open-air life and exercise, we trundled home in the old road wagon with Bonny-Belle, whose picnic of oats and hay we had not forgotten, to enjoy a sleep that only the camper-out knows. If once you get a taste of it, you will want to all-day-camp, off and on, as long as the summer lasts.

"You Splash Me and I'll Splash You"
I. Allison, age 13

ur Camping Outfit

REGULARLY, once or twice a eek, we turned the key, early in the ay, on the little cottage that we had nted for the month of August, tched Bonny-Belle to the road wagon he horse and wagon were "thrown along with the rent"), and started f all-day-camping. We never went very much trouble about our camp-g outfit—we just put a few nice ings into a picnic pail and two chip askets, and ambled off quite simply to end the entire day in some bosky ingle or woodsy dell, some clearing by e lake or in the brown-green deeps f the pine woods. Our dinner almost ariably consisted of

A Camper's Stew

UT fresh beef, lamb, or mutton into pieces about two inches quare, rub well each piece in flour easoned with salt and pepper, quarter otatoes, carrots and onions enough, nd pack it all into a ew tin bucket with lid. When the time omes, fill the bucket ith clear cold wa-r, set it on your mpfire, and let the ew simmer for one our, or until the po-toes are done. Our read and butter we lways took in the orm of sandwiches,

A bath tub, half filled with warm water, a sponge, a bath rug, one or more towels, a cake of Ivory Soap—these are the essentials.

If, in addition, you provide a light heart and a smiling countenance the equipment will be complete.

All ready? Moisten the sponge, and with it apply Ivory Soap first, to the face and neck, then to the arms, next to the body and last, to the legs and feet.

Fill the sponge with water, and squeeze it over the face, arms, body and legs, repeating this until all dirt and soap are removed. Finish with a dash of cool water. Dry by "patting" or rubbing with the towels.

Ivory Soap has one advantage over most bath soaps—it floats. But the best reason for using it is that it is pure—it cleans, but it does not injure.

Ivory Soap... It Floats

Special August Prize Offers

A Good Puzzle

MR. S. has four children—Jane, the oldest, and Mary, George and Billy. The sum of their ages is 22. The ages of the three younger children added together may be written in a number composed of three figures, the sum of which is 12. The sum of the first and second numbers equals the third number. The sum of the first and third number equals the age of Jane. What are the respective ages of the children?

Answers to this puzzle must be in before August 15. All who guess it correctly will receive the new Cozy Corner Souvenir Booklet for August. The answer to the puzzle will be published in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD of August 30.

For Little People Under Twelve

REBUS

My first is a word—a small part of speech;
In my second most goodies are made;
My third speaks in minutes and seconds and hours,
And stands in the kitchen of your home and ours,
And can send you to school or to bed.

For the best original drawing of the answer to this rebus we will send a copy of one of the most beautiful and popular books of the year, with many stories and upwards of 120 beautiful pictures, many of which are in color.

All answers up to the standard of Cozy Corner work done by boys and girls under twelve, will receive a Supplementary prize or the Special Cozy Corner Souvenir for August.

A Prayer for Dumb Animals. O thou who hast taught us that not a sparrow falleth without the knowledge of our Father in heaven, help us to deal mercifully with thy dumb creatures, and bless us to thy service. Amen.

Put your name, address and age clearly on letters, stories, verses, pictures, answers to puzzle, and send to

Lovingly and faithfully yours,

The Aunt in the Cozy Corner

Christian Herald, Bible House, New York City.

A Secure Investment Netting 4.80%

We own and offer at a price to net 4.80% a first mortgage underlying 4½% bond of a prosperous public utility company operating in one of the largest Cities in the United States. These bonds mature August 1st, 1921, more than twenty years before the company's franchises expire; and the proportionate earnings of the property covered by this issue are about five times the interest requirements. We will be glad to furnish upon request detailed information concerning this investment.

Ask for our Circular S 242

Guaranty Trust Company
of New York
28 Nassau Street

Capital and Surplus - - $23,000,000
Deposits - - - - 163,000,000

Do You Want Your Money to Earn 5%

To be amply secured at all times from possibility of loss—

And to be where you can get it on demand any time you may need it?

You can open an account with this Company with any amount from $25 to $5000. You can add to it at your convenience or withdraw as you wish.

It will earn 5 per cent. for every day that it is in our hands.

It will be amply protected by first mortgages on improved real estate and will be in the hands of an institution that in sixteen years has never been a day late in the payment of either principal or interest.

Ask for the booklet telling all about it.

The Calvert Mortgage & Deposit Co.
1046 Calvert Building, Baltimore, Md.

GUARANTEED MORTGAGES

For Large and Small Investors

Don't think, because your capital is small, that it can earn only 3½ per cent. or 4 per cent. It used to be so—the small investor for hundreds of years had no chance beside the capitalist. Our

First Mortgage Trust Bonds
On New York and Suburban Real Estate

put you exactly on a par with the wealthiest investor. You have the same security and the same certain returns—5 per cent. or 5½ per cent. You have the same opportunity to withdraw your capital if you should need it.

Under Supervision of New York Banking Department
Write for our Booklet

NEW YORK MORTGAGE CO.
Dept. D, 1270 Broadway, New York City

Farm Mortgage Investments Six Per Cent. Net

The First Mortgage Farm Loans we offer to investors are secured by improved farms in the Great Northwest. The products of these farms are Wheat, Oats, Flax, Barley, Rye, Corn and Tame Grasses. What could be safer than a mortgage, of not to exceed 40% of a conservative value, on one of these farms? Such farms produce abundantly, are operated by the owner, who not only has his income at stake, but his home as well.

Thirty-three years of active and continuous experience has taught us how to select the best mortgages for particular investors, who may enjoy their income with no trouble to themselves and with the conviction that principal and interest will be paid promptly when due. We have prepared a booklet describing our mortgages and methods more in detail. It will be sent free to prospective investors who write for Booklet "A."

WELLS & DICKEY COMPANY
Established 1878. Capital and Surplus $700,000.00
SECURITY BANK BUILDING - MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

OTHER PEOPLE'S MONEY

IN THESE days of mighty undertakings in transportation by land and water, of gigantic mining and manufacturing enterprises, of colossal structures that dwarf the pigmy pyramids, of interoceanic canals and vast schemes of irrigation, enormous sums of money are needed; but whether the work be done by the nation or carried out by corporate enterprise, the capital comes from the pockets of other people, and curiously enough, the other people are glad to part with it. But who are the other people? the student in Thrift's first high school year may ask. Why, that student is one of the other people, provided he has deposited in a savings or other bank, or has placed in some other available deposit, money enough to buy a bond, or even a part of a bond, in any of the great profit-producing undertakings just hinted at.

Co-operation

Philosophers have speculated and the poets of humanity have sung of a day "when man to man, the world o'er, should brithers be for a' that," as Burns, the poet of the common people, has it; but while neither the speculations of the philosopher, nor the dreams of the poets, are as yet near to realization, we are gradually approaching an era when the conditions hoped and prayed for may be assured facts. The tendency of never-ceasing progress and ever-advancing conceptions of right is to give all men a unity of interest, a practical co-operation that will redound to the betterment of the humblest.

In an article, a few weeks ago, we told of how the French toiler saved the credit and so the honor of his country, by giving his savings to the new republic of France to meet the war indemnity of the conqueror, Germany, for $1,000,000,000. Now, it should be understood that this enormous sum was not a donation, though the patriotic toilers of France would gladly have made it such if the occasion required; it was a loan to the government, and the government, without losing sight of the splendid patriotism, so regarded it, and, agreeing to treat it as a business transaction, paid an interest on the loan. A great financier has estimated that of the $700,000,000 of that loan, contributed by French toilers, fully $400,000,000 had, up to that time, been kept in hiding, and so paid not one cent of interest to the holders.

The crushing of France by Germany, while crippling for a time the former country, proved, in the end, its upbuilding, its salvation. As soon as the French toiler and saver, already in the essential elementary school of thrift, had learned that money breeds money, with even more certainty than like produces like in the world of animated nature, his future safety and prosperity became assured. If his own country could afford to pay for his savings, other countries and other enterprises could do the same, and so he has saved and made other countries and other enterprises contributory to his own thrift.

Our Own Case

We need not to have gone to France for an illustration of the case under consideration, that is, the accomplishment of great things through the sane and honest use of other people's money. Some of the readers of this article will remember the trying days of our Civil War, when the question of money stringency was urgent on both sides of the conflict. To build up the Southern Confederacy, the seceded States gave all they had of life and property, and their bitterest opponent must honor the honesty of their motives and the heroism with which they struggled to have them realized. But, while admiring the valor and the sacrifices of the defeated side, we should not lose sight of the valor, sacrifices, and foresight of the victors.

To preserve the Union, fighting men were needed, and 2,700,000 responded to the many calls of Lincoln as the war went on. Now, an army must be equipped, fed, cared for, and paid, and all this takes money. The European monarchies hoped for the dissolution of our Union, and so were not willing to give us of their money, of which at that time there was an abundance lying idle in their banks. But the thrifty people, whose dear ones had gone out to battle for the Union, did not hesitate when Secretary of the Treasury Chase told them in effect: "We must have money as well as men." The money was forthcoming, and was poured lavishly into the lap of the motherland, and without first thought as to the seven per cent. interest which was at that time paid.

The War Lesson

Our Civil War worked wonders for our finance. The "wild cat" banks of the old days, with all their fraud, gave way to a system of national banks, based on national credit, which has resulted in making a national bank note as available in Australia as it is in St. Louis. And the habit of loaning to the Republic has resulted in the education of our people up to a point where they can look beyond the government and to the great corporate enterprises existing in harmony with its laws, and invest in them with as much assurance of returns and safety, as if their money was in the keeping of the government, which, indirectly, means themselves.

Other people's money means your money, the money that is doing the great things of the world to-day—doing it through government, or other means—and the question is for the greatest of capitalists, the mass of toilers, to say how they can invest their savings to the best advantage to themselves.

A Lady Member of Parliament

EVERY woman who honors her sex must feel a sense of gratification as she looks at the bright, intelligent and eminently kind and sensible face of this first woman member of a parliament in the world. As Anna Rogstad modestly took her place in the Norwegian Storthing, she was hailed with loud and united acclamations on the part of the masculine members, for she has been a successful and beloved teacher and is universally respected throughout Norway. Miss Rogstad is a secondary or substitute member, sitting only in case of the absence from illness or other cause of the first member; but to have become even a substitute member is a great honor for a woman in this age of the world, and all true women rejoice that it has come to so fine an example of womanhood as Miss Rogstad.

Miss Anna Rogstad

If I Have Tried

IF I have tried to do my best,
And fail for lack of strength or skill,
If I have brought unto the test
All that I have of worth and will,
And then go down unto defeat—
I need not fear God's judgment when
I kneel before His mercy seat;
For that is all he asks of men.

God does not say that we must win,
Nor are the souls of failures lost;
The weakest of us shall get in,
If, when our barks were tempest-tossed,
We tried to steer our course aright,
And gave our best to every task;
An honest effort in the fight
Is all that God himself will ask.

And so I say, if I have tried
To do my best, I need not fear
When that dark veil is torn aside,
And I behold Death's angel near:
If I have lived up to the right
As I could see it, all is well;
Although on earth I lost the fight,
I'll have a place in heaven to dwell."

EDGAR A. GUEST in the Detroit Free Press

A Bit of Timely Heroism

MISS GENELLE WOODSO daughter of Mrs. N. C. Woodso president of the local Woman's Chri tian Temperance Union and one of o subscribers, recently saved the life the twelve-year-old daughter of M A. E. Leach, of Altus, Okla. The acc dent occurred while the Methodi Sunday School held its picnic on t banks of Turkey Creek in Fullert Grove. A number of children we wading in the shallow bed of the cre when suddenly little Miss Leach, ve turing a bit farther than the other stepped on the edge of a deep depre sion and slipping, sank out of sigh The spectators stood horror-struck ar helpless while the little girl sank t second time. Not one of them cou swim. As the child came to the su face again Miss Woodson dashed in the water and directing the larg girls to join hands, they formed human chain. Grasping with her le hand this line, she plunged into t deep water, and groping with her fr hand, caught hold of the dress of t drowning child who was sinking f the third time. The human cha pulled both of them to safety on t banks. The child was soon resusc tated, and owes her life to the resourc fulness and heroism of Genelle Woo son.

The Organists' Convention

THE National Association of O ganists, which holds its fourt annual convention at Ocean Grov during the first ten days of Augus represents the democracy of the organ ists' profession, and aims eventuall to embrace the whole of the one hun dred and seventy thousand organist in the United States. A special fea ture of this year's convention will be conference with ministers and churc officials on common problems of spe cial significance, and a special invita tion is extended to clergymen to b present and participate in the discus sions.

The organists hope to be drawn int closer touch with the ministry and t devise means for rendering more effec tive their joint efforts in the service o the church. It has been suggested tha the ministers might in their local meet ings during the winter make som study of the organists' viewpoin and occasionally invite some promi nent organist to share their fellow ship and if possible present som new phases of the old problems. Th Organists' Association is trying to en courage the members to more thor oughly equip themselves for thei calling, and the church has need fo specialists in all branches of its ac tivity. Requests for programmes o the Convention on August 1 to 10 i the Ocean Grove Auditorium may b addressed to Tali Esen Morgan, Ocea Grove, N. J., or Nicholas de Vore, 4 Madison Street, Brooklyn.

The Indestructible Book*

Sunday School Lesson by Dr. and Mrs. Wilbur F. Crafts

THIS story gives us a vivid example of how the Bible was made, and how men whose sins it condemned have tried in vain to destroy it. "This word came unto Jeremiah from Jehovah, saying, Take thee a roll of a book and write therein all the words that I have spoken unto thee." Sometimes God told a prophet to speak for him—indeed, that is what prophet means—and the report of his God-given sermon became a part of the Bible. In this case, however, Jeremiah was in some way "shut up," probably by sickness or, more likely, by command of the wicked king Jehoiakim, and so he dictated God's message to his scribe, Baruch, and sent him to read it to the people from a balcony near the gate of the temple. There its denunciations of the sins of king and people, and its prophecy of a judgment and of captivity at hand, caused great excitement, and aroused in the people and princes a tendency to repent and save themselves and the nation from impending doom.

God's Word Slashed and Burned

"Take the roll and cut it with the penknife and cast it into the fire." When the message had been heard quietly by the people and then in a conference of anxious princes was brought it to the king, who would not hear it through, but so soon as he heard its condemnation of his own sins, coolly snatched the penknife of the scribe who was reading, and slashed off a roll right and left again and again and then threw it in the open fire, in spite of the protest of his princely advisers, as if he could revoke God's threatened judgments by destroying the written warning. The story is wonderfully true to human nature. Indeed, we should not forget that the Bible is not only a revelation of divine grace but of human nature. This book is a mental mirror in which every man should see the stain on his own heart that needs to be washed away by divine grace. Again and again, in all sections of the world, has the human imitation of the hunted ostrich hiding his head in the sand repeated a history that repeats itself.

Here is a like case that occurred in India, which is delightfully told, with moral appropriate to this lesson, by Travers Evered Poole in Our Own Magazine, of London, that translates the Gospel for the Children's Special Service Mission:

"A missionary stood in his bungalow microscope in hand. He was showing its wonders to a young Brahman, whose religion forbids him to destroy animal life. Presently the missionary took a stagnant drop of water, focused it, and asked the Brahman to look. The delight faded from the Brahman's expressive face; horror, disgust, and fear were pictured there! "Give me the vessel," he said, and he took up the glass for careful examination of the water within. It was water from a tank, which in these days no one would drink, but at that time was commonly used; indeed, the water that most people in the station had used daily, and would use. Oh! the horror of it! The Brahman, who drank it, and performed his sacred ablutions in it stood aghast. Why, it was full of life—queer little squirming creatures. He looked at the glass, the missionary, the microscope. "Does it speak truth?" he asked, earnestly. "As God speaks, so speaks this," answered the missionary solemnly. "And I destroy life?" cried the Brahman in horror. "I break the law of caste; I, a good Brahman, a holy man!" Away he went, but only to return next day. He held a bag of rupees. "Missionary, sell me your microscope," he begged, his face showing intense misery. "I will not sell it," replied the missionary. Again and again the offer was made; again and again it was refused. But the Brahman was like the importunate widow of Scripture; he would not be refused. He came so often, and the missionary was so wearied by his continual coming, that at last, knowing he could get another microscope from England, he assented.

The joy of the Brahman knew no bounds. The money was hastily paid, the coveted instrument seized, and taken out of its box, and with eyes glittering with excitement the Brahman rushed out into the compound. The missionary followed, marveling much at his movements, as he had no idea what was passing in the man's mind. Outside, the Brahman paused, raised the microscope high in his right hand, and, with all his might, dashed it to the ground. Then he stamped upon the broken fragments, like some madman, shouting with pleasure as he ground the pieces into the dust.

The missionary stood dumbfounded. Had the man gone suddenly mad? What possessed him to do such a strange thing? But presently it all came out. Sobered, yet glad, the Brahman owned to it.

"It was all that drop of water," he said. "I could not eat, or drink, or sleep, since I saw revealed those living creatures. I told myself, it was not true. I would not let it be true. I would destroy the wicked glass that opened my eyes. No one should see what I saw."

There are many foolish people besides this Brahman. We remember King Ahab, hundreds of years before, who, when he heard unpleasant things about his sins, threatened to imprison the prophet Micah. The prophet was God's microscope, revealing a nation's sins. God's Word, like a glass, shows us ourselves, and the wickedness of our hearts and lives. Some men try to destroy the Bible because they hate its revelation of their hearts. But sin remains; sin needs a remedy. We cannot shut our eyes to it, do what we will.

Torn, But Not Destroyed

In the same paper, of another date, we find other parallels to the folly of Jehoiakim, written by Fannie E. Turner:

It seemed quite wasted—that French Gospel given to a lady at the Paris Exposition. She had accepted it gladly, looked into it, then angrily torn up its sacred pages, and scattered them about the street. But there is more to be told. A poor woman was going along a Paris street near the Exhibition. She was restless and sorrowful, though she knew not why. Suddenly a little heap of torn bits of paper by a doorstep attracted her attention. She picked them up, and read two or three. Her whole mind was arrested. "I must get more of this," she exclaimed, half aloud; "wherever can such words be found?" She took the fragments to a policeman opposite, and asked him if he could tell her to what book they had belonged. He directed her to the Bible Society's depot close by. Timidly she went in, and asked for "the Book" containing words similar to those in her hand. Willing hands supplied it. Her hungry soul literally fed on God's Word, and before long she "found her Saviour there."

For nineteen centuries not only individuals, but great organizations and mighty governments, have tried in vain to destroy the Bible. When in London, in the days of Tyndale, all the English Bibles that could be found by the priests were gathered and publicly burned, the bonfire proved an advertisement that made the people more

Continued on next page

*The International Sunday School Lesson for August 13, 1911. Jehoiakim Burns the Prophet's Roll. Jer. 36. GOLDEN TEXT: "The word of our God shall stand forever." Isa. 40:8.

The Howard Watch

When the U. S. Battleship "Maine" was sunk in Havana Harbor, Admiral Sigsbee's HOWARD Watch went down with it.

It lay in sea water for five days—was recovered by a navy diver—and today it varies less than ten seconds a month, which is a ratio of one second in 260,000. Admiral Sigsbee has carried his HOWARD Watch since 1868. It has cruised in eighteen vessels of the U. S. Navy—over a distance of Two Hundred and Eighty-eight Thousand miles.

It has set the standard time in taking observations for navigating—where a few seconds' error may spell disaster to the ship. A service so exacting that even the ship's chronometers have to be checked up in every port.

A HOWARD Watch is always worth what you pay for it.

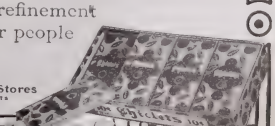
The price of each HOWARD is fixed at the factory and a printed ticket attached—from the 17-jewel (double roller escapement) in a "Jas. Boss" or "Crescent" gold-filled case at $40, to the 23-jewel in a 14K solid gold case at $150.

Not every jeweler can sell you a HOWARD Watch. Find the HOWARD jeweler in your town and talk to him. He is a good man to know.

Admiral Sigsbee has written a little book, "The Log of the HOWARD Watch," relating to the history of his own HOWARD. You'll enjoy it. Drop us a post card, Dept. W. and we'll send you a copy.

E. HOWARD WATCH WORKS, Boston, Mass.

DURING 1910, 2,623,412 CHICLETS WERE SOLD EACH DAY



Chiclets

REALLY DELIGHTFUL

The Dainty Mint Covered Candy Coated Chewing Gum

Just ask your doctor what he thinks of Chiclets. Doctors, dentists and trained nurses use and recommend Chiclets for their patients' use and use them themselves in the sick-room, the office or home. That exquisite peppermint, the true mint, makes Chiclets the refinement of chewing gum for people of refinement.

For Sale at all the Better Sort of Stores
5¢ the Ounce and in 5¢, 10¢ and 25¢ Packets
SEN-SEN CHICLET COMPANY

LABLACHE
FACE POWDER
Summer Pleasures
are enjoyed by thousands of women who are immune from complexion worries. They are the users of LABLACHE and are recognized by faces free from wrinkles—that are never shiny or disfigured by exposure to the elements, and a skin always smooth and velvety. It is cooling, refreshing, pure and harmless.
Refuse substitutes.
They may be dangerous. Flesh, White, Pink or Cream, 50c. a box of druggists or by mail. Send 10 cents for a sample box.
BEN. LEVY CO.,
French Perfumers
Dept. 22, 125 Kingston Street
BOSTON, MASS.

5% WITH THE SAFEST SECURITY 5%
WE PAY 5% on deposits and our assets are over $2,300,000. Deposits are secured by mortgages on the very best class of New York and suburban real estate. Our business is conducted conservatively in the strictest accordance with the stringent New York Banking Laws.
Patrons All Over the World
Deposits with this Company represent a profitable investment, eliminating speculative features. Deposits may be withdrawn at any time, upon short notice. Earnings paid for every day and compounded semi-annually, or remitted by check, as desired.
Write for Booklet.
Industrial Savings & Loan Co.
2 Times Bldg, B'way & 42d St., New York

EVERYWOMAN SHOULD EARN $25 PER WEEK
Introducing our very complete line of wool suitings, wash fabrics, fancy waistings, silks, bdkfs., petticoats, hosiery, etc. Dealing direct with the mills, our prices are low. Others make $10.00 to $30.00 weekly—you can also. Samples, instructions, etc., in neat case, charges prepaid. No money required. Exclusive territory. Be first to apply for Agency. Standard Dress Goods Co., Desk 3, Standard Building Binghamton, N.Y.

AGENTS STEADY INCOME
Thomas "Kantslip" Ladies' Ribbed Vests. Linle and mercerized silk. Narrow shoulder straps, silk faced. Always in place, no matter what position the body takes. This feature found in the "Kantslip" vest only. Neat in fit, cool and daintily trimmed. C. Comer sold 50 vests in one day. Hannah Jones 12 vests in two hours, profit $1.80. Write quick for terms and free sample to workers.
THOMAS MFG. COMPANY
124 Barney St. DAYTON, OHIO

FREE You Can Have This Switch FREE
Send us a sample of your hair and we will mail you this beautiful 22-inch human hair switch to match. If satisfactory send us $1.50 any time within 10 days, or sell 3 to your friends for $1.50 each and get yours absolutely free. Extra shades a little higher. Souvenir catalog showing latest styles of fashionable hairdressing, etc., on request. Enclose 5c postage. Marguerite Colly, Dept. 119 115 S. DearbornSt., Chicago

DAISY FLY KILLER placed anywhere, attracts and kills all flies. Neat, clean, ornamental, convenient, cheap. Lasts all season. Made of metal, cannot spill or tip over, will not soil or injure anything. Guaranteed effective. Of all dealers or sent prepaid for 25 cents.
HAROLD SOMERS
150 DeKalb Ave.
Brooklyn, N.Y.

THIS NEW HAIR BRUSH COMBS AND BRUSHES THE HAIR AND MASSAGES THE SCALP.
The greatest modern invention for keeping the hair beautiful and fluffy and the scalp clean, healthful and free from dandruff or dirt. Keep the scalp clean and properly massaged and nature will grow the hair. Write for free circular.
AGENTS WANTED.
DR. GEORGE LYMAN,
217 Bill St., Peoria, Ill.

I TRUST YOU TEN DAYS. SEND NO MONEY.
$2 Hair Switch Sent on Approval. Choice of Natural wavy or straight hair. Send a lock of your hair, and we will mail a 22 inch short, stem fine human hair switch to match. If you find it a big bargain remit $2 in ten days, or sell 3 and GET YOURS SWITCH FREE. Extra shades a little more. Inclose 5c postage.
Free beauty book showing latest styles of hair dressing—also high grade switches, pompadours, wigs, puffs, etc. Women wanted to sell our hair goods.
ANNA AYERS,
Dep. A158 22 Quincy Street, Chicago

LADIES Make $3 to $5 Daily
Selling Dress Goods, Skirts and Handkerchiefs. Free Outfit. No capital required. Mutual Fabric Co., Dept. 349, Binghamton, N.Y.

The Sagamore Conference

The Delegates to the Sagamore Conference

ONE of the annual gatherings that is steadily growing in size and influence is the Sagamore Beach Sociological Conference on Cape Cod, Mass. The fifth conference was held from the 28th of June to the 30th and was attended by two hundred and fifty social workers, who discussed many of the problems pertaining to the home, civic affairs and the general welfare of society. These conferences were instituted by one of Boston's most active young laymen, Mr. George W. Coleman, and until the present year, the members of the conference were the personal guests of Mr. Coleman. This year, twelve men and women assisted Mr. Coleman as hosts and shared the expense and the duties of entertaining the guests. The address of Professor Shailer Mathews on "Efficiency and the Church" was one of the most notable addresses of the gathering. The Sagamore Beach Conference has become a permanent institution and is recognized as a power in adding to the growing good of the world. J. L. H.

Sunday School Lesson

Continued from preceding page

eager to read the book that a corrupt priesthood hated so intensely. In later days the attacks of infidels, first on the New Testament, and then on the Old, have left the Bible in the twentieth century the "best seller" of all books in the world.

Jeremiah wrote again the warning words of God that Jehoiakim had burned, and added further judgments against the wicked king, and we have those words in our hands to-day in spite of many other efforts to burn up all the Bibles.

Now the practical lesson in this story is that the tendency of the general public and even of many in the churches to avoid in the Bible or leave out of sermons and lessons God's words about future punishment will not change the fact, but the neglect to proclaim God's loving warnings will increase the number of those that will go to the reward of the ungodly. The lesson story should afford proof enough that it does not disprove a Bible doctrine that it is disagreeable to bad men. That is rather a confirmation.

There are many in the churches to-day who can not even understand how an ancient inspired poet could write the longest chapter of the Bible (Ps. 119) in expressing his enthusiastic love for law. Law is really but an expression of divine love pointing out to his children the happiest way.

It is a pretty sure indication of an unsymmetrical character, as of a cake not turned, or of a bird with one wing broken, when a man or woman does not hold justice in as great regard as mercy. One reason why our President is constrained to say that the maladministration of our criminal courts is "the greatest scandal in American life" is that even the so-called good citizens are usually ready to sign a petition for almost any rascal's pardon, whose wife or child will touch them with a few tears, forgetting that justice is "the greatest good of the greatest number." A universe without an assurance of punishment and reward would be a universe without justice, and therefore a universe without God. Justice is the central sun.

It is useless to deny the value of the argument of fear. No city could get on a day without it. The man who talks most of love, and declares that "no one can be scared into heaven," would not tolerate for a minute the proposal that the penalties of the law should be abolished, even for the most intelligent and religious people. It is just this group for which our legislators and courts are busiest at this time. We should have a carnival of vice, no doubt, if young people, tempted by strong passions, had no fear of the consequences, physical, legal and social. Hell and heaven are but two sides of one truth, and the one is as plainly promised as the other.

Among the Workers

—EVANGELISTS H. W. BROMLEY and W. H. Myers recently closed their season's labors with a successful series of meetings at Mitchell, S. D., and returned to their homes for a well earned rest. They will open next season's work early in September.

—MISS EVA W. LAKE, M.D., Arlington, N. J., associate superintendent of the W. C. T. U. for Italian work, received contributions through readers of this paper amounting to $214.86, exclusive of $48 from personal friends, in aid of the work carried on by Signor Amato, the converted priest of Naples, an account of whose work appeared in this paper some time ago.

—ON A HIGH HILL outside of Aibonito, Porto Rico, 3,000 feet above the sea, there has lately been opened a Rest Home for missionaries. It has been named the "Mary Collins Rest Home" in honor of Mrs. Truman D. Collins, of Nebraska, Pa., who contributed $3,000 toward the $12,000 required. The remaining sum was raised through the efforts of Bishop Earl Cranston and Mrs. Cranston of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

—REV. W. H. THOMPSON, Maysville, Utah, writes: "Can you help us in our work among the Mormons? We are the only Christian missionaries in Davis County, Utah. There are twelve towns and hamlets in our district and in only two of these is there a Christian chapel. Scattered throughout the county there are probably five hundred non-Mormon people who have not heard the Gospel for years. There are thousands of Mormons."

—THE PICKANINNY BAND, composed of orphan boys of the Jenkins Negro Orphanage of Charleston, S. C., is a wonderfully interesting organization. Rev. Mr. Jenkins is now taking his band and his Jubilee Concert Companies through the Northern States giving concerts to raise money to pay off the indebtedness of the Orphanage. For several years past the Pickaninny Band has played on July 4 at THE CHRISTIAN HERALD Children's Home, where their music has been one of the features of the occasion.

RICH AND POOR

I WAS rich when I was born,
I'll be rich again when I die;
So there still is cheer in this famine-year,
So long in the passing by!

So long in the passing by—
So foreign-faced and lone;
Where not one I meet, in the door or street,
Is ever one of my own!

I was born to the wealth of a home,
To the heart-hoards Love doth spend;
I shall yet lay hold of that buried gold,
At the tear-tint rainbow's end!

I am miser of memories now
(The gold with a grief alloy);
But some heaven-day shall my want repay
With the spendthrift hand of Joy!

White Lead on the Farm
For Houses
Paint your house when it needs it and use the best paint—that is the whole story of paint economy. The longer you put off painting the more paint will be required. Paint made of
"Dutch Boy Painter"
Pure White Lead
and pure linseed oil is the most economical paint in the world because it is the most durable. It holds to the wood like a nail and protects the surface perfectly against the attacks of the weather.
Our Free Painting Helps
We will send you free on request color schemes and miscellaneous painting instructions that you will find of real practical value. Ask for Helps 2856
NATIONAL LEAD CO.
New York Cleveland Chicago St. Louis
Boston Buffalo Cincinnati San Francisco
(John T. Lewis & Bros. Co., Philadelphia)
(National Lead & Oil Co., Pittsburgh)

CHRISTIAN HERALD
Pilgrimage to the Holy Land including points in Palestine, Syria, Egypt, Dead Sea, The Jordan, Jerusalem, Jericho, Jaffa and other places connected with the life and death of our Lord.
White Star Liner Cretic leaves New York September 20, stopping en route in Italy, Greece, Turkey, Asia Minor, etc., returns Nov. 21.
For further information regarding this opportunity to visit scenes of events described in the Bible, address at once,
Christian Herald Pilgrimage Bureau
Bible House, New York City

Don't Cut Out A SHOE BOIL, CAPPED HOCK or BURSITIS FOR ABSORBINE
will remove them and leave no blemishes. Cures any puff or swelling. Does not blister or remove the hair. Horse can be worked. $2.00 per bottle delivered. Book 6 F free.
ABSORBINE, JR., Liniment for mankind. For Boils, Bruises, Old Sores, Swellings, Goitre, Varicose Veins, Varicosities. Allays Pain. Price $1 and $2 a bottle at druggists or delivered. Will tell more if you write. Manufactured only
W. F. YOUNG, P.D.F., 5 Temple St., Springfield, Mass.

Protecto Plat
A Necessity
in Every Hom
Two iron plates, joined; 10-inch diameter. Chutes on under side diffuse heat; intervening chamber equalizes. Separating fire from cooking utensil, prevents scorching or burning food. Heats flat-irons uniformly. Inverted pan over plate, bakes potatoes in 20 minutes, biscuits 6. Makes moist brown toast. Saves worry, utensils and 50 cent fuel. Prepaid 50c. Agents wanted.
C. H. CONNOLLY MFG. CO., 123 Liberty St., New York

MUSIC LESSONS FREE
in your own home for Piano, Organ, Violin, Guitar, Banjo, Cornet, Sight Singing, Mandolin or Cello. One lesson weekly. Beginners or advanced pupils. Your only expense is for postage and music, which averages about 2 cents a day. Established 1898. Thousands of pupils all over the world write "Wish I had known of you before." Booklet and free tuition offer sent free. Address, U. S. SCHOOL OF MUSIC, Box 7-A, 225 Fifth Ave., New York City.

JOHN SHERWOOD'S PLEDGE

By LOLLIE BELLE WYLIE

ROGAN'S GAP lies at the foot of the beautiful, well-wooded mountains of North Georgia. It is an ideal place in which to dream and to live the simple life. None of the modern inventions that have come to disturb the peace of the city and its rarity, has entered the quiet shelter ruffled the charm of the Gap. The ple there are, for the most part, d-fearing, honest and sincere. They t good seed, gather abundant harvs and attend divine services in the meeting-house at the end of the narrow street which starts suddenly in the shadow of a primeval st and trails leisurely over the ntain to dip abruptly into the valbeyond. Midway between the meethouse and the foot of the mountain ds the unpretentious home of Su- Askem. Beyond, on a ledge of the ntain where the trail wanders into valley, the cabin of John Sherwood ms whitely through a tangle of us vines and sweet-scented trees.

their earlier life, Susan Askem John Sherwood were engaged to be ried according to the promptings heir hearts, but fate—or destiny, hatever the force that governs the rs of young and trusting hearts—fered in a fulfilment of happiness hese two lovers by sending into the pretty Miriam Gray, a village from a nearby town. With femiart and practiced blandishments, won the heart of John Sherwood, in less than a week from the day met, John Sherwood drove over e county seat, and the two were ried.

ow deep this blow struck into the t and pride of Susan Askem no ever knew, for she went about her duties with a smiling face and ng hands, and, save for the settled of sorrow that would not go out of eyes, she hid her grief from the world which revolved around the mediately following the death of wife, the ways of John Sherwood me a shame and grief to the comity in which he had lived so long so proudly. He drank, and he ected the child that had been left

And a year later, when Miriam Susan was genuinely sorry.

He permitted his crops to go thered, and when he went to n intoxicated and asked her to forhim and take him back, she mptly refused. In this way things on for five years.

e afternoon toward twilight, John wood went steering his way up the of the mountain, none too sure of ing to the trail. If the devil had t into his heart to live evilly, God been good to him in giving him a g, clean body and a clear, open that was but faintly showing the ges of dissipation. He was the eval man, with a shock of yellow and a pair of hazel eyes that were and dark and unwavering. The le light of the mountains was ering him in, when suddenly, from he shadows of the wood, came a an, who stood before him, barring way.

lowdy, John," said she, pushing her sun-bonnet and looking him kly in the face.

lowdy, Susan," answered John, ly, as he attempted to pass.

ait a minute, John," urged the an, gently. "I've got somethin' y to you."

ain't nothin' I care to hear, I n," laughed the man, bitterly, as ain attempted to go forward.

's somethin' you ought to hear," n insisted, firmly. "You've been kin' again, an' I wanted to talk to

There was a weariness in the an's voice she could not disguise. n' what if I have been drinkin'?" sneered John Sherwood. "Is it any of your business, or anybody's, for that matter?"

"Yes, it's my business, an' yours, an' everybody's that loves you an' has your welfare at heart. An', so help me heaven, I'm goin' to speak." And Susan pulled nervously at her bonnet strings.

"You had better get out of my way," said John, roughly, pushing the woman to one side.

"Oh, don't, John!" cried Susan, gathering strength. "Can't you see how much it means to you—an' to me? Can't you see? Are you blind? You have said over and over again that you loved me an' was sorry you threw me over."

"An' don't you believe I meant it, Susan? I do love you an'——"

"An' you asked me to marry you," continued Susan, as she drew back and looked straight into Sherwood's eyes.

"Huh! Have you come up here to have me ask you again? Well, I ain't goin' to do it; you can just bet I ain't goin' to get bit again."

"John," continued Susan, ignoring the brutal sting in the words he threw at her, "you need somebody over at the cabin to look after the child."

"You had a chance at the job an' you refused. Let's say 'amen' an' end the meetin'," was the sneering reply. But something in the woman's attitude struck home to the heart of the man and he turned upon her passionately, crying:

"Susan Askem, it ain't for you to come here to tanterlize me with your beauty an' them big, steady eyes of yourn. Hit ain't safe, I tell you. Do you think I was happy with that doll-baby? Do you think she kept me from thinkin' of you all the time? No; she didn't! I was a fool to marry her; a fool to throw you over. I loved you then an' I love you now. If you ain't goin' to marry me, you had better go back down the trail. . . . I ain't safe company, that's all."

"I ain't afraid of you, John," answered Susan, calmly, "an' I want to say that you can't care much for me or you wouldn't drink as you are doin'. I want to say, too, that I love you still; I'll always love you, I know. An' you'll never know how much you have hurt me. No one but God will ever know how I cried an' cried when I knew that I had lost you. An' I have cried a heap more since you have been throwin' yourself away an' killin' yourself, body and soul. Can't you understand that I need you just as you need me? Just as the child needs a mother? An'—oh, John, I want to come to the cabin and make it a home for you. I want the arms of little children around my neck, an'—I want you. Are you blind? Can't you see, John? But how can I trust you! I just can't trust my happiness to you, yet God knows I want to."

Susan's voice trailed off into a sob.

Something stirred in the man that made him seem godlike for an instant; and, with a sullen shifting glance, he turned away from Susan and muttered, fiercely:

"Come, you ain't totin' fair; you love or you don't. You ought to marry me or you oughtn't. It's up to you; what you goin' to do?"

Susan laid her fingers gently upon the arm of her companion.

"You can't see it as I do, John, or you would not put it that way. I do want to come to you—to the cabin—to the child—but how can I when you are drinkin' as you are? What I want is for the people of Grogan's Gap to respect you. I want you to walk among folks as you used to—clean, upright. I wanted to talk plainly to you, an' I wanted to ask you—to—promise—to—come to meetin' to-morrow mornin'. There's goin' to be a revival started, an' I will help you, if you will come. Everybody in the Gap will help you, John, if you will only try an' reform. Will you promise? Say yes, John, say yes!"

Susan's fingers tightened on the man's arm. She stood tense and pale before him. The night was closing in on the two. The faint whirr of insect life thrilled the air. The song-notes of a drowsy bird came softly from a chestnut tree.

"Will you promise, John?" The woman's hand slipped into that of John Sherwood, and rested there.

"To be laughed at by all the Gap?" sneered John.

"No, no—not that, John, I will——"

"Well! I won't!" cried Sherwood, and, with a sudden wrench from the light bondage of the hand that clung to him, he strode uncertainly into the gathering darkness.

Was it the weary sigh that was borne to him upon the breeze that caused him to turn for a last look at the dim figure of the woman going slowly down the trail? For a moment he gazed back over the path he had trod, then wheeled and made off down the mountain, his head hung low between his shoulders.

No sooner had he entered the gate that led to his little cabin, than he was conscious that something was wrong.

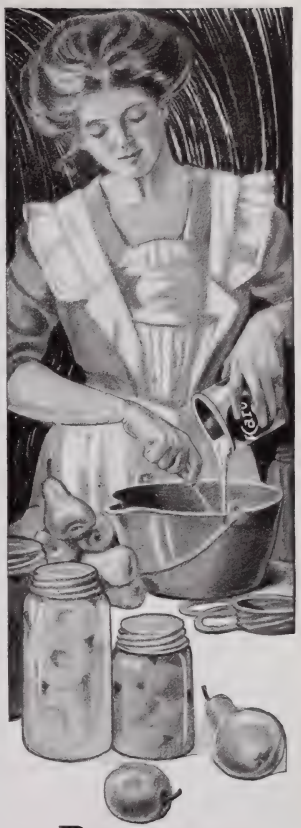
"Hit's yo' baby, John," said Mrs. Joiner, the woman in charge of the house, as she came out to meet him. "She was tuck all of a suddint soon atter yo' lef' this mornin'. Hit's her brain; she's plumb outen her head."

John was vaguely aware that Mrs. Joiner was eyeing him questioningly. Somehow, her eyes made him restless. Could it be true that he was the cause of the child's illness? Suddenly, the clouds were swept from his dull, befogged brain. He remembered that that morning he had struck her when she ran out to the gate to kiss him good-by. Could that lick on the head be responsible for her condition? He had seen her stagger into the yard, and, with a curse, he had gone down the trail into the Gap.

In a moment he was sobered. Crossing the intervening space, he went into the house and straight to the little bed where the child was lying. Her face was whiter than the flowers in the meadow, her brow was wrinkled by pain and her hands were clenched in an agony of suffering. As he bent over her, he was paler than the child. Where a short time before his blood had run like a river of flame, it now ran colder than the waters of the River of Death.

"Hit's pisen," whispered one of the women, who was sitting by the fireplace with an althea brush in the corner of her mouth, from which she spat copious brown streams. "Pisen; she's et pisen berries. I've seed cases like hit afore." And she wagged her head sagely.

"To my min', hit's a fall," exclaimed Mrs. Joiner, sharply, "or maybe," she added, "a lick on the head. I've seed cases like hit myself."



John Sherwood heard the women gossiping, but he did not comprehend. He knew his child was ill—sick unto death; and that, too, because of his own brutality. Dully, he ran his hand over the little white nightgown at the throat of the child. His fingers caressed the soft white skin. He could scarcely feel the throbbing of the throat.

After a while he asked Mrs. Joiner, in a whisper:

"Do you think she's goin' to die?"

"Well, now," began the old woman, "she ain't dead yit, but yo' never can tell. I knowed a woman onct——"

Continued on next page

Preserves, Jellies and Jams

The best informed housewives are using KARO Syrup in putting up their fruit.

The perfect preserving syrup is made with one part KARO Extra Quality and three parts sugar.

The addition of KARO Extra Quality makes a smoother, richer, more delicious syrup — one that blends naturally with the juices of fruits and berries and brings out their full flavor. The use of will make you the finest jams and jellies you ever had and the best canned peaches, pears, plums, cherries and raspberries.

Karo

Canned Peaches. Pare four pounds ripe, firm peaches. Throw each piece into cold water to prevent discoloration. Drain and put them into a kettle, layer for layer, with one and one-half pounds granulated sugar. Add one-half pound Karo Extra Quality and one-half cup water. Stand on back of stove till juice can be seen by tipping kettle. Let boil up at once.

Put into each jar required quantity fruit and fill to overflowing with boiling juice. Screw lids as tight as possible at once.

Preserved Peaches. Follow formula for canned peaches except to four pounds of ripe fruit use three pounds of sugar and one pound of Karo Extra Quality and one-half cup of water. Boil slowly until syrup is sufficiently heavy to drop from ladle.

Send for folder O on KARO Jellies and Preserves.

Corn Products Refining Co.
New York. P. O. Box 161

John Sherwood's Pledge

Continued from preceding page

John did not wait for the end of the sentence. Leaning down, he snatched the child up from the pillow, and, without a word, strode out into the night with the little one pressed close to his breast.

"Well! I say hit!" ejaculated one of the old crones at the fireplace as she stared at the empty bed and the open doorway, through which Sherwood had just vanished.

"Hit's jest like John Sherwood," cried Mrs. Joiner, "an' the Lord only knows where he's a-goin' to take her."

"Yes, the Lord only knows," put in one of the others, "I know we'd better pray for the little un."

Meantime, Susan Askem had returned to her home in the Gap with her eyes filled with unshed tears and her soul full of sadness. She had failed in her effort to touch the heart of John Sherwood. And to do that was the thing she most desired in all the world; to awaken in him his manhood; to bring him back to his own. She had failed. But repining was not her habit, and putting her disappointment away she hastened on to fulfil her simple household duties, for it was Saturday night, and the day following the revival was to begin. Hope still lingered with her. She knew she would succeed some day. She had this faith so strong that when she reached the cottage in which she had lived alone since her father's death two years before, she went about her preparations for the following day, with the end in view of John returning as he used to do on Sunday morning to eat dinner with her, and take her out on the mountain for the afternoon walk.

But, somehow, as she busied herself, Susan felt nervous. Never before had she been afraid, but every time the wind blew she started and looked fearfully at the window or door.

Suddenly, she dropped the biscuit pan with its contents on the floor. There was reason to be frightened now. Some one was fumbling with the door knob.

"Who's that?" she called.

"Hit's me, Susan," and John Sherwood pushed the door open and strode in. He was white as a ghost, and trembling like a leaf in the wind. By the dim light of the kerosene lamp, Susan could see that he held something fiercely to him. Something that was white and small.

"Why, John, you scared me," cried Susan, "an' what in the world's the matter?"

"The little un's sick. She was took all of a suddint, an', Susan Askem, I want you to bring her round, if hit's in your power. Her life, your happiness an' the salvation of my soul's at stake!" exclaimed Sherwood. "Do somethin', woman, do somethin'—for if she don't get well, then—I'm a murderer! Do you understand? A murderer! I—am—a—murderer——"

Susan held out her arms tenderly and took the light burden.

"Tell me about it," she said, soothingly, as she examined the child.

"I hit her with my fist this mornin' as she run out to kiss me good-by," said Sherwood, simply. "I hit the poor, helpless little thing that looked to me for love an' happiness, an' now the hand of God is laid on me. I've killed my own child, just as I have murdered the youth an' hope in your heart, an' as I have murdered my own manhood. Oh, Susan . . . if little Miriam dies, then I am——"

John could not go on. He could only fall on his knees at the feet of his companion and sob like a child.

"It warn't you, John," said Susan, "it was your master: it was the demon in you. Men don't do such things."

"It was my master, Susan, that made me do it; that I know. A master that has made me hurt your kind heart a thousand ways, an' made me a slave for five long years. When I lef' you this evenin' as I did, I wanted to run after you an' tell you that I wanted to be a better man; but, somehow, I was ashamed to do it. I was afraid to!"

Susan looked pityingly down upon the great, strong creature at her feet. Everything in his attitude expressed contrition and remorse. From his haunted eyes, she looked on the face of the child she held in her arms. The soft yellow curls—so like her father's—were damp with the moisture of suffering and fell apart from the blue-veined lids that hid the big, round, hazel eyes.

"John," and Susan leaned nearer to her companion, "do you want to be free?"

"If only I could be!" cried John, wistfully.

"Don't you know, dear, that Christ has said, 'Let the wicked forsake his ways, an' the unjust man his thoughts, an' let him return to the Lord, an' he will have mercy upon him, an' to our God, for he is bountiful to forgive'? Now, I want you to promise to forsake your wickedness an' go to the Lord to be forgiven."

"If the child lives, Susan, I'll return to the fold; that I promise," answered Sherwood.

"Promise that you will return whether or not the child lives," urged Susan. "If she dies, it is all the more reason why you need His love an' help."

"Oh, Susan, if I could only believe that God would forgive me!"

"But you have his promise already. I believe that you are hearin' his word now."

"In this hour of misery I have heard it."

"An' you will keep it for my sake? For Christ's sake?"

"I will keep it for the sake of right," answered John, fervently.

"Whether the child lives or dies?" persisted Susan.

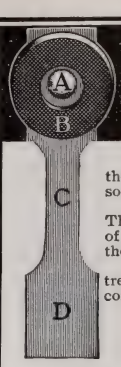
"Whether the child lives or dies," responded Sherwood, earnestly.

"Then look, John, the child is openin' her eyes. She's lookin' at you; she's smilin'!"

* * *

There is something primitive in church gatherings at small mountain towns remote from the bustling whirl of the business world. Grogan's Gap was not an exception, and, long before the appointed hour, the clearing and woods around the meeting-house were thronged with men, women, children, mules, horses, all sorts and conditions of vehicles, lunch baskets and other paraphernalia that go to make up the appurtenances of a revival in such a rural community.

Visitors from the nearby towns brushed elbows with the inhabitants of the coves along the river beds above, while hickory shirts and mozambique dresses exchanged the odors of lye soap and cinnamon extract.



People in north Georgia "go their broad," and there were many from the heart of the mountain regions who had come to the revival.

On the morning following the promise of John Sherwood to Susan Askem, old women gathered together, whispered the scandal of the illness of Miriam, together with the conduct of her father. The story had gotten wings and was a real sensation by the time service was to begin.

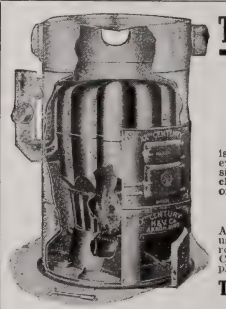
"Now, what I'm wonderin' is what will Susan Askem do, an' her a-lovin' him as she does. Anybody what ain't a fool can see she 's a-hankerin' after him yit," said the woman with the snuff swab in her mouth.

"I can tell yo'," replied another woman, "she will go down to the Cove an' hunt 'em up, an' if anything is wrong, she'll straighten hit out. I know Susan Askem. Hit's in her blood to keep faith."

Continued on next page

Get Rid of Corns Don't Wait

You can stop the pain in one minute. You can loosen the corn in two days, and remove it. You can do this without soreness, without inconvenience—without any feeling whatever.



Just attach a Blue-jay plaster. It is done in a jiffy. Then forget about it. The plaster protects the corn. A bit of soft B & B wax begins to loosen it gently. In two days the corn comes out, and that ends it.

Millions of people end all corns in this way. Other treatments are now little used. Go get a package. Don't let corns torment you. Take them out.

A in the picture is the soft B & B wax. It loosens the corn.
B protects the corn, stopping the pain at once.
C wraps around the toe. It is narrowed to be comfortable.
D is rubber adhesive to fasten the plaster on.

Blue-jay Corn Plasters 15c and 25c per package

(6) Also Blue-jay Bunion Plasters. All Druggists Sell and Guarantee Them.
If not convinced, ask for sample—free.
Bauer & Black, Chicago and New York, Makers of Surgical Dressings, etc.

The Greatest Home Comfort

Does not come from wealth or large income. It comes from having the home evenly, cleanly and economically heated. The proper kind of a Furnace costs less than stoves or grates.

XXth Century Furnace is used and praised so universally by so many thousand home owners everywhere—in every climate. It is made right, it has the only sensible and Economic Fire Pot, ever made. It burns all kinds of fuel—even cheap grades of soft coal, slack, etc., with perfect combustion and yields one-third more heat at one-third less cost than any other made.

THE CHEAPEST HEAT FOR ANY HOME COUNTRY OR CITY

And yet clean, healthful. No work, no repairs; sanitary, ideal. Write us, giving a sketch or plan of your house, indicating the number of rooms to be heated, and let us tell you how you can get a XXth CENTURY FURNACE, and try it on our Common-Sense Guarantee plan. Ask for our little booklet, No. 16.

The XXth Century Heating and Ventilating Co.,
16 Ira Avenue, Akron, O.

WANTED—RIDER AGENTS IN EACH T and distri ride and hibit a sample 1912 Model "Ranger" bicycle furnished by us. Our agents e where are making money fast. Write at once for full particulars and special offer

NO MONEY REQUIRED until you receive and approve of your bicycle. West anyone, anywhere in the U. S. without a cent deposit in advance, prepay freight allow TEN DAYS' FREE TRIAL during which time you may ride the bicycle an it to any test you wish. If you are then not perfectly satisfied or do not wish to kee bicycle you may ship it back to us at our expense and you will not be out one cent.

LOW FACTORY PRICES We furnish the highest grade bicycles it is possible to at one small profit above actual factory cost. You save $10 to middlemen's profits by buying direct of us and have the manufacturer's guarantee behin bicycle. DO NOT BUY a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone at any price until you r our catalogues and learn our unheard of factory prices and remarkable special offer.

YOU WILL BE ASTONISHED when you receive our beautiful catalogue and our superb models at the wonderful low pri can make you. We sell the highest grade bicycles at lower prices than any other factory. satisfied with $1.00 profit above factory cost. BICYCLE DEALERS, you can sell our bi under your own name plate at double our prices. Orders filled the day received.

SECOND HAND BICYCLES—a limited number taken in trade by our Chicago retail store be closed out at once, at $3 to $8 each. Descriptive bargain list mailed free.

TIRES, COASTER BRAKE rear wheels, inner tubes, lamps, cyclometers, parts, and everything in the bicycle line at half usual p interesting matter and useful information. It only costs a postal to get everything. Write it now.

DO NOT WAIT—but write today for our Large Catalogue beautifully illustrated and containing a great

MEAD CYCLE CO. Dept. L-71, CHICAGO, IL

The Berkshire Hills Sanatorium
For the Scientific and Effective Treatment of CANCER
Without Resorting to Surgical Procedure
The only private institution of magnitude in the United States for the exclusive treatment of Cancer and other malignant and benign new growths. Conducted by a physician of standing. Established thirty-two years.
For complete information address
Berkshire Hills Sanatorium, North Adams, Massachusetts

Makes and burns its own gas and produces a pure white, steady, safe, 100 candle power light. No wick, smoke, dirt, grease or odor.

THE "BEST" LIGHT

Lighted instantly. Over 200 styles. Agents wanted. Write for catalog
THE BEST LIGHT CO.
3-70 E. 5th St., Canton, O.

DON'T PAY TWO PRICES Save $18.00 to $22.00 on HOOSIER RANGE AND HEATER

Why not buy the best you can buy them at such low heard-of Factory Prices? THI DAYS FREE TRIAL BEFORE BUY. Our new improvements absolutely surpass anything ever produ SEND POSTAL TODAY OUR FREE CATALOG AND PRIC

Hoosier Steel

HOOSIER STOVE FACTORY 164 State St. Marion,

WHEEL CHAIRS A wheel Chair is often an invalid's greatest comfort. We offer over 75 styles of these easy, self-propelling and Invalids' Rolling Chairs, with latest improvements. Ship direct from factory to you, freight prepaid, and sell on

THIRTY DAYS' TRIAL

Liberal Discounts to all sending for free Catalogue NOW
GORDON MFG. CO.
478 Madison Ave., TOLEDO, O.

TYPEWRITERS M

VISIBLE WRITE

or otherwise

L. S. SMITHS, OLIVERS, UNDERWOODS, ¼ to ½ M'F'RS PRICE

Shipped ANYWHERE for Free Tr RENTED allowing Rent to AP

PRICES $15.00 U

First Class Machines Fresh from the Mfrs.—Write for Illustrated

Typewriter Emporium, (EST. 1892) 92-94 LAKE ST.,

LEARN TO WRITE ADVERTISEMENTS MAKE More Money

We can positively show you by mail How to Increase Your Salary. Book mailed free. Page-Davis, Dept. 44, Chicago.

Young People's Societies

Busy Service*

IT IS a notable fact, often lost sight of by well-meaning but lazy Christians, that the great Fourth Commandment says not only that we should keep the seventh day holy but also, "Six days shalt thou labor." Therefore no one has any right to the holy rest, unless he has fulfilled the other part of the law.

Perhaps there is no surer door to popularity than the willingness to work. Fine words of affection are all right, but the thing that goes to the heart is the deed, and the greater the labor that is put into the deed, the greater, usually, is the love which is awakened.

In a party of young people gathered for a summer outing in a country village, one young man was always ready to go back for a forgotten parasol; to hunt for a lost penknife; to give up his bed and sleep on the floor when an unexpected guest came. The others were well bred and they would do whatever they were asked to do, but this young "every-day hero" was so eager to perform disagreeable services, so glad to make others happy, that he was beloved by all. The example will never be forgotten by those young people.

The father and mother who train up their children to habits of patient, steady industry, are fitting them to excel in whatever department they may enter. It is seldom that children not so trained, ever make their mark in the world. The capacity for hard and sustained work is worth more to a man than a heritage of millions without it.

The opinion seems to pervade society that if one works in the outside world, that is enough, and he will not need to work in the church—that he can rest there. But no church and no society can live, without hard work, specifically for them, on the part of their members. Work to make your friends Christians. Work to bring into your church or your society individuals and families, who do not belong to any other, work to make your church strong and prosperous and respected in the community.

A company of Yale students once came to Mr. Moody and asked him for instruction in the personal work of saving souls. He replied, "The way to do personal work is to do it."

But let us not be among those "fussy" and blatant ones who sound a trumpet before them wherever they go and boast continually of their industry.

One lesson, Nature, let me learn of thee,
One lesson which in every wind is blown,
One lesson of two duties kept in one,
Though the loud world proclaim their enmity:
Of toil unsevered from tranquillity;
Of labor that in lasting fruit outgrows
Far noisier schemes accomplished in repose,
Too great for haste, too high for rivalry.

* Topic of the Epworth League for Sunday, August 13. TEXTS: Rom. 12:11; I. Cor. 15:58; John 9:4; Eccl. 11:4, 6.

Beginnings of Intemperance*

A MAN once remarked, as he looked at a miserable drunkard reeling through the street, "I don't understand why that man is permitted to be seen. He ought to be locked out of sight at once."

"No," commented a listener, "he is an object lesson. All of the shabby, sodden-faced wretches that pass by are object-lessons to warn the young against intemperance."

Statistics tell us that the saloons of our country turn out about 600,000 new drunkards every year, and that of this number one-sixth are boys of from sixteen to twenty years of age.

How do these boys start on the downward path?

Sometimes it is in the home. The boy is sent by his parents for beer. He sips it from the pail and acquires a taste for it. As soon as he can, he slips in and buys some beer for himself. Once initiated into the mysteries of the saloon, he tries other drinks.

Or the family has wine always on the table. The boy is taught that it is proper and elegant to drink a glass of wine with his dinner. He may confine himself to a single glass there, but when he begins to go out with his gay companions he takes more. If he is depressed and discouraged, he begins to take wine or whisky to raise his spirits. The end can be easily foreseen.

Women, both old and young, have a great responsibility in this matter. No girl, if she is a total abstainer, should promise to marry a man unless he is the same. It is true that pledges are sometimes broken; but a man of any sort of character will keep his word.

The banishment of the saloon is a great step forward in the temperance cause. It is too much to claim that to stop the saloon stops drinking; but it does remove the stamp of legality and respectability from the traffic; it does keep our streets free from the glitter and attraction of those bright windows and the usually cool and clean interior, with its "free lunch" bribe.

It is necessary to watch the legislatures closely. The Anti-Saloon League men say that over fifty bad excise bills have been introduced into the New York State legislature this past season, and that, owing largely to the remissness of watchers, many of them have been passed. Each one of these opens a fresh loophole to the evil business which is the bane of our civilization. Every legislature needs oversight. Its progress should be noted and its bills read carefully by chosen representatives of our temperance societies. Then the limelight of publicity should be turned upon them through the newspapers, and all good citizens should join to defeat them.

* Christian Endeavor Topic for Sunday, August 13. TEXT: Prov. 23:29-35.

John Sherwood's Pledge Continued from page 774

"Why, the land's sake!" interrupted Mrs. Joiner, whose intimate confidences with the old women of the settlement had set the ball of scandal in motion; "if yonder ain't her an' him a-comin' to meetin'! Like as not she's been down to the Cove an' brought 'im back. I'll bet you, too, that in less'n six months Susan will be a-takin' holt over at the cabin."

Sure enough, Susan Askem was bringing John Sherwood back to church and to respectability; for when the preacher began to exhort repentant sinners to come to the altar and be prayed for, John arose, and said:

"Sisters and brothers: I want to ask you to pray for me, a poor wanderer from the Lord. I want to get back in his fold an' be as a little lamb in the tender Shepherd's care."

Before the surprise had passed from the congregation, there was a hearty chorus of "Amen!" from the members who grasped the situation, and instantly, several enthusiastic old men and women were clasping him by the hand and patting him on the shoulders.

"We've prayed for yo' a'ready," said one, fervently, "an' we're ready to help yo', God be praised!"

John Sherwood's eyes filled with tears, and his lips trembled. He was overcome with the tenseness of his feelings, and the murmur of weeping, praying and "Amens" that confused the air.

That was a memorable Sabbath day in Grogan's Gap, but a brighter and more beautiful one dawned six months later when Susan Askem and John Sherwood went hand in hand, husband and wife, over the trail to the little cabin in the valley.

Canthrox Shampoo

makes the head feel good and is delightfully satisfying. Its rich, penetrating lather gently yet thoroughly cleanses the scalp of every atom of dust, dandruff, excess oil; allays irritation and leaves it sweet, pliant and healthy.

Makes Your Hair Bright and Fluffy

After shampooing with Canthrox, your hair dries quickly and evenly—without streaking—so soft, glossy and beautiful that doing it up is a joyful pleasure.

Unlike soaps, Canthrox never causes brittleness, dryness or splitting at ends. Its use encourages a splendid growth of luxuriant hair.

15 Shampoos for 50c

Sold by All Druggists

Trial Offer: We have such faith in Canthrox pleasing you, that upon receipt of your name, address and a 2c stamp, we will send you enough Canthrox for a shampoo, so that you can try it at our expense and experience the delights of a perfect shampoo.

H. S. PETERSON & CO.
303 Kinzie Street Chicago, Illinois

If asked for, Canthrox Shampoos are given in many first-class Hair Dressing and Shampoo Parlors.

BLYMYER CHURCH BELLS.
UNLIKE OTHER BELLS SWEETER, MORE DURABLE, LOWER PRICE. OUR FREE CATALOGUE TELLS WHY.
Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

LUCKY MISTAKE

Grocer Sent Pkg. of Postum and Opened the Eyes of the Family.

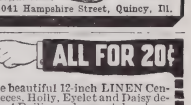
A lady writes from Brookline, Mass.:

"A package of Postum was sent me one day by mistake.

"I notified the grocer, but finding that there was no coffee for breakfast next morning, I prepared some of the Postum following the directions very carefully.

"It was an immediate success in my family, and from that day we have used it constantly, parents and children, too—for my three rosy youngsters are allowed to drink it freely at breakfast and luncheon. They think it delicious, and I would have a mutiny on my hands should I omit the beloved beverage.

"My husband used to have a very delicate stomach while we were using coffee, but to our surprise his stomach has grown strong and entirely well since we quit coffee and have been on Postum.



"Noting the good effects in my family I wrote to my sister, who was a coffee toper, and after much persuasion got her to try Postum.

"She was prejudiced against it at first, but when she presently found that all the ailments that coffee gave her left and she got well quickly she became and remains a thorough and enthusiastic Postum convert.

"Her nerves, which had become shattered by the use of coffee have grown healthy again, and to-day she is a new woman, thanks to Postum." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich., and the "cause why" will be found in the great little book, "The Road to Wellville," which comes in pkgs.

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

The "Eli" King of Balers Horse and Steam Power

A train of followers, but no equals. Eroyes its superiority wherever it goes. Makes tight shapely bales, not loose lumbling, works fast, avoids accidents and endures. Little draft, tremendous power. The machine that makes competitors tremble. Eli catalogue free. 18 Styles
Collins Plow Co., 2041 Hampshire Street, Quincy, Ill.

ALL FOR 20¢

Three beautiful 12-inch LINEN Centerpieces, Holly, Eyelet and Daisy designs, 4 Doilies and our catalog showing over 600 designs of art embroidery goods and 70 different EMBROIDERY STITCHES. All delivered for 20 cts.
P. W. KELLER CO., Waterloo, Iowa

BABY LAX THE ONLY LAXATIVE PERFECT FOR BABIES OR CHILDREN
SURE, SAFE, MILD, PLEASANT.
A doctor's formula perfected after years of study of babies needs. Delighted mothers praise it. Try it. Sent postpaid 25c. Address Dept. C
THE BABYLAX CO., Franklin, Pa.

CORNS Get rid of the little torments by using A-Corn Salve. You never speak 15 cents to better advantage. Easy, safe, quick, sure. At druggists or by mail.
Giant Chemical Co., Philadelphia.

ZOBO THE MUSICAL WONDER. YOU CAN PLAY IT Without Learning.
Sing into the mouthpiece. Zobo does the rest. For Home, Church and Sunday School Entertainments. Full information FREE on request.
STRAUSS MFG. CO., 355 Broadway, Dept. 19, New York

WANTED Wide-Awake Sales Agents and general canvassers to organize sales force to sell winning new line of unusual merit. Sells readily on both city and country. We want men not satisfied with moderate results who have the ability and energy to make substantial income. Real money-making opportunity. The Progress Co., 131 Progress Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

PATENTS That Protect and Pay
Advice and Books FREE. Rates Reasonable. Highest References. Best Services.
WATSON E. COLEMAN, Patent Lawyer, WASHINGTON, D. C.

PATENTS SECURED OR FEE RETURNED.
Free report as to Patentability. Illustrated Guide Book, and List of Inventions Wanted, sent free.
VICTOR J. EVANS & CO., Washington, D. C.

WANTED [illegible] all cash Investment, [illegible] teacher or traveling salesman. BAXTER GENORLE, Batesburg, S. C.

A Cloudburst of Babies

FIND THE THIRTY-THREE BABIES

For . . .
PRICKLY
HEAT and SUNBURN

Sample Box 4c
GERHARD
MENNEN COMPANY
15 Orange Street
Newark, N. J.

MENNEN'S
BORATED TALCUM
TOILET POWDER

Christian Herald

$1.50 A YEAR - 5c. A COPY
PUBLISHED 52 TIMES A YEAR

COPYRIGHT, 1911, BY THE CHRISTIAN HERALD

NEW YORK, AUGUST 9, 1911

VOLUME 34 — NUMBER 32
OFFICES: BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK

A SHADY NOOK AT THE SEASHORE

OUR · MAIL · BAG

Questions and Answers

L. E., Cerulean, Ky. 1. Of what denomination was Dwight L. Moody? 2. Can it be proved there is no God?

1. In 1856 he united with the Congregational Church in Chicago. He was, however, in the broadest sense, an evangelical and in his work and religious associations he literally included all denominations, and was honored and beloved by them all alike. 2. No; it has been many times attempted, but found impossible. Even in the natural world about us, everything leads the intelligent mind to the conviction that the universe is the work of and is governed by a supreme and omnipotent Intelligence. Only "the fool hath said in his heart, There is no God."

F. A. M., Lynn, Mass. In your paper of June 21, 1911, in an article, entitled, "Anti-Semitism Rebuked," you speak of a Jew—Santangel—as the one who financed Columbus' first trip to America. Who was he?

Dr. Kayserling, in a recent work which has been translated into English by Professor Gross (Harvard), claims to have established the fact that it was a Castilian Jew, Luis de Santangel, Councilor and Controller of Aragon, who, with his brother-in-law, Gabriel Sanchez, supplied the funds to Columbus.

W. H., New Florence, Pa. Who was the father of Elijah?

All that is known of his parentage and birth is contained in I. Kings 17: 1. He is introduced in Scripture almost like a second Melchizedek, of whom (possibly because his earthly origin was obscure) it was metaphorically written that he had neither father nor mother. There is a Jewish legend which identifies Elijah with Phinehas, the son of Eleazar the high-priest. Arab tradition gives his birthplace at Gilhad and his tomb at Damascus.

A. Van A., Manchester, N. Y. Please tell me the author of the poem containing the lines:

> Who sweeps a room as for God's laws,
> Makes that and the action fine.

George Herbert, 1593-1632.

Mrs. L. P. V., Fortress Monroe, Va. 1. In II. Kings 3: 27, who was the prince who was offered as a burnt offering? 2. Is Zacharias the son of Barachias, Matt. 23: 35, supposed to be identical with "Zechariah the son of Jehoiada," II. Chron. 24: 20, 21?

1. He was the son of the king of Moab. Josephus, the historian of the Jews, gives the occurrence in greater detail in Antiquities, Book 9, chapter 3, section 2, but the name of the prince is not mentioned. 2. The allusion in Matthew is doubtless to the same incident.

Rev. G. F. Assiter, Collingwood, Ont., writes: It has been stated in your paper that the Rt. Hon. Henry Lloyd George, the British Chancellor, is a Baptist. Official facts compiled by Mr. William Lloyd-George, and published by the British Weekly concerning the little church at Cricceth, Wales, say that the members are known as Disciples of Christ. The organization is known as "the Cricceth Church of Christ."

L. E. C., Arena, N. Y. Please explain the following passages, comparing them together: I. Cor. 15: 50, "Flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God," and Job 19: 26, "Yet in my flesh shall I see God."

The passage in Job, which has long been a stumbling-block in the form in which it appears in the King James or Authorized Version, is corrected in the Revised Version. It was the result of a mistranslation, the real rendering being that given by the revisers, viz.: "Then without my flesh shall I see God."

T. H. A., Los Angeles, Calif. Explain the meaning of I. Cor. 5:5; also I. Peter 3:19.

1. Besides the authority to rule persistent offenders out of the church, Paul here delegated to the Corinthian Church the special apostolic power of inflicting suffering as a punishment for sin. (For instance of this power see Acts 5:1, 11; Acts 13:11; I. Tim. 1:20.) In cases where the divine Spirit is withdrawn, Satan has power to try the ungodly; hence the phrase "to deliver such a one unto Satan." Such a deliverance is not necessarily final, but for affliction and discipline. 2. This has already been explained in the MAIL-BAG. The "spirits in prison" represent the antediluvians doomed to destruction by the flood, and who, even though Noah delivered his message, may have had no opportunity of hearing it. Commentators differ greatly on this passage, some holding that Christ was, in a figurative or representative sense, present at the place in question. Others interpret it to mean that the same opportunity of mercy through Christ has prevailed in all dispensations, and as the world in Noah's time found rescue in the ark, so now it is to find rescue and salvation in the preaching of the Gospel.

C. S. H., Schuylerville, N. Y. Please explain what is meant by Isa. 21: 11, 12. I have read it many times, but am still unable to determine in my own mind what was intended to be understood. Could it be construed to have any connection with the advent of the Messiah?

It was a prophecy to the Idumeans who had taunted the Jews in the Babylonian captivity. There was a call to the prophet from the mountain region of Seir, for even the wicked consult God's ministers in times of calamity. The watchman (prophet) is asked "What of the night?" "Night" means calamity. He replies: "The morning (prosperity) cometh," but night (adversity) will soon follow again. He meant to tell the Idumeans that inasmuch as they had exulted in the fall of Jerusalem and had seized part of the land during the Jewish captivity, they could not escape punishment for their wickedness. The passage has no reference to the Messiah.

R. M. S., Shawville, Pa. Please name several scientists who do not believe in evolution.

So many scientists, as well as others, have taken refuge behind the different definitions of the word evolution that the question as to what they do or do not believe is extremely difficult to answer. When its simple meaning is taken, that of growth or development to cope with or take advantage of changing surrounding conditions nearly all willingly admit belief. This meaning is exemplified in such phrases as "the evolution of civilization from savagery," or "the evolution of a chicken from an egg." In its more complex meaning, the doctrine of the development of all forms of life by gradual modification from earlier and simpler forms or from one rudimentary form, the word is more difficult to pin down. St. George Mivart, Professor Beale, the late Dr. Shaler and Professor Haeckel are among the best known scientists who have made positive their denial of belief in evolution.

Several readers have written asking us whether there is any foundation for the claim, widely circulated by certain seed-venders, that wheat seed (which they advertise as being of a rare and prolific kind, taken from ancient Egyptian tombs), is worth the planting. We referred the matter to the Agricultural Department in Washington and now take pleasure in printing the reply of Acting-Secretary Hays for the general information of those interested:

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 24.

Editor THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, New York.

SIR: Answering your letter of July 18 in which you ask the facts about wheat seed alleged to have been taken from the ancient Egyptian tombs and claimed to be yet of good quality, will say that these mummy-wheat stories have come to our attention dozens of times in the same way as the story of the change of wheat to chess, etc., and there is no truth in the matter whatever. Wheat kernels, indeed, appear to have been taken from the tombs in the pyramids, usually of the kind known accurately as "emmer" and "spelt," but not a single kernel will germinate. The ordinary life of wheat seed, to make even a fair crop, is about three years, while an extreme period of ten years suffices to practically destroy the germinating power entirely in most cases that are known. W. M. HAYS.

M. S. Mc.N., Corpus Christi, Tex. Explain Jam 5:13, 14, 15, 16. One minister I asked said referred to Apostolic times. Another said had never been able to fully satisfy his mi as to its meaning.

This was a usage which Christ committed to h apostles and which was afterward continued, wi the laying on of hands, as a token of the highe faculty of healing in the church (see I. Cor. 6:2 It has been generally held by religious write and by the church also (with a few notable e ceptions, however,) that the power of faith-hea ing has been withdrawn, and that consequent to use the signs without the reality, would meaningless. On the other hand, we have th evidence of the Emmanuel Movement, and of var ous Christian sects even to-day, in substantiatic of the belief that the apostolic power still exist and is made apparent to those who have sufficie faith.

Miscellaneous

E. A. L., Laddonia, Mo. Explained in THE MAIL-BAG, June 21st issue.

R. A., Ontario, Calif. 1. No king of th name appears in history. 2. Write to Herald College, London, for all information abou coats-of-arms.

Francis B., Hopkins, Minn. There is noth ing to be gained by threshing such questior over and over. They have already been di cussed in THE MAIL-BAG recently.

H. G. A., Gibson City, Ill. 1. See I. Co 15: 35 to 54, which fully describe in languag nowhere equalled the natural and the spiritu body. 2. When Jesus came to earth, he as sumed the body of flesh and was "in all thing as we are," save that he was "without sin."

Reader, Allisonia, Va. Answers to praye quite as remarkable as the one your letter men tions, are familiar to very many Christians We ourselves have known many instances i which the prayer of faith has been heard. I all such cases, it should be a sacred duty as we as a pleasure, to acknowledge before the worl God's goodness in answering our petitions.

J. K. N., Florida, writes: "Reading in you last issue of the terrible effects of the 'hea wave,' it occurred to me that many of you readers might be interested to know that her in Florida we have had no such experience and that there is no death record from heat so far as known. Sun-stroke never occurs here In fact, we not only have the warmest (so called) winters (about like the Northern Sep tember or October) but also the most enjoyable summers of any part of our great country From the middle of June it is rare for a singl day to pass without one or more bright show ers, which cool and wash the air. The mercur rises to the nineties quite often, but with th sea breeze and the showers, it is not oppres sive. I have lived in all the Northeast State (except Maine) and in nearly every one of th Northern States east of the Rockies; and I giv the preference, as to a cool summer, to Florida where I have been now for more than six years."

